The national flags of China and Cape Verde flew over Tiananmen Square. After the playing of the national anthems of the two countries, President Pereira, accompanied by Premier Zhao, reviewed an honor guard made up of the three services of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. Some two hundred children holding bouquets and ribbons, waved greetings to the guests. Among those attending the welcoming ceremony were Zhu Xuefan, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; Huang Hua, state councillor and foreign minister; and his wife He Liliang.

After the ceremony, Premier Zhao had a cordial conversation with President Pereira and other guests from Cape Verde.

President Pereira and his party arrived in Beijing by special plane at noon today after a visit to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. They were greeted at the airport by Chinese Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Gong Dafei and Chinese Ambassador to Cape Verde Liu Yingxian.

CONGO PRESIDENT SASSOU-NGUESSO MEETS CCP GROUP

OW111359 Beijing XINHUA in English 1254 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Brazzaville, May 10 (XINHUA) -- Denis Sassou-Nguesso, president of the Congo and the Congolese Labor Party, Monday met Zhang Zhixiang, leader of a Chinese Communist Party delegation. Sassou-Nguesso told Zhang Zhixiang, an adviser of the CCP International Liaison Department, that the Congolese Labor Party wants to develop relations with the Chinese Communist Party. He said that "developing cooperation between the two parties and the two countries will contribute to the world's peace and progress in the face of the tense international situation."

During its visit, the Chinese delegation held talks with the Congolese delegation headed by Pierre Nze, a member of the Congolese Labor Party's Political Bureau. Thystere-Tchicaya and Bokamba-Yankouma, members of the Political Bureau, also met the Chinese delegation. The Chinese and Congolese delegations exchanged experiences in building their parties and countries and discussed important international issues.

The Chinese delegation toured Pointe Noire, the economic capital of Congo, and visited some industrial and agricultural enterprises. The Chinese delegation began its Congo visit on April 30 and will leave here Tuesday for a visit to Gabon.

MALAGASY PRESIDENT FETES OUTGOING PRC ENVOY

OW112112 Beijing XINHUA in English 1901 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Tananarive, May 11 (XINHUA) -- Malagasy President Didier Ratsiraka and his wife hosted a dinner here today in honor of the outgoing Chinese Ambassador Gan Yetao and the leaving third and fourth Chinese medical teams. In his toast, President Ratsiraka termed the cooperation between the two countries as "sincere" and "effective". Gan Yetao praised President Ratsiraka's contribution to closer friendly ties between the two countries.

Earlier on April 27, President Ratsiraka through Foreign Minister Remi Richard, conferred on the Chinese ambassador a medal of "Commander" of the National Order (third class) in recognition of his service to the friendly ties between Madagascar and China.

UNSC PRESIDENTIAL ENVOY MEETS SWAPO CHIEF

OW110941 Beijing XINHUA in English 0725 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Arusha, Tanzania, May 10 (XINHUA) -- Mi Guojun, representative of president of the U.N. Security Council Ling Qing to the council's extraordinary plenary meeting on Namibia met with Sam Nujoma, president of the South West African People's Organization (SWAPO) here this morning.

Mi Guojun said that the United Nations respected the positions taken by the Organization of African Unity and the frontline countries on the Namibia issue. The U.N. resolution 435 and other decisions must be implemented, he added. He denounced South Africa's manoeuvres in Namibia as being in contravention of the U.N. resolutions.

Nujoma reaffirmed his rejection of "one man, two votes" and "one man one vote with two counts." He said that SWAPO would pursue the spirit of the conference held in Dar es Salaam on May 4 by frontline countries, Kenya, Nigeria and SWAPO. He also expressed thanks to China for its aid and support to SWAPO and its contributions to the settlement of Namibia's independence.

Mi Guojun also had a meeting with Tanzanian Minister of Foreign Affairs Salim Ahmad Salim here this morning. He told the minister that the U.N. council's meeting on Namibia would be of great significance; it would serve the interests of mustering international pressure upon the South African regime. The meeting on Namibia is scheduled to open here this afternoon.

Official Views Namibia Problem

OW121930 Beijing XINHUA in English 1857 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Arusha, Tanzania, May 12 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese representative to the extraordinary plenary meeting of the UN Council for Namibia today voiced firm support for the Namibian people's just struggle for an end to Pretoria occupation and the achievement of independence and liberation. The Chinese representative, Zhang Liyuan, also strongly condemned the Pretoria regime for suppressing the Namibian people and for its invasion of the frontline states. He praised the Namibian people for having achieved gratifying results in their active political and diplomatic struggle coupled with armed struggle.

He pointed out: "The truculence of the South African authorities, far from helping them to obtain their pernicious objectives, will only be met with even stronger condemnation and more severe sanctions of the international community." He said it must also be pointed out here that audacity and intransigence with which the South African authorities have behaved since long are inseparable with the connivance and support from certain Western powers, particularly from one superpower. [sentence as received] In order to defend its vested interests in South Africa, that superpower ever regards the South African racist authorities as its strategic ally, shielding them in all possible ways from criticisms and even attempting to revise resolutions of the Security Council to meet the unreasonable demand of the South African authorities. This is one of the most important reasons why resolution 435 of the Security Council has not been implemented so far and why Namibia has not been able to achieve independence to this day." However, he stressed, "neither perverse acts of the South African authorities nor obstruction, intervention and sabotage of the superpowers can prevent the historical wheel of national liberation from rolling forward."

He said the Chinese Government and people will continue to work with their African brothers and all justice upholding countries and peoples for the implementation of the resolutions related to the question of Namibia adopted by the General Assembly and the Security Council, and will continue to give political, diplomatic, moral and material support to the Namibian people till they win complete independence.

BRIEFS

TRADE UNIONISTS TO AFRICA -- Beijing, 8 May (XINHUA) -- A Chinese trade unions delegation led by Chen Yu, vice president of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, left here by plane today for friendship visits to Zimbabwe, Botswana and Nigeria. [Text] [Beijing XINHUA in English 1602 GMT 8 May 82 OW]

VENEZUELA CHRISTIAN SOCIAL PARTY OFFICIAL VISITS

Meets Ji Pengfei

OW081402 Beijing XINHUA in English 1353 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 8 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Ji Pengfei and his wife Xu Hanbing met with and hosted a dinner this evening in honor of Aristides Calvani, deputy secretary general of the Christian Socialist Party of Venezuela and general secretary of the Christian Democratic Organization of America, Mrs Adela Abbo de Calvani and their son and two daughters. In their conversation, Ji Pengfei said that their visit to China would help promote the friendship and understanding between the two parties and the people of China and Venezuela.

Deputy Secretary General Calvani told Ji Pengfei that he has come with an aim to open new channels for exchanges. He said that he was very interested in further promotion of the relationship between the two countries and parties of Venezuela and China.

Attending the meeting and banquet were Qiao Shi and Zhu Liang, head and deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, and Venezuelan Ambassador to China Regulo Burelli Rivas and Olga de Burelli.

The guests arrived here yesterday at the invitation of the International Liaison Department.

Meets CCP Liaison Head

OW121702 Beijing XINHUA in English 1557 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 12 (XINHUA) -- Qiao Shi, head of the International Liaison Department of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, gave a dinner this evening for Aristides Calvani, deputy secretary general of the Christian Socialist Party of Venezuela and general secretary of the Christian Democratic Organization of America, and his wife Adela Abbo de Calvani.

The guests will tour Xian and other Chinese cities tomorrow before returning home. During his stay in Beijing, Calvani has held talks with leaders of the International Liaison Department. They discussed their nations' domestic situation, development of relations between the two parties and international issues. Calvani also had discussions with Lei Jieqiong, vice-president of the Association for International Understanding of China.

FURTHER ON CORRUPT CADRE'S EXPULSION IN YUNNAN

OW110425 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1458 GMT 10 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 10 May (XINHUA) -- According to reports from RENMIN RIBAO reporter Xi Ping and GONGREN RIBAO reporter Qu Zuguang, the former deputy director and party branch deputy secretary of the office for counselors in Yunnan Province, Cheng Zhanbiao, was blinded by greed and overcome by the bourgeois corrupt way of life and adopted contemptible means to hoodwink the party and connived for his daughter Geng Hong to cohabit with Zhang so-and-so, a Hong Kong capitalist, and become Zhang's concubine. Cheng Zhanbiao was totally degenerated and failed to maintain the qualities and meet the requirements of a Communist Party member. Recently, the Yunnan Provincial CCP Committee decided to expel him from the party. Regarding this, the Central Discipline Inspection Commission has issued a circular for widespread inner-party distribution.

Cheng Zhanbiao was a veteran cadre who participated in the revolution in 1933 and joined the party in the same year. He did some good work for the party and the people. However, due to his negligence with regard to ideological transformation, he became obsessed with individualism. He tried a thousand and one ways to send his daughter Geng Hong to Hong Kong.

In February 1980, when he was transferred to Yunnan from Sichuan, he requested the transfer of Geng Hong from the translation publishing house in Shanghai using the excuse that he would like to have his daughter at his side. With his help, Geng Hong, who was a 27-year old CYL member at that time, came to Yunnan, and later met this Zhang so-and-so, a capitalist from Hong Kong.

Cheng Zhanbiao also lied while making use of the name of the office for counselors of the Yunnan Provincial People's Government. He issued a false letter of certification in his own writing which said: "Geng Hong has the need to go to Hong Kong because of her work," and "she and her husband agreed of their own accord to a divorce." He also put his official seal of office on this letter of certification, and finally helped Geng Hong achieve her goal of obtaining a divorce.

The Hong Kong capitalist Zhang so-and-so was married a long time ago. In addition to his wife and children, he has another concubine. Cheng Zhanbiao knew this situation well. When Geng Hong and Zhang so-and-so were in Shanghai and Kunming, their activities aroused strong discontent among the hotel administration and the departments concerned. They had informed Cheng Zhanbiao several times and asked the latter to take disciplinary action against his daughter Geng Hong, but Cheng turned a deaf ear to all this.

After the establishment of illicit relations with Zhang so-and-so, Cheng Zhanbiao and his family received, on various occasions, a color television set, radio-tape recorder, dress materials, Hong Kong currency and other items as gifts.

In March 1981, Geng Hong and Zhang so-and-so came to Guangzhou as "husband and wife," swindling and bluffing. With the help of Cheng Zhanbiao and others, Geng Hong finally achieved her goal of going to Hong Kong. On the eve of her departure for Hong Kong, Cheng Zhanbiao also wrote a letter of resignation for her in his own handwriting to complete the procedure for her resignation.

In discussing Cheng Zhanbiao's mistakes, the party branch of the Yunnan provincial office for counselors held: Cheng's activities clearly indicate that he has degenerated and failed to meet the essential requirements for a Communist Party member. In order to purify the party organizations, it is necessary to expel him from the party. However, there were also some people who held: Cheng Zhanbiao is a member of the old Red Army and a veteran cadre. He should be treated with leniency. They proposed to place him on probation within the party for a period of a year.

The Central Discipline Inspection Commission took an interest in this case. It held Cheng Zhanbiao must be expelled from the party because he is already degenerate. Recently the Central Discipline Inspection Commission issued a circular entitled: "Maintain Party's Purity, Resolutely Expel Those Who Are Corrupt and Degenerate." The circular called on "All Communist Party members to immediately get mobilized to resolutely struggle against all economic crimes as well as corrupt and degenerate practices and to absolutely refrain from indulging the evildoers."

EDITORIAL STRESSES DIVERSIFIED ECONOMY

HK130406 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 9 May 82 pp 1, 4

[Editorial: "It is Necessary To Develop the Diversified Economy on a Larger Scale"]

[Text] In recent years, various localities have gradually readjusted their agricultural production structure and the overall arrangements for their crops. Thus the situation of single-crop production has been changed, grain production has been increasing yearly and diversified economy has been developing very rapidly. At present, in the whole country the areas sown to grain should be stabilized and future developments of the diversified economy must not be allowed to occupy fields. So under such circumstances, can the diversified economy be further developed?

The answer is yes.

In March of last year, the CCP Central Committee and State Council transmitted the "Report on Actively Developing Diversified Economy in the Rural Areas" issued by the State Agricultural Commission. Over the past year or so, diversified economy in various localities has been thriving and a large number of typical units have come to the fore and we have accumulated some experience. Rural cadres and commune members have benefited and their enthusiasm has been greatly aroused. The energetic development of our diversified economy has a large foundation.

One of the basic characteristics of the agriculture in our country is that the amount of average per capita cultivated area and reclaimed wasteland is small. This is an important restricting condition. However, we have large areas of hilly land and hills and a great number of rivers, lakes and ponds as well as vast grasslands, seawaters and shoals in our country. Most of these rich natural resources have not been used or fully used. The "seven mountains and one river" have good conditions for developing diversified economy. A great deal of straw and rice stalks should be used as fodder and raw materials for industrial and sideline production. At present, some of these materials have been used as fuel or fertilizer. Some are discarded and are allowed to rot. If we rationally exploit and use these natural resources, energetically plant more trees and grasses and develop the breeding of livestock including plant-eating animals, birds and fish, we will acquire enormous wealth. The development of diversified economy will enrich the countryside, and at the same time, it is necessary in order to attain ecological balance and promote a benignant cycle. As various localities are investigating agricultural natural resources and dividing agricultural regions, we will be able to gradually find out about the situation of natural resources and create favorable conditions for rationally exploiting and using them. If we can adopt effective methods to fully use our natural resources in our own interest, our farming, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline production, fishery and industry will develop in an all-round way.

The processing industry for agricultural and sideline products can be vastly developed. Once some agricultural and sidelines products are processed, they will have a sudden rise in "status." As we know that due to the backwardness of our work in this respect, a number of industrial crops such as ramie and others have been stocked in warehouses because they are "slow selling," but ramie products are not "available" on the market. Every year, a great number of products such as fruits which are supplied to the market in quick succession end up rotting. Although some natural resources, such as yantao [a type of peach which grows wild] have been marketed, most of them ripen and rot on the mountains slopes "year in and year out."

If we can arouse the initiative of various quarters and pursue the practice of combining planting, breeding and processing, we will be able to overcome the defect of lacking cultivated land and bring the strong points of having abundant natural and labor force resources into play so that we can turn more "useless things into useful ones, small things into big ones and unitary use into multiple use."

In recent years, production of industrial crops such as cotton, edible oil, sugar and so forth has been developing very rapidly. However, with regard to yield per unit area and product quality, the gaps between various localities are very wide. Gaps mean potential. From now on, while developing industrial crops, we should avoid the practice of paying too much attention to the expansion of growing areas alone. Instead, we should exert our major effort to increase the yield per unit area, enhance labor productivity and improve product quality. We should change the practice of planting over wide areas without paying attention to yield. We should carry out intensive and meticulous farming, promote unified management and reform those medium and low-yield lands so that they will gradually catch up with the production level of those high-yield lands. The practice of some localities has proved that the potential in this respect is very great. After adopting advanced and scientific measures, very often we are able to get the greatest gains by making the lowest investment.

In a word, we should expand our field of vision from the limited cultivated land to the vast world. The development of diversified economy has good prospects.

To turn the good prospects into reality, it is imperative for us to do a great deal of solid work. Diversified economy and comprehensive development is a strategic measure for bringing about a prosperous rural economy in our country, which will become more and more important in the whole of agricultural development. "Planting the five cereals will provide us with sufficient food, whereas raising silkworms, planting hemp and rearing the six domestic animals will enrich the people." Developing diversified economy is the road peasants must follow in order to eliminate poverty and become rich. Leading organs and cadres concerned should on no account shake their determination to develop diversified economy. They should unswervingly implement the guiding principle of "never relaxing the efforts to promote grain production and actively carrying out diversified economy." At present, the products of diversified economy are insufficient in both quality and quantity and a greater development is needed.

The crux to developing diversified economy lies in implementing the party's policies. Different localities differ greatly in conditions because their management items, ownership systems and management methods are many and varied. Therefore, in accordance with the spirit of the "summary of minutes of the national conference on rural work," various localities should rely on the efforts of both the collectives and the individuals. Items which are suitable to be run by households of commune members should be delegated to individual households. Items suitable for the collectives should be run in a unified way by the collectives. The "summary of minutes" pointed out: "Production teams should formulate their plans for the overall development of their farming, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline production, fishery, industry and commerce in light of their practical conditions, make arrangements for manpower in a planned way and adopt suitable forms of the production responsibility system. Even those production teams which are based on individual household farming should also engage in some items of diversified economy in accordance with their capability, such as tree farms, tea gardens, orchards, poultry yards and so forth and gradually develop division of labor in specialized trades and contract system concerned with specialized trades." In so doing, we will not only actively develop household sideline production run by commune members, but also promote management items conducted by the collectives. As a result, we will certainly be able to develop diversified economy rapidly.

By developing diversified economy, we can accommodate scientific and technological achievements of various subjects. At present, due to insufficient knowledge on the part of leading cadres, it is fairly difficult to develop diversified economy. Owing to the lack of scientific and marketing knowledge, a great number of natural resources and agricultural and sideline products have not been rationally used. We have put aside some useful materials or wasted them. While developing diversified economy in the rural areas, we should engage in a number of items which have their own unique characteristics. To conscientiously develop them is more complicated than grasping grain alone. Leaders at all levels should take the lead in studying hard and assiduously be resolved to solve the difficulties in the important tasks of agricultural production so that they will become experts in their fields. When the masses have gradually acquired extensive knowledge and broadened their field of vision, it will be possible for them to attain enormous wealth. There are a great number of skillful persons in the rural areas who are engaged in cultivation, breeding, industrial sideline production and household sideline production. Some localities have instituted an extensive search for talented persons. They have brought the roles of various talented persons into full play in light of their own professional and individual characteristics. At the same time, they have also organized talented persons to teach the masses and encouraged the latter to learn from the former. In so doing they have not only solved the problem of lacking talented persons, but also opened all avenues for developing diversified economy. These experiences merit our attention.

To continue to develop diversified economy, we should consciously accept the guidance of the state plans. While deciding on management items which are suitable to local conditions, we should have the raw material resources, marketability of products and business profits in mind and put development of our diversified economy on a solid basis. Proceeding from the local conditions of certain production brigades, communes and zones, some localities developed their diversified economy without specific plans in mind. To deal with these problems properly, leaders concerned should be good at providing guidance: first, local strong points should be subordinated to the rational arrangements based on general interests; second, we should comprehensively consider both natural and economic conditions. For instance, while developing industrial crops, we should take into account the suitability of local climate and soil and the demands of the state and market. They should also consider grain selling quotas, the masses' grain ration and the capacity of transportation, the processing industry and warehouses and other things. Otherwise, we will suffer from unnecessary losses as a result of improper arrangements for production. At the same time, we should constantly provide those units and individuals who are engaged in the development of diversified economy with information concerning production and sales to help them manufacture marketable products.

With the development of diversified economy, we will get more and more agricultural and sideline products. Hence, we should take early measures to do a good job in storage and transportation and dredging and opening up various channels of circulation and reducing middle links in accordance with the characteristics of diversified undertakings and scattered transactions in a few of the rural areas. Since state commerce and supply and marketing cooperative are the main channels, regional blockades should be broken and commodity circulation according to economic zones should be organized. With regard to products based on assigned quotas by the state, we should take a reasonable base or establish a proper ration between purchase and retention, which should be fixed through contracts. At the same time, we should arouse the enthusiasm of collective commerce and individual traders so as to promote the development of commerce characterized by varied sectors and channels and fewer links. In so doing, we will ensure effective goods circulation and efficiently support the vigorous development of diversified economy in the rural areas.

JINGJI YANJIU VIEWS REFORMING ECONOMIC STRUCTURE

HK121017 Beijing JINGJI YANJIU in Chinese No 4, 20 Apr 82 pp 18-22

[Article by Yang Jisheng [2799 4949 4939], staff member of the Tianjin branch of XINHUA NEWS AGENCY: "Theories, Blueprints, Experiments and Conditions -- Investigation and Research on the Problems of Reforming the Economic Structure"]

[Text] "Without reform, there will be no way out for our economy." This is where the view's of all the economic circles and of all departments of economic work are identical at present. The CCP Central Committee has long made up its mind to carry out reform and has already been conducting experimental reforms in some places. At present, we are in a transitional period when the new system is replacing the old one; therefore, it is natural that our economic work may run up against certain temporary difficulties and confusion. People's minds are actively working, but at the same time they are also bewildered by quite a few problems. Under these circumstances, this writer has recently made a special investigation on the problem of the reform of the economic structure in Tianjin. The following are the views he has collected from various circles.

Theory

Any vagueness or lack of clarity related to theory will result in blindly groping for a way out in practice. Many comrades are of the opinion that some of the difficulties in our experiments of economic reform stem from the lack of a unified understanding of a few basic theoretical problems.

For example, in the process of implementing profit retention, dispute has arisen as to how much or how little the enterprises should retain. The financial department is of the opinion that the enterprises have gotten too big a share, but in the opinion of the enterprises their share is not big enough. What are the objective criteria for the sharing? How can these criteria be defined? It is imperative to answer these theoretical questions clearly.

Another example is that in summing up the experiences in our three decades of construction, some comrades describe the period of the First 5-Year Plan as a period when the planned economy in our country reached the realm of the ideal and they hope that the methods we used during the 1950's will be adopted now in the 1980's. True, during that period our economy rose steadily and some experiences we gained during that period can be referred to by us even at present, but the economic management system then was basically copied from the Soviet Union. This system was full of maladies but because our level of economic development at that time was very low and moreover, because we did not make any material errors in our decision making and we were very prudent and painstaking in carrying out our economic work, these maladies did not have enough time to clearly reveal themselves. Our present economic reform is precisely aimed at freeing ourselves from this pattern of overcentralism. Some of our comrades ssy that excessive eulogy of the First 5-Year Plan precisely showed our shallow understanding of the goal of our reform and the fact that our methods of thinking were one-sided. This was said with good reason.

Some theoreticians said that anything consists of two mutually contradictory aspects and that in order to handle it well, we should find a rational quantitative demarcation line between the two opposite aspects (this demarcation line is called "boundary" in philosophy). As yet some comrades have often failed to find proper "boundaries" on quite a few major theoretical issues. As a result, their exposition on these problems gives people the impression that they waver in their views on these problems. This has certainly had a detrimental impact on people's understanding.

For instance, in the past it was held that people's spirit was omnipotent and the principle of the incentive of material interests was negated. But later the incentive of material interests was overemphasized and the role of the poeple's spirit was negated.

As a result, an unhealthy trend of purusing money in doing everything came into vogue among some people. In the past, we negated the regulation by market mechanism and put one-sided emphasis on the unified planning of the state. Thus, we managed our economy in an overcentralized manner. But later when we paid attention to the role of regulation by market mechanism, we neglected to role of planning in giving guidance and in conducting administration and management. As a result the malpractices of letting things slide cropped up in some trades and professions. In the past, we closed our country to international exchange and rejected anything that was foreign. But later some people indiscriminately assimilated anything foreign without analyzing it. All the above-mentioned facts have shown that our theory is shallow and one-sided.

Many comrades suggest that the understanding of the following problems should be unified theoretically; otherwise it will be difficult to carry out the reform of the economic structure smoothly.

1. In order to be able to put an end to the malpractices of "eating out of a big pot" and "having an iron rice-bowl," what actual form of socialist public ownership should we adopt in our country? Should the reform of the economic structure affect the existing state ownership? Will the practice of enterprises assuming sole and complete responsibility for their profits and losses lead to a change in the nature of the ownership of the whole people?

2. How are we to correctly implement the policy of taking the planned economy as the core and supplementing it with the regulation of market mechanism? How are we to ensure that the economic activities in all our enterprises conform to the macroeconomic goals while we are enlivening our microeconomy? How are we to ensure that the initiative and flexibility of all our enterprises is given free play while carrying out the unified plans?

3. In handling the relationships between the spirit and material, how are we to prevent the malpractice of treating money as being above everything, while giving play to economic incentive? How are we to prevent the principle of commodity exchange from being adopted in our political, cultural and ideological fields while developing commodity production? How are we to prevent our moral qualities, conscience and people's mutual relationships from being turned into commodities?

In order to speed up the reform of the economic structure, our economic workers and economic theoreticians are faced with arduous and complicated tasks. There are a large number of questions to be scientifically answered by them. Some comrades are of the opinion that during the recent years our theoreticians have broken away from the ideological fetters of the "two whatevers," criticized the "leftist" erroneous guiding ideology, exposed the maladies of the existing economic system and thus significantly prepared public opinion for economic reform. However, we should not fail to point out that some of our theoreticians have adopted an unhealthy style of study and treated the directives of the higher level and the theory in books as the only source of truth. As a result they have refused to soundly investigate and study when they are doing research, and they have failed to persistently maintain the scientific and serious nature of theory. When a certain problem was put forth, people rushed to write one article after another and hold one meeting after another. But all they said in their articles and meetings were almost the same things. When the trend changed, they would make an about-face. Some people said: "Some of our theoreticians have no scientific views of their own. If a certain leader says something is good today, they will cite classics to prove that this thing is really good. However, if this thing is said by another leader to be bad tomorrow, they will again cite classics to prove that this thing is really bad. They seldom look for the criteria of right and wrong in practice." This criticism is to the point for some people. In order to fulfill the historical tasks facing them, our theoreticians must definitely rectify their style of study.

Blueprints

Should there be a general design for the reform of the economic structure? Through 2 years and more of practice, many comrades have begun to see that it is better to have a general design first.

We have gradually formed a tentative idea on the reform of the economic structure through years of arduous groping at all levels and in all fields. This idea can be summed up as follows: taking the planned economy as the core and supplementing it with the regulation of market mechanism; having flexibility in microeconomics and centralism in macroeconomics; strengthening economic legislation and upholding division of labor between the political leadership and the management of the enterprises; and developing joint ventures and cooperation and enlivening circulation. However, this tentative idea is only an orientation and a rough plan. Using the terms of engineering design, this idea can only be treated as a "design program." In order to complete all the blueprints of the general design, we have to, furthermore, draw up all the concrete structure, features and all the details of every component in accordance with the various requirements of the "design program." As these requirements are often somewhat contradictory with one another, in drawing up the general design we must balance and dovetail all these requirements and thus make the new system a harmonized and coordinated organic entity. Besides, we should also estimate beforehand the problems that may possibly crop up when the new system is being implemented and design a few measures to be adopted to solve these problems.

After drawing up a general design, we should also draw up a series of "working plans." Thus, we will know what should be done earlier, what should be done later, how we are to link up one component with another and how we are to dovetail all the components. Without the "working drawing," the various parts of the reform will possibly contradict or offset one another and all sorts of confusion may crop up.

At present, we have already adopted some measures of economic reform, but because of our failure to draw up a mature general design and our lack of a "working plan," the following problems have cropped up in our practice:

1. We failed to form these measures into a complete set and our macroeconomic management lagged behind. As a result we failed to achieve good results even though we have adopted good measures. Undoubtedly, it is necessary to enlarge the decisionmaking power of our enterprises, but because we have failed to adopt other measures of reform to form a complete set of reform measures, we have failed to solve a large number of problems, despite trying every means to enlarge the decisionmaking power of our enterprises. The implementation of profit retention was originally aimed at giving play to the initiative of the enterprises. But because we have failed to coordinate this measure with price reform and because we have failed to provide other necessary conditions, we have failed to give play to their initiative owing to the difference in the exertion needed to fulfill their respective profit targets. On the other hand, the abovementioned measures are moreover a hotbed for departmentalism, separatism and the tendency of liberalization, which will weaken and destroy the unified planning and harm the unified interests of the state.

2. Failure to dovetail one measure with another. This has made us neglect one aspect while paying attention to another aspect. For example, it is certainly right to lay stress on giving play to the strong points, but we have failed to take both the strongpoints of a part and those of the whole. Because we have failed to take the whole situation into account, instances of anarchic duplicate construction have occurred and a large number of small enterprises have mushroomed everywhere. As a result the big ones suffered and for a time the big cities could not get supplies of tobacco, wool and other raw materials and their technical strong points could not be brought into play. In solving the employment problem, we have neglected the problem of raising labor productivity. Thus, we have not only further inflated the overstaffed personnel of our enterprises, but have also replaced a large number of skilled old workers with unskilled young ones.

In implementing the policies of profit retention and assigning full responsibility for profits to the enterprises, we failed to fix criteria for targets of variety and quality. As a result, the malpractices of focusing on producing products with the greatest profit margins and manufacturing goods in a rough and slipshod way have cropped up.

3. Some isolated reforms will perhaps become obstacles to the comprehensive reforms later. For example, since we have divided up the financial systems between the central and the local levels, the localities have pursued their own financial interests and refused to carry out the policy of closing, suspending, shifting the production of and merging some of their enterprises, and unplanned duplicative construction projects have become unavoidable. At the same time, this has created obstacles to merging enterprises of the same trade and profession in different areas. As the existing wage system itself does not satisfactorily embody the principle of distribution according to labor, it is difficult to overcome its shortcomings by paying bonuses. In 1980 Tianjin City paid 150 million yuan of bonuses, which was 4.3 times the amount of the additional wages paid in that year. Such excessive payment of bonuses will create obstacles to the wage reform in the future.

The above-mentioned problems have proved that the national economy is an integrated entity consisting of sectors that are related to and interact on one another. Therefore, an attempt to solve problems one by one in isolation often fails because of the restriction of other factors. That is why many comrades have proposed that the central authorities should establish a commission to take charge of designing the new economic system. This commission will concentrate the wisdom of all circles and conscientiously draw up the blueprints of the new system through repeated investigation and study.

Experiments

Whether in the course of formulating a reform plan, or before the comprehensive implementation of a completed plan, we have to carry out a series of experiments on a small scale. The purpose of these experiments is to prove or negate certain provisional ideas. The experiment in expanding enterprises' decisionmaking power should be conducted in the course of formulating the reform plan. Good results have been achieved in the last 2 years when experiments have been carried out in selected enterprises. However, we have also found several conspicuous shortcomings. To expose these shortcomings does not mean that we want to nitpick or "pour cold water," but that we wish to see improvement in the work.

First, the enterprises selected for experimentation are not representative because they possess some favorable conditions which ordinary enterprises never have. For this reason, the conclusions drawn from experiments in those enterprises may not necessarily be generally applicable, and usually, their experience cannot be easily popularized throughout the trade. Most of the enterprises which are carrying out the experiment of proportional profit retention are ones which enjoy high profit rates. Therefore, we can find in each enterprise selected for experimentation that profits are distributed according to a formula, namely, "the state takes away the large portion, the enterprise retains a small portion, while the individual keeps the small change." But, if we apply this formula on a larger scale, we will find that the portion retained by the enterprise is too large to ensure the financial revenues of the state. On the other hand, enterprises selected for carrying out the experiment of "assuming sole responsibility for profits and losses" are enjoying a high profit rate. They include watch factories, bicycle plants, and so on. As all of them always make profits and never suffer losses, carrying out that specific experiment in these enterprises seems meaningless.

Second, too many enterprises have been selected for experiments. Take Tianjin, for example. The number of enterprises selected for carrying out the experiment of proportional profit retention amounts to 509, or 62 percent of the total number of enterprises subordinate to the municipal administration; and in terms of output value or in terms of profits, they account for over 80 percent of all state-run enterprises throughout the city. At the beginning, there was the opinion that selction of more enterprises for experimentation meant emancipation of the mind.

This opinion pushed some regions to expand the scope of the experiment in disregard of their own objective conditions.

Third, we have seldom made objective and scientific observations and analyses of those enterprises selected for experiments and summed up their experience. In the appraisal of the progress of the experiments carried out in these enterprises, we have always heard indiscriminate comments such as "the situation is enlivened wherever the responsibility system is enforced," "the responsibility system is universally applicable," and so on. People have seldom made scientific and overall analyses and have put forth their own opinions. The actual purpose of the experiment is to justify the correctness of certain provisional ideas or policies. It may prove the ideas correct or it may prove them wrong. Even though the results of an experiment prove that an original idea is correct, we still have to try to find out its defects so as to improve it. And this is the only scientific and responsible attitude we should take.

Apart from the above, the content of the experiment is relatively simple. We are experimenting with only one aspect: expansion of enterprise decisionmaking power by reforming the distribution system. Undoubtedly this is one of the important topics of the present reform. But there are a number of other problems in the economic reform which need to be solved through experimentation, for example, taxation, pricing, salaries, labor, finances and so on. Unfortunately experiments in reform in these fields have not been properly carried out so far.

Some comrades suggest that comprehensive and comparable experiments using different models be confined to several medium-size and small cities; in other words, a certain comprehensive reform plan will be extensively carried out in a small city so that its policy will be different from that adopted in the surrounding area. The advantages of this kind of experiment are: Since various reform items are carried out in a well-coordinated manner, it is possible to see the overall result. Since they are carried out within a relatively isolated locality, external interference can be avoided and the experimental conditions can be easily controlled. Since they are carried out in several medium-sized and small cities, their influence on the overall situation will be limited in case of failure. Finally, since several comparable reform plans are implemented, we will be able to select an optimum plan. Not all of these advantages exist in those experiments which are currently being carried out.

Conditions

The reform of the economic system requires certain conditions: 1) all organizations concerned, from the upper levels down to the lower levels, must reach a unanimous understanding of the malpractices of the current economic system and have a strong desire for reform; 2) there must be a strong leading organ which is determined in carrying out the reform; 3) there must be a favorable political climate of stability and unity; 4) there must be a harmonious economic situation which is steadily developing; and 5) the party must cultivate a good work style. Here we mean that leading organs at various levels must hold identical views to those of the CCP Central Committee, so that orders and prohibitions can be strictly enforced, the principle of being practical and realistic can be upheld and everything can be carried out in accordance with principles. In the opinion of many comrades, at present, the former three conditions are basically available, while the latter two conditions still need to be created.

The present economic situation in our country is generally good. Very great successes have been achieved in the readjustment of the national economy, production is developing, and the people's livelihood is being improved step-by-step. However, the longstanding irrational economic structure has not yet been fundamentally changed, and the latent danger has not yet been eliminated. Quite a few enterprises are having their production wholly or partly suspended, the difficulties we are facing in allocation of funds, energy production, employment arrangement and so on are still rather prominent, and the national economy is still not on a healthy cycle.

Under these circumstances, the reform should be carried out steadily and not rashly; otherwise good results cannot be achieved. We will surely be bitterly attacked or criticized by various circles if the reform is proved ineffective, and this will in turn slow down the progress of the economic reform. Therefore, in view of the present situation in our country, economic readjustment is the prerequisite for economic reform. We must first conscientiously do a good job of readjusting the economy if we really want to reform the economic structure.

In a certain sense, the reform of the economic system is equivalent to a readjustment of power and interests. Therefore, it is bound to encounter various obstacles and possibly has to face an unexpected and complicated situation. Therefore, our cadres at various levels must proceed in all cases from the fundamental interests of the state and the people, take the overall situation into consideration, and resolutely oppose those activities of regarding personal interests and the interests of one's own unit as everything, harming the collective to benefit the individual and violating the law and discipline. Moreover, it is also an important task to correct the party's work style, to reorganize leading groups at various levels and to prepare necessary political conditions for economic reform.

At present, some comrades are overanxious in carrying out the reform and are speeding up new construction projects. However, there will surely be more and greater difficulties if new construction projects fail to emerge while the old ones have already been destroyed. Therefore, those comrades who are really eager for reform should never be overanxious to destroy the old structure but should try their best to complete good designs for new structures, carry out experiments, actively create conditions and then enforce the reform in a planned way.

FURTHER ON DRAFT OF REVISED CONSTITUTION

CHINA DAILY Column

HK130127 Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 13 May 82 p 4

["Opinion" column by CHINA DAILY commentator: "A Socialist Constitution"]

[Text] The draft of the revised PRC constitution now being discussed nationwide is characterized by its thoroughly socialist nature.

The preamble, general principles, as well as articles on citizens fundamental rights and duties and functions of state organs, are permeated with the spirit of socialism.

The preamble reflects objective reality when it says: "Chinese society has been transformed step by step from new-democratic to socialist. The system of exploitation of man by man has been eliminated and the socialist system securely established."

This was not the case when the first Constitution was enacted in 1954. Privately owned factories, firms and shops were still operating; individual farmers had their own plots and farm animals and implements. The country entered the stage of socialism after 1956, when all privately owned industrial and commercial enterprises were transformed into state-owned or joint state-private ones, and small, independent tillers organized into productive cooperatives and, later into people's communes.

Now, after 26 years of consolidation, socialism has been securely established on the basis of public ownership of the means of production, that is, ownership by the whole people as represented by the state, and collective ownership by working people. And it is only now possible for China to state in hew new constitution that she applies the socialist principle "from each according to his ability, to each according to his work."

As stipulated in the draft revision, the state undertakes to ensure the consolidation and development of the state sector of the economy -- big industrial plants, mines, railways, banks, etc. owned by the whole people. At the same time, it protects the lawful rights and interests of collective economic units which include in the main the agricultural and fishery communes in the rural areas and handicraft cooperatives in cities and towns.

Latitude

It is true that much more latitude has been given to rural household sideline production and self-employed labourers of the nature of individual economy in the last few years. Nevertheless, the individual economy operates only as a complement to the socialist economy. There is very little if any likelihood it can develop into capitalist enterprises because no one is permitted to own the essential means of production and make a profit by exploiting people. For instance, however capable a farmer may be at improving his lot through hard work, skillful farming or sideline occupations, he is forbidden to buy or lease any plot of land.

The revised constitution stipulates that socialist public property is "sacred and inviolable," and that any action of seizing or damaging state or collective property is punishable (art. 13). This proscription and the outlawing of exploitation, however, should not be taken to imply that private property lacks legal protection. On the contrary, articles 14 and 15 provide: "the state protects the right of citizens to own lawfully earned income, savings, houses and other lawful property," and "the right of citizens to inherit private property."

Responsibilities

To consolidate the socialist system and give full play to the superior conditions of socialism as an advanced state of human history, the state not only assumes the common responsibilities of government, but also performs the functions of promoting health, education, culture and science among other things. Above all, it undertakes to "continually raise labor productivity, increase economic effectiveness and develop social productive forces," and "gradually improve the material and cultural life of the people." (art. 16)

Planning is a dominant feature of socialist economy. Thus, it is required that the state "makes appropriate arrangements with regard to accumulation and consumption, takes into account the interests of the state, the collective and the individual," (art 16) and "ensures the proportionate and co-ordinated development of the national economy through the comprehensive balancing of economic plans, with market regulation as a subsidiary." (art. 17)

Stipulations in the revised constitution ensure that state and collective enterprises have the power of decision in their management, which is to be shared by the workers.

The draft constitution does not merely stipulate that all citizens have the right to work and rest, it also obligates the state to provide the facilities for such. The right to universal primary education; material assistance in old age, illness and disability; maternal and child welfare, and many other social benefits is specified, and the state must guarantee them to all citizens.

What sounded utopian to most Chinese 30 years ago, has already begun to be a reality. The road ahead still is rocky, but it is clearly charted -- a path along which the socialist system is steadily perfected in all fields.

Taiwan Groups Comment

OW122116 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1424 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpt] Beijing, 12 May (XINHUA) -- A joint meeting of council members of the All-China Association for the Promotion of Friendship Among Taiwanese Compatriots and the Beijing Municipal Association for the Promotion of Friendship Among Taiwanese Compatriots was held today in Beijing to discuss the draft of the revised constitution.

Lin Liyun, president of the All-China Association for the Promotion of Friendship Among Taiwanese Compatriots, pointed out at the meeting that the draft of the revised constitution is an embodiment of democracy, thorough discussions, and the masses' wisdom. The discussion of the draft by the entire nation can only happen in a socialist country in which the people are the masters.

She noted that 22 NPC deputies and 24 CPPCC National Committee members are Taiwanese compatriots. Many Taiwanese compatriots are representatives of people's congresses or members of CPPCC committees of many provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions and some Taiwanese compatriots have participated in the administration of state affairs as vice chairmen and standing committee members of these congresses and committees. This shows that the party and the state are interested in them. The preamble of the draft of the revised constitution and article 30 of the draft established NPC Standing Committee Chairman Ye Jianying's principles and policies for the peaceful reunification of the motherland as law. This is of important practical and historical significance. It shows the government's sincerity in seeking to resolve the Taiwan issue.

Lin Liyun expressed hope that council members of all associations for the promotion of friendship among Taiwanese compatriots would lead the people around them to discuss the draft and contribute their wisdom and strength to the formulation of a more perfect constitution.

CPPCC Groups Comment

OW120251 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1242 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 11 May (XINHUA) -- The CPPCC judicial group and the group directly under the administration of the CPPCC National Committee held separate forums this morning to discuss the "draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China."

Han Youtong, head of the CPPCC judicial group, pointed out in his speech: An important reason why the 1954 Constitution was fairly perfect was because the masses from all walks of life throughout the country attended the discussions and because their opinions were extensively solicited. Now the draft of this revised constitution has been amended several times by the constitutional revision committee, and the opinions of various localities, departments and fields are extensively being solicited. This revised constitution will be more perfect than the 1954 Constitution. Now it is being discussed by all the people in the country. After being repeatedly discussed at the higher and lower levels, it will become a perfect fundamental, major law conforming with the state of affairs in China, and it will guide the Chinese people's political life for a long time after it is adopted by the National People's Congress in the near future.

Nonparty affiliated democratic personnel Cheng Siyuan, Zhao Junmai, Liang Shuming, Pu Jie, Zhang Xueming and others attended the forum sponsored by the group directly under the administration of the CPPCC National Committee. They pointed out: The draft of the revised constitution has included the major events in the modern history of China, including the 1911 revolution and the establishment of new China under the leadership of the CCP. It has explicitly put forward the four basic principles and specified the basic system and task of the state. It has been put forward after summing up the history of revolutionary struggles in China over the past decade, particularly the experiences of the past 30-plus years since liberation. It completely conforms with the state of affairs in China and the fundamental interests of all the people in the country.

Those who attended these two forums also offered their specific views for the revision of certain articles in the draft of the revised constitution.

The CPPCC group for women also held a forum on 8 May to discuss the draft of the revised constitution.

RENMIN RIBAO ON ACCOMPLISHING FOUR MAJOR TASKS

HK110910 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 7 May 82 p 5

[Article by Liu Ruilong [0491 3843 7893]: "Two Kinds of Interpretation of 'Tomorrow'"]

[Text] There are two kinds of entirely different interpreations of the word "tomorrow." One regards it as a derogatory term while the other regards it as a commendatory term. However, they have a common ground of expecting a bright future. This is positive and instructive for our four modernizations cause. I would like to quote these views as follows:

The first example is the "Song of Tomorrow" written by Qian Hetan, which was published in a collection of notes and comments by Qian Yong, a scholar in the Qing Dunasty. Qian Yong wrote:

"Before starting to do something, some young people often say: 'I cannot do it.' This is wrong. One can do something only by doing it. How can one do anything before doing it? In some other cases, they would say: 'Better leave it for tomorrow.' This is also wrong. When one wants to do something, one should start doing it right away. If one procrastinates, the thing may possibly never be done throughout one's lifetime."

"The 'Song of Tomorrow' written by Mr Qian Hetan is most instructive and I would like to quote it here: 'Tomorrow, tomorrow. Again tomorrow! I accomplish nothing by leaving everything for tomorrow. Many people have done the same, and before accomplishing anything, they find themselves too old. Time is thus wasted, from spring to autumn, like the river flowing east, like the sun setting in the west. How many tomorrows are there in 100 years? Please listen to my 'Song of Tomorrow.'" This was written in the old society by a noble-minded writer to advise people not to procrastinate in doing things, not to waste time or hold things up. Today, it is also "good medicine" for those who have been seriously affected by bureaucratism and those who are squeamish, arrogant and inactive.

The other example is a line in the "Internationale," which is sung all over the world in the new era: "Unite for a bright tomorrow." This is a basic tenet and a magic weapon for the Communist Party to lead the people in revolution and construction and a fundamental guarantee for the victory of our cause. It represents our hopes and future. We can never do without the revolutionary spirit characterized by vitality, unity and struggle, the revolutionary spirit of reinvigorating China and the revolutionary spirit of the foolish old man who removed the mountains.

After first achieving successes in reorganizing the administrative structure of the State Council, it is necessary to further improve work style and raise work efficiency.

The reorganization of the administrative structure and the reform of the entire economic system, as well as the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field, the building of socialist spiritual civilization and the rectification of the party's work style are found interrelated major tasks at present in adhering to the four basic principles and for ensuring the realization of the four modernizations. We must endeavor to achieve our aim.

Constant efforts must be made at present and in the future to get rid of the lethargy of the old society and develop the vitality of the new era.

HONGQI DISCUSSES RETIREMENT OF PARTY MEMBERS

HK120809 Beijing HONGQI in Chinese No 9, 1 May 82 pp 27-28

[Article by Wang Guangmei [3769 0342 5019]: "Communists Should Never 'Retire'"]

[Text] It is a matter of far-reaching strategic significance to build up a contingent of revolutionary, well-educated, professionally competent and younger leading cadres.

Our veteran revolutionaries and comrades have made many important contributions to the revolutionary cause and the construction of our motherland. Today, under the new circumstances, the party and the people require us to make new contributions and fulfill the glorious task that history has entrusted to us, that is, to do a good job in handing over our work to reliable successors, to young and middle-aged comrades who truly support the party's line, policies and principles mapped out since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee.

Either in modern or ancient times, in China or elsewhere, great leaders usually manifested their remarkable talent when they were very young. Many of our old comrades were regiment commanders, county CCP committee secretaries or leaders of worker, peasant and student movements when they were about 20. Comrade Deng Xiaoping was secretary general of the CCP Central Committee when he was only 23. Led by the party, some minority nationality comrades also did outstanding jobs for the revolution and became good leaders when they were young. Are there not talented young comrades at present? Actually, there are many among the 1 billion people. It is true that owing to the sabotage of the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques, our work of training and selecting young and middle-aged cadres has been delayed. But during more than 10 years of upheaval, they were also tempered. They were brought up in the complicated circumstances and struggles and have become mature. We must make every effort to foster the growth of these young and middle-aged cadres, boldly promote them to important posts and support their work. We must pass on experiences and set an example to bring them up. I am convinced that our young cadres will certainly be worthy successors.

Relief from duty is a normal process. It is an important matter concerning the destiny and future of our country. All party members, cadres and people are showing great concern for it. So, no matter what difficulties we may encounter, we must carry out this work well. In the past, we followed a roundabout road in this respect and caused the country and people to suffer a lot. We must draw a lesson from this. Under the leadership of the party, we must continue to adhere to the mass line, select and appoint talented people and hand the power over to reliable successors.

Being prompted by a strong sense of responsibility towards the people, we joined in the revolution dozens of years ago. We all made the pledge on being admitted to the party: for the cause of communism, we will not hesitate to sacrifice our all, including our lives. Now the development of our party's cause confronts us with another severe test. It is also an opportunity for us to make new contributions to the party. I am convinced that our veteran cadres will certainly do a good job in handing over their work to the next generation and thus add a new page to the record of meritorious service compiled by the people.

In comparison with many old comrades, I am a party member of shorter standing and have made fewer contributions. But I am already 60. Like many other comrades, I was deprived of the right to work for the people during my most capable years. How we thirsted for work at that time! However, soon afterward we regained the right to work, and now that we are working energetically, we have become old and it is time for us to hand over the work. I do not think that young and middle-aged comrades could understand what we are feeling now. It is extremely painful that the law of nature has made us unable to make up for lost time. So far as bitter experiences in the "Great Cultural Revolution" are concerned, we should say that our veteran cadres are those who were most seriously harmed during that period of time and have lost the most precious time, that of their prime years. Since we have experienced such pain, we should be more willing to hand over our work to the younger generation and do our best to help them do a good job.

In this way we can make up for their own losses during the 10-odd years while fulfilling our unfinished tasks to make up for the losses suffered by the party and state, and they will not suffer the pain that we suffered. This naturally requires a lofty sentiment, a broad vision and a strong sense of responsibility toward revoltuion.

To one who makes revolution all one's life, it is very painful to leave one's present post. What shall we do after we leave our posts? This reminds me of a past event. In 1952, Comrade Liu Shaoqi and I paid a visit to a subtropical botanical garden in Sochi [Suoqi, 4792 1142] in the Soviet Union. The cadre in charge of the botanical garden, who accompanied us on the visit, was an old Bolshevik. He was a retired Red Army man who had rendered outstanding service. After retirement he volunteered to work in the botanical garden. Comrade Liu Shaoqi expressed admiration for his deeds and said: "Being a revolutionary who makes revolution all his life, it is very painful to completely retire and convalesce without continuing to do anything for the revolution and without spiritual sustenance. If my physical condition and energies fail me in doing my present work, I would like to work as a teacher of party history or philosophy. If I am not able to teach, I would like to go with you to a tree farm! Then we shall work together to select seeds, raise seedlings and spread fertilizer on the soil...." Comrade Liu Shaoqi was only 54 then. But for reasons known to all, he was unable to realize his ideals.

Now the important task of handing over our work to the younger generation has fallen on our shoulders. If we really understand the importance of this strategic policy decision of the CCP Central Committee, we are sure to do the job well. There are still a lot of jobs for us to do after retirement! We can work as voluntary after-school advisers for students, do some reading and sum up our experiences, or work as tree farm workers. How nice it will be to keep ourselves busy all the time! No matter what jobs we are going to do, if we work as advisers on the second and third lines or even if we do not hold any post, we are revolutionaries and workers at all times. It is our lifelong task to "select seeds, grow seedlings...and take an active interest in the growth of trees." We must fight for the cause of communism as long as we have a breath. Communists should never "retire!"

The present situation is good. But there are still many difficulties, and our conditions are very complicated. The greatest disaster the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques brought to us is disrupting our unity, the unity between the party and the masses, between the cadres and the masses and between the army and the people, as well as the unity of the cadres, the unity of the masses and the unity of all nationalities. Therefore, we must strengthen our unity under the leadership of the CCP Central Committee and overcome all difficulties step-by-step to make our socialist motherland a powerful and prosperous country so that the great cause pioneered by the revolutionaries of the older generation can be carried on from generation to generation, and the hard-won great achievements of countless revolutionary martyrs and fighters can be passed on to posterity!

ANHUI'S ZHOU ZIJIAN ON ANTIFLOOD MEASURES

OW122134 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts] The Anhui Provincial People's Government held a meeting in Hefei from 7 to 9 May to discuss the prevention of floods and droughts. Zhou Zijian, acting first secretary of the provincial party committee and governor of Anhui, called the meeting by telephone on 6 May while making an inspection tour in Boxian County. He presented specific measures for the prevention of floods in areas along the Chang Jiang and Huai He. Other leading comrades of the provincial party committee and provincial government, including Wang Guangyu, Yang Weiping and Meng Fulin, attended and addressed the meeting.

On the morning of 9 May, the standing committee of the provincial party committee heard a special report on the meeting and studied solutions to the problems presented at the meeting.

The meeting pointed out that the general requirement for the prevention of floods and droughts this year is that positive measures must be adopted to guard against floods and deal with emergencies. Areas along the Chang Jiang and Huai He must be prepared to combat the largest floods since the founding of the country, effective measures must be taken to cope with major floods and the safety of dams and reservoirs must be ensured. With regard to droughts, preparations must be made to deal with serious droughts, such as those that occurred in 1966 and 1978. To achieve victory in the struggle against floods and droughts this year, the meeting urged areas throughout the province to strengthen their leadership and implement various responsibility systems.

The meeting said that civilian workers for the first and second front struggle against floods must be formed beforehand so that they can immediately take part in the struggle upon mobilization. The meeting pointed out that while preparations against floods are being made, all areas must also guard against droughts by strengthening the management of water and conserving water according to plan.

XIANG NAN MEETS WITH FOREIGN EXPERTS 29 APR

OW121407 Fuzhou FUJIAN RIBAO in Chinese 30 Apr 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The international workshop and training course on nitrogenous fertilizer ended in Fuzhou on the afternoon of 29 April at a closing ceremony which marked the conclusion of their 4-day activities.

Dr P. J. Stangel, deputy managing director of the international fertilizer development center, summed up the workshop and the training course at the closing ceremony. Also addrssing the workshop were Chen Huakui, a noted Chinese expert on soil micro-organisms; Gao Huimin, director of the Soil and Fertilizer Research Institute under the Chinese Academy of Agricultural Sciences; and (Qin Shuo Shi), director of the State Agricultural Research Institute of Burma. They affirmatively acknowledged the achievements of the workshop.

Xiang Nan, chairman of the standing committee of the Fujian Provincial People's Congress, met a number of foreign experts attending the workshop and had a cordial and friendly conversation with them on the evening of 29 April. After the meeting, Comrade Xiang Nan joined all the participating experts in watching a literary and art performance. Early this morning, Chinese and foreign experts attending the international workshop left Fuzhou for a visit to Jianyang County.

JIANGSU'S XU JIATUN AT PARTY HISTORY MEETING

OW130255 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] The conference of east China's seven provinces and municipalities on the collection of party history data opened solemnly at Nanjing's Great Hall of the People this morning. It was attended by more than 170 leading comrades in party history work from seven provinces and municipalities in east China. Also attending the opening ceremony were Lu Dingyi, Kong Yuan, Li Qiang, (Liu Xunyuan), (Zhou Lin), (Chen Yangshan), (Liu Xiao), (Hui Yuyu) and some 30 other old comrades who had assumed leadership work in these seven provinces and municipalities during the various historical periods of China's revolution. In addition, more than 2,000 provincial and Nanjing municipal cadres were present at the opening ceremony.

The conference was presided over by Comrade Guan Wenwei, adviser to the provincial party committee and chairman of the party history data collection committee under the Jiangsu Provincial CCP Committee. Comrade Xu Jiatun, first secretary of the provincial party committee, delivered the opening address. On behalf of the provincial party committee, he warmly welcomed all comrades attending the conference, wished the old comrades health and longevity and wished the conference complete success. He also made a brief report to the conference participants on Jiangsu's political and economic situation, Jiangsu's party ranks and the province's work of collecting party history data since the holding of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee.

Addressing the conference, Comrade (Xie Xiaonai), vice chairman of the Central Committee for collection of party history data, said that the long and glorious history of revolutionary struggles of east China was worth reviewing and summing up. The successful compilation of the history of the party in east China would certainly help the successful compilation of the history of the party throughout the country. He called on the participants to, after this conference, review their work, exchange information, sum up their experiences, discuss problems and expand cooperation so as to advance the work of collecting data on the history of the party.

After (Xie Xiaonai) spoke, Comrade Feng Wenbin, chairman of the Central Committee for collection of party history data, delivered an important report. He reaffirmed the achievements made in collecting data on the history of the party throughout the country, but also pointed out some existing problems. He stressed the necessity to improve leadership and methods of work so as to upgrade the work of collecting data on the history of the party. Referring to the question of writing memoirs, he noted that this is only one aspect of the entire work. Other methods such as conducting investigation and discussion meetings and visiting old comrades should be used in collecting materials for the history of the party. In writing memoirs, attention should be paid to selecting materials of historical value, to the historical period and to the historical contributions of the party and the masses. In addition, in writing memoirs one should not forget summing up experiences and drawing lessons. In affirming or negating a case, an incident or an individual, sufficient material evidence must be provided together with the historical background from beginning to end. Memoirs must be examined and approved before they are published.

Comrade Feng Wenbin also said that old cadres should not restrict their role to writing memoirs only. They should also take up the more important and glorious task of bringing up successors, passing on their experiences to them, helping them and setting an example in training successors.

NIE FENGZHI AT NANJING PLA COMMENDATION MEETING

OW112301 Shanghai JIEFANG RIBAO in Chinese 8 May 82 p 2

[Excerpts] The Nanjing PLA units held a meeting on 3 May to commend 28 advanced collectives and 53 advanced individuals for their achievements in building up socialist ethics.

Present were Nie Fengzhi, Guo Linxiang, Du Ping and other leading comrades of the Nanjing PLA units. First Political Commissar Guo Linxiang of the Nanjing PLA units addressed the meeting.

SHANDONG'S BAI RUBING TO LEAD ANTIDROUGHT WORK

SK120131 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee and government and the third provincial antidrought work group recently went to various localities to assist in antidrought work. To help all localities combat drought and ensure spring sowing and wheat growth, the provincial CCP committee decided to send Comrades Bai Rubing, Qin Hezhen, Li Zhen, Xu Jianchun and Zhou Zhenxing to prefectures and municipalities where the drought is serious and difficulties are enormous to give guidance to the antidrought work. Comrade Li Zhen already left Jinan for Yantai on 11 May. Other comrades will leave for Weifang, Linyi, Zaozhuang, Qingdao, Huimin and Zibo Prefectures and municipalities today or tomorrow. In the meantime, the provincial government transferred a number of cadres from its subordinate departments to form the third antidrought work group. This group, led by six office or bureau directors, will also go to various localities to help in the antidrought struggle within a couple of days.

SHANGHAI CONGRESS URGES STUDY OF CONSTITUTION

OW110623 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] The 21st Session of the Shanghai Municipal People's Congress Standing Committee held this morning adopted, after discussion, a resolution calling for people throughout the municipality to discuss the draft of the revised constitution of the PRC. The resolution calls for the people of Shanghai to exercise the right of being the masters of their own affairs, pitch in immediately and actively and seriously participate in this discussion.

The resolution points out: The discussion of the draft of the revised constitution by the people throughout the country is a matter of prime importance in the political life of the people of all nationalities in China. It is a vivid embodiment of the peoples exercising the right of being the masters of their own destiny. The resolution calls for all state organs, army units, party and government organizations, people's organizations, schools, enterprises, neighborhoods, rural communes and brigades and other grassroots units in Shanghai Municipality to allocate time needed and organize the masses to conscientiously discuss the draft from May to August this year by extensively publicizing the discussion and mobilizing the masses. The discussion will further heighten the awareness of the people of Shanghai in adhering to the four fundamental principles, performing a citizen's rights and duties and developing the spirit of being the masters of their own destiny. It will further promote the development of Shanghai's socialist material and spiritual civilization. The resolution also stipulates that discussion of the draft be carried out by all departments.

Hu Lijiao, chairman of the municipal people's congress standing committee, presided over the session today. Zhong Min, Zhang Chengzong, Di Jingxiang, Su Buqing, Wang Tao, Liu Jingji, Wu Ruoan, Zhou Gucheng and Li Peinan, vice chairmen of the municipal people's congress standing committee, attended the session. Vice Mayors Zhao Zukang, Wang Jian and Yang Ti, and responsible persons of departments concerned, attended the session as observers.

The session listened to and agreed with the report made by (Qin Fen), chief prosecutor of the municipal people's procuratorate, on indicting the key followers of the Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary clique in Shanghai. The session also approved some cases concerning appointments and dismissals.

TORRENTIAL RAIN HITS GUANGDONG, CUTS RAILROAD

HK130212 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Torrential and violent rainstorms have fallen throughout northwestern Guangdong in the past few days due to a trough of low pressure. According to incomplete statistics, from 0800 on 9 May to 0800 on 12 May, 100 to 170 mm of rain fell in 16 counties in Shaoguan Prefecture and the northern part of Zhaoqing Prefecture. Rainfall was heaviest in Qingyuan County, followed by Yangshan. The Shaoguan Prefecture command for fighting natural disasters issued an urgent circular on flood-fighting on 12 May. Due to the continuous torrential rains, the waters of many rivers have risen rapidly. The level of the Bin, Wu, Weng and Lian Rivers exceeded the danger level on 12 May.

In the areas hit by torrential rain, much farmland has been inundated, some houses have collapsed and communications and telephone links have been cut in places. Some of the masses have been marooned by floodwaters. Torrents poured down from mountains at (Youxi) and (Dongping) in Ruyuan Yao Autonomous County on 12 May, and commune offices, hospitals, schools, roads and bridges were damaged or destroyed. In addition, more than 10 people are missing. Thirteen people were killed by the torrents from mountains in this county. According to a provincial meteorological station analysis of the current weather situation and date, heavy to torrential rain will continue in western Guangdong, and some places will have exceptionally heavy rain. The rain will gradually decrease after 14 May. Due to the heavy rain and floods, the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad was cut by landslides at three places between Jikeng and Boluokeng stations on the Yingde section on 12 May. The Guangzhou railroad bureau and other departments concerned are hurrying to carry out crash repairs, to reopen the line as early as possible.

The provincial people's government held an urgent meeting of responsible comrades of departments concerned on the morning of 12 May to look into and make arrangements for flood-fighting and rescue work. The Guangzhou PLA unites started to send rescue boats to the disaster areas early in the morning of 13 May.

Fight Against Flooding Urged

HK130216 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 12 May 82

[Report on 13 May NANFANG RIBAO commentator's article: "Urgently Mobilize To Guard Against and Fight Flood"]

[Text] The article said: Torrential rain has fallen in parts of Guangdong recently, causing some of the worst floods the province has ever seen. According to the meteorological departments, rain will continue in parts of the province in the next few days. It is therefore essential to urgently mobilize and take effective measures to guard against and fight flood. The article said: While paying attention to bringing into play the flood-fighting enthusiasm of the collective and the individual, all trades and sectors and departments concerned must provide the necessary support and assistance for the affected areas. The article demanded that leaders at all levels be at the frontline of the fight against the disaster, work together with the masses and lead them to victory in the struggle.

LI QINGWEI ADDRESSES HENAN FLOOD-CONTROL FORUM

HK120859 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 11 May 82

[Summary] Li Qingwei, secretary of the Henan Provincial CCP Committee and vice governor, emphatically put forth at a provincial conference on flood control: "Concentrating manpower and material resources to combat drought and protect wheat, seedlings and spring-sown crops is the central task of the current rural work in our province. We must work hard for 20 days and strive for a good summer harvest."

In his speech, he said: "Due to the increasingly serious drought situation, half of Henan is suffering a serious drought. In fact, there were strong winds on two occasions recently, temperatures increased and the soil moisture decreased, thus aggravating the drought situation throughout the province. Combating drought and protecting wheat, seedlings and spring-sown crops is the major important task." He demanded: "All places must do everything possible and unify efforts to combat drought and irrigate fields, and these efforts must be confined to the plans They must guarantee the availability of oil and electricity supplies used in combating drought. They must also pay attention to using water sparingly."

The conference decided: "The 5-million-yuan fund for combating drought must be put to best use and cannot be indiscriminately used, wasted or misappropriated." Li Qingwei also demanded that CCP committees and governments at all levels send cadres to rural areas as quickly as possible and mobilize the masses to launch a drive to combat dought. They must promptly discover and solve specific problems encountered in the course of combating drought. They must continue to grasp well the final-state management of wheatfields and strive to fulfill the quotas for sowing late fall crops in about 10 days.

This conference was held in Zhengzhou from 7 to 10 May. Vice Governor Cui Guanghua presided and also addressed the conference. The conference discussed and arranged for this year's flood-control work. The conference demanded: "We must fully understand the important significance of flood-control work. We must make good preparations for flood control. While grasping well the current work of combating drought, we must make good preparations for a flood. We must persist in combating drought and preparing for a flood. We must be determined to fight natural disasters and reap a bumper harvest."

HENAN'S XINXIANG PREFECTURE COMMENDS RURAL UNITS

HK100311 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] The Xinxiang Prefectural CCP Committee and commissioner's office recently commended a number of outstanding production teams and households that have become rich through hard work, and called on the people throughout the prefecture to emancipate their minds, get rid of worries and learn from the progressives. While striving to promote grain production, they should develop more opportunities for getting rich through hard work, vigorously promote diversification and unswervingly follow the path of getting rich through hard work.

Last year Xinxiang Prefecture suffered serious natural disasters, and production of grain, cotton and oil declined. However, average collective distribution per person was 108 yuan, thanks to promotion of diversification. A number of communes with average distribution of 200 yuan, brigades with 300 yuan and production teams with 400 yuan emerged. Over 6,000 households made more than 1,000 yuan in income from domestic sideline production. These outstanding production teams and households set an example for the whole prefecture in getting rich through hard work.

However, certain people were unable recently to distinguish between getting rich through hard work and committing economic crimes. They erroneously held: In combating criminal activities in the economic field, we must rectify the households, stop them from being outstanding, block the commune and brigade enterprises and curb the activities of the outstanding peasant households. People became worried about developing diversification.

The prefectural CCP committee and commissioner's office therefore convened a symposium and commendation meeting on diversification. They guided everyone to study central document No 1, clearly understanding the policy demarcation lines and realize that becoming outstanding through hard work is proper and honorable and protected by the policy. Leading comrades of the prefectural CCP committee and commissioner's office also presented banners and certificates to 248 progressive collectives and individuals that had done well in diversification, to encourage the people of the prefecture to do still better in diversification this year while promoting grain production.

HUBEI HOLDS PROVINCIAL PEOPLE'S CONGRESS MEETING

Chen Pixian Speech

HK130455 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Summary] The Standing Committee of the 5th Hubei Provincial People's Congress held its 15th meeting in Wuchang municipality on the afternoon of 12 May. In accordance with the resolution of the NPC Standing Committee, the meeting made arrangements for discussion of the draft of the revised constitution of the PRC by the people of our province and also adopted a relevant resolution.

Chen Pixian, chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee, presided over the meeting. Speaking on mobilizing all people of the province to discuss the present draft, Comrade Chen Pixian pointed out: "This discussion by all people is of great significance and is vital in cultivating socialist democracy, improving the socialist legal system and promoting socialist material and spiritual civilization. In accordance with the spirit of the resolution of the NPC Standing Committee, we must earnestly do a good job of this discussion."

Present at the meeting were Xia Shihou, Zhang Xiulong, Zhang Wanwu and other vice chairmen of the provincial people's congress standing committee.

Constitution Decision Adopted

HK130457 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Summary] The 5th Hubei Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee, at its 15th meeting on 12 May 1982, adopted a resolution on organizing all people of the province to discuss the draft of the revised constitution.

The resolution says: 1) The discussion of the draft by all people is a major event in the present political life of our country. This is of great significance and vital to thoroughly summing up experiences gained in the socialist revolution and construction since the founding of our country. This is also vital to consolidating the socialist economic basis, developing socialist democracy, perfecting the socialist legal system and promoting the development of socialist material and spiritual civilization. All people of our province must, with the sense of responsibility of being the masters of the country, take an active part in the discussion. 2) State organs, PLA units, party organizations, people's groups, schools, communes and brigades and all other units at the grassroots level should make arrangements from May to August of this year to organize the masses for detailed discussions on the preamble and each chapter of the present draft. During the discussions, democracy must be shown to the full and all opinions and suggestions to improve the draft must be warmly welcomed. 3) Leadership must be strengthened in all areas, departments and units to guide the discussion. Principal responsible persons must take charge of this work by explaining the draft to the masses and taking part in the discussion. Opinions and suggestions to revise the draft put forth by the masses must be collected in a timely way and submitted to the people's congress standing committee, which will submit them to the national constitutional revision committee.

BRIEFS

HAINAN SALT SMUGGLING ACTIVITIES -- Since the beginning of last year, the Hainan region has carried out activities of combating the stealing and smuggling of salt. According to incomplete statistics, by the end of April this year, the region had cracked 164 cases of salt smuggling and tax evasion, seized 176 tons of smuggled salt, recovered some 10,700 yuan of taxes which had been evaded and imposed fines of some 10,900 yuan on offenders. At the same time, the region has seized a large number of tools for peddling smuggled salt. To resolutely curb the activities of stealing and smuggling salt, people's governments at all levels in the region have seriously implemented the notice of the provincial people's government on protecting salt production and combating the activities of stealing and smuggling salt. [Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 4 May 82 HK]

SICHUAN MEETING DISCUSSES CURRENT FARMWORK

HK130351 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 12 May 82

[Summary] According to SICHUAN RIBAO, the provincial CCP committee and government held a conference by telephone on 11 May which demanded that the leadership, cadres and masses throughout the province do a good job in crash-reaping and sowing and strive for an all-round bumper harvest this year. The meeting put forward the following specific demands:

1. Strengthen leadership over the work. Cadres of provincial, prefectural, county and commune organs should be sent down to the rural areas to help solve problems. The work of improving and perfecting the responsibility systems should be carried out in connection with crash-reaping and sowing. The stress should be on solving problems of the relationship between centralized control and individual responsibility.

2. Practice unified control and use of water, draft oxen and large farm machines and tools.

3. Establish the idea of fighting natural disasters to reap a bumper harvest. There have been frequent hail and windstorms this year, which have caused varying degrees of loss in agriculture and animal husbandry. Precautionary measures must be taken, especially in May.

4. Do a good job in harvesting and storing the spring-reaped grain and rapeseed and avoid hailstorm and wind damage.

5. Adopt various measures to improve the popularization of scientific cultivation.

6. All trades and sectors must support crash-reaping and sowing.

XIZANG REPORTS AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION GAINS

HK110929 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 10 May 82

[Summary] Since the implementation of the central instructions on work in Xizang region published in 1980, the Xizang Regional CCP Committee and People's Government have adopted a series of measures to speed up development of the region. Over the past 2 years, the profits obtained by the peasants and herdsmen amounted to 279.8 million yuan. The measures taken are as follows:

1. Exemption of agricultural and livestock taxes: Over the past 2 years, the people's government has exempted taxes totaling 10.9 million yuan. At the same time, the departments which support agriculture have also supported production development of communes and brigades, collectives and individuals by extending loans. A total of 44.19 million yuan in loans was given to various areas and communes and brigades.

2. Raising of the procurement price of agricultural and animal husbandry products: In 1979 the average procurement price of wheat was 17.42 yuan per 100 jin. It was raised to 20 yuan in the first half of 1980 and to 26 yuan in 1981. In 1979 the procurement price of highland barley was 13.63 yuan per 100 jin. It was raised to 20 yuan in the latter half of 1980 and to 32 yuan in 1981. In 1979, the procurement price of yak was 109.24 yuan per 100 jin. It was raised to 139.19 yuan in the latter half of 1980 and to 203.7 yuan in 1981. The procurement price of lamb's wool was raised by 0.25 yuan. Over the past 2 years, the income of the peasants and herdsmen has increased by 19.5 million yuan.

3. Granting of financial subsidies for diesel oil and chemical fertilizers: Over the past 3 years, some 23,836 tons of diesel oil was supplied to the peasants and the financial subsidy for each ton of diesel oil was 352 yuan. Some 67,466 tons of chemical fertilizers were supplied and the financial subsidy for each ton was 250 yuan. Subsidies from these two items gave the peasants economic profits of 25.27 million yuan.

4. Allocation of funds for development of education in farming and pastoral areas: Since the latter half of 1980, the wages of primary school teachers were paid by state rather than local funds. As a result, over the past 2 years, the expenses of the localities were reduced by 3 million yuan.

5. Allocation of funds for management of plant diseases and insect pests: About 16.65 million yuan has been used in this respect over the past 3 years.

6. Some 32.59 million yuan have been used over the past 3 years in helping poor communes, brigades and households.

7. Expenses for developing the economy of localities, increasing production and improving the people's livelihood amounted to 171.89 million yuan over the past 3 years.

As a result of the implementation of the above-mentioned measures, the people's livelihood in the region has improved, laying a solid foundation for building a united, rich, civilized and new Xizang.

XIZANG INSPECTS POLICIES ON INTELLECTUALS

HK120333 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] According to XIZANG RIBAO, the regional CCP committee made arrangements recently to guide all prefectures and municipalities and all regional departments in conscientiously doing a good job of inspecting the implementation of the policies related to intellectuals. At present, the regional CCP committee has already formed a leading group to be responsible for the inspection of the work related to intellectuals and all the provincial departments have also formed leading groups to be responsible for the inspection. All these leading groups have already started their work. In order to satisfactorily carry out inspection on the implementation of the policies related to intellectuals, the regional CCP committee calls on all prefectures and municipalities and all prefectural and municipal departments to form leading groups to be responsible for the inspection, thus providing an organized procedure for guaranteeing the smooth implementation of the inspection.

The regional CCP committee points out that during the inspection we should focus on the work related to those intellectuals above middle-level positions, and the inspection should center on the following problems: how we have been employing and training intellectuals; how things stand in their work, study and lives; how the policies related to them that have been formulated since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee have been implemented; how the wrong, false and misjudged cases involving them have been remedied; how we have trained, further trained and employed minority nationality intellectuals; and what is on the minds of the intellectuals in our region. The regional CCP committee has also made clear and definite arrangements concerning the methods and procedures of this inspection. The regional CCP committee calls for truly solving a few actual problems through this inspection so as to bring the initiative of the broad ranks of intellectuals into full play.

YUNNAN HOLDS UNITED FRONT WORK CONFERENCE

HK101420 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 9 May 82

[Summary] The Yunnan provincial united front work conference was recently held in Kunming. The conference stressed: "The major task of the current united front work is to further enhance the understanding of the importance and long-term nature of the united front and open up new prospects for united front work."

When leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee, including Li Qiming, listened to reports on the situation, they pointed out: "United front work is an important activity of the whole party. It is still a great magic weapon of our party in the new historical period. We must really establish sincere relations with our friends outside the party. We must actively contribute toward fulfilling the three great tasks in the 1980's."

The conference was held in Kunming from 25 April to 5 May. On the morning of 5 May, Li Qiming, second secretary of the provincial CCP committee; Li Xingwang, deputy secretary of the provincial CCP committee; and Zhu Jiabi and Dao Guodong, standing committee members of the provincial CCP committee, listened to reports on the situation and spoke.

Leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee, including Li Qiming, pointed out: "Under party leadership, all people throughout the country are building socialist material and spiritual civilization. We must give full play to the role of the united front, mobilize and unite forces of all quarters and, under party leadership, wholeheartedly embark on the four modernizations drive."

They stressed: "All comrades of the entire party must restore and carry forward the excellent traditions and work style of the party. We must take people outside the party into our confidence, do our work well and pursue socialism with them. We must be good at discovering and selecting people of ability from among those outside the party. We must rationally employ cadres who are not party members." They also stressed: "We cannot embark on the four modernizations drive without intellectuals. CCP committees at all levels must attach importance to the implementation of the policy on intellectuals, inspire their enthusiasm and, in accordance with the instructions of the central authorities, unswervingly implement all policies on united front work." They said: "All comrades of the entire party must pay attention to and eliminate the leftist influence and attach importance to united front work. United front work departments at all levels must do work well and serve as good assistants of the CCP committees."

Some 170 responsible persons of the united front work departments of all prefectural, autonomous prefectural, municipal and county CCP committees and relevant comrades of units at the provincial level and all universities and colleges attended the conference.

The conference held that it is essential to grasp the following work well: "First, it is essential to continue to firmly grasp the implementation of all policies on united front work. Second, it is necessary to make good arrangements for and employ people outside the party and to continue to do well in promoting cooperation between party members and nonparty members. Third, it is imperative to continue to do well in uniting compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and Overseas Chinese. Fourth, we must strengthen religious work. Fifth, we must give full play to the role of CPPCC committees at all levels and give a free hand to the local organizations of all democratic parties so that they can do their work independently and with the initiative in their own hands."

At the conclusion of the conference, Zhu Jiabi, standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee and director of the united front work department, delivered the summation speech.

BRIEFS

GUIZHOU FARM MACHINES -- The number of farm machines sold in Guizhou Province has gradually declined over the past years, but has tended to increase this year. According to statistics, the value of sales of farm machines in the province in the first quarter of this year was 34.46 percent greater than in the corresponding period of last year. The increase in rural purchasing power was the main reason for the increase in the value of sales. [Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 3 May 82 HK]

JILIN'S QIANG XIAOCHU ELECTED DEPUTY TO NPC

SK101010 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 9 May 82

[Text] According to our sources, the 11th Session of the 5th Jilin Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee concluded in Changchun today. During the meeting, Comrade Liu Cikai, vice chairman of the provincial people's congress, made a report on relaying the spirit of the 23d Session of the 5th NPC Standing Committee. Participants unanimously adopted a resolution on supporting the draft constitution which is deemed to accord with the four basic principles and the demand of our country's new historical period. Participating members heard work reports given by the provincial people's procuratorate on dealing blows at serious economic crimes, by the provincial people's government on the disposition of motions raised at the third session of the fifth provincial people's congress and by provincial people's congress deputies including (Jin Yuehan) on their inspection of decorum and courtesy month activities in Changchun and Jilin municipalities. The session discussed and approved resolutions on urging the people in the province to discuss the draft of the revised PRC constitution, dealing blows at serious economic crimes and convening the fourth session of the fifth provincial people's congress. The session also approved the report on handling motions raised at the third session of the fifth provincial people's congress, the provisional regulations on urban sanitation control and the resolutions on establishing the people's courts in charge of the violation of forest laws in major forestry areas throughout the province, on electing Comrades Qiang Xiaochu and Zhang Gensheng as deputies to the Fifth NPC, on dismissing (Shao Zhusun) from his status as deputy to the Fifth NPC and on personnel changes.

Attending the session were Li Youwen, chairman of the provincial people's congress; Song Renyuan, Zhao Tinaye, Xu Shouxuan, Liu Cikai, Wu Xuezhou, Wu Duo, Cheng Shengsan and Renqinzhamusu, vice chairmen of the provincial people's congress; and permanent members -- 37 persons in all. Among those attending the session as observers were Mu Lin, vice governor of the province; Xin Cheng, chief procurator of the provincial procuratorial office; responsible comrades from departments concerned of the provincial higher people's court and the provincial people's government; and responsible persons from the people's congresses of Changchun and Jilin municipalities and Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture and from the administrative offices of Siping, Tonghua and Baicheng Prefectures.

At the session, participating members decided to convene the fourth session of the fifth provincial people's congress in Changchun this June. The session will hear and examine work reports given by the provincial people's government, the provincial people's congress standing committee and the provincial higher people's court and the provincial people's procuratorate. It will examine and approve the report of the 1981 provincial financial final accounts and the draft of the 1982 provincial financial budget and will elect the governor of the province.

At the session, participants decided to set up intermediate forestry people's courts in Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture, Jilin municipality and Tonghua Prefecture to hear and try civil and criminal cases of violating the forest law lodged by the people's courts in localities covered with forests. The session also decided to set up forestry people's courts in 16 localities, including (Linjiang), (Shachazi), (Songjianghe), (Wangqing), (Huangnihe), (Dashikou), (Dunhua), (Qianyang), (Wangou), (Lushuihe), (Xianqiaoling), (Daxingou), (Helong), (Baihe), (Bajiazi) and (Banshishan), where the provincial level forestry administrative bureaus are located. These forestry people's courts will be in charge of hearing and trying civil and criminal cases on violating the forest law. At the session, participating members, according to article 42 of chapter 9 of the PRC election law on deputies to the NPC or the people's congresses at all levels, accepted the proposal of the provincial CCP committee on electing Comrades Qiang Xiaochu and Zhang Gensheng as additional deputies to the Fifth NPC and approved the appeal lodged by the (Jinxin) commune administrative committee in Hunchun County in regard to dismissing (Shao Zhuxun) from his status as deputy to the Fifth NPC.

The session contended that his violation of the law and discipline had adversely affected the masses and that he is no longer qualified to be a deputy. According to the law, the meeting annuled the status of (Shao Zhuxun) as NPC deputy and will report to the NPC Standing Committee for the record.

FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL FREED IN LIAONING

OW121234 Beijing XINHUA in English 1218 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Shenyang, May 12 (XINHUA) -- All of the 151 former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and its special agents still in custody in Liaoning Province were released today in Jinzhou, some 250 kilometers southwest of Shenyang. They received certificates of release from the government at a meeting marking their release.

This is the third group of Kuomintang prisoners released since the 22nd Session of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress approved last March the decision to free all former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and its special agents whose ranks were below county or regimental level. The first two groups were released in Qinghai and Shanxi Provinces. All the released were provided with clothing, bedding and 100 yuan pocket money.

Ding Wanwen, 57, former group intelligence leader of the Kuomintang No 9 Army Corps, said that "whatever punishment imposed on me by the people's government could not have been too severe to atone for my crimes against the Communist Party and the people. Now, I have been released, and will be supported for the rest of my life by the state, as I have no relatives to live with." This, he added, "is something that I had never even dreamed of." Ding was given the death penalty with a two-year reprieve for persecuting and murdering communist cadres and other innocent people before liberation. His sentence was later changed to life imprisonment.

Chen Zhaogong, a former Kuomintang military police [as received] told reporters that the socialist system and the party's policies had saved his family. After his arrest, his wife fell seriously ill, and he feared that his three children would have no one to care for them. But the people's government provided medical care for his wife and a subsidy to support his children. One child graduated from a secondary technical school, one from a university and the third from junior middle school. He was expected to attend his daughter's wedding ceremony at home.

Song Jiucheng, who had been a soldier in the Kuomintang local army, told reporters that he was grateful to the people's government and the Communist Party. He said he had suffered from cerebritis during his term in the prison and the authorities provided medical care even though he was a criminal guilty of murdering cadres of the Communist Party.

Yang Sonting, deputy director of the bureau of reform through labor under the public security department of Liaoning Province, told reporters that the released persons may go back home and will be helped to find jobs. Homeless old people who are no longer able to work will be supported by the government. "Those whose homes are in Taiwan may go there if they wish to," Yang Sonting said. As for those who want to go to Hong Kong, Macao or foreign countries, they will have to go through the necessary formalities as required by government regulations.

Altogether, 4,237 such prisoners will be released throughout the country.

GANSU'S FENG JIXIN ADDRESSES RAILWAY MEETING

SK061258 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 6 May 82

[Summary] "According to our sources, the provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government held an on-the-spot meeting in Tianshui from 25 to 28 April on consolidating public security of the Tian-lan railway. Feng Jixin, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, emphasized in his speech that party organizations at all levels must have the strongest determination and adopt resolute measures to eliminate, as rapidly as possible, the disorder in public security of the Tian-lan railway."

Comrade Feng Jixin said: Since the important instruction of central leading comrades on public security of the Tian-lan railway was issued, initial achievements have been scored in consolidating public security. Criminal incidents such as riding trains without tickets and railway robberies have been markedly reduced. Comrade Feng Jixin said: The problem is that some comrades lack a strong will to take action and lack confidence in consolidation. This mental state hinders the progress of consolidation. Comrade Feng Jixin said: In the next stage of consolidation, we should severely deal with such activities as smuggling, black marketing, speculating, swindling and sabotaging of railway facilities.

NINGXIA'S LI XUEZHI ATTENDS MAY DAY CELEBRATIONS

HK110721 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 2 May 82 p 1

[Report: "Comrade Li Xuezhi Celebrates May Day With the Masses"]

[Text] Li Xuezhi, first secretary of the Ningxia Regional CCP Committee, joined the masses in the Yinchuan municipal people's park for the May Day celebrations yesterday. On 1 May tens of thousands of people in Yinchuan municipality came to the people's park. The shady paths in the park were crowded with visitors. The park was permeated throughout with a festive air. The visitors happily talked about the favorable situation since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee and extolled the new practices which took shape after the activities of this year's first all-people decorum and courtesy month started. Comrade Li Xuezhi visited the park in the morning. Full of zest, he first went to see the children who were playing on a merry-go-round. Then he chatted with the assistants of the service stalls set up in the park by such units as the Yinchuan municipal Xinhua No 2 grocery and the Yinchuan municipal dairy company, and asked them about their business. While taking a rest in the lounge, he talked with the responsible comrades of related units about his opinions on problems regarding tree planting and building of parks in the municipality.

QINGHAI'S ZHAXIWANGXU CONDUCTS SELF-CRITICISM

SK110327 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] At a provincial forum of procuratorial departments on cracking down on economic offenses held on 23 April, Zhaxiwangxu, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and secretary of the political and legal affairs committee under the provincial CCP committee, conducted a self-criticism on education of children. He demanded that public security departments punish his son (Qi Ming) according to the law to compensate for the harmful effects of his failure to educate his son.

Zhaxiwangxu said: I have learned a lesson from bitter experience with regard to the education of children. As a veteran comrade nurtured for many years by the party and in charge of political and legal affairs, I feel more painful and guilty. As many of you may have heard, one of my sons, (Qi Ming), was sentenced to 6 years' imprisonment for theft in 1975. His sentence has not expired yet. When he was released on bail for medical treatment, he again committed a crime. Although the spoils were all returned and he pledged not to commit any crimes again, he has deeply fallen into evil ways and so far has shown no sign of sincere repentance.

I have suggested to public security departments that they deal with the problem of (Qi Ming) according to law. I deeply felt from my experience that education of children is not parents' personal affair -- they have a great responsibility and obligation to the country and society. I am guilty of ignoring (Qi Ming's) education. I did not pay enough attention to guiding and patiently persuading him. When he made mistakes, I simply gave him a dressing down. This produced very little educational effect. I am responsible for his becoming a criminal. From (Qi Ming's) crimes we can see that the adverse effects of the Great Cultural Revolution still leave their impact on many youths. This reminds us of the great importance of bringing up the young generation well. We should attach importance to educating, redeeming and helping the juvenile delinquents change through persuasion. However, we should never be excessively accommodating, or give unprincipled protection to or connive with them. We should be particularly so in dealing with the children of leading comrades. Zhaxiwangxu's self-criticism evoked enthusiastic applause at the meeting.

Criminal (Qi Ming) committed two offenses with others while on bail for medical treatment. On 26 April the provincial reform through labor bureau transferred (Qi Ming) to the fifth provincial reform through labor detachment for custody there.

QINGHAI'S LIANG BUTING ATTENDS MILITIA FORUM

SK081345 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] According to our correspondents, the provincial military district recently held a forum of first political commissars of all military subdistricts, the Xining garrison district and all militia departments to discuss ways to strengthen militia work and be good first political commissars.

At the discussion, the participants pointed out the need to consider the militia work as the party's long-term strategic task and handle well the relations between militia building and economic construction. They urged all departments to closely work with each other to do a good job in militia work in accordance with the militia's characteristic of being both civilian and military.

Liang Buting, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee and first political commissar of the provincial military district, and Wu Shengrong, commander of the provincial military district, delivered speeches at the forum. They said: We must be prepared for danger in times of peace and do a good job in armed forces work. First political commissars at all levels should upgrade understanding, do their jobs in a down-to-earth manner, fulfill their duties and strive to make a success of our province's militia work. It is necessary to be prepared for a war against aggression. Militia building should be focused on preparations in organization, ideology and materials.

Zhaxiwangxu, Song Lin, Wang Wenying and other leading comrades also attended the forum.

BRIEFS

XINJIANG OIL DISCOVERY -- Urumqi, 22 Apr (XINHUA) -- Oil flow from a recent test well in north Xinjiang indicates prospects for finding new oil fields in the Junggar Basin, according to the Xinjiang Petroleum administration. The area is located more than 100 kilometers north of China's Karamay oil field in north Xinjiang. Prospecting for oil in the area began in the middle 1950's. When magnetic and seismic prospecting on the stratums of the Permian and Triassic periods failed to show much oil, the exploration stopped and several test wells were abandoned. The geologists decided to try the underlying stratum of Carboniferous period in the area several years ago after they had found oil-bearing structure in the stratum of Carboniferous period in opening up the Karamay oil field. Now highways and exploratory wells are being built by the Xinjiang petroleum administration to accelerate the prospecting there. [Text] [Beijing XINHUA in English 1228 GMT 22 Apr 82 OW]

BACKGROUND GIVEN ON NEW VICE FOREIGN MINISTER

HK120213 Hong Kong SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in English 12 May 82 p 7

[By staff correspondent]

[Text] A former colleague of the party chairman, Mr Hu Yaobang, has been appointed senior vice-foreign minister and may one day become a foreign minister and a state councillor. He is Mr Wu Xueqian, who for almost all of his career has been working in the party apparatus. Mr Wu has never been in the Foreign Ministry of the State Council. Yet he has been promoted ahead of two experienced and highly respected vice-foreign ministers -- Mr Zhang Wenjin and Mr Gong Dafei. Mr Wu's appointment has taken many by surprise, and being named the number two man in the ministry is even more startling. However, it would be wrong to say that he has had no experience in foreign affairs. For much of his time has lately been spent in maintaining contacts and assessing information regarding fraternal communist parties both in the Soviet bloc and in Western countries. Western sources have little on Mr Wu, but not the Nationalists, who have been engaged in a "running battle" with him ever since he was a young man. Their information on Mr Wu was supplemented by Red Guard exposes in the first years of the Cultural Revolution. They believe that during the pre-liberation days, Mr Wu worked underground in Nationalist-held areas -- known in communist terms as "the white districts."

During the anti-Japanese war, it was said, Mr Wu was with the urban works office of the Party's Central China Bureau. This office was said to be the investigation and research bureau of the New Fourth Army, the second largest communist army during the war that operated in east China. Toward the end of the Sino-Japanese War, Mr Wu was transferred to Shanghai, and it was there that he executed a feat unmatched by other party members: He managed to seize 2,500 taels of gold from a wealthy businessman and pass them on to the party. For that he was highly commended.

Mr Wu's association with Mr Hu was believed to have started around that time, and in the 1950's, shortly after the People's Republic was founded, he was a senior party cadre in the Communist Youth League, the chairman of which was Mr Hu Yaobang. He was head of the International Liaison Office of the CYL and a standing committee member of the CYL's own Central Committee. Later he was transferred to the party Central Committee's International Liaison Department, working under such experienced figures as the late Mr Wang Jiaxiang, Mr Liu Ningyi, Mr Geng Biao, and lately, Mr Ji Pengfei. Mr Geng is today the defence minister and Mr Ji, a former foreign minister, is now a state councillor.

Before his present appointment, Mr Wu was a vice-director of the International Liaison Department, working jointly with another vice-director, Mr Qiao Shi, who is now director of the department. And although he left the CYL many years ago, his association with Mr Hu was said to have been maintained. After the arrest of the gang of four in 1976, Mr Hu returned to the party centre and worked first as director of the party Central Committee's Organisation Department and then as its secretary general. Throughout those years, Mr Wu was with the International Liaison Department under the party Central Committee. In his new post as the senior vice-foreign minister, Mr Wu will largely deal with Soviet and East European affairs, partly because of his working experiences in the International Liaison Department. Mr Wu is also expected to deputise for the minister, Mr Huang Hua, when the latter is away from the country or is otherwise unable to fulfill his duties.

WEN WEI PO ON PROSPECTS FOR SINO-INDIAN TALKS

HK130655 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 13 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Prospects for the Sino-Indian Talks"]

[Text] The second round of the Sino-Indian border talks will be held in New Delhi next Monday. In the first round of talks held in Beijing in December last year, both sides promoted their mutual understanding by explaining their respective positions. This was a positive result, and was a good beginning.

On the eve of the current talks, Indian Information and Broadcasting Minister Vasant Sathe and Foreign Ministry Secretary Gonsalves respectively met with the Chinese press delegation. This was an expression of the Indian desire to promote mutual cooperation and understanding between China and India and contributed to a good atmosphere for the forthcoming talks.

The 1,700-odd-kilometer boundary between China and India has never been delineated. Because of some historical reasons, a few problems exist regarding the boundaries between the two countries. This has resulted in some disputes which have hampered the normalization of relations between the two countries for a time. However, there is no conflict of fundamental interests between China and India and there has been a longstanding history of friendly contacts between the peoples of the two countries. Friendly coexistence between China and India is the common aspiration of the peoples of both countries. It is also beneficial to the peace and stability in Asia and the world. In view of the fact that both sides have taken the initiative to solve the issue in good faith and to engage in border talks with a positive attitude, a gratifying step has been taken. At the same time, trade, economic cooperation and cultural and scientific and technological exchanges between the two countries have also been strengthened. This has promoted mutual understanding so that relations between the two countries have been further improved. We cannot imagine that the border issue between the two countries, complicated as it is because it is an issue left over from history, can be solved through one negotiation. However, so long as both countries adopt a forward-looking attitude, cherish the good faith of solving the issue and find some common ground through an understanding of the positions of both sides, there are bright prospects for the solution of the issue.

China and India once cosponsored the five principles of peaceful coexistence. The situation in their neighboring countries is turbulent. The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and its stationing of 100,000 troops there constitute a serious threat to China and the subcontinent of South Asia; Iran is in great chaos; and the war between Iran and Iraq shows no signs of subsiding. Both China and India hope for a peaceful international environment. These are the internal and external factors that are helping to bring about an improvement of the relations between China and India and also constitute a common ground between the two countries. Being Third World countries, China and India have cooperated fairly closely on questions of international economy, particularly on the questions of the North-South dialogue and South-South dialogue.

Central to the Sino-Indian issue is the border issue. The solution of this complex issue left over from history necessitates the spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation. Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping said to our Indian friends: "As long as both sides cherish good faith, respect the actual situation in the border and reach a mutual understanding, it will not be difficult to solve the Sino-Indian border issue through friendly consultations." In the course of the Sino-Indian border talks, China did not claim to regain all the territory that had been incorporated into India under the McMahon Line. China has proposed a package plan for solving the Sino-Indian border issue by taking the line of actual control as a basis for the entire boundary, with China making a concession on the eastern section and India making a concession on the western section. This plan stems from a realistic attitude and reflects the spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation. The five principles of peaceful coexistence have been acknowledged as a criterion for handling international relations. By adhering to this principle, the problem between one country and another can be solved justly and rationally. The desire of China and India for friendly cooperation is a great impetus that promotes the relations between the two countries. It has created favorable conditions for the Sino-Indian talks. By adhering to the spirit of mutual understanding and accommodation, it is possible to solve the Sino-Indian border issue.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 094 14 May 1982

CONTENTS

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

KYODO: Zhao Ziyang Views Ties With U.S., USSR A 1
Delegate Addresses UN Environment Meeting A 1
Meeting Views Sanctions Against South Africa A 2

UNITED STATES

Reagan Discusses Nuclear Disarmament Proposal B 1

NORTHEAST ASIA

Shaanxi's Ma Wenrui Receives DPRK Assembly Group D 1
DPRK Awards PRC Technicians for Contributions D 1
Briefs: Technical Aid to PRC; Japanese Delegation in Liaoning D 1

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

RENMIN RIBAO Rebuts Vietnam's Stand on Kampuchea [13 May] E 1
DK Scores SRV Chemical Warfare at UN Meeting E 2
Thai Foreign Minister Hosts Dinner in Beijing E 2

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Further Reportage on Visit of President Pereira I 1
Zhao, Pereira Hold Talks I 1
Zhao, Pereira Address Banquet I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Commentator Views Trade, Economic Crime [RENMIN RIBAO 13 May] K 1
Commentator on Rural Enterprise Economic Crimes [RENMIN RIBAO 10 May] K 3
RENMIN RIBAO Urges Improving Accounting Work [12 May] K 5
RENMIN RIBAO on Centralization, Decentralization [10 May] K 6
Further on Draft of Revised Constitution K 8
Democracy, Legal System [RENMIN RIBAO 11 May] K 8
Taiwan Democratic League K 10
Kuomintang Committee K 11
Local Congresses K 12
Article Discusses Rotational Training of Cadres [RENMIN RIBAO 10 May] K 13
JIEFANGJUN BAO Cites PLA Units' Study of Mao K 14
Ni Zhifu, Kang Keqing Attend Modern Comedy K 15
Monthly Radio, TV Magazine To Be Published K 15

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Fujian's Xiang Nan Reports on Economic Crimes [FUJIAN RIBAO 1 May] O 1
Fujian Congress Discusses Draft Constitution [FUJIAN RIBAO 1 May] O 1

XINHUA RIBAO on Punishing Economic Criminals [3 May] O 2
Shanghai Launches Campaign Against Corruption [JIEFANG RIBAO 4 May] O 3

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong Combats Flood; PLA Units Dispatched P 1
Luo Tian Addresses Hainan Political, Legal Work P 1
Chen Pixian at Hubei Commendation Meeting P 2

SOUTHWEST REGION

Sichuan Meeting Hears Report on Liu-Zhang Case Q 1
Sichuan Inspects Policies on Intellectuals Q 1
Sichuan's Tan Qilong Visits Nanchong 13 May Q 2

NORTH REGION

Beijing Holds Symposium on Mao's Yanan Talks R 1
SHANXI RIBAO Carries Economic Statistics [25 Apr] R 1

NORTHEAST REGION

Jilin's Qiang Xiaochu Inspects Yanbian Counties [RENMIN RIBAO 8 May] S 1
Jilin Statistical Bureau Issues Communique [JILIN RIBAO 13 May] S 2
Liaoning's Li Desheng Congratulates Nurses S 2

NORTHWEST REGION

Gansu's Feng Jixin Attends Public Security Rally T 1
Gansu Province Hit by Cold Wave, Rain, Frost T 1
Qinghai's Liang Buting at Basketball Event T 1
Wang Enmao Stresses Nationality Unity, Policies T 2

PRC MEDIA ON TAIWAN AFFAIRS

XINHUA Scores Activities of Taiwan Secret Service U 1
Commentator's 'Stern Warning' U 1
Successes Against Agents Noted U 2
Delegation Head in Japan Comments on Taiwan U 3
PRC, Taiwan Play in Hong Kong Tennis Tourney U 4

TAIWAN

Papers assess Results of Bush Visit to Beijing V 1
LIAN HO PAO Article [10 May] V 1
Further Comment V 2
Taiwan Researches Military Use of Lasers V 3

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

Taipei Reaction to Reagan Letters Criticized W 1
[HSIN WAN PAO 13 May]

KYODO: ZHAO ZIYANG VIEWS TIES WITH U.S., USSR

OW141257 Tokyo KYODO in English 1247 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing May 14 KYODO -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang said Friday his nation and Japan should further strengthen their friendly relations to avoid being affected by any kind of "international diplomatic seesaw." Zhao made the statement in a meeting with visiting Japanese reporters at the Great Hall of the People here. He said Sino-Japanese cooperation should include joint development of nonferrous metals.

Zhao will arrive in Tokyo May 31 on a six-day official visit -- an event marking the 10th anniversary of Sino-Japanese diplomatic normalization in September 1972. His visit was agreed on in a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki at the Mexican resort of Cancun last October where a North-South summit conference was held.

While in Tokyo, the Chinese Premier will meet not only with Emperor Hicrohito but Suzuki, who is expected to return Zhao's visit in September.

Zhao told the Japanese reporters he was convinced that the mutual visits would play a major role in promoting stable friendly relations between the two countries. He said China does not want any retrogression in relations with the United States but said China's position on Taiwan is unchanged. Zhao was referring to U.S. arms sales to Taiwan which have cooled relations between Beijing and Washington. China regards Taiwan as an integral province. U.S. Vice President George Bush recently visited here but apparently failed to break the deadlocked talks on the Taiwan issue.

Zhao said China would continue to fight against what he called the Soviet Union's hegemonistic expansion policy unless Moscow abandoned this policy, indicating there is a long way to go before a dialogue between the two nations can be resumed.

He said China's economy is smoothly developing and estimated this year's economic growth might top 5 percent. The premier said his government places top economic priority on energy development and expanding the nation's industrial infrastructure, including the traffic system, in the Sixth Five-Year Economic Development Program (1981-85).

DELEGATE ADDRESSES UN ENVIRONMENT MEETING

OW131858 Beijing XINHUA in English 1837 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Nairobi, May 13 (XINHUA) -- China stressed the importance of environmental protection at a session of the U.N. environment program here today. "Environmental protection constitutes a positive factor in ensuring and promoting sustained economic growth and must be regarded as a strategic goal in the formation of a sound, long-term policy for social and economic development", said Li Jingzhao, head of the Chinese delegation to the U.N. session. He said the conference on human environment, held a decade ago in Stockholm and its declaration of human environment have pushed the protection of human environment to an entirely new stage. "The importance of the environmental issue has been widely acknowledged by the world community," he said. "Environmental pollution is no longer treated as an isolated, local phenomenon, but as a global social and economic matter. Damage to the environment caused by inappropriate development and exploitation of natural resources has been fully recognized."

Referring to the correct handling of the relationship between development and environment, Li Jingzhao pointed out that "only through the acceleration of development can solutions to environmental problems created by human or other factors be provided. Furthermore, the unjust and irrational world economic relations have imposed impediments on the enhancement of the environment as well as on development. This further bears out the need to have this old order restructured."

On the relationship between the environment and population, Li Jingzhao said: "It is a global strategic issue to effectively mitigate the great pressure on the environment arising from the dramatic growth in population." He called for human creativeness in reducing enviornmental damage and for a resolute family-planning practice. He further pointed out that "forest coverage is a basic indicator of a sound ecological environment." However, "natural resources in many regions of the world are still being subjected to various damage."

On agriculture, Li Jingzhao said China will continue developing its traditional farming characterized by intensive cultivation, frugal use of natural organic fertilizers and biological control of pests and diseases while making use of the achievements in modern science and technology to establish a sound agro-ecosystem.

In conclusion, Li Jingzhao said: "The present world situation is still very turbulent. Wars remained a feature of the international scene during the decade. The arms race between the two superpowers has not only wasted a great deal of wealth and natural resources, but also presents a grave threat to the peace and security of mankind. Expansionist and imperialist aggression, occupation and intervention, inflicts serious damage on the environment and natural resources." He said that "the Chinese Government, as always, favors genuine rather than false disarmament and resolutely opposes the arms race between the superpowers and activities of aggression and expansion conducted by hegemonists, big or small. We maintain that the elimination of all these is an indispensable guarantee for the protection and betterment of the environment."

MEETING VIEWS SANCTIONS AGAINST SOUTH AFRICA

OW281538 Beijing XINHUA in English 1522 GMT 28 Apr 82

[Text] Beijing, April 28 (XINHUA) -- A meeting to observe the "international year of mobilization for sanctions against South Africa" was held this afternoon for 200 attendees under the sponsorship of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries. John Nyati Pokela, chairman of the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania attended the meeting.

Wang Bingnan, president of the association, denounced the South African regime for disregarding U.N. resolutions and declarations in recent years. "The South African regime has repeatedly launched armed incursions against its neighbors," he said. "As a result, the problems in southern Africa remain unsolved and the situation has become increasingly grave. We will continue adherence to our principle of no contact with the racist regime of South Africa. We firmly support the Namibian and Azanian people in their struggle against racial discrimination and for national liberation," he said.

Pokela reviewed the struggle against racial discrimination and the efforts to mobilize the masses since the 1959 founding of the P.A.C. "The racist regime, despite all the confrontations with the militants of our country and of Namibia, continues to be intransigent," he said. He said apartheid policies are both a threat to world peace and a crime against humanity. He called on the progressive forces of the world to close ranks and continue their struggle, responding to the U.N.'s proclaimation of 1982 as the international year of mobilisation for sanctions against South Africa.

REAGAN DISCUSSES NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT PROPOSAL

OW141224 Beijing XINHUA in English 1216 GMT 14 May 82

["U.S. President Talks to Nation on U.S. Nuclear Proposal" — XINHUA headline]

[Text] Washington, May 13 (XINHUA) -- President Reagan said here tonight that reaching an agreement with the Soviet Union on the reduction of strategic nuclear arms "will not be short or easy work", but he still hopes to start the negotiations by the end of June. Reagan opened his prime-time news conference with a statement reviewing the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) proposal he unveiled in a Sunday.

In tonight's statement, Reagan said that he has already written President Brezhnev and instructed Secretary of State Haig to approach the Soviet Government so that the two countries can begin formal negotiations on the reduction of strategic nuclear arms at the earliest opportunity. He hoped that these negotiations can begin by the end of June and hoped to hear from Brezhnev in the near future.

In his proposal Sunday, Reagan suggested a phased reduction in strategic weapons beginning with the warheads on ballistic missiles. He proposed a one-third cut in the number of ballistic missile warheads to about 5,000.

The president noted at the news conference that a new arms agreement with the Soviet Union must be balanced, equal and verifiable, and must "increase stability and the prospects of peace". He repeated that the United States will do everything it can to bring about such an agreement. Reagan stressed at the press conference that while talking with the Soviet Union on arms reductions, the United States must reaffirm its determination to rebuild its national defenses. "The very fact that we have shown the will and are going forward on the rebuilding program is something that I think offers an inducement to the Soviet Union to come to that table and legitimately negotiate with us", he added.

Asked about the administration's position on the SALT II agreement reached by the Carter administration with the Soviet Union, Reagan said it was "the wrong course to follow" and the SALT II would allow the Russians "to just about double their present nuclear capability" and "it simply legitimizes an arms race".

On the question whether the United States will renounce the existing NATO policy under which the United States would retaliate with nuclear weapons if the Soviets attack Western Europe with conventional arms, Reagan said no useful purpose will be served in making such a declaration. Strategic nuclear weapons are "the only balance or deterrent that we have to the massive build-up of conventional arms that the Soviet Union has on the western front -- on the NATO front", the President concluded.

SHAANXI'S MA WENRUI RECEIVES DPRK ASSEMBLY GROUP

OW131652 Beijing XINHUA in English 1603 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Xian, May 13 (XINHUA) -- A delegation from the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea arrived here by special plane today in the company of Xing Yimin, deputy secretary general of the Standing Committee of the Chinese National People's Congress. They were greeted at the airport by Zhang Yizhen, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the Shaanxi Provincial People's Congress.

A dinner in honor of the visitors was given in the evening. Ma Wenrui, first secretary of the provincial party committee and chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee, made a toast. He praised the Korean people under President Kim Il-song for their achievements in socialist revolution and construction. Speaking of Sino-Korean friendship, he said that no matter what happens in the world, the Chinese and Korean peoples will remain united and advance together.

Delegation leader Mme. Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers' Party and vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the Supreme People's Assembly, said that she was deeply impressed by the Chinese people's friendly feelings for the Koreans and their enthusiasm for socialism. The Korean people treasure the friendship with the Chinese people and want to do their best to consolidate and develop this friendship, she said.

Earlier today, the delegation toured a museum displaying hundreds of life-size terracotta horses and armored warriors excavated in 1974 and the Huaqing hot spring.

DPRK AWARDS PRC TECHNICIANS FOR CONTRIBUTIONS

OW131328 Beijing XINHUA in English 1254 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Pyongyang, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Vice-President Pak Song-chol, in the name of the Korean Central People's Committee, awarded medals to 93 Chinese technicians working in Korea at a ceremony here today. Pak Song-chol read a decree on the awards signed by President Kim Il-song.

In a cordial conversation with the Chinese technicians, Pak Song-chol expressed thanks for their contribution to Korea's construction.

BRIEFS

TECHNICAL AID TO PRC -- Tokyo, 27 Apr (KYODO) -- Ebara Corp said 27 April it has contracted with the Chinese Machinery Authority to supply manufacturing techniques of pumps for use at electric power stations in China. Under the contract concluded with the China Machine Building International Corp, the Japanese pump maker will provide the largest pump plant in Shenyang, Liaoning Province, with production technique of vertical mixed flow pumps over 5 years. The equipment will be used to pump water for cooling condensers of electric power plants, which China plans to build in years ahead. Ebara is expected to train engineers from China beginning in the summer, making it possible for China to start pump production within this year, Ebara said. [Text] [Tokyo KYODO in English 0436 GMT 27 Apr 82 OW]

JAPANESE DELEGATION IN LIAONING -- At the invitation of the Liaoning provincial branch of the China Council for Promotion of International Trade, a nine-member Japanese delegation for holding talks on Japanese-Chinese economic cooperation arrived in Shenyang 10 May. Headed by [Zheng-Zhong-Zhu-Dao-Fu), deputy director of the Japan Association for Promotion of International Trade, the delegation will discuss ways to promote and develop economic cooperation between Japan and China. Wang Jiyuan, vice governor of Liaoning Province, received and feted the delegation 11 May. [Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 11 May 82 SK]

RENMIN RIBAO REBUTS VIETNAM'S STAND ON KAMPUCHEA

HK131130 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 13 May 82 p 6

[Article by Wang Zhiguang [3769 1807 0342]: "Nguyen Co Thach Plays the Same Old Tricks Again"]

[Text] The Kampuchean problem is a thorn in the side of the power holders of Hanoi. Its policy of swallowing up Kampuchea has been an endless drain on the limited material and financial resources of Vietnam. This has also earned the Vietnamese authorities a bad reputation internationally. But Hanoi has stubbornly refused to carry out the UN resolution calling for this withdrawl of its troops from Kampuchea. It has thus become more bogged down in the quagmire without being able to extricate itself. Therefore, under unavoidable circumstances, the Vietnamese authorities have continued looking for chances to clear themselves of the Kampuchean problem and to shift the blame onto others — thinking that this would help them to extricate themselves from their plight. What Veitnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said to an AFP correspondent on 5 May is a case in point; and it is the most recent one.

Regardless of the most obvious fact, Nguyen Co Thach insisted that the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea could not be considered "interference." He declared that if a treaty were signed with China, Vietnam would agree to withdraw all its troops. If an agreement were concluded with Thailand, Vietnam would agree to a partial withdrawal of its troops. Otherwise, Vietnam's withdrawal of troops from Kampuchea was "impossible." Nguyen Co Thach also stressed that Kampuchea should be allowed to "vacate" its seat at the UN General Assembly this year. According to him, this would create an atmosphere of "relative calm." All the wild talk of the power holders of Hanoi was only prompted by a desire to divert attention and shift the blame for their refusal to withdraw troops from Kampuchea onto others.

On his recently concluded European trip, Nguyen Co Thach kept defending the fact that Vietnamese troops remain in Kampuchea — in an attempt to win others' sympathy and support. He was disappointed; being greeted everywhere with various gestures of indifference and various refutations. The Belgian minister of foreign affairs insisted that Vietnam should immediately withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. The Swedish minister of foreign affairs held the view that the Vietnamese troops' continued presence in Kampuchea was "an obvious violation of international law." Even France, in which Vietnam had placed great hopes, did not back up the Vietnamese troops' stay in Kampuchea. This clearly shows that all that the Vietnamese authorities have done concerning the Kampuchean problem is highly unpopular with people.

There have been relatively heated exchanges on the problem of Kampuchea's UN seat at the UN General Assembly in the past several years. Acting in collusion with Soviet hegemonism, the Vietnamese authorities have tried various plots in a vain attempt to exclude Democratic Kampuchea from the United Nations and to dislodge it from its seat in order to pave the way for imposing the Heng Samrin regime in the United Nations. However, every plot by the great and small hegemonists, that is by the Soviets and the Vietnamese, has gone completely bankrupt. Just as Thai Minister of Foreign Affairs Sitthi Sawetsila pointed out a few days ago in refuting Nguyen Co Thach's fallacy, the Vietnamese have repeated this demand every year, but Democratic Kampuchea has won ever-greater support at the United Nations.

Supporting Democratic Kampuchea's legitimate seat at the United Nations is basically an important aspect of the effort to resist the great and small hegemonists and to uphold peace in Southeast Asia and even in the world.

Now, the Vietnamese authorities have refused to carry out the UN resolution and even wildly claimed that they could not withdraw their troops from Vietnam. Under these circumstances, if Kampuchea is allowed to "vacate" its seat at the United Nations, that will smack of admitting the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea as a fait accompli and will mean encouragement for the aggressors. This can never be tolerated by all people who love peace and uphold justice.

That Nguyen Co Thach links Vietnam's withdrawal of troops from Kampuchea with the signing of a treaty with China and the conclusion of an agreement with Thailand is both absurd and ridiculous. The key to the solution of the Kampuchean problem lies in the immediate and total withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. Nguyen Co Thach has fabricated lies as excuses for the Vietnamese troops' continuous stay in Kampuchea -- lies about the so-called "threat of China," which basically does not exist; about the need for Thailand to assume certain obligations; and so forth. This only shows clearly that the Hanoi power holders are still clinging to their own views and continuously holding out against the great majority of UN member nations. They simply think nothing of the resolution adopted at the United Nations calling for Vietnam's withdrawal of troops from Kampuchea. Nguyen Co Thach's attempt to use such nonsense in defense of the Vietnamese invasion of Kampuchea can deceive no one.

DK SCORES SRV CHEMICAL WARFARE AT UN MEETING

OW131912 Beijing XINHUA in English 1846 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Nairobi, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Chan Youran from Democratic Kampuchea, speaking at a plenary session of the governing council of the U.N. environment program here today, condemned Vietnam for its aggression and racial extermination in Kampuchea.

Chan Youran said that the invasion and occupation of Democratic Kampuchea by Vietnam has caused untold suffering to the Kampuchean people and serious damage to the resources and environment in the country.

He noted that more than 2.5 million Kampucheans have been killed either by conventional weapons, or by chemical and biological weapons or by starvation created by the Vietnamese occupiers. In addition to toxic gas, the Vietnamese occupiers are using lethal mycotoxins and trichothecene-based agent provided by the Soviet Union, he said. Besides, hundreds of thousands of the Kampuchean people have become refugees in Thailand to escape massacres, he added.

He stressed that "this war is part and parcel of the regional expansionist strategy of Vietnam." He further pointed out: "It is Moscow which supports the expansionist ambition of Hanoi in Southeast Asia.... Without the six million dollars aid provided daily by the Soviet Union, Vietnam alone has no possibility to carry out its policy in Kampuchea."

"The people of Kampuchea, under the leadership of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea, are waging a valiant struggle to ensure their own survival and to recover their independence and freedom," he said.

Chan Youran appealed to the international community to continue to strengthen their support for and solidarity with the Kampuchean people, and to demand that Vietnam put an end to its aggressive war in Kampuchea and withdraw all its forces from Kampuchea so that the Kampuchean people could determine freely their own destiny through free elections under the United Nations' supervision.

THAI FOREIGN MINISTER HOSTS DINNER IN BEIJING

OW131546 Beijing XINHUA in English 1528 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila and Mrs Sawetsila gave a farewell dinner at the Royal Embassy of Thailand here this evening. Among the Chinese guests attending the dinner were Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, and his wife; Han Nianlong, adviser to the Foreign Ministry, and his wife; Tan Yunhe, vice-minister of public health; and Fan Jin, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the Beijing Municipal People's Congress.

Huang Hua and Sitthi chatted about Sino-Thai friendship over dinner.

Envoys or representatives of the Philippines, Malaysia and Singapore to China were present. Thai Ambassador to China Koson Sinthuwanon and his wife were also present.

Yesterday, Minister and Mrs Sitthi Sawetsila and their party, in the company of Huang Hua, toured Chengde, a former imperial mountain resort 250 kilometers away from Beijing. The distinguished Thai guests are leaving for home tomorrow.

FURTHER REPORTAGE ON VISIT OF PRESIDENT PEREIRA

Zhao, Pereira Hold Talks

OW131518 Beijing XINHUA in English 1500 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Premier Zhao Ziyang held talks this afternoon with Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and president of the Republic of Cape Verde. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 1437 GMT on 13 May transmits a similar report which adds the following sentence: "The talks proceeded in a sincere and friendly atmosphere."] The two leaders discussed their own political and economic situations, bilateral relations and a number of international issues.

Zhao Ziyang praised the Cape Verde Government for pursuing nonalignment and for safeguarding African unity. Outlining China's foreign policy, he said it is guided by two principles: maintaining unity among Third-World countries and firm opposition to hegemonism with a view to safeguarding world peace. Zhao Ziyang said China, a developing socialist state, will unswervingly strengthen its unity with other Third-World countries. China regards economic and technical cooperation with the Third World, South-South cooperation, as its main emphasis in all international economic and technical cooperation.

Discussing disputes in the Third World, he said they are caused by both historical reasons and superpower interference. The Chinese Government, he said, has always maintained disputes should be settled by the countries involved through peaceful consultation and free from outside interference. They should be careful their disputes do not escalate and are not exploited by the superpowers.

Speaking of Sino-Cape Verde relations, he said their views are close to each other. He reiterated the Chinese Government's support for African countries and peoples in their struggles against imperialism, colonialism, racism and hegemonism.

Pereira said Cape Verde's foreign policy is strict neutrality and nonalignment. "We want friendship with all others under the principles of mutual respect, noninterference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit" he said. He said he and his colleagues have come to China as a delegation from an independent and free country. The Cape Verde people have received selfless support from the Chinese people from the beginning. "This is the Chinese people's glorious contribution to the progressive cause," he said. He hoped cooperation between his country and China would develop continuously in all fields in the years to come.

Taking part for Cape Verde were Silvino Manuel da Luz, minister of foreign affairs, and Julio Cesar de Carvalho, minister of the interior. For the Chinese were Gong Dafei, vice-minister of foreign affairs; Li Shuzheng, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party; Lu Xuejian, vice-minister of foreign economic relations and trade; Lu Zhixian, vice-minister of culture; Liu Huaqing, deputy-chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army; and Chinese Ambassador to Cape Verde Liu Yingxian.

Zhao, Pereira Address Banquet

OW131638 Beijing XINHUA in English 1621 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Premier Zhao Ziyang gave a banquet for Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and president of Cape Verde, in the Great Hall of the People this evening.

Zhao Ziyang said: "At a time when the superpowers are contending for hegemony and the world is becoming more and more turbulent, your country persists in neutrality and nonalignment, upholds African unity, opposes foreign interference and defends national sovereignty. We appreciate and support your just stand." "The Chinese Government has always believed countries, big or small, must be equal in international affairs. No big powers or foreign influence should be allowed to interfere in the internal affairs of other countries," he said. "We oppose any big country bullying any smaller one, any powerful country oppressing a weaker, any rich country exploiting a poorer. China, as a member of the Third World, is willing to stand with the Third World and all justice-upholding countries and peoples in the effort to oppose superpower aggression and expansion, oppression and exploitation, and safeguard world peace," he said.

The Chinese premier said he admired Cape Verde's determined efforts, under the leadership of Pereira, to mobilize the people to overcome difficulties and build the country. He said Pereira's visit will deepen mutual understanding and further the friendship between the two countries.

Pereira said Cape Verde's policy of strict nonalignment has won international support. "Though strong powers intend to order people about in the international community, and an economically and militarily weak nation like ours is confronted with various dangers, we pursue domestic and foreign policies based on independent action and ideology," he said. "We support opposition to all forms of hegemony, colonialism, imperialism and racism," he said.

Referring to Africa, Pereira said: "Despite all the schemes of delay and sabotage, African people will win independence for Namibia, helping to eliminate racial oppression and discrimination and bringing about a society of racial harmony in southern Africa, exploring the huge potential of the continent and helping it to grow stronger."

The president said South-South cooperation is the essential condition for world peace and the struggle for the establishment of a new international economic order has become the task of first importance for the Third World.

Speaking of China, Pereira said: "We have been following the sustained efforts to stabilize Chinese society. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 1606 GMT on 13 May carries a similar report which rephrases the preceding passage as follows: "Pereira highly evaluated the Chinese people's achievements in all fields.] "Such efforts have succeeded in breaking the 20-year blockade against the People's Republic. This is a victory for all oppressed peoples." [The XINHUA Domestic version adds the following sentence: "Pereira expressed satisfaction with the development of Cape Verde-PRC friendly relations."] Discussing Sino-Cape Verde relations, he said his talks with Premier Zhao Ziyang had been fruitful. He hoped the friendship between the two peoples would continue to develop.

[The XINHUA Domestic version adds the following sentences at this point: "During the banquet, the host and guests frequently proposed toasts to each other. A military band played the anthems of China and Cape Verde."] Among those present were Zhu Xuefan, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; State Councillor Ji Pengfei; and Minister of Public Health Cui Yueli.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS TRADE, ECONOMIC CRIME

HK131321 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 13 May 82 pp 1, 4

[Commentator's article: "Opening Up to the Outside World and Hitting at Economic Criminal Activities"]

[Text] Following the deepening of the struggle to hit at economic criminal activities, many shocking facts about the crimes have caused certain comrades to doubt the correctness of the policy of opening up to the outside world; and some other comrades are worried whether the development of this struggle might affect the implementation of the policy of opening up to the outside world. The "Decision of the CCP Central Committee and State Council on Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Field" has made a brilliant exposition on this question. Seriously studying and persistently carrying out the "decision" is extremely important for maintaining the policy of opening up to the outside world and ensuring the development of the cause of China's socialist modernization.

Practicing an economic policy of opening up to the outside world in order to increase China's ability to rely on its own efforts was one of the major policy decisions taken by the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. The practice of the past few years has proven that the orientation in practicing this policy is completely correct and the achievements gained outweigh anything else.

None of the economically developed countries in the world today achieved modernization while practicing a closed-door policy. And China too must learn how to use two kinds of resources in order to modernize as quickly as possible -- domestic and external resources, opening up two markets -- and organize our ability in domestic construction and in developing external economic ties, so as to organically integrate relying on our own efforts with opening up to the outside world.

We have imported some foreign investment since instituting the policy of opening up to the outside world, and this has played a positive role in strengthening construction in weak links in the national economy and promoting the technical improvement of old enterprises; we have established a number of Sino-foreign jointly managed or cooperatively managed enterprises, and made progress in cooperation in exploiting our oil resources; great success has been gained in the work of importing advanced technology and management experiences suited to our country; and an excellent start has been made in arranging engineering contracts for foreign countries and exporting technology and labor. The policy of opening up to the outside world has also stimulated the development of our export trade. World trade rose only slightly in 1981 compared with 1980, yet China's exports recorded a big increase, and there was also a change in the structure of our export commodities, with the proportion of industrial finished goods exceeding that of primary products. These facts cannot be ignored.

Of course there is another aspect of the situation. Due to lack of experience, we have imported certain equipment that should not have been imported; and we struck some deals that are not worthwhile because we do not know how to do business. These things too cannot be ignored; we must continually sum up experiences and improve matters. And in the wake of the practice of the policy of opening up to the outside world, there has indeed been an increase in illegal and criminal activities such as smuggling and peddling contraband, engaging in bribery and corruption , speculation, swindling, and so on. Ignoring the existince of this latter aspect will not only damage the state's economic interests to a great extent but will also enable capitalist ideology to run rampant, ruin some cadres and even cause more serious consequences.

The struggle between corruption by capitalist ideology and socialist ideological opposition to corruption is a protracted one. We entered the new historical period of practicing the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy under the conditions of bad party work style, lax discipline, and many problems in ideology, politics, organization, and work style, which were caused by Lin Biao and the "gang of four." These things have made the anticorruption struggle still more intense. Comrade Mao Zedong said before the founding of the state, the enemy's arms have not vanquished us, but the sugar-coated bullets of the bourgeoisie might be able to defeat the weak-willed ones in our ranks. In the current struggle between corruption and opposition to corruption, some of the cadres hit by sugar-coated bullets rose to power by following Lin Biao, Jiang Qing and company and "rebelling," but there are also a very small number of old comrades. These old comrades were not vanquished by enemy arms in the past, nor were they overcome by suppression by the "gang of four," nor could violence done by counterrevolutionaries outside or inside the party conquer them. But does it not make people awake with a start that they have been hit by capitalist sugar-coated bullets in our exchanges with international capital in recent years?

The CCP Central Committee is very resolved. By resolutely hitting at criminal activities in the economic field, we can save many people, promptly purge the corrupt and degenerate element from the body of the party and state and preserve party purity, so as to provide a powerful guarantee for the victorious development of our party's cause and to truly achieve the original aim of opening up to the outside world. It is worth drawing on the experiences of history in this respect.

Russia put into effect the concession system after the October Revolution. In economic relations, this system was a kind of state capitalism, and a kind of contract drawn up between the Soviet regime and foreign capitalists.

In accordance with this kind of contract, the Soviet regime handed a certain number of plants, raw materials, mines and other means of production to the capitalists who then, as the other party of the contract or the hirers, promoted production with the socialist means of production. They made profits with their capital and gave part of their products to the Soviet state. On the one hand, Lenin pointed out: "If we are not good at implementing the policy of concession or absorbing foreign capital with enterprises run under the concession system, we will not be able to talk about adopting serious and practical measures to improve our economic situation"; on the other hand, he stressed: "Undoubtedly, each concession means a new war. However, it is war waged in another field, that is to say, in the economic field." Lenin also added: "Concession does not mean peace but war. But it is a war which brings about more benefits to us." In accordance with Lenin's view, it was necessary to contact the international capitalists in order to speed up socialist economic construction in the Soviet state. However, such contacts embody serious struggles.

Today, we must still work in accordance with Lenin's views. The idea of struggling in isolation and refusing to get in touch with international capitalists is wrong. On the other hand, while making contact with international capitalists, it is also wrong to think and act, neglecting and abandoning the necessary struggles. That is to say, we must simultaneously make contact and struggle.

Of course, in making contact with foreign nations and waging our anticorruption struggle, we must carry out specific analysis of those international capitalists with whom we get in touch and the Hong Kong and Macao industrialists. It is unquestionable that all capitalists seek profits. The question is that it is necessary to distinguish between two different situations. The first one is to do business by means of proper procedures. No matter whether agreements on the conditions can be made or not, we welcome such businessmen and treat them politely. In addition, we implement the policy of equality and mutual benefit in dealing with capitalists with whom we can cooperate.

The only question here is whether or not we can do business and there is no problem of resisting and opposing corruption. However, the other situation is that some people adopt improper measures such as smuggling, peddling drugs, corruption and deception to do business. These people infringe upon the rights and interests of the Chinese people and should be resolutely boycotted by us.

Dealing blows at serious crimes in the economic field under the circumstances of upholding the policy of opening up to the outside world and persisting in opposing corruption is a very complicated and tough task. This demands that our comrades greatly raise their level of ideology, policy and leadership. They must, on the one hand, deeply understand the strategic significance of the policy of opening up to the outside world as far as economics is concerned and dare to open up new prospects, and on the other hand, they must pay meticulous attention to the new and complicated environment which confronts us in the course of opening up to the outside world. They must be good at mastering skills and promptly discovering and overcoming various negative phenomena which seriously undermine our cause and particularly the negative phenomena existing inside the party and among the party cadres. Both these aspects are indispensable. We must do a good job of both of them or else our work will be delayed and our cause will be hindered.

Our country's socialist modernization is in a crucial situation at present. Whether or not we can do a good job of various types of construction in the coming few years, including promoting foreign economic relations and opening up new prospects, is of critical significance to our country's development in the next 10 to 20 years. We believe that under the correct leadership of the CCP Central Committee, our people will definitely solve the new problems posed by history, enabling our country's modernization drive to incessantly advance toward the socialist orientation.

COMMENTATOR ON RURAL ENTERPRISE ECONOMIC CRIMES

HK130814 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Attack Economic Crimes, Operate Commune and Brigade Enterprises Well"]

[Text] Chen Deyuan, a purchasing agent of a garment factory in Hongqi brigade, Wujiang County, Jiangsu Province, has committed, under the cover of the brigade's enterprise, the crimes of bribing cadres and conducting speculative trade to obtain windfall profits. He has been sentenced to 7 years imprisonment according to the law. It is absolutely necessary to mete out legal punishment to those people who have wormed their way into the commune and brigade enterprises to conduct criminal activities and have thus seriously harmed the interests of the state and the collective.

Recently, quite a large number of economic criminal activities that have been exposed in various areas have involved commune and brigade enterprises. This is a problem we should pay attention to. During the past few years, the commune and brigade enterprises have developed rapidly and have achieved great results. Last year, the number of commune and brigade enterprises throughout the country rose to more than 1.3 million and these enterprises employed a total of 30 million people, which was 10 percent of the total labor force in our rural areas. The total industrial output value of commune and brigade enterprises amounted to more than 54 billion yuan, which constituted about 10 percent of the total industrial output value of the whole country. The development of commune and brigade enterprises has made significant contributions to developing the national economy, making the markets prosper and improving the people's livelihood. The role it has played in developing agriculture is even more obvious. However, we should not neglect the fact that in quite a large number of commune and brigade enterprises different degrees of unhealthy trends have arisen. Some evildoers have taken advantage of opportunities to worm their way into our commune and brigade enterprises and used the commune and brigade collective economy as a cover to wantonly carry out various kinds of illegal activities including speculation, graft, embezzlement, and obtaining material gains by bribing or cheating cadres.

What has happened in the Hongqi garment factory is precisely an example of this. Under the control of the criminal Chen Deyuan, this factory became entirely divorced from the correct orientation of the development of commune and brigade enterprises. It did not undertake proper production, but illegally bought up various kinds of textiles for which there is a state monopoly on purchasing and marketing and resold them at higher prices. By this means alone, the factory earned an illegal profit of nearly 180,000 yuan in less than 1 year and Chen Deyuan got 17,000 yuan of this profit. These economic criminal activities have not only disturbed the economic order of society and encouraged the unhealthy trends in our society but also harmed the commune and brigade enterprises. Therefore, punishing these criminals according to the law is the common desire of all the cadres and commune members in commune and brigade enterprises.

Some people worry that perhaps the crackdown on serious economic criminal activities in commune and brigade enterprises may discredit these enterprises and thus hinder their development. There are no grounds for such a worry. The materials gathered in some investigations have proved that in most of our commune and brigade enterprises, the economic activities are normal or basically normal and the unhealthy practices that have been found in their economic activities will be corrected later in the process of overhauling and reorganizing these enterprises. In the CCP Central Committee's and the State Council's "Decision on Dealing Blows at Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Field" it is stated that "generally speaking, except for a few unhealthy practices that constitute serious crimes, the unhealthy practices in the relationships between rural commune and brigade enterprises and urban industrial and commercial enterprises should be corrected later in the course of overhauling and reorganizing commune and brigade enterprises and in strengthening the administration of industry and commerce and the administration of materials and goods." As for the handful of people who have committed serious crimes, they are precisely the people who have brought discredit to the commune and brigade enterprises. Allowing these people to continue to carry out illegal activities under the cover of the collective economy means disaster for the commune and enterprises. Cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic field is aimed at clearing away obstacles, promoting the development of agricultural and industrial production and speeding up the progress of the four modernizations. After punishing serious crimes and overcoming unhealthy practices in our commune and brigade enterprises, people will surely have more confidence in these enterprises.

Economic criminal activities and unhealthy practices in our commune and brigade enterprises are the evil aftermath of the decade of chaos in the economic field and they are closely related with the unhealthy trends in the society. Some actual difficulties and laxity of management in some commune and brigade enterprises have also contributed to the occurrence of unhealthy practices there. Therefore, we should make a concrete analysis and attach utmost importance to making a clear distinction between economic criminal activities and unhealthy practices. Some people have a poor understanding of how things stand in our commune and brigade enterprises, and do not know how to distinguish the major aspects from the secondary ones. As soon as they find any problems, they deal blows at the commune and brigade enterprises or even denounce all commune and brigade enterprises. This is neither just nor correct.

Our commune and brigade enterprises have made and will continue to make great contributions to the development of our national economy. Under the present conditions in our country, commune and brigade enterprises are not something we can dispense with, but are something we should take good care to run well and to further healthily develop. In order to run our commune and brigade enterprises satisfactorily, we should, on the one hand, crack down on serious economic criminal activities and overcome unhealthy practices, and on the other hand, conscientiously help them to solve a number of urgent actual problems that need to be solved immediately.

For example, we should do our best to include the production, purchasing, marketing and transportation of goods of the commune and brigade enterprises in our planning at all levels. Then these enterprises will have constant supply of materials, their production will be carried out in a planned manner and the transportation and marketing of their products will be facilitated. If all these can be carried out in a proper way, no one will resort to dishonest methods. Some units that have materials, goods and power often fleece the commune and brigade enterprises. This malpractice must be resolutely corrected. Lack of competent cadres and weak accounting and management systems are common problems in nearly all the commune and brigade enterprises. This provides loopholes for a few evildoers to take advantage of. The leading organizations should help these enterprises to promptly establish sound and strict accounting systems and to train a number of accounting workers who strictly adhere to principles and are well skilled. As for those enterprises where a fairly large number of problems have been found we should send people to audit their accounts and inventory their stocks. We should solve the problems one by one in an orderly manner and should resolutely refuse to engage in any mass movements. However, we should adhere to the mass line and persist in carrying out investigations and study so as to probe these problems fully.

We are sure that after the crackdown on economic criminal activities and the correction of unhealthy practices, our commune and brigade enterprises will be able to make new and healthier progress.

RENMIN RIBAO URGES IMPROVING ACCOUNTING WORK

HK140325 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 12 May 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Streamlining Can Release Financial Resources"]

[Text] Streamlining can release financial resources. To release financial resources through streamlining is an important aspect in the economic readjustment, which cannot be neglected. Recently, the State Council decided that state enterprises should spend 2 or 3 years on overall readjustment. Industry, commerce, communications and large, medium-sized and small enterprises should assign the readjustment of financial and accounting work an important position and regard it as an important factor in streamlining enterprises.

The management of enterprise finance and accounting is an important component part of the management and administration of enterprises. Higher management levels and better economic returns are closely connected with sound financial and accounting work. For a long time in the past, there were some objective reasons which accounted for the backwardness of our economic management. Subjectively speaking, such a situation was also connected with the guiding thought of some departments which paid more attention to production than to financial work. "Some people are unaware of how things stand despite their great determination, whereas some other people are full of ideas but do not know the true state of affairs." Such blindness in economic management was a specific manifestation of our neglecting financial and accounting work. Certain mistakes and miscalculations and poor economic returns in our economic work were attributed to a great extent to the lack of realizing the need to maintain accurate accounts and the negligence of business accounting and economic returns. Over the past 30 years or so since the founding of new China, both positive and negative experiences have taught us that while carrying out economic construction, we should not weaken financial and accounting work. Instead, we should strengthen it. We should not neglect accountants and financial workers. Just like engineers and technical personnel, we should think highly of them. If we fail to exert major efforts to readjust the financial and accounting work of enterprises, the so-called improvement of management and administration and the enhancement of economic returns will amount to nothing but empty talk.

In recent years, our country has made great efforts to readjust the economy and reform the financial system. At the same time, it has reissued the "regulations on functions and powers of accounting workers" and adopted a series of measures to strengthen financial and accounting work. However, in a number of enterprises, financial and accounting work is still a weak link in their economic management. Things such as ambiguous accounts, unawareness of enterprise property, inaccurate cost accounting, low economic returns and so forth have occurred widely. Unhealthy tendencies such as violating financial discipline, practicing fraud, engaging in malpractices for selfish ends, tax evasion, intercepting profits returned to the state and and so forth have spread to a number of areas and enterprises. The situation of backwardness in management, laxness in discipline and ineffectiveness in supervision has not only led to a heavy loss of state revenue, but also opened the gates wide to embezzlement, theft, speculation and waste of financial resources. Therefore, devoting major efforts to readjust financial resources. Therefore, devoting major efforts to readjust financial and accounting work of the enterprises is a matter of tremendous significance for carrying out the struggle against the corrosion of capitalist ideas and dealing blows at criminal acts of violating the law in the economic field.

It is absolutely necessary to reform the financial system, confer certain business competence on the enterprises and provide staff members and workers of the enterprises with certain economic interests so that powers, responsibilities and interests will be effectively combined. However, the enterprises should perform their economic duties and fulfill their due obligations to the state. They should also see things from an all-round point of view, do things strictly in accordance with the plans and stipulations of the state, pay taxes and turn over profits to the state in full and without any delay, and resolutely stop various acts of employing dishonest practices to harm the interests of the state.

Strengthening financial and accounting work and effectively readjusting it is an important aspect of our work of forming a good habit of diligence and frugality, opposing waste and combating corrosion. To accomplish the tasks, financial and accounting workers should be bold in upholding principles and resolutely fighting against all acts which violate the system, law and discipline. Apart from that, they should promote financial democracy and accept the supervision of the masses.

In socialist construction, we should pursue economic accounting, fully utilize manpower and facilities and do our best to improve labor organizations, management and administration and save all human and material resources that can be saved so as to reduce production costs and increase financial accumulation of the state and the income of enterprises and individuals. In a word, we should attach importance to economic returns. To do so, we should master accounting work and be good at meticulous calculations and strict budgeting so that we can carry out our socialist construction more effectively.

RENMIN RIBAO ON CENTRALIZATION, DECENTRALIZATION

HK130916 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 2

[Article by Li Zhisheng [2621 2535 4141]: "Correctly Handle the Relationship Between Centralization and Decentralization" -- On an Important Problem in Reforming the Economic System"]

[Text] The problem of reforming the economic management system was raised by the central authorities after the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. Prior to this, the main disadvantages of our economic management system were overcentralization and rigidity. Since the power of the localities and the decisionmaking power of the production units were enlarged in the reforms of the past few years, this disadvantage has, to a certain extent, been overcome. Of course, there are still quite a few problems in this respect which need to be further resolved. However, we must also pay attention to a new tendency which has emerged in our practice. This is, the tendency toward departmentalism, decentralism and the trend of liberalization, which was pointed out by Premier Zhao Ziyang at the recent national conference on industrial and communications work.

The main expressions of this tendency are: Some localities and units do not act in accordance with state planning, seeking collective or even private interests at the expense of the state. In dealing with relations between localities and enterprises, they do not take the interests of others into account and even shift their own troubles onto others to benefit themselves. In dealing with foreign relations, instead of implementing the policy of making concerted efforts and cooperating with each other in foreign affairs, they have tried to do each other in and have thus profited the foreigners. Obviously, departmentalism and decentralism, which disregard state planning and state leadership, are harmful to our socialist construction and the reform of our systems.

A socialist economy is a planned economy. The lifelines of our national economy are under state control. Both in the processes of production, circulation, distribution and consumption of the whole society, or in capital construction which concerns the national economy and the people's livelihood, it is indispensable to have close cooperation between various localities, departments and units, as well as centralized and unified leadership and guidance and relevant suitable policies, laws and regulations. At present, however, there are many problems in this respect and some of them are very serious. It was pointed out recently by the State Planning Commission, the State Economic Commission and the State Bureau of Supplies that in 1982, because some enterprises have reserved more steel, timber and cement, which are under state unified allocation, for the purpose of selling, exporting or using them, supplies of state-allotted goods and materials have become even more insufficient and the contradiction between supply and demand has been sharpened. In the purchase of agricultural products, because some localities and production units have not fulfilled the production tasks set by the state, the proportion of state-allotted purchases has been reduced and the state allocation of many agricultural and sideline products, which are in short supply, has been reduced by a big margin. At the same time, the self-marketed portion has continuously been enlarged. In carrying out the state plan for planting crops, some localities and production units have, without regard to the state plan, reduced the areas sown to grain while expanding the areas sown to tobacco, rape and other industrial crops. In short, the output of state-planned products is decreasing and the products not subject to planning are increasing. As a result, regulation by market mechanism is counteracting the planned economy.

In order to adhere to the principle of ensuring that the planned economy plays the major role and market regulation the supplementary role, it is necessary for the state to formulate a plan for the production and distribution of major industrial and agricultural products, and the main part of some important products. That is to say, the production in major enterprises of the national economy and the production of major products which greatly concerns the national economy and the people's livelihood must be conducted strictly in accordance with the state plan. For a variety of small commodities, which are produced by many separate small enterprises and individual laborers, production can be conducted in accordance with the demands and changes of the market within the limits permitted by the state. Of course, regulation by market mechanism must be guided by state planning so that its role can be brought into play. The relationship between the planned economy and regulation by market mechanism is, in fact, the relationship between the "large plan and small freedoms," and between centralization and decentralization, as we have often said. So, handling the relationship between the planned economy and regulation by market mechanism is an important problem in correctly handling the relationship between centralization and decentralization in our economic construction.

Why are some comrades not able to correctly handle the relationship between centralization and decentralization? Why do they often one-sidedly stress centralization or decentralization, or end up deviating in another direction when correcting a deviation? One of the main reasons is the one-sidedness in their thinking; that is, while stressing the importance of centralization, they overlook or forget the necessity of decentralization, or vice versa. One-sidedness has made us suffer for a long time. We must overcome it in handling the relationship between centralization and decentralization and guard against a new deviation occurring when correcting a deviation.

It is an extremely important matter in the reform of our systems to correctly handle the relationship between centralization and decentralization and the relationship between partial and local interests and the interests of the whole. It is appropriate to say that in the reform of our systems, only when the relationship between centralization and decentralization and the relationship between partial and local interests and the interests of the whole are taken into account, can the enthusiasm of various departments be brought into full play and can socialist construction develop smoothly. Although we have gained some experience over the past 30-odd years in handling the relationship between centralization and decentralization, it has not been enough and it is yet to be fully improved upon. We have even less experience in the handling of the relationship between the state and enterprises. For this reason, we must continue to make great efforts and sum up new experiences in the practice of reforming our systems so that we can truly and gradually solve this problem in our management system.

FURTHER ON DRAFT OF REVISED CONSTITUTION

Democracy, Legal System

HK140743 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 11 May 82 p 5

[Article by Zhang Shangzhou [1728 1424 7763]: "New Development of Socialist Democracy and Legal System"]

[Text] The Fifth NPC Standing Committee has published the "draft of the revised constitution of the PRC" for discussion by people of all nationalities throughout the country. This is a great event in the political life of the people of our country. Article 1 of the general principles of the draft provides: "The PRC is a socialist state of the people's democratic dictatorship led by the working class and based on the alliance of workers and peasants." Article 2 provides: "All power in the PRC belongs to the people." "The organs through which the people exercise state power are the NPC and the local people's congresses at various levels." "The people have the right to manage state affairs, economic and cultural undertakings and social affairs in various forms through various channels according to law." Our state and political systems and the principle that the people are the masters in various aspects of the state's life and social life have been defined in the form of the articles of the constitution. This is a summation of the practical experience of the people's democratic dictatorship in the 30-odd years since the founding of the PRC and is an important indication that socialist democracy and the socialist legal system have been further developed in our country.

By perfecting our socialist democracy and turning it into a system and law, the draft has summed up both the positive and negative experiences in the past 30 years and more, and has revised and developed some of the principles and provisions of the three Constitutions of 1954, 1975 and 1978. This is a genuine record of the development of socialist democracy since the downfall of the "gang of four." From many articles of the draft of the revised constitution we can see that there are at least three special features in the provisions on democracy and the legal system in the "draft of the revised constitution of the PRC."

First, the citizen's rights and obligations as stipulated by the constitution and the law have been raised to an important position. Ours is a socialist country. Within the scope of the socialist system, the people naturally should, in line with the stipulations of the constitution and law, enjoy various basic rights and abide by the obligations as stipulated by the constitution and the law. Otherwise, it would be impossible to reflect the fundamental principle that "all power belongs to the people." Socialist democracy is a democracy of the new type. It belongs to the people of our country who account for the overwhelming majority of the population. Within the people, the rights and obligations of the citizens are closely linked together and are inseparable from one another. The draft of the revised constitution of our country explicitly defines the various basic rights and obligations enjoyed by the citizens of our country in the 22 articles of an entire chapter.

These basic rights and obligations have been defined in the light of the actual situation in our country. Being provided with a material foundation, the basic rights of citizens in our country can be exercised; the broad masses of people will also be able to conscientiously abide by the various obligations the citizens of our country should abide by. In summing up the experience of the gradual development of our socialist democracy in the past 30 years and more, especially the bitter lesson of socialist democracy being wantonly trampled on during the period when the "gang of four" usurped power, the draft has changed the methods of writing the previous constitutions by placing the basic rights and obligations of citizens in Chapter Two so that it can closely link up with some of the principles on the people being the masters of their own affairs in the General Principles and by placing the state structure in Chapter Three so as to stress and highlight the rights and obligations of citizens. This proceeds from the basic viewpoint that our socialist state structure is set up entirely for the interests of the people. By raising the provisions on ensuring the legal rights of citizens to such a position, and stressing the obligations of citizens, the draft has accurately recorded and affirmed the lofty status of the Chinese people as the masters of their own affairs in a socialist country. This is an important feature of the draft in the development of socialist democracy.

Second, the draft clearly defines that the people have the right to manage various aspects of state and social affairs in various forms through various channels according to law. Since all power belongs to the people in our country, it is necessary to let the people really enjoy the right of being the masters of their own affairs in various aspects of state and social life. In section III, article 2 of the draft it is provided that according to law the people, in addition to the right to manage state affairs in various forms through various channels, also have the right to manage economic and cultural undertakings and various aspects of social affairs in various forms through various channels. For example, according to the provisions of articles 18 and 19, staff and workers of a state-run enterprise and laborers in a collective economic organization practice democratic management of their own units. Take another example. According to the provision of article 113, in various social affairs and in numerous urban and rural collective economic organizations, the people of our country have the right to organize and join mass organizations of self-government at the basic level, such as neighborhood committees and village committees, and the people's mediation committees, public security committees and public health committees set up by the neighborhood committees and village committees, to handle public affairs and public welfare in their respective residential districts. In brief, the draftexplicitly stipulates that in all these aspects, the citizens of our country have extensive democratic rights as prescribed by the Constitution and the law. Since the downfall of the "gang of four," in the actual life of our country, the scope of the democratic rights enjoyed by the people has been further expanded. The stipulations of this aspect in the draft are also an accurate record of the development of socialist democracy up to the present stage.

Third, the system of the people's congresses has been strengthened and the functions and powers of the National People's Congress Standing Committee have been expanded. In our country, the organs through which the people exercise state power are the NPC and the local people's congresses at various levels. The resolution on setting up standing committees in the local people's congresses above the county level approved at the Second Session of the Fifth NPC in 1979 has enabled the people to strengthen management of and supervision over state organs at various levels through the deputies, people's congresses and their standing committees elected by them. The draft has accurately recorded the achievements in this respect and, on this basis, further strengthened the system of the people's congreses and expanded the scope of the right of the people to manage state affairs. This is chiefly reflected in: first, the basis for the people's deputies to exercise their functions and powers has been strengthened.

In addition to restoring the stipulation (article 73) in the 1954 Constitution that no deputy to the NPC may be arrested or put on trial on criminal charges without the consent of the presidium of the NPC or its Standing Committee and retaining the stipulation (article 72) in the 1978 Constitution that deputies to the NPC have the right to address inquiries to the state organizations and that the organizations being questioned are under obligation to answer, a new stipulation (article 74) has been added that deputies to the NPC shall not be subject to legal investigation for speeches or votes at its meetings. Second, the functions and powers of the NPC Standing Committee have been expanded in order to make up for the drawback of the NPC having an excessive number of deputies and limited time for discussion. First of all, it has been explicitly stipulated in the draft that the NPC and its Standing Committee exercise the legislative power of the state and make laws and decrees (article 55). In the three Constitutions of 1954, 1975 and 1978, the NPC Standing Committee only has the authority to explain the law and make decrees. The NPC alone has the power to make laws. The current stipulation proceeds from the actual needs of the people at present. It is necessary for us to develop socialist democracy and strengthen the socialist legal system. Expanding the legislative power of the NPC Standing Committee is advantageous to the smooth progress of the enormous legislative work and the effective exercise of the people's right to manage state affairs. Second, the NPC as well as its Standing Committee will be turned further into an organ that controls state power. In this respect, the draft has restored and developed the principle and stipulation of the 1954 Constitution on setting up various special committees by explicitly stipulating that, under the leadership of the NPC Standing Committee, in addition to a nationalities committee and a legal committee, it is also necessary to establish a financial and economic committee, an education and science committee, a foreign affairs committee and other special committees as deemed necessary in order to examine and draft relevant motions (article 69). Furthermore, the draft has also restored a stipulation of the 1954 Constitution, that is, the NPC and its Standing Committee, when it is deemed necessary, may organize investigation committees on specific questions and, in the course of an investigation by an investigation committee, all relevant state organs, social organizations and citizens are under obligation to provide necessary materials to the committee (article 70). These are the three important features of the draft in developing socialist democracy.

The draft of the revised constitution has, from the angle of strengthening the socialist legal system, accurately recorded and affirmed some of the new developments in socialist democracy in our country to enable socialist democracy in our country to make a step forward in the direction of systematization and legalization. It will certainly enjoy the enthusiastic support of the people of all nationalities throughout the country.

Taiwan Democratic League

OW081335 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1256 GMT 7 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 7 May (XINHUA) -- Council members of the General Office of the Taiwan Democratic Self-Government League currently in Beijing held a meeting today to discuss the draft constitution.

Cai Xiao, chairman of the General Office of the Taiwan Democratic Self-Government League and member of the national constitutional revision committee, said: The NPC Standing Committee has decided to make public the draft constitution for discussion by the people throughout the country. This is a major event in the political life of the people of our country and is of far-reaching historical importance and vital immediate significance. He added: The draft constitution, which is a revised constitution based on the development of our state work since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee with the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" as a guide, sums up the more than 30 years of experience in our socialist revolution and construction. It is a rather complete draft constitution suited to the condition of our country.

He pointed out: Article 30 of the draft constitution states that, if necessary, the state may establish special administrative districts [te bie xing zheng qu 3676 0446 5887 2398 0575], and that the system implemented in a special administrative district shall be stipulated by law according to the specific conditions. After Taiwan's return to the motherland, we will certainly act in accordance with this principle and policy.

In his speech, Cai Xiao asked all local branches (preparatory groups) of the Taiwan Democratic Self-Government League to firmly and earnestly regard it as the league's important task at this stage to organize and push all league members to seriously discuss the draft constitution under the leadership of the local party committees. He expressed the hope that all league members, as masters of the country, take prompt action to energetically discuss the draft constitution, deeply study its importance and necessity, make clear its basic spirit and main contents and offer their suggestions for further revision so as to contribute their share to working out a perfect constitution.

Su Ziheng, vice chairman of the General Office of the Taiwan Democratic Self-Government League and member of the national constitutional revision committee, said: Two members of the national constitutional revision committee are Taiwan-born compatriots. This fully indicates the trust in and concern for the Taiwan compatriots shown by the people of the motherland. The draft constitution stipulates that the NPC may exercise the function and power to decide on the establishment of a special administrative district and its system, a provision which was not contained in previous constitutions. This provision will play a significant role in promoting the great cause of unification of the motherland.

Li Chunqing, vice chairman of the General Office of the Taiwan Democratic Self-Government League, said: The preamble of the draft constitution unequivocally states that it is the sacred duty of the people throughout China, including the Taiwan compatriots, to accomplish the great cause of unifying our motherland. This indicates that unification of the motherland is not only the aspiration but also the sacred duty of the Taiwan compatriots.

Others speaking at the meeting included Tian Fuda, Xu Mengshan, Chen Bingji, Wei Zhengming, Chen Musen, Wang Wande and Wu Ketai.

Kuomintang Committee

OW131345 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0047 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 12 May (XINHUA) -- Meetings have been held in the past few days by leading members of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee and a number of its Central Committee and alternate members, as well as standing committee members who are presently in Beijing, to enthusiastically discuss "the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China." A resolution was adopted by the Fifth Central Standing Committee of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee at its 18th meeting held on 4 May, urging all members of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee to immediately respond to the NPC Standing Committee's call to enthusiastically take part in the study and discussion of the draft of the revised constitution in the manner of being the masters of their own affairs.

Wang Kunlun, chairman of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee's Central Committee and member of the committee for the revision of the constitution, said: The publication of the draft of the revised constitution of the PRC by the NPC Standing Committee for discussion by the people of all nationalities throughout the country is a matter of prine importance in the political life of our country. The constitution is the cardinal law of the land. It is the general charter of this country. Compared with the 1978 Constitution, the draft of the revised constitution just made public has many more amended provisions. It can better meet the requirements of the four modernizations and is conducive to developing socialist democracy and strengthening the socialist legal system. The stipulations on the state organs embody important reforms and new development in the state mechanism of our country. Wang Kunlun said that he hopes comrades of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee will join people throughout the country in earnestly discussing the draft of the revised constitution.

Also speaking at the discussion meetings were vice chairmen of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee, including Qu Wu, Zhu Xuefan, Pei Changhui, Qian Changzhao, Gan Cisen, Wu Maosun, Hou Jingru and Sun Yueqi. They unanimously supported the NPC Standing Committee's resolution on publishing the draft of the revised constitution. They pointed out that the draft sums up this country's experience in socialist revolution and construction over the past 30 years and more. It is the constitution for the consolidation and development of China's socialist system and reflects that China is embarking on democracy and the rule of law. Many veteran comrades of our Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee have witnessed great and important transformations in several historical periods since they joined the 1911 revolution led by Dr Sun Yat-sen. They have participated in epic struggles for a constitutional government and understand that a comprehensive and integral constitution, like this draft, did not come easily. Members of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee must contribute their share to revising the constitution during discussion of the draft.

Also speaking at the meeting were more than 20 Central Committee and alternate members of the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee and members of its central standing committee now in Beijing. A number of comrades voiced their opinion on rewriting some provisions in the draft of the revised constitution.

Local Congresses

OW131415 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0138 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 13 May (XINHUA) -- Standing committees of the people's congresses of Beijing, Tianjin, Shanghai, Shanxi, Heilongjiang, Jilin, Fujian, Zhejiang, Henan, Guangdong, Hebei, Hunan, Shaanxi, Guangxi, Sichuan and Anhui recently separately adopted resolutions or issued circulars which contained specific plans for carrying out the mass discussion on the draft of the revised constitution.

The recent 20th Plenary Session of the Beijing Municipal People's Congress Standing Committee adopted a resolution that called on all people of Beijing to be masters of their own affairs and take an active part in the discussion on the draft of the revised constitution. The resolution stressed that during the discussion, all departments and units should strengthen leadership, conduct extensive propaganda work, mobilize the masses, fully develop democracy, pool the wisdom of all people and earnestly present their opinions for revision. Resolutions of the standing committees of the people's congresses of other provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions also stressed that the discussion on the draft of the revised constitution by all the people is a manner as well as a form of managing state affairs by the people. It is imperative to perfect the draft of the revised constitution through discussions.

Before adopting these resolutions, members of the standing committees of the people's congresses of these provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions conscientiously discussed the draft of the revised constitution at their sessions. Many comrades noted in their speeches that the draft of the revised constitution sums up the experience of more than three decades since the founding of the PRC and that the draft stipulates that the four basic principles should be upheld, which will serve as an assurance that China's modernization program will forever advance along the socialist path.

Meanwhile, party committees of Shanghai and Tianjin Municipalities and of Shanxi and Sichuan Provinces issued circulars, urging party organizations at all levels to attach great importance to the discussion of the draft of the revised constitution and properly organize and guide the discussions on the draft to make them a success. In its circular, the Sichuan Provincial CCP Committee also required all localities in Sichuan to do a good job of training propaganda workers, lecturers and instructors and publicize the draft in as many ways as possible so that the people will understand the essence of the draft constitution and fully realize the importance of actively taking part in discussions on the draft.

ARTICLE DUSCUSSES ROTATIONAL TRAINING OF CADRES

HK140807 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 5

[Article by Fang Sheng [2455 3932]: "An Important Way To Carry Out Rotational Training of Cadres"]

[Text] Carrying out rotational training of cadres in a planned manner, particularly those engaged in economic work, raising the level of their economic theory and their ability to manage the economy and bringing up large numbers of qualified economic management personnel capable of correctly implementing the party's general and specific policies for economic construction is an extremely urgent task placed before the whole party and people throughout the country. When discussing the question of rotational training for cadres in "Report on the Restructuring of the State Council," Comrade Zhao Ziyang emphatically pointed out: "Now we must list this work on our agenda. We must be determined to spend some capital in intellectual work. This is a strategic decision of important actual significance as well as far-reaching significance made by the Central Committee in the new period of socialist construction and is as important as the streamlining of the government structure."

Economic construction is the basis of socialist modernization and the foremost task of the whole country. Therefore, rotational training of cadres must put the stress on rotational training of economic work cadres. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, many departments and units from the Central Committee to the localities have scored outstanding achievements and obtained valuable experience in this direction. However, up to now, rotational training work is still mainly carried out by party schools at various levels, various cadre schools, technical schools and all kinds of schools under some institutions of higher learning. At present, we are faced with the strenuous task of providing rotational training to all cadres throughout the country. We can never satisfy the needs of the country by relying on these schools alone and we must also fully bring the role of various academic organizations into play. For example, as a national academic organization of economic science, the Chinese federation of economic societies (called economic federation for short) can make proper contributions in this respect. The economic federation training center this March jointly sponsored with Yunnan Province a 6-month training class for teachers and cadres of industrial economic management. It has departments of politics, economics and socialism, conducts such courses as industrial enterprise and industrial economic management, management systems engineering and economic estimates and holds symposiums on such economic subjects as socialist economic theory, statistics, accounting and economic law. The Yunnan Provincial CCP Committee has attached great importance to the success of this training class and energetically supported it. Experience has proved that giving full play to the role of various academic organizations in successfully running all manner of training classes is an important way to carry out the rotational training of cadres, and there are many fine points worth paying attention to.

1. The characteristics of this rotational training of cadres are: not only is the quantity large, but time is short and the task is heavy. Moreover, it also requires all kinds of professional training. Therefore, various professional academic organizations will have plenty of room to bring their talents into play. For example, the economic federation is a mass organization consisting of over 250 economic societies. It is the assembly place for all kinds of economic experts, scholars, professors and professionals. For the sake of bringing the role of these experts into play, the economic federation operates an economic science training center. In accordance with the principle of tapping potentials and doing what it is capable of, it is cooperating with relevant units to train all kinds of economic professionals for various provinces, municipalities, autonomous regions and departments throughout the country.

2. The training of all kinds of professional cadres requires teachers. At present, many of the localities and units are generally experiencing a shortage of teachers. This is an extremely acute contradiction in cadre-training work at present. If this contradiction is not resolved, it will be difficult to smoothly carry out training work, much less discuss training of all kinds of qualified professionals. To solve this contradiction, apart from continuing to rely on all kinds of schools to tap potentials, academic organizations have an undeclinable responsibilty. In this respect the economic science training center can bring its superiority of having more qualified people and higher level into play and make a greater contribution. This means that it must not only train middle-level and senior cadres, but it must also undertake the task of training "teachers."

3. The schools run by mass organizations are more flexible and diversified in form, and can fit in with the different requirements of various localities and departments. Take the economic science training center of the economic federation for example. It can run training classes (including lecture classes and study classes) as well as all kinds of symposiums. Classes can be long-term (half a year to 1 year) or short-term (10 days to half a month). The students can either be all released from production to study or study in their spare time. The classes can either be conducted jointly by the economic federation and the units concerned or by a society or another unit commissioned by the economic federation.

4. The schools run by mass organizations can get more things done without spending so much money. At present, the level of our economic development is still not very high and the amount of funds we can afford on construction is limited. In the rotational training of cadres, how to improve the economic effectiveness of our intellectual investment is a vital question. Most of the people working in mass organizations are part-time personnel, and those invited to give lectures are also doing it on a part-time basis. Apart from constructing their own training base, the mass organizations more frequently take advantage of the existing conditions of the units concerned. Just these two items alone can save a considerable amount of expense for the state. At the same time, even if a mass organization has to construct its own training base, the cost involved will still be much less than the construction of a conventional school. In short, mobilizing the mass organizations to run schools is a good method for the rotational training of cadres and is well worth mentioning. The training center run by the economic federation is a useful experiment. It has blazed a new trail that leads to the training of economic personnel for the state.

Comrade Zhao Ziyang said: "Our cause is developing and there is an urgent need for all kinds of qualified people with new professional knowledge. The success of the rotational training of cadres and the improvement in the ability of cadres will surely enable our cause to develop better and faster, and the effect produced as a result of this is inestimable." We believe that by adopting diversified forms, adhering to the mass line, giving play to the enthusiasm of various experts, scholars and professionals in all academic organizations and devoting a certain amount of energy to this social work so useful to the people, we will certainly be able to make a greater contribution in the rotational training of cadres which is a major task of strategic significance.

JIEFANGJUN BAO CITES PLA UNITS' STUDY OF MAO

OW140526 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2230 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] The 14 May JIEFANGJUN BAO prominently displays on its front page a news item reporting that a certain division of the Lanzhou PLA units summed up and popularized the experience gained by six units in studying the works of Mao Zedong. The experience was to guide the study of fundamental theory by starting from the basics; to grasp the stand, viewpoint and methods in order to raise the level of integrating theory with practice rather than seeking a simple approach; and to sum up and evaluate the result of study.

NI ZHIFU, KANG KEQING ATTEND MODERN COMEDY

OW132252 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1257 GMT 13 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 13 May (XINHUA) -- "Neighbors," an eight-act modern comedy staged by the drama group of Jilin municipality, Jilin Province, has captivated audiences in Beijing with its new theme and abundant human interest. The play tells the story of three families who become enemies because of trivial matters, such as paying utility bills, but whose hostilities vanish when they are linked by the marriage of their children. The play gives audiences a humorous and good lesson in socialist ethics.

After watching the play, Kang Keqing, Ni Zhifu and other comrades said that it not only gives the audience artistic enjoyment but also provides a lesson in socialist ethics.

MONTHLY RADIO, TV MAGAZINE TO BE PUBLISHED

OW080115 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 5 May 82

[Text] The ZHONGGUO GUANGBO DIANSHI [CHINA RADIO AND TELEVISION] magazine, China's first comprehensive national monthly magazine to report and comment on radio and television, will begin publication in July this year for public distribution at home and abroad. Subscriptions are now being promoted by post offices throughout the country.

The magazine will be sponsored by the Ministry of Radio and Television, edited by the editorial department of the ZHONGGUO GUANGBO DIANSHI, published by the broadcasting publishing house and distributed by the Beijing newspaper and periodical distribution bureau.

The ZHONGGUO GUANGBO DIANSHI will be characterized by its being ideological, informative and entertaining. It will be rich in content, varied in form, excellent both in writing and in pictures, and exquisitely and tastefully printed.

Its main columns will include: "Special Radio and Television Commentaries," "Radio and Television Review," "Radio Spring and Autumn" and "Television Historical Records" which will present historical facts on radio and television, "Radio and Television Personalities," "Radio and Listeners," "Television and Viewers," "Readers Forum," "Artistic Study and Appreciation," "Radio and Television Calisthenics," "International Radio and Television Window," "Radio and Television Trends," "Radio and Television Information," "Radio and Television Education" and others.

FUJIAN'S XIANG NAN REPORTS ON ECONOMIC CRIMES

OW111413 Fuzhou FUJIAN RIBAO in Chinese 1 May 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The Fujian Provincial CCP Committee held a meeting of secretaries of various prefectural and municipal CCP committees from 22 to 29 April to penetratingly study the decision taken on 13 April by the CCP Central Committee and the State Council and discuss plans for further cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic field.

The responsible comrades of various prefectural and municipal CCP committees discussed their ideological gains after studying the "decision" of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council and analyzed the situation of the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field during the past 3 months or more in the light of the spirit of the "decision." They also made some suggestions on how to implement the "decision." At the conclusion of the meeting, Comrade Xiang Nan made a summation report on behalf of the Standing Committee of the Fujian Provincial CCP Committee. It was pointed out at the meeting that the struggles against serious criminal activities in the economic field in this province during the past 3 months have achieved initial results after hard efforts made in various places. The cases of smuggling and selling smuggled goods and other criminal cases have noticeably decreased. Industrial and agricultural production is better than that of the same period last year. The entire situation is good.

The cases exposed in various localities have shown that the criminal activities in the economic field in this province are extremely serious. Most cases are of the nature of collaborating with people abroad. Some cadres have been corrupted by bourgeois ideology. They have taken part in those activities and have become captives of crimes. The struggle launched by the party Central Committee is completely correct and very timely.

The principal leading comrades of the party and government should personally handle major cases, solidly grasp them and achieve good results. In this way, the masses will realize the determination of our party in carrying out the struggle from the actions of leading comrades. The masses will also feel the momentum of the struggle from cracking down on major criminal cases. We should concentrate our strength to hit our targets, including major, big and serious cases. The leading cadres should concentrate their strength to make a breakthrough in those cases with a superior force. Under the present conditions, this struggle is one of the most practical and effective measures in consolidating the party and rectifying the style of work. We should examine cadres and leading groups through this struggle. The organizational departments should also keep up their work with this struggle.

FUJIAN CONGRESS DISCUSSES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

OW120040 Fuzhou FUJIAN RIBAO in Chinese 1 May 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The 15th session of the Standing Committee of the 5th Fujian Provincial People's Congress began discussing the "revised draft constitution of the PRC" on the afternoon of 29 April. At the end of the meeting on the afternoon of 30 April, Xiang Nan, chairman of the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, spoke. Xiang Nan said that four major tasks are facing the province at present: 1) to mobilize and organize the entire party and people of the province to discuss the "revised draft constitution of the PRC"; 2) to continuously unfold widespread activities in cracking down on serious crimes in the economic field; 3) to do a thorough job of stabilizing and checking commodity prices; and 4) to ensure the fulfillment of the state plan on grain area.

The meeting adopted two important resolutions, namely, organizing the people of the entire province to discuss the "revised draft constitution of the PRC," and extending by 1 month the period in which economic criminals may surrender themselves to the authorities in exchange for leniency. Units at all levels are urged to thoroughly fulfill these resolutions.

XINHUA RIBAO ON PUNISHING ECONOMIC CRIMINALS

OW131223 Nanjing XINHUA RIBAO in Chinese 3 May 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Master the Guidelines of the 'Decision,' Earnestly Strengthen Leadership -- a Further Discourse on Resolutely Struggling Against Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Field."]

[Excerpts] The "decision on struggling against serious criminal activities in the economic field" issued by the party Central Committee and the State Council is an extremely important document. In explicit terms it points out and scientifically analyzes the existing serious criminal activities in the economic field as well as their harmfulness, and profoundly explains the nature and significance of this struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field. It is a powerful weapon which guides us in our struggle against these activities. Every Communist Party member and state functionary should conscientiously study and strictly implement this "decision."

First, it is necessary to exercise ideological leadership, which means extensively and thoroughly studying and publicizing the "decision" and using the guidelines embodied in the "decision" to unify our thinking and understanding. Now most leading cadres correctly understand the nature and significance of this struggle and are resolved to lead it to success. However, some comrades still have problems in their thinking and understanding. Some have not fully realized the seriousness, harm and danger from criminal activities in the economic field. As they still remain in a state of paralysis, they say that "we do not belong to an open region" and "our department is an upright government office." Therefore, they only pay lip service to the struggle against criminal activities in the economic field, and accordingly fail to take prompt action. Some people have created antagonism between the struggle against criminal activities in the economic field and the policies of opening to the world market and enlivening the domestic economy. They say that "those problems are inevitable when we enliven the economy" and "the economy will not be enlivened if we struggle against criminal activities in the economic field." So these people are preoccupied with this struggle and are indecisive about how to wage it. These views and arguments are obviously wrong.

Powerful organizational measures are needed to strengthen leadershp over this struggle. While ensuring smooth progress in industrial and agricultural production, party and government leading organs at all levels should concentrate more efforts on, and successfully supervise, this struggle. It is only when they pay close attention to handling big and important cases, that they will deal telling blows at criminal activities in the economic field, promptly halt this evil trend, divide and eliminate criminal elements, reclaim those people who can still be reclaimed, isolate the very few people who doggedly refuse to repent, expose the harmfulness of criminal activities in the economic field, conduct a lively education for party members and cadres by presenting the grim facts and lessons in order to save them from corruption and degeneration, and consolidate party organizations, rectify cadres' work style and institute tight systems of management in light of the problems exposed. To handle big and important cases, it is vital that the leaders be determined and bold enough to resist disturbances, select competent cadres to bear specific personal responsibilities and thoroughly investigate cases until everything comes to light. The struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field is an important matter conforming to the wish of the party and the people. Being good at translating the party's policies into the masses' conscious actions is an art of leadership characteristic of Marxists. After carrying out study activities of their own, leading party and governemt organs at all levels should unfold large-scale activities inside and outside the party and among cadres and masses to study and publicize the "decision" of the party Central Committee and the State Council.

These study and propaganda activities should be so widespread that every household and person has a clear idea of its function. These activities should be carried out in a through manner so that the people will bear in mind the nature and significance of this struggle as well as the party's principles, policies and measures. We will definitely ensure the in-depth and sound development of this struggle if we make a success of this propaganda and educational work.

SHANGHAI LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN AGAINST CORRUPTION

OW080535 Shanghai JIEFANG RIBAO in Chinese 4 May 82 p 1

[Text] The Shanghai Municipal CCP Committee Propaganda Department issued a circular on 2 May calling for the propaganda departments of all party organs in Shanghai to conduct, among party members, cadres and the masses in the near future, publicity education against corruption by bourgeois ideas and corruption in the economic situation in accordance with the party Central Committee's and the municipal party committee's plan.

The circular pointed out: The general purpose of launching these two publicity activities is to further heighten the awareness of cadres and the masses in the communist ideology and moral standard, enable them to adhere well to the four fundamental principles and consciously boycott corruption by bourgeois ideas and strengthen their sense of being the masters of their own affairs. It is necessary to highlight the different focal points of these two publicity activities and launch the activities among different audiences. The circular said: To conduct education in the economic situation, it is necessary to proceed from the actual situation in all departments and units, and there must be no mistaking what the education is aimed at. It is necessary to link this education to the past publicity campaign on the economic situation and integrate it with the deepening of the activities to promote decorum and courtesy. It is necessary to publicize the achievements in the economic construction, the 10 principles of economic construction, the 4 guiding ideologies for the spiritual and material civilization in Shanghai and our principal tasks this year. It is necessary to contrast the present with the past and fundamentally heighten the masses' political awareness.

The circular pointed out: It is necessary to regard education against the corruption by bourgeois ideas as the key link for dealing blows at serious criminal activities in the economic sphere. It is necessary to correctly understand the serious, harmful and dangerous nature of corruption by bourgeois ideas at present. It is necessary to state clearly the general and specific policies concerning the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere. It is necessary not to launch any mass movement. It is necessary not to let everyone pass the test. It is necessary to state clearly that our party has confidence and is able and determined to carry this struggle through to the end and produce substantial results. It is necessary to call for party members, particularly leading cadres, to become firm and sober-minded Marxists who can do something worthwhile, solemnly and resolutely maintain our party's nature as the vanguard of the working class and preserve the communist purity of party members. It is necessary to publicize the necessity and correctness of carrying out the policies of opening to the world and of enlivening the domestic economy. It is necessary to take a clear-cut stand to expose and criticize a tiny minority of people who, with ulterior motives, attack our policies, spread skeptical and pessimistic words and incite discontent among some people.

The circular emphatically pointed out: At present, the publicity tasks to be fulfilled are legion. The rate of progress of the work, the characteristics of the work and the ideological level of the masses in all departments and units are not entirely the same. Therefore, when making arrangements for launching these two publicity activities, we must not demand uniformity in everything or concentrate on one thing only. We must proceed from actual conditions and make arrangements in a flexible way.

GUANGDONG COMBATS FLOOD; PLA UNITS DISPATCHED

HK140318 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] The provincial general office held an urgent meeting of responsible persons of departments concerned on 13 May to arrange and organize forces to help people in flood-stricken areas to fight the disaster, restore production and rebuild their homes. The meeting made the following decisions: 1) A group of provincial-level cadres and staff members are to be ready at all times to help ship relief materials. 2) All units concerned are to ensure that cadres are on duty around-the-clock. 3) Departments concerned should prepare relief materials in light of past experience, and also organize the necessary medical teams.

The leading organs of the army, navy and air force of the guangzhou PLA units have dispatched large numbers of personnel to Qingyuan, Sanshui and other places in the past 2 days to combat flood and carry out crash-rescue work. Guangzhou PLA units Commander Wu Kehua and other leading comrades assigned units to the disaster areas after hearing a 12 May report on the torrential rains in northwest Guangdong. Two pontoon companies of a certain unit went to Qingyuan. A certain tank regiment and a certain chemical warfare regiment sent 400 personnel with rescue equipment. A certain naval base dispatched five landing craft to the disaster areas. The air force has prepared helicopters to airdrop materials.

The torrential rains have caused the highest flood crest since liberation on the Bei River, while the Xi River has also risen rapidly. On 13 May Vice Governor Yang Deyuan and responsible comrades of provincial departments concerned and of Shaoguan and Zhaoqing Prefectures left for the frontline to direct the struggle against the flood. According to available information, 23 communes and the county seat in Qingyuan County were flooded, and over 200,000 people in the country were marooned, while 370,000 mu of farmland were inundated. The situation in Yingde County was also serious. Over 2,800 production teams were flooded, 230,000 people were marooned and 270,000 mu of farmland were inundated. Torrential rain has also fallen in recent days in Guangning, Fengkai, Huaiji and Sihui Counties in Zhaoqing Prefecture. According to incomplete statistics, over 150,000 mu of young rice plants have been inundated, 33,400 buildings have been flooded and 1,200 buildings have collapsed. Many roads and telephone lines have been cut.

According to the provincial meteorological station, the rain center has now moved to Zhanjaing Prefecture, the southern part of Zhaoqing Prefecture and Hainan Island, where heavy rain is expected 14 May. The rain will end in other parts of the province. There will be light showers 15 May. Four landslides on the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad between Boluokeng and Lianjiangkou stations in Yingde County were cleared on 13 May. However, track conditions became dangerous during the day along the 23-km section between Lidong and Pajiangkou stations. At present, 600 workers are toiling day and night to repair the tracks.

LUO TIAN ADDRESSES HAINAN POLITICAL, LEGAL WORK

HK130339 Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts] The Hainan Regional CCP Committee held a regional work conference on politics and law in Haikou from 4 to 8 May. At the conference, an analysis was made on the current situation in public security work throughout the region and arrangements were made for the severe punishment of criminals who have caused serious damage to the economy, for the continued improvement of social order and for the vigorous cracking down on the sabotage activities of criminal offenders in an effort to achieve a marked improvement in social order in our region this year and to make decisive progress in the work of politics and law.

Luo Tian, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, and (Zheng Gang), vice chairman of the regional administrative office and chairman of the regional federation of trade unions, attended the session. Comrade (Pan Wenhua), deputy director of the regional politics and law commission and head of the regional public security bureau, relayed the guidelines of the provincial conference of directors of political and legal work. Comrade Luo Tian spoke at the session. In his speech, Comrade Luo Tian set forth the tasks for May, June and July:

First, we must pay close attention to the struggle against serious crimes in the economic field and do a really good job of investigation, preliminary trial, prosecution and trying of cases.

Second, we must continue to implement the policy of severe and quick punishment, persist in cracking down on the sabotage activities of counterrevolutionaries and criminal offenders and pay close attention to the investigation and solution of cases, especially the major ones.

Third, it is necessary to make headway in the work of comprehensive management of social order and achieve new results. With regard to these cities, towns, communes, brigades, vital communications lines and public places where social order has been thrown into confusion, it is necessary to concentrate time and effort on their consolidation one by one.

Fourth, we must consolidate grassroots public security organizations, strengthen internal security and order and educate, reform and redeem the youths who have violated the law.

Fifth, we must, in the course of the struggle, consolidate the ranks in political and legal work, improve the ability to struggle and make efforts to do a good job of political and legal work. It is necessary, in conjunction with the work to consolidate party and government organizations at the grassroots level, to set up and strengthen public security and mediation organizations and bring into play their role as a mainstay in defending social order.

CHEN PIXIAN AT HUBEI COMMENDATION MEETING

HK130635 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Summary] On the morning of 12 May, the Hubei Provincial CCP Committee and People's Government held a commendation meeting for the activists and advanced units in "five stresses and four beauties." Attending the opening ceremony were Chen Pixian, Han Ningfu, Wang Pin, Xue Tan, Huang Zhizhen and other responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's congress standing committee, people's government and CPPCC. Also present were Commander Zhang Caiqian, Li Chengtang and Yan Zheng of the Wuhan PLA units. Deputy Secretary Xue Tan of the provincial CCP committee presided over the oepning ceremony.

Han Ningfu, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and governor, made an opening speech at the meeting. After offering his congratulations on behalf of the provincial CCP committee and people's government, Comrade Han Ningfu said: "Since the 'five stresses and four beauties' activities were launched in our province, a burst of revolutionary spirit has been spurred among the people. Our party members, cadres and the broad masses of people have further seen the strength of our party and the prosperous future of our socialist country. They have further enhanced their confidence in doing well in improving the party work style, social atmosphere and social order and have further strengthened their determination and courage in socialist modernization." "Building up a high level of socialist material and spiritual civilization" Comrade Han Ningfu pointed out, "is a magnificent and strategic task of social modernization. Meanwhile, building socialist spiritual civilization is also the fundamental guarantee for our adherence to the socialist road and realization of the four modernizations. I hope all you representatives at this meeting will maintain your efforts in playing your part as models and the vanguard so that your fine deeds will be taken as good examples to follow throughout our province. I hope all of you will offer your best advice and suggestions on how to thoroughly carry out the 'five stresses and four beauties' activities so that we may score greater successes in building socialist spiritual civilization in our province and make new contributions in this field."

SICHUAN MEETING HEARS REPORT ON LIU-ZHANG CASE

HK140155 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial in Mandarin 2300 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] The 15th session of the Sichuan Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee held a full session on 13 May. (Jiang Zeping), director of the provincial finance department, delivered a report on the province's final accounts for 1981. (Zhao Lisan), vice president of the provincial higher people's court, gave a report on the situation in combating serious economic crimes. (Gao Zhenzhong), provincial deputy procurator, reported on the work of the procuratorates at all levels in combating such crimes. (Sun Peiyu), deputy director of the provincial public security department, reported on similar work in the public security departments.

"During the meeting, provincial deputy procurator (Wang Shanguo) gave a written report on prosecution work in the counterrevolutionary case of Liu Jeiting and Zhang Xiting. Provincial people's court President Zhang Ziyang gave a written report on sentencing this case. The report said: From 6 to 20 March this year, the provincial higher people's court held an open trial of Liu Jieting and Zhang Xiting according to law. The court confirmed that the criminals Liu and Zhang seized the opportunity afforded by the disorder during the Great Cultural Revolution, followed the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques and committed the crimes of conspiring to overthrow the government, carrying out counterrevolutionary propaganda and agitation and slandering and framing people. In light of the facts of the crimes of Liu and Zhang, the nature and seriousness of their crimes, the degree of harm they did to society and the criminal responsibility they bear, and in accordance with the relevant provisions of the criminal law, the court sentenced the renegade Liu Jieting to 20 years' imprisonment and 5 years' deprivation of political rights, and sentenced the renegade Zhang Xiting to 17 years' imprisonment and 5 years' deprivation of political rights.

"After the sentences were pronounced, the criminals Liu and Zhang refused to submit. Under the pretext that 'it is a problem of understanding, and an error, not a crime,' they appealed to the Supreme People's Court. The Supreme People's Court confirmed that the sentences pronounced by the Sichuan Provincial Higher Perople's Court on the criminals Liu and Zhang were correct and in accordance with the ironclad evidence [words indistinct]. The appeals of Liu Jieting and Zhang Xiting were rejected and the sentences were confirmed. They have now been handed over to the public security organs to serve their sentences.

"With regard to the counterrevolutionary case of Deng Xingguo, Huang Lian and Zhou Jiayu, the Chengdu and Chongqing Intermediate People's Courts held an open trial of these three before the trial of the criminals Liu and Zhang. Renegade Deng Xingguo was sentenced to 18 years' imprisonment and deprived of political rights for 5 years. The renegade Huang Lian was sentenced to 18 years' imprisonment and deprived of political rights for 5 years. The renegade Zhou Jiayu was sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment and deprived of political rights for 5 years."

The 13 May meeting was presided over by Li Linzhi, vice chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee.

SICHUAN INSPECTS POLICIES ON INTELLECTUALS

HK130407 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandrin 2300 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] According to SICHUAN RIBAO, a provincial CCP committee group for inspecting work concerning intellectuals has been set up to review the implementation of policies on intellectuals. The group's seven subgroups are now setting out for the prefectures and municipalities and the provincial organs to carry out inspections. Provincial CCP committee Secretary Xu Mengxia is leader and provincial CCP committee standing committee member An Faxiao deputy leader of the group.

In accordance with the spirit of the Central Committee's instructions, this inspection work is aimed at further correcting leftist influence and other muddled concepts, solving leftover problems of miscarriages of justices concerning intellectuals, making proper arrangements for intellectuals' work, study and daily life, fully mobilizing their activism and bringing their role into full play in national life and all work. They should be regarded as political equals, boldly employed in work and cared for in daily life. The main targets of the inspection are high-ranking intellectuals and middle-aged professional and technical backbone elements such as lecturers, assistant researchers and engineers. Outstanding problems among ordinary intellectuals are also to be inspected.

The provincial CCP committee has demanded that, in carrying out its work, each inspection group seek the views of the intellectuals in addition to listening to reports, and solve problems while conducting the inspection.

SICHUAN'S TAN QILONG VISITS NANCHONG 13 MAY

HK140221 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] On 13 May, Sichuan Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Tan Qilong visited two brigades along the Jialing River that suffered severely in last year's floods in Nanchong Prefecture. He was accompanied by (Liu Chunfu), first secretary of the prefectural CCP committee. Tan Qilong observed the situation in rebuilding houses and the progress of spring farmwork, and expressed satisfaction with the results of self-salvation through production.

YUNNAN PLA UNITS TO DISCUSS DRAFT CONSTITUTION

HK120737 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 11 May 82

[Summary] Over the past few days, the CCP Committee of the Kunming PLA units has seriously discussed the draft of the revised constitution and urged all PLA units to grasp discussion of the draft of the revised constitution as a major matter. The CCP Committee of the Kunming PLA units held that the discussion of the draft of the revised constitution is a major matter in the political life of the people.

Hu Ronggui, deputy political commissar, said: The draft of the revised constitution seriously sums up both positive and negative experiences since the founding of the country, reflects the party's correct principles and policies laid down since the third plenary session and lays a solid foundation for developing the country's national economy. Zhang Haitang, deputy commander of the Kunming PLA units, said: The draft of the revised constitution realistically records the fruits of the struggles of contemporary Chinese people, and formulates the state's basic system and fundamental tasks. It is a draft of a relatively complete revision and accords with the interests and desires of the people throughout the country. (Qian Jitian), vice chairman of the political department, said: The draft is of practical and far-reaching historical significance in strengthening socialist democracy, perfecting the socialist legal system, consolidating the proletarian dictatorship in our country, ensuring the smooth progress of the four modernizations and realizing the cause of the reunification of the motherland. Cha Yusheng, deputy commander said: Giving preferential treatment to the dependents of armymen is conducive to encouraging the fighters who perform their duties in the border areas and to consolidating the PLA units.

BEIJING HOLDS SYMPOSIUM ON MAO'S YANAN TALKS

OW091115 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0748 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 8 May (XINHUA) — The research department of the Beijing Federation of Literature and Art Circles, the Beijing chapter of the China Writers Association, the office for the study of literature under the Beijing Social Sciences Research Institute and the Beijing Literature and Art Society invited over 70 literary and art workers in Beijing to a symposium on the study of Comrade Mao Zedong's "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art" from 4 to 6 May.

The participants of the symposium pointed out: The "talks" enriched and developed Marxist-Leninist literary and art theory by integrating it with the realities in China. We must adhere to the basic guidelines and principles of the "Talks" and enrich socialist literary and art creation. They said: In adhering to the basic guidelines of the "Talks," we must create literary and art works reflecting the new era, the new people and the new life. There is a wide range of subjects to be dealt with in literary and art creation. However, an important task and mission facing us at present is how to portray the socialist new people. Proceeding from the realities of life, literary and art workers must strive to portray the socialist new people who work hard on the various fronts of the four modernizations. By so doing, they can bring into fuller play the social function of literary and art works and better educate and encourage the people. To this end, literary and art workers must plunge into the thick of life, go deep among the masses so that they become genuinely familiar with the realities of life and understand the masses and maintain close ties with the people.

The comrades who attended the symposium also presented some very good suggestions on promoting literary and art creation and helping the younger generation of literary and art workers to grow up healthily by intensively studying Marxist-Leninist literary and art theory and Comrade Mao Zedong's literary and art works and actively conducting regular literary and art criticism.

SHANXI RIBAO CARRIES ECONOMIC STATISTICS

HK070949 Taiyuan SHANXI RIBAO in Chinese 25 Apr 82 p 1

[Editor's note and tables: "Set Out the Facts, Add Them Up, Take a Look"]

[Text] [Begin editor's note] Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the party and government have made herculean efforts to improve the livelihood of the people by adopting a series of effective measures in the cities and countryside, such as increasing the salary of staff and workers, providing jobs for young people awaiting employment, instituting price subsidies and the reward system, raising the purchasing prices of farm and sideline products and speeding up the development of textile and other light industries. According to figures released by the provincial statistics bureau, the provincial finance department and other departments concerned, over the past 3 years, the money income of the people in the cities and countryside throughout the province has increased by a big margin, their purchasing power has increased markedly and their livelihood has improved to a very great extent. The figures listed below serve as an account book for the entire province. All cities, towns, enterprises and units have such an account book, too. When conducting education inthe economic situation, it is necessary for the party organizations at various levels to make use of facts and figures and by using the methods of settling accounts and comparison, guide the masses in figuring out the percentage of price increases and the increases in employment, salaries, rewards, savings deposits, durable consumer goods and residential housing. By calculating these figures one by one and making a comparison with the actual standards of living in the past, we will be able to free some people from doubts and misgivings so that the masses will get a better understanding of the economic situation and engage in building socialist material civilization and spiritual civilization with enhanced vigor. [end editor's note]

[Table] I

In order to improve the livelihood of the people in the cities and countryside throughout the province, the party and government has, over the 1979-81 period, allocated 3,151.85 million yuan, of which:

627.38 million yuan was spent on salary increases and bonuses for staff and workers;

324.33 million yuan was spent on subsidies for staff and workers for the price differences in nonstaple food;

648 million yuan was spent on extra investment to enable the completion of 6.49 million square meters of housing space for the staff and workers in cities and towns;

141.33 million yuan was spent as a result of tax reductions in the rural areas;

542 million yuan was spent as a result of the increase in the purchasing prices of farm and sideline products;

79.81 million yuan, which was a collection of 5 percent of the profits of the industrial and commercial enterprises in our provice, was spent on the maintenance and construction of public utilities in the cities;

233.45 million yuan was spent on subsidies for price differences in diesel oil for agricultural use, pesticide, chemical fertilizer, coal for civilian use, meat, eggs and poultry; and 554.91 million yuan was spent on the salaries of 600,000 people, for whom jobs have been provided in the cities and countryside throughout the province.

[Table] II

Increase in Urban and Rural People's Income Throughout the Province

In 1981 the total money income of the residents in the cities and towns throughout the province was 3.19 billion yuan, which was 1.1 billion yuan more than in 1978, or an increase of 52.6 percent. In 1981 the total money income of the commune members in the rural areas of the entire province was 2.44 billion yuan, which was 1.07 billion yuan more than in 1978, or an increase of 78.3 percent.

Increase in Savings Deposits Throughout the Province

By the end of 1981, the per-capita savings deposits of the people in the cities and countryside throughout the province had amounted to 66.5 yuan, which was 25.7 yuan more than in 1978, or an increase of 150 percent. Of this, the per-capita savings deposits of the residents in cities and towns was 206.7 yuan, an increase of 120 percent over the figure of 95.2 yuan in 1978; and the per-capita savings deposits of the peasants was 35.1 yuan, an increase of 150 percent over the figure of 14.1 yuan in 1978.

Increase in Purchasing Power Throughout the Province

In 1981 the total sales of social commodities of the entire province amounted to 6.09 billion yuan, an increase of 42.2 percent over the figure of 4.28 billion yuan in 1978. If the factor of retail price increase is not considered, the actual increase was 33.6 percent, or a progressive annual increase of 10.2 percent, which was much higher than the progressive annual increase of 2 percent in the 13 years prior to 1978.

[Table] III

Rise in Consumption Level Throughout the Province

Compared with 1978, the 1981 per-capita consumption of the people in the cities and countryside throughout the province for major daily consumer goods was as follows:

	1981 Per-Capita Consumption		Per-Capita Comparison Between 1981 and 1978
	Cities & Towns	Rural Areas	Cities & Towns	Rural Areas
Grain	519 jin	506 jin	plus 9.6 jin	plus 48 jin
Edible oil	13.42 jin	2.59 jin	plus 6.56 jin	plus 1.35 jin
Pork	32.36 jin	5.44 jin	plus 1.22 jin	plus 1.70 jin
Sugar	13.80 jin	3.46 jin	plus 1.90 jin	plus 0.33 jin
Fresh eggs	7.04 jin	2.00 jin	plus 2.37 jin	plus 0.38 jin
Cotton cloth	23.15 feet	21.78 feet	plus 2.09 feet	plus 3.59 feet
Chemical fiber cloth	5.83 meters	2.03 meters	plus 4.26 meters	plus 0.83 meters
Matches	20.29 boxes	19.55 boxes	plus 4.58 boxes	plus 6.17 boxes
Soap	12.18 bars	1.82 bars	plus 0.60 bars	plus 0.23 bars
Coal	616 jin	505 jin	plus 7 jin	plus 57 jin

[Table] IV

Over the past 3 years, the people in the cities and countryside throughout the province have not only increased their consumption of major consumer goods, but also purchased many valuable durable consumer goods.

	Quantity Purchased in 1981	Quantity Purchased in 1978	1981 Growth Over 1978
Bicycles	510,000	368,000	39 percent
Sewing machines	330,000	140,000	140 percent
Wristwatches	723,000	403,000	79.4 percent
Radios	752,000	328,000	130 percent

Of the "four main items" of durable consumer goods in the people's possession, over 35 percent have been purchased in the past 3 years. Of the durable consumer goods in the people's possession, such as TV sets, tape recorders, washing machines, record players, electric fans, big wardrobes, sofas and writing desks, over 80 percent have been purchased in the past 3 years.

JILIN'S QIANG XIAOCHU INSPECTS YANBIAN COUNTIES

HK130606 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 8 May 82 p 1

[Report: "Jilin Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Qiang Xiaochu Carries Out Investigation in the Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture"]

[Text] In March and April, Jilin Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Qiang Xiaochu spent more than 20 days in various counties of the Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture, such as Dunhua, Hunchun, Helong, Antu and Wangqing as well as in the municipalities Yanji and Tumen. He went down to these places in order to make a firsthand investigation, modestly learn from cadres at all levels, the masses of people and model workers and consult with cadres at the grassroot level to work out some concrete measures for speeding up economic construction in these places.

The Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture in Jilin Province is a beautiful place and also abundant in natural resources. During this trip, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu paid a special visit to the family of poor elderly peasant Jin Zaizhu, whom Premier Zhou Enali once called on during his earlier visit to the Yanbian area. Grandpa Jin, now 70 years old, lives in Xinfeng brigade of Changbai commune on the outskirts of Yanji municipality. Comrade Qiang Xiaochu, sitting on a kang, with the stove burning cheerfully, chatted with Grandpa Jin, who told Comrade Qiang Xiaochu with delight: "Over the past few years, the people's livelihood in the Yanbian area has improved considerably. In 1981, commune members received an average of 169 yuan from the annual distribution of collective income. With the addition of a sum of 130 yuan earned from household sideline production, the total income of each commune member was about 300 yuan annually. This is almost double that before the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee."

Changbaishan is rich in forest resources. In recent years, numerous advanced examples have appeared on the production front. The Dahinggou forestry bureau is one of these examples. This bureau has made progress in improving economic results, as it knows that felling trees must be coupled with afforestation. In the past few years, the bureau's workers fell about 100,000 cubic meters of timber every year, but they simultaneously afforested a total area of 18,000 mu. They can now cut trees in rotation, as good forest regeneration has already begun. On this, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu pointed out: "It is worth popularizing this experience. If the 17 forest industry bureaus of our province can follow the lead of the Dahinggou forestry bureau, the unrealized wish of Premier Zhou Enlai will come true: 'The more trees that are cut, the more that will be planted. A verdant forest will always last; it will benefit us forever.'"

In Wangqing County, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu listened closely to the people's opinions and suggestions. When he found out that some people collected pine cones by chopping the branches off pine trees, though last year was a good year for pine cones, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu seriously pointed out: "Isn't this killing the goose that lays the golden eggs? This kind of action must be checked at once." Comrade Qiang Xiaochu, wherever he went, often emphatically said that we must protect natural resources, develop them and make use of them scientifically. He also pointed out that as long as we can do well in these three respects, we will have an inexhaustible, natural "bank."

With a view to strengthening the unity of national minorities, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu, and First Secretary Xhao Wanqi of the Yanbian Korean Autonomous Prefecture went out of their way to visit Liangzhong brigade of Liangbing commune in Antu County, where they were invited to visit some new-type houses which are designed with a special combination of Korean and Han architecture. After that, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu said: "I hope all of us will treasure the unity of all nationalities as we treasure our own eyes so as to get rid of all the feelings of estrangement left over from the 10 years of political turmoil. We should not say anything which does not help unity, nor should we do anything which is harmful to unity. Thus, the unity of all nationalities can be further cemented."

When talking with grassroots cadres, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu said time and again: "Promises must be kept and actions resolutely taken." He also pointed out to them: After conveying directives issued by the central authorities to the masses of people, we must follow up on their implementation. When people raise problems, if we can solve them, we must do so at once; if we cannot tackle them for the time being, we must forward them to the authorities concerned for further study. In a word, we should not refuse to solve problems, we should not be dilatory in solving problems and we should not pigeonhole them.

JILIN STATISTICAL BUREAU ISSUES COMMUNIQUE

SK130840 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] JILIN RIBAO on 13 May carried on page two a communique issued by the provincial statistical bureau on the province's fulfillment of the 1981 economic plans. In 1981 our province implemented the principle of further readjusting the national economy and scored new achievements after strenuous efforts. We reaped a bumper agricultural harvest and succeeded in continuously improving the principal relations between different sectors in the national economy and made steady progress in production and construction in the course of the readjustment. Calculated in terms of constant prices in 1980, the total output value of industry and agriculture was 19.14 billion yuan, an increase of 2.7 percent over the previous year. According to a preliminary calculation, the national income was 9.17 billion yuan, an increase of 2 percent over the previous year if calculated in terms of constant prices in 1980.

On the basis of developing production, we have enlivened the urban and rural markets, increasingly developed foreign trade and continuously improved the people's livelihood. The existing principal problems are that most enterprises obtain very poor economic returns, the supply of consumer goods cannot keep pace with the growth of the people's purchasing power and some commodities are stockpiled.

The communique concretely introduced the implementation of the economic plans by the provincial departments in 10 areas, including agriculture, industry, capital construction, traffic, and posts and telecommunications, domestic commerce, foreign trade and tourism, science and technology, education and culture, public health and physical culture, and the people's livelihood and population.

LIAONING'S LI DESHENG CONGRATULATES NURSES

SK090256 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] On the eve of international nurse's day, which falls on 12 May, the Shenyang PLA units held a ceremonial meeting of representatives of advanced nursing units and outstanding nurses. Leading comrades of the Shenyang PLA units conferred honors [words indistinct] on 84 nurses for their hard work in serving wounded and ill soldiers. Also awarded were 20 advanced nursing units. Commander Li Desheng and Political Commissar Liao Hansheng, who were on an inspection tour, sent a congratulatory telegram to them.

Many units under the Shenyang PLA units regard the selection of outstanding nurses through public appraisal as a good form for educating the nurses in loving and setting their minds on nursing work. These hospitals began if-I-were-a-patient and quality-nursing-month activities.

GANSU'S FENG JIXIN ATTENDS PUBLIC SECURITY RALLY

SK131354 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 13 May 82

[Excerpt] According to our reporter (Ting Chongyu), the third provincial rally of representatives of advanced units and workers on the public security front, sponsored by the provincial people's government, opened this morning at the auditorium of the provincial people's government. Attending the rally were 390 representatives of advanced units and workers on the public security front hailing from various localities across the province and over 800 public security cadres and policemen of provincial and municipal public security departments in Lanzhou municipality.

The rally was presided over by Wang Bingxiang, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor of the province. Also present at the rally were responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee and the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, including Feng Jixin, Sun Runhua and Liu Lanting; Wu Sihong, president of the provincial higher people's court; Wang Guo, chief procurator of the provincial people's procuratorate; and responsible comrades of departments concerned at the provincial level.

Quan Zhengshu, director of the provincial public security office, delivered a report entitled "Strive To Build a Public Security Contingent Which Is Loyal to the Party and the People and Has Fighting Capacity." He said: The purpose of this rally is to commend a number of advanced units and individuals on the public security front, establish examples to be learned from and arouse the enthusiasm and creativity of the broad masses of public security cadres, policemen and security guards to work for and defend the four modernizations.

GANSU PROVINCE HIT BY COLD WAVE, RAIN, FROST

SK130904 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] According to a provincial meteorological department, affected by cold air from Siberia in the Soviet Union, the province has had cold and rainy weather for several days. On 10 and 11 May, average daily temperatures dropped 10 to 13 degrees in the three prefectures west of the Huang He. Temperatures in the central and east parts of the province dropped 7 to 10 degrees. Early in the morning on 12 May, the three prefectures to the west of the Huang He, the central part of the province and the north part of Tianshui Prefecture experienced the lowest temperatures, measuring from -1 to -7 degrees, and were hit by severe frost. Early in the mornings of 10,11 and 12 May, rain and snow fell throughout the province. There were heavy snow and blizzards in the three prefectures to the west of the Huang He, Gannan Tibetan Autonomous Prefecture and the central province, as well as some places in the eastern part of the province.

Such cold and rainy weather is seldom seen in the province in May. It has affected industrial and agricultural production. Most crops and trees in the three prefectures west of the Huang He and in central and eastern parts of the province were damaged by the frost.

It is forecast by a meteorological department that early in the mornings of 13 and 14 May, the three prefectures to the west of the Huang He, Pingliang and Qingyang Prefectures and north Dingxi Prefecture will be hit by severe frost. Except for southern areas of the province, other areas throughout the province will be hit by frost. Various areas should pay attention to this.

QINGHAI'S LIANG BUTING AT BASKETBALL EVENT

SK140234 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts] According to our sources, the Xining zonal tournament of the 1982 first-phase national youth basketball event successfully concluded on the evening of 12 May. In this tournament, winners of the men's teams, from first to fourth places, were Sichuan, Shaanxi, Xinjiang and Gansu provincial and autonomous regional delegates; winners of the women's teams were Sichuan, Xinjiang, Shaanxi and Gansu provincial and autonomous regional delegates.

According to the rules of this national youth basketball tournament, both Qinghai provincial men's and women's teams were eliminated. Both men and women champions and runners-up in this zonal tournament are qualified to join the second phase tournament to be held in Chaozhou, Guangdong Province, and Guilin, Guangxi Autonomous Region, this June.

Watching the final matches of this tournament last evening were leading comrades from the provincial party and government organs, including Liang Buting, Zhao Haifeng, Song Lin, Ma Wanli, Shen Ling, Xu Linfeng and Banmadanleng.

WANG ENMAO STRESSES NATIONALITY UNITY, POLICIES

HK120620 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 3 May 82

[Summary] When inspecting work in southern Xinjiang recently, regional CCP committee First Secretary Wang Enmao stressed: "The party organizations and governments throughout the region must resolutely implement the party's nationality policies, do a good job in nationality unity work, strengthen the unity of nationalities and further consolidate and develop the political situation of stability and unity in the region so as to win victory in the socialist modernization drive." Comrade Wang Enmao visited some 26 municipalities and counties, regimental farms of the production and construction corps, PLA units, and factories and other units in southern Xinjiang, to find out about the situation in nationality unity and publicize the nationality policies. He met representatives of various units in Kashi Prefecture and municipality that have done well in promoting nationality unity. He was glad to see the great improvement in nationality unity in southern Xinjiang over the past half year.

Comrade Wang Enmao said, during his visits: "The key to implementing the party's nationality policies, promoting nationality relations and strengthening nationality unity lies in the leadership, not in the masses. As long as the leaders, especially the principal leading comrades, of the party organizations and government at all levels truly attach importance to implementing the party's nationality policies and promoting good relations among the nationalities, we will certainly be able to strengthen the unity of nationalities." He said: "The party's nationality policies include carrying out social reforms in the minority-nationality areas, developing minority-nationality [word indistinct] culture, recruiting minority-nationality party members, promoting minority-nationality cadres, respecting minority-nationality areas, regarding all nationalities as equals and so on." The party policies represent the interests of the people of all nationalities. "As long as the entire country pursues the interests of the fraternal nationalities and does not violate them, we will be able to promote good relations among nationalities and strengthen nationality unity."

He said: "We must resolutely believe that the great majority of the cadres and people of all nationalities are good and that there are only a very few bad people and counter-revolutionaries. Since I have worked for some 29 years in Xinjiang, I have developed (?deep affection for) the people of all nationalities in the region and got to know their [words indistinct]. The people of all nationalities in Xinjiang are hard-working and brave [words indistinct]. They love the party, the motherland and socialism, uphold the unity of the motherland and the unity of nationalities." Comrade Wang Enmao also pointed out: We must regularly and extensively publicize the party's nationality policies and conduct education in nationality unity. "We must vigorously commend people who uphold the unity of the motherland and promote the unity of nationalities, and punish according to state laws people who sabotage that unity."

XINHUA SCORES ACTIVITIES OF TAIWAN SECRET SERVICE

Commentator's 'Stern Warning'

OW140502 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0018 GMT 14 May 82

["'A Stern Warning to Taiwan's Secret Service,' by XINHUA commentator"-- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (XINHUA) -- As the people of all nationalities throughout the country are doing their utmost for the great cause of reunifying the motherland, and as a relaxed atmosphere appears over the Taiwan Strait, it is noted that the secre service of Taiwan is still playing a very despicable role in disregard of national righteousness. The Taiwan secret service is spreading various rumors, trying its best to sow dissension and instigating and masterminding counterrevolutionary activities in its vain attempt to create disorder on the Chinese mainland. For example, in the wake of the counter-revolutionary explosion accident at the Beijing railway station in October 1980, the Taiwan secret service, gloating over this misfortune, clamored that "bomb assaults should be launched" and "trains and automobiles should be bombed." It also openly encouraged the extremely few counterrevolutionaries and those who desire to stir up trouble to engage in unrighteous and injurious acts. Moreover, it dispatched special agents directly to the motherland to carry out subversive and undermining activities detrimental to the safety of our state and society. We must deal seriously with this matter.

It should be sternly pointed out that these criminal acts carried out by Taiwan's secret service are diametrically opposed to the will of the people. The return of Taiwan to the motherland and the realization of peaceful reunification is the common aspiration of the people of all nationalities in the country. On 30 September 1981 Ye Jianying, chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, made a statement on this in an interview with XINHUA; subsequently, Hu Yaobang, chairman of the CCP Central Committee, delivered a speech at the meeting held by people of all circles in the capital to mark the 70th anniversary of the 1911 revolution. His speech further elaborated on the principle and policy of Taiwan's return to the motherland and the realization of peaceful reunification. This major policy decision fully conforms with the fundamental interests of the people of all nationalities in our country, including our compatriots in Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao and the Overseas Chinese. We are always consistent and persistent in dealing with the cause of peacefully reunifying the motherland. Recently, the NPC Standing Committee decided to leniently release all former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and special agents below the county and regimental levels held in custody. This was another major step taken in the overall interest of the motherland's reunification. Open and aboveboard, we communists refuse to do anything harmful to the great cause of reunifying the motherland. We welcome any atmosphere appearing in Taiwan that is favorable to the peaceful reunification of the motherland. As for the words and deeds of the Taiwan authorities persisting in the state of division, opposing communism and rejecting the peace proposal, we have been disappointed, but have invariably taken an attitude of restraint. We enthusiastically welcome the people of all circles in Taiwan to come to the motherland, either to visit their relatives and friends or to sightsee. We will even receive with this same enthusiasm the secret service personnel without considering their old wrongs or settling their old accounts. We will ensure their freedom to come and go and their safety as long as they are not coming to the mainland to engage in secret service work, espionage and subversion, which are detrimental to the safety of our country. It is a well-known fact that we have always attached importance to national righteousness. However, in no way can we allow Taiwan's secret service to send its special agents to the mainland to carry out such acts as forming ties to mastermind rebellion, stealing secrets, killing people and setting fires. We can never allow instigating and undermining through radio broadcasts or other media. Here we want to sternly warn the Taiwan authorities: By using the activities of the secret service, you can get nowhere. We need not go back too far. After the founding of new China, did you not send a large number of special agents here? What was the outcome?

The lesson is not old, and you should conduct yourselves with dignity. Today, if you want to send new political garbage to the mainland with the dream of subverting and undermining the people's democratic political power and the socialist cause of the great motherland and obstructing its peaceful reunification, you are bound to meet with no good end.

The criminal law of our country states that any acts which jeopardize the People's Republic of China for the purpose of overthrowing the political power of the dictatorship of the proletariat and overthrowing the socialist system, including homicide, arson, explosions and other secret service activities committed at the instigation of Taiwan's secret service or hostile forces abroad, are counterrevolutionary offenses and should be punished as such. We have always carried out a policy of combining punishment with leniency in dealing with special agents and counterrevolutionaries. For those who have voluntarily confessed their actions and surrendered to police, we give only lenient treatment, reduce or even exempt their criminal penalties according to law. We give encouragement and rewards to those who reform meritoriously. As regards those elements who cling to their wrong course without repentance and are active in criminal activities, we resolutely deal with them according to law and severely punish them without fail. No special agent, counterrevolutionary element or other criminal offender vainly attempting to create disorder and undermine the stability and unity of our country can escape the punishment of the state law.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, a political situation marked by unprecedented stability and unity has appeared on the motherland as a result of our efforts to eliminate chaos and restore order. The people of all nationalities throughout the country are working hard with one mind to build China into a modern, powerful socialist country with a high level of democracy and culture. The broad masses of young people love the Chinese Communist Party and the socialist motherland warmly and are advancing with vigor and vitality. They study hard, observe discipline, abide by the law and take the initiative to safeguard the political situation of stability and unity and the good social order. They represent the future of our country and the hope of our people. If Taiwan's secret service wants to use our young generation, it is purely wishful thinking. Every citizen of our socialist motherland not only fully enjoys his democratic rights protected by the Constitution and law, but also has the duty to struggle against any criminal act detrimental to the security, honor and interests of the motherland. The citizens of the motherland will continue to heighten their revolutionary vigilance, make a clear distinction between right and wrong and wage a persistent and unremitting struggle against the lure, deception and corruption of Taiwan's secret service and hostile forces abroad.

The situation of stability and unity on the motherland brooks no disruption, and the socialist legal system of our country brooks no violation. If Taiwan's secret service remains stubborn and still clings to its own course, and if any special agents, spies and counterrevolutionaries dare to defy the law, they will, without exception, be shattered to smithereens before the steel wall built by the people of all nationalities in the country.

Successes Against Agents Noted

OW140618 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0042 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (XINHUA) -- Our public security organs have cracked a number of cases involving Kuomintang special agents in recent years. The special agents sent by the Taiwan authorities to engage in sabotage on the mainland were nabbed one after another and punished according to state law.

To sabotage our four modernizations and obstruct the peaceful reunification of our motherland, the Kuomintang secret service organ on Taiwan has been sending special agents to the mainland by various means in recent years in an attempt to carry out bombings, assassinations, the collection of intelligence and other criminal activities.

The Taiwan secret service has also organized a so-called "anticommunist shock brigade" in an attempt to smuggle explosives, guns and ammunition into the mainland. These activities were dealt staggering blows by our public security organs. Special Agent Zhang Lan [1728 1526] was sent by Taiwan last March to sneak into the mainland with forged documents in order to build a secret service organization, collect intelligence and set up a radio station. While in the mainland, he recruited two more special agents. They sent coded messages to Taiwan secret service organs and planned to conceal themselves over a long period. Zhang Lan and the others were arrested and brought to justice by our public security organs after a thorough investigation.

In recent years, Kuomintang special agents who sneaked into the mainland by sea were captured in some places along our coastal regions on a number of occasions. All those captured special agents received assignments for gathering intelligence, setting up secret service organizations and engaging in anticommunist propaganda; some attempted to carry our assassinations and blow up bridges, railways and other public facilities. Special Agent Liu Wenguang [0491 2429 0342], who sneaked into the mainland by sea, was captured by our public security organs on the spot with criminal evidence such as guns, ammunition and money for operations.

Our public security organs were greatly helped by the people in capturing these special agents. Many people took the initiative of reporting to the public security organs whenever they found something suspicious. As a result, some of the special agents were caught by a dragnet as soon as they set foot on the mainland. Some people even waged a resourceful struggle against the Taiwan special agents. Fearful of the power of the people's democratic dictatorship and inspired by the policies of the people's government, some of the special agents turned themselves in after sneaking into the mainland when they realized they were deceived by the propaganda spread by the Taiwan authorities. All Taiwan special agents captured were put on trial. Those who made a clean breast of their crimes and those who turned themselves in received lenient treatment from the government.

DELEGATION HEAD IN JAPAN COMMENTS ON TAIWAN

OW131846 Beijing XINHUA in English 1830 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, May 13 (XINHUA) -- Zhou Peiyuan, vice-chairman of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, stressed today that Taiwan is part of China's territory and the Taiwan issue is China's internal affair which can only be solved by the leaders and people on both sides of the Taiwan Straits. He made these remarks at a reception given in the honor of the visiting delegation of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference by the Tokyo Association of Chinese Residents.

Zhou Peiyuan, who is also the leader of the visiting delegating, said that the government and people of the motherland think of the people in Taiwan. [sentence as received] The message to the compatriots in Taiwan issued by the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress on New Year's Day 1979, the message to the compatriots in Taiwan issued by the National Pec le's Consultative Conference on Spring Festival, the nine-point-proposal put forward by National People's Congress Chairman Ye Jianying and the initiative outlined by Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party Hu Yaobang are guiding line and basic policy for the realization of the peaceful reunification. They are fully in the interest of the Chinese nation as a whole and are conducive to peace in the Far East and the world, he added.

Zhou Peiyuan said that the Chinese people firmly oppose any move to interfere in China's internal affairs and undermine its efforts for peaceful reunification. The compatriots in Taiwan, he added, like the people of all nationalities, oppose the plots of "two Chinas", "one China, one Taiwan" and "independence of Taiwan." He also said the Taiwanese compatriots are eager to see the reunification of the motherland and have a reunion with their relatives on the mainland.

Kan Wen-fang, chairman of the Tokyo Association of Chinese Residents, in his toast called on Chinese residents in Japan to enhance their "bridge role" and help facilitate Taiwan's return to the motherland.

The Chinese delegation met Hajime Fukuda, speaker of the House of Representatives, on May 12 and Masatoshi Tokunaga, president of the House of Councillors, on May 13. The two sides agreed to make more efforts for promoting friendly and cooperative ties between China and Japan.

PRC, TAIWAN PLAY IN HONG KONG TENNIS TOURNEY

OW121538 Beijing XINHUA in English 1508 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Hong Kong, May 12 (XINHUA) -- The five-day hard-court tennis invitational championships began here today.

Competitions are being held in the men's and women's singles and doubles, with 65 players from Burma, China, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, South Korea, Macao, host Hong Kong and China's Taiwan participating. The Chinese tennis team includes two men and four women players.

PAPERS ASSESS RESULTS OF BUSH VISIT TO BEIJING

LIAN HO PAO Article

OW140413 Taipei LIAN HO PAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 2

[Text] (Special dispatch from Washington) -- U.S. Vice President Bush made a visit to Peiping, but rather grudgingly. It appears that Bush failed to defuse the so-called "time bomb" between Washington and Peiping. He held talks with the Peiping authorities for several days, but both sides' stands remained the same. Peiping did not withdraw or modify its previous remarks on the question of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, and Bush was not authorized to make any concessions in this regard.

Strictly speaking, the purpose of Bush's visit was to "show due respect for Peiping's feelings." He did not take with him any new proposals for ironing out the differences between the two sides over U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. The Chinese communists seem to have known the United States was "showing due respect for their feelings." For this reason, the Chinese communists did not warmly receive Bush, but cold-shouldered him. Bush, who "went to court" in Peiping after a long journey, was soft spoken and seemingly submissive.

At the beginning, Peiping treated this extra arrangement in Bush's visit to East Asia coldly. After the United States announced its sale of $60 million worth of military-related spare parts to Taiwan, the Chinese communists tried to find an excuse to back down with good grace. They swallowed the insult and did not downgrade the level of their relations with the United States. Peiping's reaction made the United States feel relieved for the time being. However, the United States was still worried lest there be a relapse of the old illness. Naturally, they wanted to let Bush visit Peiping to listen to complaints and placate Deng Xiaoping and company while visiting East Asia.

Of course, allowing Bush to visit Peiping was a brilliant stroke of the Reagan administration. Bush, who served as head of the U.S. Liaison Office in Peiping, knows a number of bigwigs there. During the 1980 presidential campaign, Reagan made many remarks unpleasant to the Chinese communists. Then, Peiping released a torrent of abuse against Reagan about which the Reagan camp felt uneasy. At that time, it was Bush, Reagan's campaign partner, who received orders to go to Peiping to solve this problem.

Judging from some of his public statements, Bush may be more willing than Reagan to yield to Peiping's demands, or not as willing as Reagan to hurt its feelings. Therefore, the Reagan administration thought that sending Bush to Peiping to placate it and show due respect for its feelings would be more readily accepted by the Chinese communists and that they would not make him feel very embarrassed.

Having such a low profile, the Reagan administration seemed to pose neither too large nor too small a problem for Peiping. If Peiping did not accept the arrangments for Bush's visit, it might go too far. Since the Chinese communists did not downgrade the level of their relations with the United States because of the U.S. sale of military-related spare parts to Taiwan, there was, of course, no reason for them to refuse to hold consultations between the two sides at a higher level. At the same time, when the American side played this Bush card, it was difficult for the Chinese communists to refuse.

When the United States decided to make this move, it did not give the Chinese communists an opportunity to quietly reject it. When the itinerary for Bush's visit to Japan, Korea, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand was announced, the Chinese communists were still undecided as to whether to invite Bush to Peiping. However, the American press was speculating about the possibility of Bush's visit to Peiping. Moreover, Bush himself repeatedly stressed that he had always wanted to revisit Peiping, but had not yet finalized his plans. Of course, this was aimed at forcing the host to extend an invitation to him and at putting the Chinese communists on the spot.

The Chinese communists had their misgivings about Bush's visit to Peiping. If Bush brought along new proposals for discussion, the Chinese communists would naturally be glad to receive him.

Otherwise, if both sides reached another impasse, it would do Bush no good. Peiping has always regarded Bush as a piece in a future chess game. If Bush was forced into a terrible position during the visit, it would adversely affect his future political life.

By sending Bush to Peiping, Reagan showed due respect for the Chinese Communists' feelings and also hoped for stabilization from that point. On the other hand, the low profile of the United States set off the Chinese communists' rudeness and unreasonableness. In the event the two sides had to downgrade the level of their relations, it would have been possible for Reagan to shift the responsibility onto the other side in order to reduce the damage he might suffer at home. Nevertheless, the Chinese communists, succumbing to the U.S. low-profile tactics, agreed to Bush's visit to Peiping. Each side still sang its own tune. Judging from Bush's statements in Hangchow and Peiping against earlier White House statements, what he carried out was obviously a task of "showing due respect for Peiping's feelings."

First, Bush stressed that the United States has no intention of pursuing a "two Chinas" policy. He repeatedly assured the Chinese communists that the Reagan administration respects the principles set forth in the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between Washington and Peiping, that it acknowledged the "one China" stand and that Taiwan is part of China. In other words, Bush tried to placate the Chinese communists on the question of "one China" by talking about vague and general principles and reiterating that the United States would not depart from the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations.

Second, Bush's discussions with the Chinese communists centered on the question of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, but he did not put forward any new proposals, nor did he make any concessions as far as the original U.S. stand is concerned. He only promised to report to President Reagan on the Chinese communists' "firm stand."

Third, both sides will continue their "discussions" on the question of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. However, they are still deadlocked on this question.

On the pretext that the American side gave them a three-point "assurance," the Chinese communists backed down on the question of the U.S. sale of military-related spare parts to Taiwan. One of the three points is that the United States will not consider new arms sales to Taiwan while the two sides are continuing their bilateral "negotiations." However, the American side holds that the Chinese communists have misinterpreted its explanation. As to who is right and who is wrong, we must wait for future developments in this regard. According to its original plan, the U.S. Government should submit new arms sales proposals to Congress some time in the near future. If such new arms sales proposals are submitted to Congress without the reaching of an agreement in the negotiations with the Chinese communists, the relations between the United States and the Chinese communists will face a new test. If the U.S. Government does not submit new arms sales proposals to Congress, this will indicate that the Republic of China will have encountered new difficulties in purchasing arms from the United States.

Further Comment

OW131323 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] In an assessment of Vice President Bush's visit to Peking [as heard], the Chinese-language CHINA TIMES says that for the United States, it is a failure, and for Communist China, it is a victory. The paper says Washington has given a lot without gaining anything in return. Bush said before he left Peking that he has some specific ideas for solving the issue of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan.

In the opinion of the TIMES, these ideas obviously would aim at extracting more concessions from the United States by the Chinese communists. The paper also says President Reagan's pledge not to permit the unofficial relations between the American people and the free Chinese people on Taiwan to weaken U.S. commitment to the "one China" principle, and Bush's statement calling for respect for Peking's sovereignty and its territorial integrity would help further cut the Republic of China's international status and its ability to survive as a sovereign entity.

On President Reagan's statement that the United States appreciates Peking's peace overtures toward Taiwan, the paper says it indicates Washington seems to have supported the Chinese communists' so-called unification proposals. As such, the paper says, the United States has lost its capacity as a fair third party in a long standing dispute between the Republic of China and Communist China.

Meanwhile, another Chinese-language paper, the UNITED DAILY NEWS, quotes political observers in Taipei as reporting that President Reagan apparently has retreated from his previous position toward the Republic of China in order to appease Peking. The paper says those observers have ample reasons to express their deep disappointment. First, Reagan's latest stance toward the nine-point peace proposal advanced by Peking has to some extent led the United States to be involved in the so-called China problem. Secondly, it sounds logical when President Reagan said that in the context of progress toward a peaceful solution there would naturally be a decrease in the need for arms by Taiwan, but in actuality, such an assumption is a big mistake, because the Republic of China's [words indistinct] sovereignty falls within the context of Peking's nine-point peace proposal.

TAIWAN RESEARCHES MILITARY USE OF LASERS

OW250925 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 25 Apr 82

[Text] According to reports, research on military application of laser technology is proceeding extremely well in the Republic of China, and laser technology in weaponry is nearing the application stage. Work is being done on laser-aiming guidance systems, which can guarantee 100-percent accuracy, and on laser range finding systems. There has been considerable success with research in these two areas already.

Within the range of effectiveness which is reported to be about 24 kilometers, laser guidance systems can bring a weapon within 5 meters of its target. This degree of accuracy is equivalent to an ordinary rifle bullet (?homing and dying) at a distance of over 100 meters. Moreover, the laser guidance systems can guarantee consistently successful results.

Laser aiming and range-finding systems will be a big help to artillerymen. In the [words indistinct] range and [words indistinct] of the target, with a ranging system allowing the cannon to accurately aim for the first shot, there is no need for trial rounds. The aiming system can guarantee a hit on the first firing.

Laser aiming and range-finding systems won their battlefield reputation during the 6-day Arab-Israeli war in 1967, when laser-guided firing added to the devastating effectiveness of the Israeli tank corps. The systems have wide applications. In addition to howitzers, tanks and other large weapons, they can even be used in conjunction with ordinary rifles to raise the effectiveness rate in [words indistinct]. According to reports, the maximum effective range of laser aiming systems in use in the world today is 24 kilometers. The actual effective range of the Republic of China's systems has not yet been measured, but it is reported to be excellent.

TAIPEI REACTION TO REAGAN LETTERS CRITICIZED

HK131246 Hong Kong HSIN WAN PAO in Chinese 13 May 82 p 2

["New Talk" column article: "Taipei Is Wrong To Abuse Reagan's Letters"]

[Text] The spokesman of the Taipei authorities showed serious concern over the three letters which U.S. President Ronald Reagan recently wrote to Chinese leaders. According to the letters, he claimed, the United States has "overlooked our interests."

The content of the three letters was unilaterally disclosed by the United States last week when U.S. Vice President George Bush concluded his visit to Beijing. The official reports from Beijing also mentioned Reagan's letters to the Chinese leaders, saying that Premier Zhao Ziyang showed his thanks to Bush for the latter's kindness in bringing Reagan's letters. But none of the official Chinese news agencies or newspapers reported the content of the letters. Based on our analysis, the Chinese leaders think that the purpose of these letters was to elaborate Reagan's stand on and his attitutde toward Sino-U.S. relations, and thus, any other problem related to China's internal affairs should not be influenced by Reagan's stand and attitude. [sentence as published]

According to the propaganda organs of the Taipei authorities, there are three main points in Reagan's letters. First, the United States said it welcomed the nine-point proposal for the peaceful reunification of China put forth by Ye Jianying in September last year. Second, the United States declared that it would abide by its stand in the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries, and that it would never break its promise of abiding by the principle of one China, under the condition that its unofficial relations with the Taiwan people must be maintained. Third, the United States hinted that it would gradually reduce its arms sales to Taiwan if the Chinese Communists carry on their current policy of peace.

The HSIANG KANG SHIH PAO [Hong Kong TIMES] published here said that the most intolerable part of Reagan's letters is that the United States has accepted the Chinese Communists' united front propaganda." In quoting the Taipei spokesman, their newspaper even stated: "In carrying out peaceful united front work, the Chinese Communists aim solely at forcing the communist system on the 18 million people on Taiwan, Penghu, Jinmen and Mazu."

Did any point in the nine-point proposal for peaceful reunification mean to force the communist system on Taiwan, Penghu, Jinmen and Mazu? The proposal actually stated that Taiwan can be turned into a special administrative division, retaining its original system and even its armed forces. Did the Taipei spokesman not "force" his own fabriation onto the principles for peace negotiations put forth by Beijing?

One can never imagine that Reagan, being the U.S. President, will publicly agree with and appreciate the Communist system. What Reagan agreed with and appreciated in his letters was the principle for peaceful reunification of China. Is the peaceful reunification not worth being agreed with and appreciated? Should the Chinese compatriots living on the both sides of the Taiwan Straits be bound to be separated forever or to resort finally to arms?

The Taipei spokesman also asked the U.S. Government to carry out in real earnest all the stipulations of the "Taiwan Relations Act." This is even more absurd. The "Taiwan Relations Act" regards Taiwan Province as an independent political entity. How can the Taiwan authorities agree with and call for the "independence of Taiwan"?

As the representative of the U.S. Government, Reagan's stand and viewpoints are naturally different from those of the Chinese people. Therefore, of course, we cannot agree with him on certain points. But the Taiwan authorities are indeed wrong to abuse Reagan. In fact, they should neither object to the principle of one China nor oppose those who are in favor of the peaceful reunification of China. If they do, they must be regarded as aliens rather than Chinese.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 095 17 May 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

Zhao Discusses Relations With U.S., USSR A 1
U.S., Soviet Disarmament Proposals Said 'Tricks' A 2
Gu Mu Meets Hong Kong, Canadian Businessmen A 4

UNITED STATES

PRC Protests U.S. Inspection of Diplomats' Bags B 1
Further on George Bush Visit to Hangzhou B 1
[ZHEJIANG RIBAO 7 May]
Weinberger Cited on Improving U.S. Forces B 2
Kang Shien Receives U.S. Petroleum Expert 13 May B 2

SOVIET UNION

PRC To Hold Track Meet in June; USSR To Attend C 1
Nicaraguan Government Delegation Visits USSR C 1

NORTHEAST ASIA

Deng Xiaoping Meets With Japan's Hamano 17 May D 1
DPRK Friendship Delegation Continues Visit D 1
Arrival in Guilin D 1
Arrival in Shanghai D 1

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

Nguyen Co Thach Remarks on Withdrawal Scored E 1
U.S. Cited on Chemical Weapons in Kampuchea E 2
New Victims of 'Yellow Rain' Arrive in Thailand E 2
Thai Foreign Minister Says PRC Talks Satisfactory E 3

SOUTH ASIA

PRC, India Hold Second-Round Talks in New Delhi F 1
Gonsalves Cited on Talks F 1
Departure for Talks F 1
Arrival in New Delhi F 1
Gonsalves Hosts Banquet F 2
New Delhi Reportage [cross-reference] F 2

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Cape Verde President Pereira Concludes Visit I 1
Huang Hua Hosts Luncheon I 1
Deng Xiaoping Meeting I 1
Cultural Agreement Signed I 1
Zhao Bids Farewell I 2
Departure for Home I 2

WESTERN HEMISPHERE

Soviet Protest to UK on Falklands Cited J 1
PRC, Canada Sign Documents Exchange Protocol J 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Streamlining of CCP Departments Continues K 1
Initial Results Achieved K 1
Namelist of Department Heads K 2
KYODO: Noncommunists May Be Given Key Posts K 4
Article Discusses Economic Development Strategy K 5
[RENMIN RIBAO 11 May]
Status of Communes, Local Administration Viewed K 8
XINHUA Explains Rural Efforts, Economic Crimes K 9
Education Official Views Student Training Scheme K 10
Radio Stresses Communist Ideological Education K 12
Qian Xuesan Speaks at Mechanics Society Council K 13
All-Army Press Work Conference Ends in Beijing K 13
ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE on South China Sea Oil Base K 14
CAAC Director Shen Tu on Flight Safety K 16
Wan Li Accepts Honorary Tennis Chairmanship K 17
RENMIN RIBAO Carries HONGQI Table of Contents [15 May] K 17

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong Continues Fight Against Flooding P 1
Figures on Damage Cited P 1
Additional Damage Figures P 1
Death Toll Hits 349 P 2
Further Antiflood Measures P 3
Torrential Rainstorms Hit Areas in Guangxi P 3

SOUTHWEST REGION

Moscow RP&P Interviews Dalai Lama Representative Q 1
Briefs: Damage to Sichuan Crops Q 1

TAIWAN

Reaction to Bush China Visit, Reagan Letters V 1
Clarification Asked of U.S. V 1
Legislative Yuan Motion V 1
Further Details V 1
CHINA POST 11 May Editorial V 2
LIEN HO PAO 12 May Article V 3
LIEN HO PAO 12 May Editorial V 3
CHINA NEWS 15 May Editorial V 5
Chiang Addresses Government, Other Officials V 7
Chiang Said To Be Given 'Clean Bill of Health' V 7

ZHAO DISCUSSES RELATIONS WITH U.S., USSR

OW141512 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Zhao Ziyarg, premier of the State Council, met a Japanese journalists delegation headed by Yoshiro Shimizu at the Great Hall of the People on the afternoon of 14 May and was interviewed by friends in Japanese journalist circles. The Japanese journalists delegation is composed of representatives from 15 major news organizations in Japan. Premier Zhao Ziyang told the Japanese journalists that he would pay a formal visit to Japan on 31 May at the invitation of the Japanese Government.

Premier Zhao said: Over the past 10 years since the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations, the two countries have established peaceful and friendly political relations as well as equal and mutually beneficial economic relations. He said: these good relations are in line with the interests of the Chinese and Japanese people and help promote peace and stability in the Asian-Pacific areas. Prime Minister Suzuki has said that there are no differences or difficult problems between Japan and China, but only friendship and trust. I appreciate this very much. Not only must we cherish these friendly relations between China and Japan, but we should also shoulder the responsibility for continuously consolidating and developing these relations. In the current turbulent international situation, it is of great significance for us to strive to promote long and stable friendly and cooperative Sino-Japanese relations not affected by international unrest.

During my upcoming visit to Japan, I will exchange views with Prime Minister Suzuki on international issues of concern to both sides and on further promoting friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries. Zhao Ziyang said: The mutual visits between Prime Minister Suzuki and me will serve as a tremendous impetus in establishing and promoting long and stable Sino-Japanese relations of friendship and cooperation.

Dealing with Sino-U.S. relations, Zhao Ziyang said: As everyone knows, serious obstacles exist in Sino-U.S. relations. The main obstacle is the issue of continuing U.S. arms sales to China's Taiwan Province. Both sides have carried out repeated talks concerning this issue. Entrusted by President Reagan, Vice President Bush visited China a few days ago. Both sides exchanged views on this issue. The Chinese side profoundly explained its fundamental stand on U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, and Bush expressed the U.S. desire to solve this issue. These talks were beneficial and conducive to mutual understanding of this issue by both sides. Both sides agreed to continue their talks on this issue. Zhao Ziyang further said: As long as the United States strictly observes the principles set forth in the communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States, it will be possible to remove the obstacles in Sino-U.S. relations.

He said: No matter how Sino-U.S. relations develop in the future, the principles of developing friendship and cooperation between China and Japan will not change at all.

Touching on Sino-Soviet relations, Premier Zhao Ziyang said: There are major differences of principle between China and the Soviet Union. China opposes the Soviet Union's hegemonism and expansionist policy. At the same time, China's consistent stand is to maintain and develop the normal bilateral relations with the Soviet Union on the basis of the five principles for peaceful coexistence. China has always advocated that issues in the relations between the two countries should be solved through negotiation.

Zhao Ziyang said: China has taken note of the speech made by Brezhnev in Tashkent on the need to improve Sino-Soviet relations. However, China attaches importance to actual Soviet deeds on the question of Sino-Soviet relations and in international affairs.

In answering questions with regard to the draft of the revised constitution, Zhao Ziyang said: The draft of the revised constitution, which has been distributed for discussion by all the people throughout the nation, recorded the achievements of various reforms conducted since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, and reaffirmed the orientation of our reforms in the future. The draft conforms to China's actual conditions, and it is fairly good. After being discussed by all the people in the nation, this draft will be submitted to this year's Fifth Session of the Fifth National People's Congress for approval, and will become a fundamental major law in China's new historic period. He said: This fundamental major law will have great and far-reaching influences in ensuring peace and prosperity over a long period of time and in ensuring the stability and continuity of China's domestic and foreign policies.

After introducing the economic situation in China, Premier Zhao Ziyang pointed out: China has scored preliminary achievements in making its economic readjustments. The economic management system is undergoing restructuring on an experimental and exploratory basis. Various enterprises are being consolidated in an overall and planned manner. He said: Despite the fact that there still exist all kinds of difficulties on China's road of advance, our nation, generally speaking, has great prospects.

U.S., SOVIET DISARMAMENT PROPOSALS SAID 'TRICKS'

OW150347 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 May 82

[Commentary on current events: "The Soviet Union and the United States, the Two Big Nuclear Powers, Compete With Each Other in Playing New Tricks of Nuclear Disarmament"]

[Text] In his speech at his alma mater, Eureka College in Illinois, on 9 May, U.S. President Reagan systematically expounded the U.S. startegy to cope with the Soviet Union and put forward a new proposal for nuclear disarmament by the United States and the Soviet Union. Reagan proposed that the heads of state of the United States and the Soviet Union hold a meeting, that the two countries begin negotiations on the reduction of strategic nuclear weapons by the end of June and that both sides first reduce their nuclear warheads by one-third.

In his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 11 May, U.S. Secretary of State Haig said: The United States has notified the Soviet Union that it has officially abandoned the SALT II treaty and has proposed that fresh efforts be made to negotiate substantial cuts in strategic guided missiles and warheads.

This new nuclear disarmament proposal by the Reagan administration has received widespread response in the United States and among Western allies. Western public opinion holds that Reagan's new proposal is a counterattack against a peace offensive launched by Brezhnev not long ago.

In the past 20 years, the two superpowers -- The Soviet Union and the United States -- have often played tricks of nuclear negotiations and disarmament while stepping up their nuclear arms race. They have regarded nuclear disarmament as a peace smokescreen to cover up their nuclear arms expansion and nuclear negotiations as an important battlefield on which each has tried to strengthen itself, to restrain the other and to vie for nuclear superiority. Since spring of this year, Brezhnev and Reagan have personally put forward their own new proposals for nuclear disarmament. Although these proposals are very interesting superficially, they cannot conceal the real intention of the Soviet Union and the United States to vie for nuclear superiority.

When the USSR-U.S. Geneva talks on limiting intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe reached an impasse and were to be adjourned, Soviet leader Brezhnev put forward a so-called new proposal for nuclear disarmament at the congress of Soviet trade unions on 16 March. He announced that the Soviet Union had decided to unilaterally postpone the deployment of intermediate-range guided missiles in the European zone of the Soviet Union and not to replace the old-type guided missiles with new-type SS-20 guided missiles, whose range covers the whole of Western Europe. Brezhnev also hypocritically said that if the international situation does not worsen, the Soviet Union plans to reduce some of its deployed intermediate-range guided missiles of its own accord.

This freeze proposal by Brezhnev superficially seems to have expressed the Soviet Union's so-called sincerity in seeking peace. However, an analysis of the present deployment of intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe shows Brezhnev's sinister intentions. The Soviet Union was the first to deploy intermediate-range guided missiles in Europe in 1976. By the early part of this year, the Soviet Union had deployed 300 SS-20 intermediate-range guided missiles, basically achieving its original objective.

In early 1979, the United States put forward its plan for deploying in Western Europe Pershing II and cruise guided missiles whose range can reach the European territory of the Soviet Union. This plan will not be carried out until the end of 1983. In fact, the West now does not have any intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe. It can be seen from this that the Soviet Union obviously has a superiority in intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe. In this situation, the freeze proposal put forward by Brezhnev is obviously aimed at maintaining Soviet nuclear superiority and preventing the United States from carrying out its plan for the deployment of Pershing II and cruise guided missiles in Western Europe.

Brezhnev made it clear in his speech that if the West goes ahead with deploying its Pershing II and cruise missiles as planned, the Soviet arms freeze proposal will become null and void and more and newer nuclear weapons will be deployed by the Soviet Union. Brezhnev's new proposal was immediately rejected by the United States and the various West European countries on the ground that the proposal was a plan to maintain Soviet nuclear superiority.

Although the new Soviet sinister scheme on nuclear disarmament has been seen through, Brezhnev's peace offensive has catered to the antiwar sentiments of some people in Western Europe and exerted influence on the political situation in the West. Since this spring, the peace movement in Western Europe has further spread and the voice against the U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms race and even against arms expansion by the United States has grown stronger. With the spread of the antiwar campaign in the United States, a number of political figures called for a reduction in the military buildup plan and for a freeze to the U.S. and Soviet nuclear arms stockpiles. This development has badly affected Reagan's military buildup program. For this reason, Reagan put forward a proposal in early April to meet Brezhnev. The proposal was rejected by the Soviet Union, enabling Reagan to win ground in the dispute between the two countries over nuclear arms disarmament.

With a UN special session on disarmament scheduled to open soon, President Reagan will visit Western Europe in June. To improve the U.S. image in the eyes of the general public of Western Europe and the rest of the world and to calm the domestic dispute over nuclear strategy, Reagan put forward on 9 May a concrete plan for reducing the number of nuclear arms on a massive scale. According to his plan, the reduction of strategic nuclear weapons will be carried out in two stages. First, the number of nuclear warheads of the United States and the Soviet Union would be reduced by one-third. No more than half of the reduced level of warheads on both sides should be land-based. The second stage would seek a reduction of other elements of strategic nuclear weapons, including missile throw-weight at less than existing U.S. levels.

Reagan's arms reduction plan was painstakingly worked out, aimed at weakening Soviet nuclear superiority so that Soviet nuclear arms will be reduced to a level equal to that of the United States. According to an analysis by some American papers, in the present balance of strategic nuclear forces between the United States and the Soviet Union, the Soviets are ahead of the Americans in the number of land-based intercontinental missiles, which total 1,398 while the United States has only 1,025. This difference is a great threat to the United States. As for strategic nuclear submarines and strategic bombers, the United States is ahead of the Soviets, but the power of these hardware items is less than that of the land-based missiles. Thus the major goal of Reagan's new proposal is to reduce the number of the Soviet Union's land-based missiles so as to weaken the superiority the Soviets have maintained in this field of the arms stockpile. It is also intended to maintain U.S. superiority in nuclear submarines and in other elements of strategic nuclear weaponary.

It is obvious that Reagan's arms reduction plan cannot win the approval of the Soviet Union. A TASS 11 May commentary, lambasting Reagan's proposal as playing a sort of game, charged that the purpose of the proposal is to try to gain a unilateral superiority. The developments in the past few months indicate that Brezhnev's arms freeze plan and Reagan's arms reduction proposal are means by which they want to gain nuclear superiority through nuclear negotiations and by which they attack each other and whitewash themselves.

A U.S. paper said that Reagan's recent statements on nuclear arms reduction were mainly designed to address the American general public, the U.S. Congress and the leaders of Western Europe while counterattacking the Soviet peace offensives.

GU MU MEETS HONG KONG, CANADIAN BUSINESSMEN

OW141950 Beijing XINHUA in English 1651 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (XINHUA) -- Chinese State Councillor Gu Mu met and had a cordial conversation here this evening with architect Clifford C.F. Wong, managing director of the Fairview Park and Hong Lok Yuen Estates Ltd., Hong Kong, and T.C. Fei, general manager of the Canadian Overseas Development Co., Ltd.

Present were Xiao Tong, vice-minister of urban and rural construction and environmental protection, and Zhang Baifa, vice-mayor of Beijing.

The guests arrived May 12.

PRC PROTESTS U.S. INSPECTION OF DIPLOMATS' BAGS

OW141348 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1204 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (XINHUA) — The Chinese Foreign Ministry made an appointment with and met officials of the U.S. Embassy in China on 12 May and raised a strong protest against the United States for its unwarranted inspection of baggage of Chinese diplomatic personnel by U.S. personnel.

On the afternoon of 6 May, members of the Chinese delegation to the UN Law of the Sea Conference completed the procedures for checking their baggage at the New York airport. While they were waiting for a scheduled CAAC airliner to return to Beijing, over 10 U.S. personnel opened or used knives to pry open and check the luggage of members of the Chinese delegation and some other Chinese travelers without the presence of the Chinese travelers. Upon learning of this, the Chinese law of the sea delegation immediately made a verbal protest to the U.S. side and asked the latter to stop the inspection. The U.S. personnel were rude and unreasonable in their explanation. Only after the Chinese delegation's persistent protests did the U.S. side stop their inspection. Because of the above act of the U.S. side, the CAAC's scheduled flight was delayed for about 2 hours.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry pointed out the seriousness of the incident in its protest. Regarding the U.S. side's violations against international laws and conventions in rudely violating the privileges of diplomatic personnel, the Chinese Foreign Ministry strongly demanded that the U.S. side conduct an immediate investigation and make a responsible reply, and ensure that similar incidents do not happen in the future; otherwise, the U.S. side will be responsible for all consequences incurred thereof.

After the incident, the Chinese Embassy in the United States and the Chinese delegation to the United Nations made representations concerning this matter to the U.S. State Department and the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. At present, the Chinese Foreign Ministry is awaiting a reply from the U.S. side.

FURTHER ON GEORGE BUSH VISIT TO HANGZHOU

OW170931 Hangzhou ZHEJIANG RIBAO in Chinese 7 May 82 p 1

[Text] The Zhejiang Provincial People's Government held a banquet last evening to welcome George Bush, U.S. vice president, his wife and their party.

Li Fengping, governor of Zhejiang, received Vice President and Mrs Bush before the banquet began. Governor Li Fengping had met with Vice President Bush at the White House last May during his visit to the United States. At that time, he asked the vice president to visit Hangzhou at his convenience. They were happy to be able to meet again, 1 year later, by the West Lake. After the meeting, Governor Li Fengping accompanied Vice President and Mrs Bush to the banquet hall.

Present at the banquet were Vice Governor of Zhejiang Chen Zuolin, Hangzhou Mayor Zhou Feng and leading members of departments concerned Wang Lifu and Lu Su. Han Xu, vice foreign minister; Zhang Zai, deputy director of the Foreign Ministry's American and Oceanian Affairs Department; and Cao Yuanxin, deputy director of the Foreign Ministry's Protocol Department, were also present. Arthur W. Hummel, U.S. ambassador to China, and Mrs Hummel; Donald N. Anderson, consul general of the U.S. Consulate General in Shanghai, and Mrs Anderson were also present.

Vice President and Mrs Bush and their party toured West Lake yesterday afternoon. Mrs Bush and a number of staff on the tour visited the Hangzhou silk printing and dyeing plant yesterday. The distinguished American guests will leave Hangzhou by special plane this morning for a visit to Beijing.

WEINBERGER CITED ON IMPROVING U.S. FORCES

OW150724 Beijing XINHUA in English 0717 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Washington, May 14 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger reaffirmed today that the U.S. must improve its forces "across the spectrum" so as to deter Soviet aggression.

Addressing a meeting of the leadership foundation here this afternoon, Secretary Weinberger, one of the most out-spoken advocators for the Reagan administration's undergoing rearmament program, cautioned the audience that "the Soviet Union has long since embarked on a steady, massive buildup of both conventional and nuclear forces," and "it now has the power and reach to challenge our interests almost anywhere in the world."

But, he asserted, "if our deterrent is strong, we can restrict Soviet opportunism without firing a single shot." He said the U.S. should increase the "sustainability" of its forces to balance the Soviet ability to endure "a prolonged conventional conflict," and also to modernize its "military equipment" to deter or defend against Soviet nuclear weapons.

Referring to nuclear disarmament, Weinberger said: "To achieve such reductions (of nuclear weapons), however, we must convince the Soviets of our resolve." He termed the U.S. rearmament program as an "incentive" to negotiation, saying: "The Soviets must have the incentive to negotiate real reductions. Who can believe that they would consent to reducing their forces if they thought that we were unwilling to maintain a balance in the first place?" He asked

KANG SHIEN RECEIVES U.S. PETROLEUM EXPERT 13 MAY

OW131614 Beijing XINHUA in English 1526 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 13 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Kang Shien met here today with well-known U.S. petroleum geologist Michel Thomas Halbouty and Mrs. Halbouty.

Halbouty attended an international meeting on petroleum geology in China in 1980 and put forward some useful proposals on China's oil exploration. He has also done much work in developing links between Chinese and U.S. petroleum geologists. Kang Shien praised him for all these contributions at today's meeting.

Present was Li Jing, Chinese vice-minister of petroleum industry. Halbouty arrived here May 3 on a lecture tour at the invitation of the China National Oil and Gas Exploration and Development Corporation.

PRC TO HOLD TRACK MEET IN JUNE; USSR TO ATTEND

OW150842 Beijing XINHUA in English 0156 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- China will hold the 1982 Beijing international track and field invitational tournament from June 18 to 20, according to a spokesman of the Chinese Track and Field Association today.

The spokesman said: "Up to now, seven foreign countries have accepted the invitation to participate in the tournament. These countries are Czechoslovakia, Finland, the German Democratic Republic, India, Japan, the Soviet Union and Thailand."

The men's events of the tournament are 100-meter, 200-meter, 400-meter, 800-meter, 1,500-meter, 5,000-meter, 10,000-meter, 110-meter hurdles, 400-meter hurdles, 4 x 100-meter relay, highjump, broadjump, pole-vault, triple jump, shot-put, discus and javelin. The women's events are 100-meter, 200-meter, 400-meter, 800-meter, 1,500-meter, 3,000-meter, 100-meter hurdles, 400-meter hurdles, 4 x 100-meter relay, highjump, broadjump, shot-put, discus and javelin.

NICARAGUAN GOVERNMENT DELEGATION VISITS USSR

OW110044 Beijing XINHUA in English 1253 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] Moscow, May 10 (XINHUA) -- A Nicaraguan Government delegation paid an official goodwill visit to the Soviet Union from May 4 to 9. This was the second high-ranking Nicaraguan delegation that has visited the country since the National Reconstruction Government took office in July 1979.

The Soviet official news agency TASS reported that the delegation headed by Daniel Ortega Saavedra, coordinator of the National Reconstruction Government, had talks with top Soviet leaders Leonid Ilich Brezhnev and Nikolay Aleksandrovich Tikhonov. The two sides expressed satisfaction at the development of bilateral relations and the desire for further strengthening their ties in all fields.

During the visit, the Nicaraguan delegation signed with the Soviet Union an agreement on the further strengthening of economic and technical cooperation, and a protocol concerning Soviet supply of machines and equipment to Nicaragua. A joint communique issued at the end of the visit accused a certain imperialist country of deliberately stepping up tension and engaging in provocative and disruptive activities in the Western Hemisphere. It also denounced imperialism for economic sanctions and trade blockade.

DENG XIAOPING MEETS WITH JAPAN'S HAMANO 17 MAY

OW170802 Beijing XINHUA in English 0758 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, met here this morning with Seigo Hamano, honorary adviser and former president of the Japanese Diet members League for Japan-China Friendship, and his party.

Deng Xiaoping praised 84-year-old Hamano for his efforts in promoting the friendly relations between China and Japan. He said Premier Zhao Ziyang will soon visit Japan and Japanese prime minister will also visit China in the latter half of the year. He believed that the China-Japan friendship will continue to devleop on the road pioneered by many old Japanese friends, including Seigo Hamano. Hamano said that he was happy to be in China again to express his respects to the Chinese leaders for their efforts to build China into a country that they long for. For peace in Asia, he added, China should be built into a peaceful and powerful country.

Liao Chengzhi, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress and president of the China-Japan Friendship Association, was present.

DPRK FRIENDSHIP DELEGATION CONTINUES VISIT

Arrival in Guilin

OW142010 Beijing XINHUA in English 1600 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Guilin, May 14 (XINHUA) -- The friendship delegation from the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea led by Mme. Ho Chong-suk, secretary of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers Party and vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the Supreme People's Assembly, arrived here from Xian by special plane this afternoon. The guests were greeted at the airport by Zhong Feng, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the Guzngxi Zhuang Autonomous Regional People's Congress. The distinguished Korean guests were honored at a banquet hosted jointly by the standing committees of the regional and city people's congresses.

During their stay in Xian this morning, the guests visited the Shaanxi provincial museum and the Dayan pagoda. After viewing the precious exhibits, Mme. Ho Chong-suk said these cultural relics are not only the wealth of the Chinese people, but also the wealth of the people of the world over. These objects are very instructive to the younger generations.

Arrival in Shanghai

OW161647 Beijing XINHUA in English 1627 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Shanghai, May 16 (XINHUA) -- A delegation from the Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea led by Mme. Ho Chong-suk, vice-chairman of the standing committee of the assembly, arrived here from Guilin today. The delegation was welcomed by Hu Lijiao, second secretary of the Shanghai Municipal Committee of the Communist Party and chairman of the Standing Committee of the Shanghai Municipal People's Congress.

This evening, the guests were honored at a banquet given by the municipal people's congress standing committee. Xing Yimin, deputy secretary-general of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, who accompanied the guests on the tour, was present. Hu Lijiao and Mme. Ho Chong-suk toasted development of revolutionary friendship and cooperation between China and Korea and their peoples.

During their stay in Guilin, the guests cruised the Li River and saw karst caves.

NGUYEN CO THACH REMARKS ON WITHDRAWAL SCORED

BK141048 Beijing in Cambodian to Kampuchea 1030 GMT 13 May 82

[Station correspondent's commentary: "Nguyen Co Thach's Peculiar Remarks"]

[Text] Receiving an AFP correspondent in Hanoi, Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, while blasting West Europe — from whom he had begged aid, but was rejected during his recent tour — said that if a treaty is signed with China, he would agree to withdraw all troops from Kampuchea, and if an agreement is reached with Thailand, Vietnam would also see to it that part of its troops were pulled out of Kampuchea.

Since the invasion of Kampuchea by Vietnam in 1979, the UN General Assembly and the international conference on Kampuchea have repeatedly adopted resolutions demanding the unconditional withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. Vietnam, however, has consistently refused to obey. Now, Nguyen Co Thach has set a strange condition on the so-called total withdrawal and partial withdrawal of troops through: 1) a treaty with China, and 2) an agreement with Thailand. This unfailingly leads to the following question: What strategic link is there between Vietnam's signing of a treaty with China and reaching of an agreement with Thailand and the withdrawal of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea?

The Vietnamese minister of foreign affairs gave no specific answer to this question, though. However, it was not difficult to detect a sign of despair in Nguyen Co Thach's dejected remarks, as well as the resentment and bitterness in the hearts of the Hanoi authorities. Nguyen Co Thach grumbled that if Democratic Kampuchea worked alone, the problem would have been settled easily. His remarks mean that China and other countries should stop supporting the Government of Democratic Kampuchea and let the Heng Samrin puppets, underpinned as minilords in Phnom Penh, serve Vietnam without any opposition, thus making it easy to settle the problem.

This is only Nguyen Co Thach's wishful thinking. He uttered many peculiar remarks in an attempt to make people believe that Vietnam's sending of 200,000 troops to invade Democratic Kampuchea was not an act of aggression against a sovereign state! How can he substantiate such a tall tale!

The Government of Democratic Kampuchea is the sole legitimate government of Kampuchea. Since its inception in 1975, Democratic Kampuchea has been recognized by the United Nations and the majority of the UN member countries. As a member of the United Nations, Democratic Kampuchea has the full right to receive support and aid from other countries when its territorial sovereignty is violated by foreign forces. The position of China and most countries in the world that support the struggle of the Government of Democratic Kampuchea against Vietnam's aggression in defense of national sovereignty and national independence is a just and blameless position.

As for Vietnam, it invaded and occupied Democratic Kampuchea without reason. The overwhelming majority of countries in the world have opposed and condemned it, driving it into a state of utter isolation and disrepute. This is very reasonable.

Nguyen Co Thach's remarks about total withdrawal or partial withdrawal of troops were made with a most ugly and odious intention. They were aimed not only at excusing Vietnam, which has committed aggression against Kampuchea, but also at putting the blame on other people. It is widely known that Nguyen Co Thach has repeatedly ballyhooed about a threat from China. Nguyen Co Thach gave the strange reason that because China threatened Vietnam, Vietnam had to invade and occupy Kampuchea! If Vietnam must withdraw its troops from Kampuchea, China should sign a treaty with Vietnam first; otherwise, China has to bear all the responsibility.

One cannot help but ask: If China threatened Vietnam, why does Vietnam refrain from withdrawing its 200,000 troops from Kampuchea and placing them along the Sino-Vietnamese border to cope with China?

It seems that Nguyen Co Thach's lies are not very sophisticated and can fool no one. Not long ago, Nguyen Co Thach visited West and North European countries in his quest for aid and as part of his efforts to justify Vietnam's expansionist and aggressive policy. However, such countries as Sweden, West Germany and France, which were visited by Nguyen Co Thach, clearly affirmed that Vietnam should absolutely withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. Belgium reminded Vietnam that if it refused to withdraw its troops, no aid would be given to it.

U.S. CITED ON CHEMICAL WEAPONS IN KAMPUCHEA

OW141236 Beijing XINHUA in English 1223 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Washington, May 13 (XINHUA) -- The U.S. State Department today made public new evidence that Soviet-produced chemical weapons have been used by Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea.

A summary report of the analysis of blood samples from victims in Kampuchea said the facts "provide conclusive evidence" that chemical agents known as "yellow rain" have been used in Kampuchea and Laos. The blood samples were taken from two Kampuchean guerillas by Dr Amos Townsend, a private American physician, on February 14 this year, 24 hours after a Vietnamese attack on Tuol Chrey, Kampuchea. They showed high levels of toxin exposure, the report siad.

The chemical agents, the victims said, were delivered by the Vietnamese with 105-mm artillery shells. Immediately after shelling, they suffered severe tosic symptoms such as eye irritation, prolonged and repeated vomiting, difficult breathing, trembling and severe diarrhea.

The new evidence in the sixth offered by the State Department, but the first to show toxins in the victim's blood. Other samples of the toxin were taken from the soil and vegetation.

A State Department spokesman said today the report will be submitted to the United Nations and other parties concerned for further consideration. The U.S. Government has constantly charged the Soviet Union with using chemical weapons in South Asia.

NEW VICTIMS OF 'YELLOW RAIN' ARRIVE IN THAILAND

OW160748 Beijing XINHUA in English 0742 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Bangkok, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Four new victims of "yellow rain" attacks in Laos, their bodies covered with sores, have sought refuge in Thailand, according to the Bangkok POST today. They told interviewers here that many residents of three Lao villages had died following the attack some six weeks ago.

Reports from Thailand's Loei Province refugee settlement said officials are trying to place two of the four men in a Bangkok hospital for treatment and observation. Scientists will also study a large package of residue to try to determine the source and composition of the toxin involved. Refugees from three different villages in Phu He area of central Laos said that "yellow rain" was sprayed from an aircraft which flew over village ricefields in late March or early April.

Resident doctors at the refugee camp said they had never seen refugees suffering from similar sympto s, and were unable to diagnose their problems. In all cases, the refugees said, they and other villagers vomited blood, suffered varying losses of hearing and sight, had difficulty in breathing and suffered white discharges from their eyes and noses.

Officials involved in the case believe the refugees were suffering from the attack of "yellow rain" by Soviet-supplied chemical experts. They have, however, withheld final judgement until more extensive medical and scientific tests have been made.

THAI FOREIGN MINISTER SAYS PRC TALKS SATISFACTORY

OW160722 Beijing XINHUA in English 0700 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Bangkok, May 15 (XINHUA) -- "The result of the talks (with China) is very satisfactory," Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila said at the airport here tonight. "Our talks with the Chinese side were extensive, frank and beneficial," he added. Speaking to the press upon his return from a five-day visit to China, Sitthi said the purpose of his visit was to strengthen the friendly relations between Thailand and China, and exchange views on problems of common concern and mutual benefit. China attached great importance to the visit, he added.

The Chinese leaders attached special importance to bilateral relations with Thailand, Sitthi said. They supported the approach of Thailand and ASEAN to the situation in Southeast Asia. Also discussed was the Kampuchean problem, which affects peace and security in the Southeast Asian region, the whole of Asia and the world, he went on to say. Thailand, China and other states were convinced that if an alliance is formed by Democratic Kampuchea, Sihanouk and Son Sann, it will certainly bring to a good turn the way to a solution of the Kampuchean problem, he said. But the key to a tripartite alliance lies in the willingness of the Khmer people. "We are not in a position to force any side (to form any alliance), and all we can do is to support the three sides in moving toward that alliance," he added. Owing to doubts and misgivings among the three sides, he said, it was difficult for them to form an alliance. The hope for holding a tripartite summit before the ASEAN foreign ministers meeting scheduled in June is very dim.

Sitthi praised Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as a patriot, whom he met in Beijing during the visit. Sihanouk's stand on the Kampuchean issue coincides with that of the international community, which insists that the Kampuchean issue be resolved according to the relevant U.N. resolutions, Sitthi said. Sihanouk expressed his firm determination to cooperate with other Kampuchean patriots, to free his country from Vietnamese occupation and build a genuinely independent, neutral and nonaligned state.

Sitthi said that the further development of bilateral trade relations between Thailand and China and the promotion of mutual visits by their governments and officials at all levels were also discussed. The prime minister of Thailand had agreed in principle to visit China on invitation. China is a good friend of Thailand and there are longstanding cultural interchanges between the two countries, he said.

He mentioned the ASEAN proposal on the formation of the tripartite coalition in Kampuchea and the ASEAN effort to defend Democratic Kampuchea's seat in the United Nations. It is a violation of the U.N. Charter to overthrow the lawful government of any soveriegn country by foreign armed forces, he stressed.

PRC, INDIA HOLD SECOND-ROUND TALKS IN NEW DELHI

Gonsalves Cited on Talks

OW151611 Beijing XINHUA in English 1602 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] New Delhi, May 15 (XINHUA) — India expects enhancement of relations with China, said Eric Gonsalves, secretary of the Ministry of External Affairs, here yesterday.

Mr. Gonsalves, who will head an Indian delegation to the forthcoming second round of talks between Indian and Chinese officials, made public a government statement on the talks. He said: "We believe that both delegations are approaching the forthcoming talks in a positive and constructive attitude so that we will be able to make progress." Mr. Gonsalves said: "We are looking forward to the visit of Mr. Fu Hao, special envoy of the People's Republic of China, and his delegation." "We will address ourselves to all bilateral matters, including the resolution of the boundary question and exchanges in various fields," he added.

He said: "To us, the normalization of relations, and indeed the enhancement of relations, with a great neighbour like China has a high priority. This requires an honourable and mutually acceptable solution of problems such as the boundary. We will certainly continue our efforts to attain this goal."

Mr. Gonsalves said that it would be "premature" to forecast the results of the talks. "I would only add that we were received in Beijing in the most friendly and cordial manner (during the first round of talks), which it is our hope to be able to reciprocate," he said.

Departure for Talks

OW141252 Beijing XINHUA in English 1244 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) — A Chinese Government officials delegation led by Fu Hao, a government envoy and adviser to the Foreign Ministry, left here by air today for India to take part in the second round of talks between Sino-Indian officials which will begin May 17.

During his visit to India last June, Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua had talks with Indian Foreign Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao, at which they agreed to hold meetings between officials of the two countries to discuss the way of settling the border problem and developing bilateral relations. The first round of talks was held in Beijing last December.

Arrival in New Delhi

OW160134 Beijing XINHUA in English 0105 GMT 16 May 82

[Excerpt] New Delhi, May 15 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese delegation headed by special envoy Fu Hao arrived here today for a second round of talks with the Indian Government to explore ways and means for the settlement of the border issue between the two countries. Concrete measures for the development of relations between the two countries in various domains will also be discussed during the talks.

The Chinese delegation was met at the airport by Mr. E. Gonsalves, secretary of Indian External Affairs Ministry and head of the Indian delegation to the talks, and other high-ranking officials of the External Affairs Ministry.

Gonsalves Hosts Banquet

OW161846 Beijing XINHUA in English 1837 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] New Delhi, May 16 (XINHUA) — Both China and India hope the two countries will devise a basis for cooperation and fully normal relations in the forthcoming talks. This hope was expressed by the delegation leaders of the two countries at this evening's banquet held by E. Gonsalves, leader of the Indian delegation, in honor of Fu Hao, leader of the Chinese delegation to the second round of talks.

In his speech, E. Gonsalves said: "India and China must necessarily attach to the development of India-China relations a high priority." He described the talks as "important bilateral discussions." "We need to consolidate what we have achieved in the development of relations in recent years," he said. He hoped both sides would "devise a basis for cooperation and fully normal relations."

In reply, Fu Hao shared the view of the host that the problems China and India face in today's world can be better faced if they devise a basis for cooperation and full normal relations. [XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 1702 GMT on 16 May, in a similar report on the Gonsalves banquet, adds at this point: "He said: China and India are two great nations with ancient civilizations. The peoples in our two countries have maintained friendly relations for more than 2,000 years."]

He said the late Premier Zhou Enlai and Prime Minister Nehru jointly initiated the famous five principles of co-existence, which have become the basic norms guiding relations between countries with different social systems. China and India are now making efforts to build their respective countries, improve the living standards of their peoples and establish a new international economic order. "These constitute the basis for developing the friendly relations and cooperation between our two countries," he stressed.

He said that the Sino-Indian relations suffered [the XINHUA Domestic version reads: "...We do not deny that Sino-Indian relations suffered..."] short and temporary setbacks, but these were things of the past. "At present, our two sides are devoting efforts to solving some outstanding issues, with the boundary question as the central issue." [The XINHUA Domestic version adds at this point: "He said both China and India are developing countries with vast territories. The total population of our two nations reaches 1.7 billion. Their significance and importance are well-known to the people."]

He hoped his visit would achieve positive results and further promote the relations between China and India in various fields.

Before the banquet, Fu Hao called on Eric Gonsalves for 30 minutes. Chinese Ambassador Shen Jian was also present.

New Delhi Reportage

For New Delhi reports on the talks between the PRC and India and issues related to the talks, including the start of the talks on 17 May, see the India section of the 17 May and subsequent issues of the South Asia DAILY REPORT.

CAPE VERDE PRESIDENT PEREIRA CONCLUDES VISIT

Huang Hua Hosts Luncheon

OW141938 Beijing XINHUA in English 1653 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and president of Cape Verde, and Mme. Pereira saw a legendary dance drama of the Manchu nationality, "Pearl Lake", presented by the Liaoning provincial song and dance ensemble here this evening.

Zhu Xuefan, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, accompanied the distinguished guests at the cultural evening sponsored by the Chinese Ministry of Culture.

At the end of the performance, President and Mme. Pereira went on stage to present the performers a basket of flowers.

This morning, the guests toured the Great Wall and a tomb of the Ming Dynasty. They were honored at a luncheon hosted by Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs.

Deng Xiaoping Meeting

OW150810 Beijing XINHUA in English 0805 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, met and had a cordial conversation here this morning with Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and president of Cape Verde, and principal members of his party.

Deng Xiaoping said that there are no contradictions between China and Cape Verde. "The leaders of our two countries can increase exchange of visits and mutual understanding so as to promote friendly relations of cooperation between the two countries," he said. Vice-Chairman Deng also told the distinguished guests about China's political and economic situation.

President Pereira said: "China is our friendly country. The Chinese people are the most trustworthy friends of ours. We are greatly interested in all the developments in China."

Huang Hua, Chinese state councillor and foreign minister, was among those present at the meeting.

After the meeting, Deng Xiaoping gave a luncheon in honor of President and Mme. Pereira and other guests from Cape Verde.

Cultural Agreement Signed

OW150906 Beijing XINHUA in English 0825 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- A cultural agreement between the Governments of the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Cape Verde was signed here this afternoon.

Zhao Ziyang, Chinese premier of the State Council, and Aristides Maria Pereira, Cape Verde president, affixed their signatures to the agreement on behalf of their respective governments.

Under the five-year agreement, China and Cape Verde will develop exchanges and cooperation in the fields of culture, education, sciences, health, sports, publications, and newscast in accordance with the principles of mutual benefit.

Zhao Bids Farewell

OW151620 Beijing XINHUA in English 1558 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and president of Cape Verde, Mme. Pereira and their party left here by special plane for Kunming this afternoon.

They were seen off at the Beijing guesthouse by Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

Pereira said that his visit to China is of great significance. It has fortified the foundation for Cape Verde-Chinese cooperation. He hoped for more contacts between the two countries.

Zhao Ziyang said that President Pereira's talks with Chinese leaders in Beijing deepened mutual understanding and friendship. He asked Pereira to convey the Chinese people's best wishes to the Cape Verde people upon returning home.

On their arrival in Kunming, the distinguished Cape Verde guests were greeted at the airport by Yunnan Provincial Governor Liu Minghui and Vice-Governor Dao Guodong. The visitors are accompanied on the trip by Chinese Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Gong Dafei.

In the evening, the visitors were honored at a banquet given by the Yunnan Provincial People's Government.

Departure for Home

OW161644 Beijing XINHUA in English 1617 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Kunming, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Aristides Maria Pereira, general secretary of the African Party for Independence in Cape Verde and President of Cape Verde, Mme. Pereira and their party left here this evening at the end of their China visit.

Seeing them off were Gong Dafei, vice-minister of foreign affairs, and Liu Minghui, governor of Yunnan Province.

Before his departure, President Pereira said, "Eighteen years ago, I visited China. I am very pleased to have the opportunity to contact the Chinese people and their leaders this time.

"The realistic and practical policies implemented by the Chinese leaders have impressed me deeply. The Chinese people have found a way to solve their various problems. Great changes have taken place in China. Now the nation is advancing," he said.

"The Chinese people have always stood on the side of the people of the Third World. A powerful China is important to strengthen the Third World." he said

"Both Cape Verde and China are Third-World countries. The prospects for development of their relations are good. Such relations are characterised by unity and friendship," he said.

He said his visit has achieved positive results.

Today the guests visited the Yunnan Institute for Nationalities, a knitwear mill and Kunming's scenic spots.

SOVIET PROTEST TO UK ON FALKLANDS CITED

OW150738 Beijing XINHUA in English 0731 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Moscow, May 14 (XINHUA) -- A Soviet Foreign Ministry statement handed to the British Embassy here today says that the British blockade of the vast expanses of high seas around Falklands (Malvinas) Islands is unlawful. It also denies Soviet involvement in the Anglo-Argentine conflict over the islands, according to a TASS report. This is the Soviet Government's first official protest to Britain since the outbreak of the Anglo-Argentine conflict on April 2.

The statement says that while extending its military actions in the South Atlantic, the British side made several times "warnings" to the Soviet side which have the aim to invent the alleged Soviet Union's "involvement" in the Anglo-Argentine conflict. The statement says that these "warnings" of the British side are regarded by the Soviet side as "provocative" and "not promoting the maintenance of the normal climate in Soviet-British relations." But the statement gave no details of the British warnings.

In the past month or more, Soviet leaders and press have criticised the British and U.S. Governments' stand on this conflict.

PRC, CANADA SIGN DOCUMENTS EXCHANGE PROTOCOL

OW150832 Beijing XINHUA in English 0819 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- A protocol on exchanging copies of documents concerning Dr. Norman Bethune's life was signed here today between the State Archives Bureau of China and the Dominion Archives of Canada.

Li Fenglou, deputy director of the Chinese bureau, and W.I. Smith, dominion archivist of Canada, signed the protocol on behalf of their respective governments and exchanged some documents. Wan Li, Chinese vice-premier of the State Council, attended the ceremony.

The protocol was worked out by China and Canada in the spirit of protecting and enriching the documents concerning Dr. Norman Bethune's life so as to help the people of the two countries remember his meritorious deeds and strengthen friendship between the two peoples. Under the protocol, the two sides will exchange copies of those documents concerning Bethune's life in each other's collection or those that can be used for free publicity, including his letters, diaries, memoirs, articles and treatises and well as publications, photos and films concerning him and other archives. The protocol provides continued efforts from the two sides to look for, duplicate and exchange other relevant archives.

Prior to the ceremony, Vice-Premier Wan Li met with Dr. and Mrs. W.I. Smith and his party. During the conversation, Wan Li said: "We Chinese people have deep gratitude to the Canadian people because Dr. Bethune laid down his life for China's liberation cause. The signing of the protocol and the exchange of data on the life of Bethune will help enhance the friendship between the peoples of China and Canada." Dr. Smith presented Wan Li with a disc with a profile of Doctor Bethune in relief. Canadian Ambassador to China Michel Gauvin was present on both occasions.

STREAMLINING OF CCP DEPARTMENTS CONTINUES

OW151539 Beijing XINHUA in English 1527 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- The streamlining of the 30 departments under the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee is proceeding smoothly, with the total staff reduced by 17.3 per cent. The number of departmental heads and deputy heads has been cut by 15.7 per cent, and their average age lowered from 64 to 60. The number of bureau directors and deputy directors has been cut by 14 per cent, and their average age lowered from 58 to 54. New faces, mostly younger, make up 13 per cent of the newly-appointed departmental leaders and 16 per cent of the bureau leaders.

The streamlining of the departments under the party Central Committee has been going on side by side with the restructuring of the State Council. The aim is to overcome overlapping and overstaffing, common in administrative organs, and bring about better work efficiency. The new leading bodies are urged to improve their work style and methods and give a better guidance and service to the country's modernization drive and the people. The retiring veteran cadres will be properly taken care of, and the working staff will be trained in turns.

Initial Results Achieved

OW160956 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1455 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- The restructuring of the organs directly under the CCP Central Committee and the streamlining of their leading bodies are proceeding smoothly thanks to the great determination of the leadership, its fairly successful effort to take the mass line and to the good role played by the old comrades. After several months of efforts, the initial results have been achieved.

There are 30 units directly under the CCP Central Committee. Basically, their work assignments and the limits of their functions and powers are clearly defined. However, there are also cases of overlapping and overstaffing. Overstaffing and aging are also fairly common phenomena in the case of the leading bodies at various levels. In order to change this situation, all units have earnestly responded to the central authorities' instruction on restructuring by fixing their tasks, structure and the size of their staffs. Now, the number of organs at the bureau level has been reduced by 11 percent and at the office level by 10 percent. Their total staff has been cut by 17.3 percent, of which 37 percent are administrative personnel. The number of heads and deputy heads of leading bodies at the department or commission level is strictly limited to between 3 and 5. The total number of department and commission heads and deputy heads, aside from those who must be elected or those in units which are considering restructuring, has been cut by 15.7 percent and their average are lowered from 64 to 60. The number of directors and deputy directors of a bureau level organ is generally set at 2 to 3. Their total number has now been cut by 14 percent and their average age lowered from 58 to 54. The number of newly promoted middle-aged and young cadres in the newly reorganized leading bodies is 13 percent at the department level and 16 percent at the bureau level. The cultural level of the leading bodies at both the department and bureau levels is also higher now. An initial change in the situation of overstaffing and aging leading bodies has taken place. A gratifying stride has been made toward the goal where leading bodies will become revolutionized, younger, better educated and more professionally competent.

In terms of the task of restructuring organizations as a whole, drawing up streamlining plans and allocating positions in the leading bodies is but a fairly good beginning. A great deal of work remains to be done.

1. Make practical and careful arrangements for the old cadres who have been separated or retired from the first line. It is necessary to act in accordance with the principle set by the central authorities that "the basic political treatment should remain unchanged but the pay and living conditions should be better." Relevant specific regulations for making good arrangements and taking good care of these old comrades should be made. It is also necessary to organize these comrades for a summing up of the valuable revolutionary experiences they have accrued in the past decades. If they are physically fit, some of the old comrades should be encouraged to frequently visit the grassroots units to do the kind of mass work they are capable of doing or to carry out some social investigations in order to bring their role into good play. Each unit should formulate carefully thought-out, practical plans on the basis of the actual situation in their respective units and carry them out.

2. Cadres should be organized in a planned way for study and rotational training in order to implement the streamlining plan and practically raise their political, ideological, cultural and professional level to meet the needs of their work under the new situation. All leaders of departments and commissions and organization departments should pay serious attention to this strategic measure. They should consider the result achieved by a cadre through study as a major content in assessing his performance.

3. Make further efforts to achieve the revolutionization of the leading bodies and organs, overcome bureaucracy, raise work efficiency and strengthen and improve party leadership. All new leading bodies should, after summing up experiences, conscientiously improve their work system, work method and work style. All organ functionaries should adhere to the system of individual responsibility established on the basis of "three fixings" (fixing task, structure and staff), raise work efficiency, raise work quality and make sure they are performing an effective service for the central authorities and the localities, the realization of the four modernizations and the people. The middle-aged and young cadres in the new leading bodies should have a deep understanding of the earnest expectations which the party and people have for them. They should pay attention to the need to be modest and prudent, maintain contacts with the masses and not accept flattery; they should persist in their principles, be fair and not practice favoritism; they should be bold in doing their work, have the courage to shoulder heavier tasks, carry out investigation and study as often as they can and strive to delve into problems. The old comrades should enthusiastically support and help the middle-aged and young cadres in their work so as to do a good job in passing on experience, giving assistance and setting an example. In short, the new leading bodies should turn a new page in both work and party style and further strengthen and improve party leadership.

Namelist of Department Heads

OW152115 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1507 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- The CCP Central Committee has recently appointed the leading cadres of some departments directly under the administration of the central authorities. The list of appointments is as follows:

The General Office of the party Central Committee

Director: Hu Qili [5170 0796 4539]

Deputy Directors: Yang Dezhong [2799 1795 0022], Kang Min [1660 3046], and Gao Dengbang [7559 4098 2831];

The Propaganda Department of the party Central Committee

Director: Deng Liqun [6772 0500 5028]

Deputy Directors: Yu Wen [6735 2429], Wang Huide [3769 1920 1795], and He Jingzhi [6320 2417 0037];

The United Front Work Department of the party Central Committee

Director: Yang Jingren [2799 7234 0088]

Deputy Directors: Li Gui [2621 6311], Jiang Ping [3068 1627], and Li Ding [2621 1353];

The International Liaison Department of the party Central Committee

Director: Qiao Shi [0829 4258]

Deputy Directors: Qian Liren [6929 2621 0088], Zhu Liang [2612 5328], and Li Shuzheng [2621 3219 6927] (female);

The Central Party School

President: Wang Zhen [3769 7201]

Vice President: Feng Wenbin [7458 2429 1755]

Dean of Education: Song Zhenting [1345 2182 1656];

The Research Center of the Secretariat of the party Central Committee

Director: Deng Liqun (concurrent)

Deputy Directors: Lin Jianqing [2651 3386 7230] and Mei Xing [2734 5887];

The Rural Policy Research Center of the Secretariat of the party Central Committee

Director: Du Runsheng [2629 3387 3932]

Deputy Directors: Xie Hua [6200 5478], Liu Kan [0491 1030], and Weng Yongxi [5040 3057 2569];

The Party Literature Research Center of the Central Committee

Director: Li Qi [2621 3823]

Deputy Director: Gong Yuzhi [7895 5148 0037];

The Party History Research Center of the Central Committee

Director: Hu Sheng [5170 4939]

Deputy Directors: Feng Wenbin (concurrent), Hua Nan [5478 2809] (concurrent), Li Xin [2621 2450] (concurrent), and Liao Gailong [1675 5556 7127];

The Commission for Collecting Party Historical Data of the party Central Committee

Chairman: Feng Wenbin (concurrent)

Vice Chairmen: Tong Xiaopeng [4547 1420 7720] (concurrent), Hua Nan (concurrent), Liao Gailong (concurrent), Xie Xiaonai [6200 4607 6621], Ma Qibin [7456 7871 1755] (concurrent), and Wang Mingzhe [3769 2494 0772] (concurrent);

RENMIN RIBAO

Director: Hu Jiwei [5170 4921 0251]

Chief Editor: Qin Chuan [4440 1557]

Deputy Chief Editors: Li Zhuang [2621 8369], Wang Ruoshui [3769 5387 3055], and Tan Wenrui [6223 2429 3843];

HONGQI

Chief Editor: Xiong Fu [3574 1788]

Deputy Chief Editors: Wang Renzhi [3769 1804 0037] and Ma Zhongyang [7456 0112 2254]; and

The Compilation and Translation Bureau of the Central Committee

Bureau Chief: Song Shushen [1345 2579 5116]

Deputy Bureau Chiefs: Lin Jizhou [2651 1015 3166], Gu Jinping [7357 6930 1456] and Rong Ziqing [1369 1311 7230] (female).

KYODO: NONCOMMUNISTS MAY BE GIVEN KEY POSTS

OW160957 Tokyo KYODO in English 0947 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, May 16 (KYODO) -- China may appoint noncommunists to key government and parliament posts in the future in a move to establish a democratic coalition government, a high-ranking Chinese official indicated Sunday.

The senior official said the selection and training of potential noncommunist candidates for those important posts are under way.

The visiting Chinese official made the statements in an interview with KYODO news service. He agreed to be interviewed on condition that his name not be used.

He revealed that Chinese authorities have issued a directive calling for two-fifths of about 3,450 delegates to the National Peoples Congress to be noncommunists.

The Chinese official pointed out that Deputy Chairman Deng Xiaoping recently stressed the merits of multi-party politics in China. The Beijing government now guarantees freedom of political activities and independence of organizations within the framework of the constitution, he added. China last month unveiled a draft Chinese constitution covering the revision of proletarian dictatorship. There are about eight democratic parties with a 105,000-membership in China today but none of them holds a key post in the Chinese hierarchy.

During lengthy debates over the constitution revision, democratic party members as well as some communists made a proposal to change the current parliament into a two-chamber system. But the proposal was turned down, the Chinese official related. "I am against a two-chamber system. But I don't know what's going to happen in the future."

ARTICLE DISCUSSES ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY

HK141445 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 11 May 82 p 5

[Article by Dong Fureng [5516 6534 4356] excerpted from No 4, 1982 issue of JINJIXUE WENZHAI [ECONOMIC DIGEST]: "Further Develop the Study of China's Economic Development Strategy" — capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] One whole year has elapsed since Comrade Yu Guangyuan initiated the study of the strategy for our country's economic and social development last year. The discussions in the past year have been fruitful.

In his report on the work of the government delivered at the Fourth Session of the Fifth NPC, Comrade Zhao Ziyang put forth the ten principles for economic construction. These principles serve as a guide for us in studying strategy for our country's economic development. THE PROPOSAL OF THE TEN PRINCIPLES MARKS THE CHANGES IN THE STRATEGY FOR OUR COUNTRY'S ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. In my opinion, there are chiefly four changes. They are: 1) THE CHANGE FROM THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT WITH SPEED AS THE MAIN GOAL TO THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT WITH MEETING THE BASIC NEEDS OF THE PEOPLE AS THE MAIN GOAL; 2) THE CHANGE FROM THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT BY STRESSING THE KEY POINTS TO THE STRATEGY OF BALANCED DEVELOPMENT; 3) THE CHANGE FROM THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT BY CLOSING THE DOOR TO THE OUTSIDE WORLD TO THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT BY OPENING THE DOOR TO THE OUTSIDE WORLD; AND 4) THE CHANGE FROM THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT BY STRESSING EXTENSIVE PRODUCTION TO THE STRATEGY OF ACHIEVING DEVELOPMENT BY STRESSING INTENSIVE PRODUCTION.

If it is justifiable to outline the strategy for our country's economic development by the changes in these four main aspects, then EACH OF THESE CHANGES WILL PRESENT MANY PROBLEMS FOR US TO STUDY IN THE LIGHT OF THE TEN PRINCIPLES.

WITH REGARD TO THE CHANGE IN THE FIRST ASPECT, the strategy of achieving development with a high growth rate as the main goal produced good results and also caused quite a few drawbacks. This was seen by everyone. The change to the strategy of achieving development with meeting the basic needs of the people as the main goal aimed at avoiding these drawbacks, enabling people to get real benefits from economic development and gradually meeting the basic needs of the people. To effect this change better, it is first necessary to study the basic needs of the people. These basic needs are not determined by the people's physiological needs but by some specific sociohistorical conditions. We still do not know very clearly what the basic needs are. No matter how we define the basic needs, we must consider various factors in our country, such as the level of production, the national habits, the historical traditions and the relations of production, when we determine the contents of the basic needs and the level of these needs which can and should be attained. In determining the basic needs, we must also investigate the pattern of consumption in our country. In my opinion, the pattern of consumption should mainly comprise three aspects, that is, the level, structure and ways of consumption. In studying the pattern of consumption, we must find out how the basic needs of the people at a given income level can be satisfied with the best possible results, so as to guide their consumption and production. The purpose of shifting the main goal of development from increasing economic growth to satisfying the basic needs of the people is to take the people's needs as the starting point and end result of social production. The people may have immediate and long-term needs. Obviously we should not consider their immediate needs at the expense of their long-term needs or the other way round. Therefore, after the strategy of development has changed its main goal, there still exists the question of properly arranging the proportions of consumption and accumulation in the national income. However, with the main goal of the strategy of development changed, a question will have a different starting point and a different end result and we may possibly come to a new conclusion.

WITH REGARD TO THE CHANGE IN THE SECOND ASPECT, we have long been carrying out the strategy of achieving development by stressing the key points. This strategy has produced good results and also caused quite a few drawbacks. The strategy of balanced development certainly does not mean that all sectors should develop at the same speed and none of them should be stressed. In the future, we do not rule out the possibility of sometimes stressing the development of a certain sector in order to promote the development of other sectors. However, this is another kind of strategy of development.

In carrying out the strategy of balanced development, the question of giving priority to the growth of the means of production has not yet been studied very thoroughly. The strategy of one-sidedly stressing the development of heavy industry to promote the national economy, as was practiced for a long time in the past, has caused enormous evil consequences. The current economic readjustment has a direct bearing on this strategy. In the course of readjustment, the growth of heavy industry has slowed down. In this situation, should priority be given to the development of heavy industry after the proportions of various sectors of the economy have been well coordinated? If priority is continuously given to heavy industry when technical progress is marked by the substitution of mechanization for manual labor in production, then, when we consider the strategy of balanced development, we should study the question of coordinating the priority development of heavy industry with the development of other sectors, so as to avoid going back to the former strategy for economic development.

In our country, because of the natural conditions and the population, agricultural development has long been a factor restricting economic development. Compared with the question of urban youths waiting for jobs, the question of overpopulation in the countryside is, judging by a long-term point of view, more important and more difficult to solve. The balanced development of our country's economy should be a balanced development based on the gradual shifting of the agricultural population to industry and other sectors of the economy. Without this shifting of manpower, the backwardness of our country's economy cannot be basically changed. How to effect this shifting of manpower is a serious problem.

In agriculture, there is also the question of changing from the strategy of achieving development by stressing the key points to the strategy of balanced development. It is difficult to change from the development strategy of stressing grain production as the key point to the strategy of achieving overall balanced development in agriculture. The reason is that with a large population but insufficient farmland, grain production restricts the overall balanced development of agriculture. At present, when the growing of industrial crops has developed slightly, the area of farmland planted with grain crops is reduced inappropriately. This shows just an aspect of this restriction. It appears that many problems need to be solved in order to effect the change in the strategy for agriculture.

LET US PROCEED TO THE CHANGE IN THE THIRD ASPECT. The meaning of closing the door to the outside world is understood on the whole. The meaning of opening the door to the outside world is only partly understood and is not clear in many points. In my opinion, at least in the near future, our country's policy of opening the door to the outside world can only be understood in a limited sense. There are some similarities between our country's strategy of opening the door to the outside world and some other countries' strategies of external development, but actually there are great differences between them. The advantages and disadvantages of internal development and of external development are relatively evident. In opening the door to the outside world, should we advance gradually in the direction of external development or constantly stick to the foundation of internal development? Is there a development strategy which is halfway between internal development and external development?

What differences are there between the development strategy of opening the door to the outside world as adopted by our country and the development strategy of replacement of exports as adopted by some foreign countries?

The development strategy of replacement of exports means to gradually replace the export of primary products with the export of processed products. It is unquestionable that we should develop the export of processed products. But, should we substitute it gradually for the export of primary products? In what position should we put the export of primary products? Should we stress the export of labor-intensive products on a long-term basis, or, as some foreign countries do, gradually change over to the export of capital-intensive, technology-intensive and knowledge-intensive products?

With regard to our economic relations with foreign countries, we have long pursued the policy of selling some goods for the purpose of purchasing other goods and carried out the business of import and export for the purpose of helping to meet each other's needs. After opening our door to the outside world, should we still confine our foreign trade to the scope of helping to meet each other's needs? Should we advance in the direction of purchasing some goods for the purpose of selling other goods and importing some products for the purpose of exporting other products?

The extent to which the home market is to be open to the outside world is also a major problem. This also involves the question of what attitude we should take toward the protection of domestic production. Since we have opened the door to the outside world, should we continue to pursue the principle of "importing fewer or none of the goods which we can produce at home" or gradually turn to pursue the principle of "importing all goods which are produced at excessively high costs at home?" Or, should we pursue a principle which is halfway between these two principles? This concerns the question of whether domestic production should be protected to a certain extent. If such protection is necessary, to what extent should domestic production be protected?

FINALLY, extensive development was formerly a distinct characteristic of our country's economy. Centered on raising economic results, the ten principles for economic construction imply a change to intensive development. This is a shift of focus regarding the method of development. Extensive development and intensive development are always linked together and can hardly be separated from each other. Extensive development is indispensable but should gradually be changed to intensive development. This change will meet many difficulties, of which employment of workers is one. In my opinion, the basic way out for solving the question of employment is to carry out intensive production and raise labor productivity. Only thus will it be possible to increase income and at the same time to provide greater quantities of surplus products and use them as new means of production, so as to create more jobs for workers. Recently, however, the high ratio of capital funds and equipment to labor has restricted the employment of more workers. Extensive development is just the opposite. Therefore, the change from the strategy of stressing extensive production to the strategy of stressing intensive production can only be carried out gradually and will take a long time, and the question of how to coordinate extensive development with intensive development arises in every period. At the same time, the level of intensive production must also be raised gradually. To achieve this end, it is necessary to study the questions concerning selection of technology and policy.

In raising economic results, an important problem is to study the scale of economic development and to find out the optimum scale of various trades and enterprises. We have not studied this problem enough.

Besides the questions concerning the four aspects mentioned above, in my opinion, THERE IS AN IMPORTANT QUESTION WHICH MUST BE STUDIED IN LIGHT OF THE STRATEGY FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT, THAT IS, THE QUESTION CONCERNING THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE ECONOMIC SYSTEM AND THE STRATEGY FOR ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT. In order to smoothly effect the changes in our country's strategy for economic development as mentioned above, it is imperative to carry out corresponding restructuring in our country's economic system. A specific strategy for economic development needs to be supplemented by a corresponding economic system to guarantee its implementation.

For example, a highly centralized economic system better suits the strategy of achieving development by stressing the key points because this system facilitates pooling of the limited capital funds, material supplies and technical forces and allotting them to the departments which achieve development by stressing the key points, whereas a decentralized economic system hampers this strategy. For another example, in carrying out the strategy of achieving development with meeting the basic needs of the people as the main goal, it is necessary to give play to the role of the market in regulating the socialist planned economy so that consumer goods production can, by giving play to the role of the market under unified planning, react more sensitively to the changes in the people's needs. To achieve this end, corresponding restructuring should be made in the system regarding planning, enterprise management and commercial work. For still another example, in carrying out the strategy of achieving development with grawth rate as the main goal and by stressing extensive production, the requirements of the law of value are often put in a secondary position, and economic results are often neglected for the purpose of attaining a high growth rate. In the course of gradually changing to the strategy of achieving development by stressing extensive work, the meaning of raising economic results becomes more prominent. This calls for our efforts to give better play to the role of the law of value in promoting technical progress and economizing on manpower. A corresponding economic system is needed to give play to this role of the law of value. Lastly, when the strategy of achieving development by closing the door to the outside world was adopted, there was no international competition. There was also no need to quickly adapt domestic production and circulation to the ever-changing international market. For this reason, our original economic system did not show any serious problems. After the open-door policy was adopted, competition in the international market has been more or less brought into the domestic market. Although our country has just begun to adopt the open-door policy and has opened the door to a limited extent, our original economic system has been found unsuitable to the open-door policy. For this reason, in resturcturing the economic system we must seriously take the open-door policy as an important factor.

STATUS OF COMMUNES, LOCAL ADMINISTRATION VIEWED

HK141209 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0134 GMT 14 May 82

[Article by Wang Shuwen [3769 0647 2429], deputy director of Jurisprudence Research Center of Academy of Social Sciences: "The People's Communes Institute the Principle of Separating Government Administration From Commune Management"]

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE) -- The draft revised constitution has changed the system of merging government administration with commune management implemented by the people's communes. The Constitution formulated in 1978 stipulates that the commune people's congresses and the commune people's governments are grassroots organs of state power and are also collective economic organizations. The draft revised constitution has made new stipulations for this. People's congresses and people's governments will be set up in the villages, national minority villages and towns. They are rural grassroots organs of state power, whereas the rural people's communes are rural collective economic organizations. In this way, village organs of state power are separated from economic organizations.

The separation of government administration from commune management is conducive to improving and strengthening the work of grassroots state power. According to stipulations of the draft revised constitution, village people's congresses ensure, in their administrative areas, the observance and enforcement of the constitution, laws, decrees and administrative regulations; and examine and decide on plans for the construction of village economic, cultural and public facilities. The village people's governments direct, within the limits of their authority as prescribed by law, village administrative work such as economy, education, culture, public health, civil affairs, public security and family planning. After separating government administration from commune management, village state power organs no longer directly manage production and can concentrate their efforts on the foregoing administrative work in order to ensure the implementation and enforcement of state policies and laws.

The separation of government administration is also conducive to developing a socialist collective economy. First, after separating government administration from commune management, the people's communes, as collective economic organizations, can concentrate their efforts on organizing production. Second, the separation of government administration from commune management is conducive to changing the use of coercive administrative means for economic management to using economic levers and economic laws and regulations for managing the collective economy in accordance with objective economic laws. The separation of government administration from commune management is also conducive to guaranteeing the decisionmaking right of economic organizations. The draft revised constitution stipulates that collective economic organizations have the right to make independent decisions in economic activities on condition that they accept the guidance of the state plan and observe the laws concerned. The people's communes will be able to exercise this decisionmaking right as stipulated by the draft revised constitution after they become pure economic organizations. Moreover, this will also facilitate commune members carrying out the democratic management of collective economic organizations. The draft revised constitution stipulates that collective economic organizations carry out democratic management as prescribed by law and that the election and recall of management personnel and major issues in management and operation are decided by the entire body of laborers. The separation of government administration from commune management will also facilitate commune members carrying out democratic management, which will arouse the commune members' enthusiasm for socialist production and promote the development of production.

The separation of government administration from commune management only separates village organs of state power from collective economic organizations. Within the collective economic organizations, the proprietary rights over enterprises and other property of communes, production brigades and production teams remain unchanged.

Although experimental work in separating government administration from commune management has been carried out in various provinces and successful experiences have been obtained, the work in this aspect will have to be carried out throughout the whole country in a planned, systematic and guided way in accordance with the actual conditions of respective localities after the constitution is adopted.

XINHUA EXPLAINS RURAL EFFORTS, ECONOMIC CRIMES

OW141414 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0125 GMT 14 May 82

[XINHUA commentator: "The Demarcation Line Between the Peasants' Labor for the Purpose of Becoming Well-Off and Criminal Activities in the Economic Field Should Not Be Blurred"]

[Excerpts] Beijing, 5 May (XINHUA) -- The "Decision of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on Cracking Down on Serious Economic Crimes" points out that while cracking down on serious economic crimes, it is necessary to continuously implement the policy of maintaining an open door toward foreign countries and enlivening the domestic economy. In implementing this policy in the rural areas, special attention must be paid to differentiating clearly between the peasants' hard labor for the purpose of becoming well-off and criminal activities in the economic field.

However, currently a tendency of confusing the peasants' efforts to become well-off with economic criminal activities has emerged in a few areas. For instance, some communes and brigades have declared that small farm machines bought by peasants by pooling resources are "illegal property." Some grassroots cadres have asserted that to become well-off, one is only allowed to rely on manual labor, not machines; on collective labor, not individual labor; and on farm labor, not on labor in industrial or sideline production. And in some communes, licensed processing or repair and maintenance shops run by individual households have been closed down. What is more absurd is that peasants who had been issued certificates of merit last autumn for becoming well-off by hard labor were criticized for the same fact this spring. Although these are isolated cases, if this phenomenon is left unchecked, our rural economy which has just been invigorated will once again be strangled.

Of course, in our efforts to enliven the rural economy in recent years there have been cases of lawbreaking and unhealthy practices which have disrupted state plans and the economic order and which should be investigated and dealt with. But in investigating and handling these cases, it is necessary to closely follow policies and clearly differentiate unhealthy practices from law violations in the economic field and to draw a clear line of demarcation between problems caused by imperfections of some of our systems and measures in our efforts to enliven the economy on one hand and criminal activities against the law on the other.

In cracking down on serious economic criminal activities, besides taking a correct attitude toward industrial and sideline occupation production engaged in or contracted by individual peasants or jointly by several peasant households, it is also necessary to eliminate the influence of "left" ideas. At present, some cadres, upon seeing the crackdown on economic crimes, erroneously think that the party's rural policy is about to "change" again. This is clearly a manifestation of the influence of "left" ideas. Therefore, in resolutely cracking down on criminal activities in the economic field, it is also necessary to be on guard against the interference of "left" ideas and to strengthen ideological and political work.

It is not only necessary to emphatically point out that the central authorities' policy of encouraging the development of proper industrial and sideline occupation undertakings by individual commune members or jointly by several households will not change, but that this policy must not change. China's commodity economy is far from being developed, and its socialist commodity production has not been fully developed. It is very difficult for China to lift its agriculture up from poverty and backwardness, much more so to modernize it. To succeed in diversification, which also includes industrial and sideline occupation production, and to develop the commodity economy as well, it is necessary to arouse the enthusiasm of the 800 million peasants so that the state, collectives and individuals can work in concert.

At present, the industrial and sideline occupation undertakings run or contracted by individual commune member or jointly by several households are far too few, instead of being too many. Instead of chopping these activities down with a big ax, we should enthusiastically promote, encourage and support them.

Also, it should be pointed out that the central authorities' policy of letting part of the people become well-off sooner than others is entirely correct and will not change. This policy is based on the socialist principle of from each according to his ability and to each according to his work. Practice shows that the policy of letting part of the people become well-off sooner than others has already achieved fine results.

We must persist in the policy of cracking down on serious economic crimes on the one hand, while on the other hand we must enliven the economy. The two tasks do not contradict each other, and neither of them is dispensable. No one should confuse the peasants' labor for the purpose of becoming well-off with economic criminal activities.

EDUCATION OFFICIAL VIEWS STUDENT TRAINING SCHEME

OW131021 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0026 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 13 May (XINHUA) -- It has been reported that, with the approval of the State Council, some higher educational institutions or departments of such institutions under the Ministry of Education will begin this year to implement, on a trial basis, a system for their new students to take part in physical labor for 1 year, provided that conditions are suitable. The magazine GAOJIAO ZHANXIAN [HIGHER EDUCATIONAL FRONT], to be published in the near future, carries a further explanation of this matter by a responsible person of the Ministry of Education.

Speaking of the significance of this system, the responsible person of the Ministry of Education said: Persistence in combining mental work with physical labor and intellectuals with workers and peasants is an important aspect of our country's educational principles. In recent years, leading comrades at the central level have stressed the need to attach importance to students' education in connection with physical labor. They said that some of the previous opinions and measures regarding this had gone too far and should not now be practiced. However, they added, totally giving up this work would lead to another extreme, and the disadvantage of giving up the work has been very apparent. For this reason, we should take appropriate measures to earnestly stress education in connection with physical labor. At the same time, it is also the state's wish for college students to receive military training. Now many schools have paid attention to strengthening education in connection with physical labor and military training. The trial implementation of the system for new students to participate in physical labor and receive military training after they have entered school will greatly assist in fully implementing the party's educational prinicple, in cultivating the students' labor concept, mass viewpoint and sense of organization and discipline, and in promoting communist morality and practice so that the students will develop morally, intellectually and physically and become competent persons, both Red and expert.

With the trial implementation of the 1-year-labor system, does a new student have to take part in physical labor during the whole year? How should the school system and teaching plan be reconciled with this? Regarding these questions, the responsible person of the Ministry of Education said: The "Instructions on 1982 Enrollment Work for Institutions of Higher Learning," issued by the Ministry of Education and approved by the State Council, pointed out that certain schools or departments of schools, approved by the Ministry of Education as experimental units, "should organize their new students to take part in physical labor and military training after they have entered the schools and should also open some basic academic courses for them." This shows that not the whole year is to be spent in physical labor and military training. During the experimental stage, the present school system will not be changed, but the teaching plan may be appropriately adjusted by the schools concerned. After the students become sophomores, they will still be required to take part in physical labor as appropriate.

The responsible person of the Ministry of Education pointed out: This year, only some schools belonging to the Ministry of Education will be selected as experimental units. They must meet three requirements: First, leading bodies of the schools must be relatively staunch and willing to carry out the experiment and must have made necessary preparations. Second, the schools must have concurrence and support of leading local party and government departments. Third, they must be approved by the Ministry of Education. It is safer to carry out the experiment in this way.

In conclusion, this responsible person said: Although the system for new students to take part in physical labor and military training is a new thing, we have already gained much valuable experience in education in connection with labor. The present experimental work will surely be successful as long as the leaders pay attention to it, the measures taken are appropriate, and the initiative of both the teachers and students in this respect is brought into full play. Schools, other than those selected as experimental units, should also pay attention to strengthening education in connection with physical labor among all students. We believe that, through experiment and summing up of experience, we will surely be able to work out reasonable measures for education in connection with labor and military training, suited to our country's conditions. This is of vital significance to the reform of our higher education as a whole and to the improvement of education quality.

RADIO STRESSES COMMUNIST IDEOLOGICAL EDUCATION

OW161021 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 15 May 82

[Station commentator's article: "Persisting in Communist Ideological Education Is the Central Link in Carrying Out 'Five Stresses and Four Beauties' Activities"]

[Text] Following the launching of the "five stresses and four beauties" activities in 1981, China successfully carried out its first all-people decorum and courtesy month this year. These activities have advanced the building of spiritual civilization in socialist China and conspicuously improved our party's work style, the social mood and social order. These activities are being continued in a sustained manner.

The "five stresses and four beauties" campaign is being carried out in various ways, but its central link is to educate the people, especially young people, in communist ideology and communist ethics so that the people of all nationalities throughout the country will become well-educated, law-abiding citizens with high ideals and good moral character. This campaign, guided by the principle of communist ethics, has been launched in consideration of the present moral standard of the people in China. It has been welcomed by the masses because our party, through it, is conducting a clear-cut education in communist ideology and communist ethics among the people in the light of reality.

The correctness and effectiveness of this campaign, which serves as the practical requirement and actual form of communist ideological and moral education, has been proven by practice and recognized by society. It is wrong to think that conducting such education in a socialist society in China means overstepping the historical stage. Communism has a tow-fold meaning: First, it is a communist social system; second, it is a movement guided by communist ideology. In our country, the communist movement began in an organized way and was guided by a program on the day the CCP was formed. Socialism, being a preliminary stage of communism, is part of communism. It cannot be called socialism if communist ideology and ethics are excluded. Communist ideology and ethics, being the most progressive ideology and representing the noblest moral principles, play a very important role in resisting the corrosive influence of captialist ideology in a socialist society, enhancing the socialist workers' enthusiasm and creativeness and advancing the cause of socialist modernization.

Without the leadership of the Communist Party, it is impossible to carry out socialist construction. Likewise, neither can it be accomplished without communist ideology and ethics. Conducting education on communist ideology and ethics is different from, but connected with, implementing the party's present policies and principles for the socialist period. Thus, they complement each other. Our party draws up its policies in the light of reality in China and guided by communist ideology. Communist ideology and ethics include within their scope the goal of serving the people, the principle of collectivism and so on, all of which play a part in guiding, regulating and guaranteeing the drawing up and implementation of policies.

Promoting the communist attitude toward labor and educating the people in communist ideology and ethics will not hinder the implementation of the various policies in the present socialist stage; instead, they will be a powerful motivating force for the implementation of these policies.

Education in communist ideology and ethics should be conducted in the light of reality. This means that communism should be studied in the course of doing public and professional work. In recent years numerous youth service teams, learn-from-Lei Feng groups, (jie xinrong) groups, (bao gong) groups, red-scarf sanitation streets and afforestation teams have emerged in various areas in the course of carrying out the "five stresses and four beauties" campaign. This is an effective way for young people to study communism and cultivate good moral character and good behavior in the course of practice.

The party Central Committee has designated the launching of this campaign as an important task for the whole party and the people of the whole country. We must carry on this campaign in a sustained manner by placing emphasis on the central link of conducting education in communist ideology and ethics in order to win new victories in building a socialist spiritual civilization.

QIAN XUESEN SPEAKS AT MECHANICS SOCIETY COUNCIL

OW170900 Beijing XINHUA in English 1538 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Mechanics research in China should be concentrated mainly on advancement of engineering technology and production, but there should also be basic research, said Doctor Qian Xuesen, honorary president of the Chinese Mechanics Society. He was speaking at a conference of the second council of the Chinese Mechanics Society which closed here today.

Doctor Qian, 71, who is also vice-minister of the People's Liberation Army Science and Technology Commission for National Defence, stressed that basic and applied research are closely related. Frequent exchanges of information should be made and the two aspects of study should complement each other.

Qian Xuesen said research personnel working in mechanics should be closely integrated with engineers and technicians. All fields of national defence and the national economy need mechanics. Mechanics research has a very bright outlook he pointed out. Work in this field is closely related to research in physics, mathematics, earth sciences, astronomy, chemistry and other specialities.

Qian Xuesen said mechanics research has moved along rapidly in China in recent years. Membership in the Chinese Mechanics Society has grown to nearly 10,000 from 1,100 in 1966.

The conference of the second council of the Chinese Mechanics Society opened on May 9. Qian Xuesen and 80-year-old Zhou Peiyuan, chairman of the China Science and Technology Association, two founders of the society, were named honorary presidents at the conference. Qian Lingxi, 66, a specialist in engineering-structure mechanics and president of the Dalian Engineering Institute, was elected president. Zheng Zhemin, 57, a specialist in solid and explosive mechanics and deputy director of the Institute of Mechanics under the Chinese Academy of Sciences, was elected executive vice-president and Qian Weichang, professor of mechanics and applied mathematics at Qinghua University, and seven other scientists were elected vice-presidents of the society.

The Chinese Mechanics Society was set up in 1957. Qian Xuesen was the president of the first council of the society.

ALL-ARMY PRESS WORK CONFERENCE ENDS IN BEIJING

OW161031 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1241 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- The all-army press work conference which ended just yesterday stressed that the basic task of newspapers is to popularize Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the party's line, guidelines and policies. At present, it is necessary to extensively carry out propaganda work on developing socialist spiritual civilization and to persistently and vigorously promote various activities to create still more advanced companies and individuals in the army in developing spiritual civilization.

Hua Nan, deputy director of the PLA General Political Department, made a speech at the conference on how the press can popularize Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the party's line, guidelines and policies in close connection with the actual conditions in the army and in accordance with the special characteristics of the young fighters. His speech also dealt with issues regarding the development of spiritual civilization.

Li Wei, director of the propaganda section of the PLA General Political Department, delivered a speech entitled "To Disseminate the Party's Line, Guidelines and Policies Still More Consciously and Vigorously Is the Glorious Task of the Press." The comrades attending the conference exchanged their experience in running newspapers and put forward suggestions on how to improve press work.

The conference held that to run newspapers well is of great significance in helping the army implement the party's line, guidelines and policies, uphold the four basic principles and turn itself into a revolutionary, modern and regular army.

The conference pointed out: In order to do a good job in disseminating Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the party's line, guidelines and policies, the comrades of the editorial departments must, first of all, study them well. At the same time, they must go to the grassroots units to carry out investigation and study and strengthen propaganda work so that this work will be carried out even more effectively.

The conference pointed out: To implement the principle of "putting stress on the companies and mainly catering to the needs of fighters" in running newspapers, we must persistently give priority to ideological guidance and positive education and to commending the advanced.

ZHONGGOU XINWEN SHE ON SOUTH CHINA SEA OIL BASE

HK141114 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0135 GMT 13 May 82

[Feature by correspondent Zhong Zhengxiang [6988 1794 4382]: "A Visit to the South China Sea Oil Base"]

[Text] At the end of April, this reporter went to the eastern suburb of Zhanjiang and personally visited the South China Sea oil base.

In the office of the Beibu Gulf Sino-French cooperation zone, Du Ba [2629 1572], general manager of Total (China) Company Ltd, enthusiastically gave a brief account to this reporter on the exploration of oil in the Beibu Gulf by the joint efforts of China and France. He said, "The first well sunk by the Sino-French cooperation team was on the Wushi structure. This is a very successful well with very productive oil and gas veins that are sufficient for maintaining constant production. At the beginning of this year we sank another well in another structure, but the result was not as good as we had expected. We are studying the reasons for this. At present we are drilling the third and fourth wells in Wushi structure and are making smooth progress. We have already reached the oil layer and the drilling has reached the stage of completing the wells and extracting samples for analysis. If the result is satisfactory, we will begin trial production."

This reporter got in a helicopter at the base, flew over Zhanjiang and Haikang and landed on "Nanhai No 3" drilling platform about 20 nautical miles southwest of the port of Wushi. This is a jack-up oil-drilling rig with a net weight of 5,000 tons. The first two Sino-French cooperation wells were sunk by it. On the rig, French drilling adviser Bu Gen [1580 2704] and Chinese workers were adding a drill rod. The instrument panel showed that the drilling had covered 3,116 meters. Bu Gen said, "Yesterday (29 May), the 'Nanhai No 4' reached a high-pressure oil layer. This may also happen here. There is also oil here (we reached the oil layer at a depth of 3,000 meters), but as yet we have not reached the major oil layer. Therefore, we cannot tell how much oil there is until we have finished the drilling."

Bu Gen cheerfully told this reporter that the Chinese and the French sides were cooperating satisfactorily. The Chinese team leader and workers were working effectively. He said that China's petroleum workers were skilled, clever and hardworking and that they actively used their heads in their work and were quick to learn new things.

At the office of the team leader, this reporter asked Wang Gangqing, deputy manager of the drilling company, and Cao Shaoxin, chief engineer, what was going on at "Nanhai No 4." At that time, the telephone rang. It was a call from Li Kairong, the team leader on "Nanhai No 4." He reported, "At 1900, 30 April, their drilling had covered 3,268 meters and they found strong evidence of oil and gas." Wang Ganqing said that the No 4 drilling rig was drilling 2 to 3 nautical miles to the southwest of "Nanhai No 3" and that when they had reached the depth of 3,253 meters the day before, they had found a high-pressure oil layer. Some light crude was evident in the drilling mud. It was a kind of fine quality crude with little sulphur or wax.

When this reporter took a helicopter back on 1 May, he had a bird's-eye view of the base below. He saw that from Pingle dock to Jizui Mountain, a large number of houses stretched for several kilometers. Along the coast there were a row of docks where many barges, oil tankers and exploration ships were berthed. Just behind the docks was a big supply warehouse filled with various kinds of machinery and materials for offshore oil exploration. To the north of the Guangzhou-Zhanjiang highway was the biggest computer center in central and south China, the machinery fixing center, the geological research center, the communications center and about a dozen other production enterprises and institutes of scientific research, along with dozens of housing complexes for their staffs and workers and schools for their children.

The South China Sea oil base was set up in 1973. Since then the people on this base have not only built up an oil base that covers 190 acres, but what is more significant is that they have uncovered the secret of the South China Sea oil resources. They have sent out team after team to explore for oil and have sunk well after well. At the same time, they have carried out a seismic survey on more than 300,000 square kilometers of the South China Sea.

Through synthesizing, analyzing and studying a huge quantity of seismic exploration and drilling data, the Chinese specialists have made an initial evaluation of the oil and gas production prospects on the three South China Sea offshore basins -- the Zhujiang River Estuary Basin, the Yingge Sea Basin and the Beibu Gulf Basin. The total area of these three basins is about 260,000 square kilometers and there is a thick layer of the Tertiary Period, the thickness of which is over 10,000 meters in some areas. They have already found hundreds of areas with possible oil-bearing structures and favorable source beds. Many of these structures will possibly become future oilfields. Most of the offshore exploration wells they have sunk have shown evidence of oil and gas. A few highly productive oil and gas veins that can maintain constant production have already been found in some of the wells. This shows that the South China Sea is an aquatic area with the brightest prospect in the world for exploring and exploiting offshore oil resources. The foreign oil companies that have taken part in the exploation have also made similar evaluations. At the beginning of this year, China invited tenders from the outside world for cooperation in extracting offshore oil and most of these companies have sent in their tenders. At present the vast stretch of the South China Sea has already been divided into a number of areas, but the more than 10,000 kilometers of ocean in the northeast section of the Beibu Gulf where China and the French Total Company are cooperating in drilling and exploring oil is not included in the areas for which tenders have been invited.

At present, construction of production and living facilities is being carried out everywhere on the South China Sea oil base. Under construction are a drilling rig repair shop, a seismic data processing center, a geological research laboratory, an 11,000-volt transmission line, and several hospitals and cinemas. A residential zone with a hotel and several first-class residential quarters for specialists from foreign oil companies is being constructed at full speed.

Great efforts have been made in training technical personnel. All these facilities are aimed at serving the specialists of foreign oil companies who, after their tenders are accepted, will come to the South China Sea to carry out large-scale oil exploration and exploitation.

CAAC DIRECTOR SHEN TU ON FLIGHT SAFETY

HK160128 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0849 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE) -- More than half a month has now passed since the crash of Flight No 266. A ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE reporter paid a special call today on Shen Tu, director of the Civil Aviation General Administration [CAAC], to ask him how the administration would take further steps to ensure flight safety.

Shen Tu began by saying that the crash of No 266 was the worst accident in the history of China's civil airline. He said the CCP and government attached very great importance to dealing with this incident and rapidly organized a lot of manpower and material to handle it. The work of dealing with the aftermath was basically completed in only a few days. The family members of the victims have all expressed satisfaction at this.

The reporter asked: "China's civil airline has maintained an excellent safety record for more than 30 years and enjoys a very high safety reputation at home and abroad. How have you considered this issue?"

Director Shen Tu solemnly pointed out, we have taken a series of steps to ensure flight safety. We have first demanded that the whole body of airline personnel take a correct ideological view of the lessons of this accident and firmly establish the idea of "safety first." The various units of the airline have analyzed the current situation in safety work and put forward specific demands in light of the problems. At the beginning of May, the general administration dispatched two inspection groups to get to the frontline of production and work with the inspection groups of every regional administrative bureau, to inspect the implementation of safety measures. We have demanded that all areas assign experienced technicians and leading cadres to fly on the planes, to take the initiative in seeking out unsafe factors and ensure that safety measures are mapped out for every employee. It is necessary to strictly observe rules and regulations and flight discipline, strictly adhere to job responsibility systems, and further straighten out order at the airports.

Director Shen Tu said, after the accident, we conducted ideological and political education for all our work personnel. As a result everyone, especially the flight personnel, has ample confidence regarding flight safety and has actively demanded to carry out their tasks. Our transportation work has consistently remained normal. The Guilin flight center flew 88 scheduled flights from 27 April to 5 May, carrying a total of 6,661 passengers, including 4,930 foreign guests, Overseas Chinese, and Hong Kong and Macao compatriots. The center's scheduled flights have been 91 percent full, an increase of 0.9 percent over the March figure. During this period for the Guilin-Guangzhou route, we were unable to meet the demand for tickets, and 12 extra flights were put on, which carried 1,156 passengers. The planes on the route were 95.2 percent full, a 2 percent increase over the previous month. There were three direct scheduled flights from Guilin to Hong Kong and every one was full. It is evident from this that Chinese and foreign travelers trust the airline.

Shen Tu said in conclusion, we have taken a series of measures to ensure flight safety. As for the service, we have demanded that all service personnel improve their work and do it in an affable, enthusiastic and polite manner and with initiative.

WAN LI ACCEPTS HONORARY TENNIS CHAIRMANSHIP

OW161050 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0716 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 16 May (XINHUA) -- Comrade Wan Li today gladly accepted a document inviting him to assume the honorary chairmanship of the Chinese Tennis Association.

At the 1982 Beijing municipal old people's "health cup" tennis tournament, which opened today, the Chinese Tennis Association Chairman Lu Zhengcao announced the news about Wan Li's assumption of the honorary chairmanship of the association and presented him the association's invitation document.

Wan Li, a tennis lover, is one of the athletes taking part in this "health cup" tournament.

The Beijing municipal old people's "health cup" tennis tournament is held at the tennis court of the Beijing Gymnasium. Over 40 athletes, 55 years of age or older, are scheduled to play doubles games in two stages. The first-place team will get the rotating trophy.

RENMIN RIBAO CARRIES HONGQI TABLE OF CONTENTS

HK170731 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 7

[Table of contents of HONGQI No 10, 1982]

[Text] Article by HONGQI editorial department: "Our Banner Is Communism"

Article by Ouyang Shan: "Recalling a Letter by Comrade Mao Zedong"

Article by Wei Jianlin: "Be an Honest Speaker of the Masses"

Article by Ding Zhenhai and Li Zhun: "Abour Eulogy and Exposure"

Article by Lin Lianqi: "The Four Basic Principles Are the Fundamental Guiding Ideology in Revising the Constitution"

Article by Wang Shuwen: "The System of People's Congresses Is Our Country's Basic Political System"

Article by Gong Yuzhi: "The Development of Socialist Democratic Politics Is an Important Question"

Article by Xu Daohe: "A New Question for Study"

Article by Dong Yancheng: "Is an Individual Undertaking Practicing Exploitation of Labor if It Employs Assistants and Takes on Apprentices?"

Article by Lian Cen: "Do Joint Undertakings and Individual Undertakings Mean Unemployment?"

Article by Dai Yuanchen: "Can Our Country Use Deficit Budgeting To Stimulate Economic Development"

Article by Zhan Wu and others: "A Concept of Strategic Measures for Developing Our Country's Agriculture"

Article by Zhang Qihua: "A Talk About Spiritual Civilization and Marxism"

Article by Hong Wenda and Wu Yikang: "A New Phenomenon of Postwar Monopoly Capitalism -- Development of Economic Integration"

GUANGDONG CONTINUES FIGHT AGAINST FLOODING

HK150143 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 14 May 82

[Summary] Several thousand people have been sent to guard the Bei River embankments in order to protect Guangzhou from flood. By 0100 on 14 May, the water level at Shijiao was 14.2 meters, the highest recorded since liberation. Dangerous situations arose at 12 places along the embankment in the afternoon of 13 May. The bridging company of a certain PLA unit carried out crash-repairs with the local people. The dangers had all been eliminated by early morning of 14 May. Vice Governor Yang Deyuan inspected the situation along the embankment late 13 May. The level of the river fell slightly on 14 May, but still exceeded the danger mark. The Sihui hydrology station recorded the highest level since liberation during the day. The provincial government has dispatched 16 medical teams to Qingyuan County to help in flood fighting. The provincial civil affairs departments has dispatched a consignment of clothing to the county.

On the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad, more than 200 meters of the track-bed has been washed away on the section between the old Hengshi station and Shengping station, and traffic on the line is completely cut. The crash-repair command has decided to assemble bridging and construction forces to build an emergency bridge across the gap so as to restore traffic as quickly as possible. The command estimates that traffic cannot be restored in less than 8 to 10 days.

Figures on Damage Cited

HK150201 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 14 May 82

[Summary] The Bei River embankments guarding the Guangzhou and Pearl River delta areas have withstood the highest floodcrest since the liberation. PLA personnel helped the commune members along the river to repair gaps and slips that occurred. The danger along the embankment is now eliminated. The Bei River floodcrest reached Lubao in Sanshui County at noon on 14 May. The water level was 11.21 meters, less than the record set in 1968. By 1980, the level had fallen by 2 meters and was still receding.

According to incomplete statistics compiled by the provincial command for fighting natural disasters, "this flood inundated the seats of Qingyuan, Yingde, Yangshan, Lianxian and Sihui Counties and over 4,000 villages. Some 450,000 people were affected by the disaster, 985,000 mu of farmland were flooded and 7 mountain reservoirs and 22 hydropower stations were destroyed. Three embankments, each guarding more than 10,000 mu of farmland, were destroyed." A village of nearly 300 inhabitants in Qingyuan County was destroyed by mountain torrents. Some 70 percent of the crops in Yangshan County were inundated, and 40 percent of the farmland there was damaged in varying degrees. On 14 May 180,000 of 200,000 people marooned by floods in Qingyuan County had moved to higher ground. Action is now underway to rescue the 20,000 others, who are marooned on rooftops.

Additional Damage Figures

HK160457 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 15 May 82

[Summary] The Bei and Xi Rivers are continuing to fall slowly. By 2000 on 15 May, the water level at the Qingyuan hydrology station on the Bei River had fallen from 15.9 to 15.03 meters, while the level at the Gaoyao hydrology station on the Xi River had gone down from 9.76 to 9.68 meters.

"The damage is very serious in the areas hit by these torrential rainstorms and floods. According to incomplete statistics from Shaoguan and Zhaoqing Prefectures and Shaoguan municipality, over 800,000 people were affected by the disaster and 250 were killed. Some 1.3 million mu of farmland were inundated. Over 31,000 buildings collapsed and 40,000 rooms were damaged. Many water conservation and hydroelectric installations and brigades were destroyed. Large quantitites of timber, chemical fertilizer and cement were washed away. At present, rescue and relief work is being stepped up.

Some 300,000 of the masses were marooned in Qingyuan County, where the disaster was the most serious. By now, 290,000 have been moved to safety, thanks to a vigorous crash-rescue effort. Some 10,000 are still marooned by water. The Guangzhou PLA units sent a further 17 boats to Qingyuan County on 15 May to help rescue the masses. Rescue materials are continually being sent to the disaster areas. The air force flew 20 biscuit air-drop sorties to 8 points in Qingyuan County on 15 May.

The cadres and masses in Huaiji, Guangning, Sihui and Fengkai Counties in Zhaoqing Prefecture have been working hard to fight flood, restore production and rebuild their homes in recent days. According to incomplete statistics from these 4 counties, 270,000 mu of rice and 80,000 mu of industrial crops were inundated, while 16,000 cubic meters of timber were washed away. Some 40,000 houses were flooded, of which 2,700 collapsed. Forty-seven people were killed and 54 injured.

In Yingde County, 130,000 mu of dry fields and 280,000 mu of paddy fields were inundated, 430,000 people suffered from the disaster, over 20,000 are homeless and 75 were killed. Over 25,000 houses collapsed. The county authorities have acted with vigor to relieve the people hit by the calamity. At present the masses are continuing the struggle against flood and are also working to restore production.

PLA commanders and fighters in Guangdong have been working heroically to fight the floods in recent days. The navy sent 7 landing craft and 35 rubber boats to Qingyuan County on 15 May to crash-rescue the masses. The air force flew 22 air-drop sorties during the day. PLA medical teams have also been dispatched to aid the people. The Ministry of Railways cabled the Guangzhou railroad bureau on 15 May to extend comfort to the cadres and workers working to fight the flood and carry out crash-rescue and repair work. The cable hoped they would continue to display the spirit of fearing neither hardship nor death and speed up crash-repair work so as to reopen the line to traffic as early as possible.

Death Toll Hits 349

HK170756 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 16 May 82

[Excerpts] The water levels of the Bei Jiang and Xi Jiang are falling slowly. Areas which have been ravaged by torrential rains and floods have suffered very heavy losses. According to incomplete statistics from Shaoguan and Zhaoqing Prefectures and Shaoguan municipality, over 800,000 people have been affected by the floods; the death toll has soared to 349; over 1.24 million mu of farmland have been inundated; and more than 31,000 houses have collapsed and a total of 40,000 houses have been damaged. Several water conservancy projects, hydroelectric installations and bridges have been ruined by the floods, and large quantities of timber, chemical fertilizer and cement have been washed away by the floods. At present, various areas are stepping up their disaster relief work. Qingyuan County is the area hit most seriously by the floods. Of the county's 300,000 people marooned by floodwaters, 290,000 people have now been transferred to areas which are safe from floods through the energetic efforts of various rescue parties. At present, 10,000 people are still marooned by floodwaters in Qingyuan County. Relief goods and materials from various areas are being transported to flooded areas in a steady stream.

Yingde County's 31 communes and townships have been hit by the floods in varying degrees. According to incomplete statistics, 130,000 mu of nonirrigated farmland and 280,000 mu of paddy fields have been inundated; 430,000 people have been affected by the floods, over 20,000 people were left homeless and 75 people have died; over 25,000 houses have collapsed; some water conservancy projects, highways and bridges have been ruined by the floods; and all land and water communications lines between the county town and its communes have been interrupted. By the afternoon of 15 May, Sanshui County eliminated the problem of waterlogging over 80 percent of the country's more than 30,000 mu of farmland which had been inundated.

Further Antiflood Measures

HK170245 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 16 May 82

[Summary] Qingyuan County's cadres and masses are fighting a heroic struggle against one of the worst floods in the country's history. They have already scored notable success.

"This flood did a lot of damage in Qingyuan County. Some 400,000 mu of early rice were inundated, 300,000 of the masses were marooned and 15,000 buildings collapsed. Fourteen of the 17 state-owned factories subordinate to the country authorities suffered serious damage." By now, all the marooned people have basically been moved to safety. The major river embankments and reservoirs in the country withstood the flood. Although the county seat was cut off by floods for several days, no deaths have been reported there. The waters are receding. The county CCP committee and government held an urgent conference on the evening of 16 May. The meeting decided to take further steps to carry out the struggle against the flood to the end and rapidly launch self-salvation through production and rebuilding of houses.

The leadership organs of the Guangzhou PLA units have stepped up organizational leadership over the fight against the flood in recent days, and assigned units and materials to the antiflood frontline. "On the afternoon of 15 May, the Guangzhou PLA units received a cable from the Hunan Provincial People's Government stating that due to landslides on the Yingde section of the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad, which cut rail traffic, they hoped that the units could urgently dispatch vehicles to transport fresh produce for Hong Kong and Macao. Guangzhou PLA units Commander Wu Kehua immediately instructed the departments concerned to look into the matter. A certain unit decided to dispatch 100 trucks to help crash-transport the goods."

The waters of the Bei and Xi Rivers are continuing to fall. By 2100 on 16 May, the level at the Qingyuan hydrological station on the Bei River was 13.84 meters, which was still 1.84 meters above the warning level, and the level at the Gaoyao hydrological station on the Xi River had fallen to 9.09 meters, slightly above the warning level. The Guangzhou railroad bureau expects to have traffic reopened on the Beijing-Guangzhou line within 2 weeks, providing no accidents occur.

TORRENTIAL RAINSTORMS HIT AREAS IN GUANGXI

HK160539 Nanning Guangxi Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 15 May 82

[Summary] Torrential rainstorms hit 19 municipalities and counties in Guilin and Wuzhou prefectures from 11 to 13 May. Precipitation during this period exceeded 250 mm in Guilin municipality and Xingan, Guangyang, Fuchuan and Cangwu counties, and exceeded 300 mm in Lingui, Lingchuan, Zhaoping, Mengshan, He and Teng Counties. Teng County had from 500 to 600 mm of rain in 29 hours. Torrents rushed down from mountains and rivers rose rapidly. Four communes in the county were inundated. All the 60,000 mu of early rice planted along the Fu Jiang in Fuchuan County were inundated. In Guangyang County, 56 bridges and 112 dams and embankments were washed away. In addition, 60,000 mu of early rice in the county were inundated, of which 20,000 mu were seriously damaged. (Xishan) commune in this county suffered a loss of 200,000 yuan when its (Dadongtian) power station was destroyed. Leaders at all levels in the two prefectures have taken part in the struggle against this calamity.

MOSCOW RP&P INTERVIEWS DALAI LAMA REPRESENTATIVE

OW151431 Moscow Radio Peace and Progress in Mandarin to China 1100 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] The world conference of personages from religious circles to save the sacred gift, namely, life, from nuclear disaster has ended in Moscow. Delegates from more than 90 countries attended this very important meeting. A delegation representing Tibetan Buddhists living in India also attended the meeting. This station's reporter interviewed (Ping-ding-ge-qi), a representative of the Dalai Lama, supreme leader of Tibetan Buddhists, and asked him to appraise the significance of the world conference of personages from religious circles.

[(Ping-ding-ge-qi); initial words in English fading into translation] The conference is significant, because it shows that there is an awareness of the danger of nuclear war; the danger is very great. I think the vast majority of the people who have come to Moscow to attend the conference will agree with the view that once a nuclear war breaks out, the entire world will be destroyed. Therefore, the understanding that mankind may be destroyed in a nuclear war is in itself a very important thing. We have gathered in Moscow to speak up against nuclear war. I think this is very significant.

[Question] Some political activists in Asia insist that in the event of a nuclear war, Asia can stay out of it. What is your opinion about this argument?

[Answer] I think that when we talk about nuclear war, we are concerned about the very existence of all mankind on this earth. Experts agree that there can be no local nuclear war. If a nuclear war should break out, the danger would be very great that all living things on earth would be destroyed. The entire world would be destroyed. I think that when we discuss the nuclear threat, we are not talking about a nuclear war in a certain area. In the event of a nuclear disaster, all mankind will be threatened by the danger of destruction.

[Question] Recently, three of the Dalai Lama's delegations visited China. What has resulted from these visits, in short?

[Answer] I think I can sum up and say that the result of these visits is that it has made it possible for us to obtain firsthand information, and find out for ourselves, about the actual conditions in Xizang and how the Tibetan people still feel about the Dalai Lama. We firmly believe that tens of thousands of Tibetan people are loyal to the Dalai Lama. From these visits, we have also found out that the present conditions in Xizang are far from satisfactory to the local residents. In the past 20 years or so, the living conditions in Xizang have been very poor, and the Tibetan people have been suffering. Much has been destroyed there. It seems that the place is being reduced to a colony in an all-round way. The living conditions of the Tibetan people are not satisfactory to us.

BRIEFS

DAMAGE TO SICHUAN CROPS -- Between 10 and 30 April, hailstorms hit 13 counties and districts in Sichuan Province, causing relatively large losses to agricultural production and people's lives and property. At present, the people in the stricken areas are actively taking measures to make up for the losses. These hailstorms occurred in the northwest and central parts of the basin, and struck Jianyang, Zizhong, Ziyang, Lezhi, Anyue and Weiyuan Counties in Neijiang Prefecture; Yunyang County in Xanxian Prefecture; (Renhe) District in Dukou municipality; Changxi County in Nanchong Prefecture; a county in Mianyang Prefecture; (Nongtian) District and Jintang County in Chengdu municipality; and Wanyuan County in Daxian Prefecture. Six counties in Neijiang Prefecture were seriously damaged and people and livestock in some communes and brigades were injured or killed. Immediately after the hailstorms, leaders at all levels of the party and the government in the stricken areas quickly rushed to the damaged areas to inspect the disaster situation, comfort victims and look into and arrange recovery measures. [Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 7 May 82 HK]

REACTION TO BUSH CHINA VISIT, REAGAN LETTERS

Clarifications Asked of U.S.

OW150549 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] This station has learned that the Government of the Republic of China has officially asked the Reagan administration to clarify its position after the pronouncement of the contents of the three letters sent to the Peking [as heard] leaders by President Reagan.

According to the Chinese-language CHINA TIMES in Taipei, the Government of the Republic of China is very unhappy that Washington had not consulted with Taipei before the letters were delivered. The TIMES said: Dr Tsai Wei-ping, the representative in the United States of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs, met on 10 May with David Dean, chairman of the American Institute in Taiwan, to express the Republic of China's dissatisfaction over the way the United States treated its old friend and ally. The TIMES also said: Arrangements are being made for a meeting between Dr Tsai and John Holdridge, assistant secretary of state for East Asia and Pacific affairs, who accompanied Bush on the Peking trip.

Legislative Yuan Motion

OW141457 Taipei CNA in English 1410 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] Taipei, 14 May (CNA) -- Legislator Chung Chi-jung, Friday proposed a motion to the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Legislative Yuan asking the committee to invite Foreign Minister Chu Fu-sung to explain in detail the background of U.S. President Ronald Reagan's three letters to Peiping leaders.

In the motion Chung said that from the contents of the letters as they were made public, people will sense that Reagan has obviously ignored the interests of the Republic of China. "Some contents are even against the Asia policies of the country, and that is why the whole nation is concerned so much about these letters," he stressed. He said that the Foreign Affairs Committee should immediately hold a meeting to listen to the foreign minister's reports in this regard, so as to understand the whole story of the issue and to know what counter measures the Ministry of Foreign Affairs is going to take.

Further Details

OW151435 Taipei CNA in English 1426 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Taipei, 15 May (CNA) -- The Legislative Yuan's Foreign Affairs Committee decided Saturday to invite Foreign Affairs Minister Chu Fu-sung to report on the implications of United States Vice President George Bush's recent visit to the China mainland. The motion was raised by legislator Tao Yun and won unanimous approval.

The motion points out that Vice President Bush in his Peiping trip last week brought three letters from President Reagan, one each to Chao Tsu-yang, "chairman" of the Chinese Communist Party, Teng Hsiao-ping, "vice premier", and Hu Yao-pang, "premier" of the Peiping regime. [titles as received] In these letters Reagan assigned importance to Chinese Communist peace offer while neglecting the legal rights of 18 million people in the Republic of China.

Chiang Ching-kuo Meeting

OW160845 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] President Chiang Ching-kuo today met with top government leaders to discuss matters believed to be concerning U.S. Vice President Bush's recent visit to Peking [as heard] and President Reagan's three letters to the Chinese Communist leadership. According to the CENTRAL NEWS AGENCY, President Chiang urged during the meeting that the people of the Republic of China consolidate their own confidence and not be affected by external factors. The president reiterated the longstanding government policy of having no negotiations with the Communists and of remaining in the democratic camp.

President Chiang also called for redoubled efforts to promote further understanding of the Republic of China by the government and people of the United States. The president stressed that if the United States and the Republic of China are united, both will benefit.

CHINA POST 11 May Editorial

OW170455 Taipei CHINA POST in English 11 May 82 p 4

[Editorial: "U.S. Vice President Bush's Mainland Visit"]

[Text] U.S. Vice President George Bush's visit to the Chinese mainland was a failure because he should not have discussed with the Peiping regime the arms sales to the Republic of China which the Peiping regime has no business to object to or interfere with.

The failure was apparent when Wan Li retorted to Bush's remarks at a farewell reception that the two days of talks have "enabled us to see even more clearly the importance and urgency of removing the serious obstacles existing in Red Chinese-U.S. relations." Bush in his statement said that "as friends we cannot and must not allow our disagreements to dominate our dialogue." Wan Li's remarks were an indirect slap at Bush.

But Bush's press conference remarks prior to his departure from Peiping were more positive. He clearly stated that President Ronald Reagan would not turn his back on the old friend, the Republic of China, and that the United States President must carry out the law.

However, Bush also released copies of President Reagan's letters to Chinese Communist leaders, including Teng Hsiao-ping, Chao Tsu-yang and Hu Yao-pang, in which Reagan still revealed his attachment to playing the "China card" toward the Soviet threats. Judging from this, President Reagan, in suggesting a trip for Bush to visit the Chinese mainland, had played into Chinese Communist hands if not fallen into a Chinese Communist trap.

Apparently the United States is still laboring under the illusion that the Peiping regime can help the United States in the present danger and find "a firm basis for cooperation." This prompted the United States to appease the Peiping regime and do a great deal to meet its demands. The withholding of arms sales for the Republic of China for 15 months until the recent administration's notification to the U.S. Congress of US$60 million spare parts sales to the ROC was but a symptom of the U.S. appeasement attitude. The U.S. administration's promise to the Peiping leaders that during the discussion of the Taiwan problem they would not sell arms to the island is another disturbing feature of the visit.

The people of the Republic of China should be alert to further softening of the U.S. stand on the Republic of China. Bush's reiteration of U.S. acknowledging Peiping's often repeated phrase that "there is but one China and Taiwan is part of it" shows another pitfall in U.S. thinking on the China question. The phrase was contained in the Shanghai communique not as an agreement but as a claim by the Peiping regime which the United States "acknowledged" but did not recognize.

As we have repeatedly pointed out, the Peiping regime attempts to claim sovereignty over Taiwan through the use of that phrase. No responsible statesman should acknowledge or recognize such claim without compromising the vital interests of the Republic of China on the island bastion of Taiwan.

It must be reiterated once again that Taiwan was returned to the Republic of China after World War II as a result of the Cairo declaration, which was reaffirmed by the Potsdam Conference. There is no way that the Chinese Communist regime can possibly claim Taiwan as its own. As a matter of fact, the Peiping regime's occupation of the Chinese mainland is illegal and all its claims have been declared and considered as null and void by the government and people of the Republic of China, who are the legitimate representatives of the Chinese mainland as well as Taiwan.

It is high time for the American people to realize the serious pitfall the U.S. administration has fallen into without being conscious of the dire consequences. It has fallen into the united front trap set by the Peiping regime and it is sinking deeper and deeper into such a trap aimed at the ultimate betrayal of the Republic of China by the Reagan administration. Its sinister implication is truly frightening and dreadful.

The American people would do well to advise their congressional leaders to put a stop to such goings-on as may lead to the betrayal of the 18 million people of the Republic of China by the United States. They should demand that the Reagan administration stop talking with the Peiping regime on the so-called "Taiwan problem." They should also demand the immediate implementation of the Taiwan Relations Act together with the resumption of the arms sales program without further delay.

LIEN HO PAO 12 May Article

OW171158 Taipei LIEN HO PAO in Chinese 12 May 82 p 1

[Article by LIEN HO PAO reporter Kao Hui-ye: "Reagan's Three Letters Have Caused Concern"]

[Text] After the release of U.S. President Reagan's recent letters to the three Chinese Communist "leaders," the immediate reaction of the people in Taipei who are concerned about this matter was: In order to make up for the unhappy relations between Washington and Reagan's action is extremely unfair to us.

Our government's spokesman has issued a statement expressing "serious concern" about the three letters and about Vice President Bush's talk when he visited the Chinese mainland. We have learned that our Ministry of Foreign Affairs has also expressed Taipei's view to the related U.S. departments through the Taipei office of the American Institute in Taiwan.

Those who are concerned about this matter have sufficient reason to express their dissatisfaction over the contents of the three letters.

First, in the past only U.S. Secretary of State Haig "welcomed" Yeh Chien-ying's so-called "nine-point peace proposal." Now President Reagan also says "we fully recognize the significance of the nine-point proposal." Reagan's words represent a change from the past stand that the United States would not involve itself in China's affairs and that the problem should be solved by the Chinese on "both sides of the strait." True, the United States has to "involve" itself to a certain extent, in the so-called "China problem." But outwardly at least it has sided with the Chinese Communists. This change is obviously unfavorable and also extremely unfair to us.

Second, in his letter Reagan said that the United States expects that "Taiwan's need for weapons will naturally decrease when new progress is made in solving the 'Taiwan issue' peacefully." This argument sounds logical but in reality the major premise of his "supposition" is wrong. The Chinese Communists' "nine-point peace proposal" clearly places Taiwan under the "sovereignty" of the Chinese Communists. The Taipei side cannot accept this by any means. Proceeding from such an erroneous supposition, how can the United States follow up with correct steps?

LIEN HO PAO 12 May Editorial

OW171225 Taipei Lien Ho PAO in Chinese 12 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "We Must Closely Watch the Outcome of Bush's Visit to the Mainland and His 'New Idea' "]

[Text] U.S. Vice President Bush and his party paid a series of visits to six places in the Asia-Pacific region, Japan, Korea, Singapore, Australia, New Zealand and mainland China between 23 April and 9 May.

On his travel plan it was first announced that he would visit Australia and New Zealand. Later, on 25 March, it was announced that he would also visit Japan, Korea and Singapore. As to his visit to mainland China, it was publicly announced for the first time on 27 April, making it the last stop in his entire travel plan.

Bush's visit to mainland China appeared to have been decided upon with difficulty and after much delay, mainly because the Chinese Communists, under the pretext of demanding the United States stop selling weapons to the Republic of China, had assumed postures that were perplexing to the United States. So in the entire course of contacts between the United States and the Chinese Communists in the past several months, the United States seemed to be constantly wooing the Chinese Communists while the Chinese Communists set up traps for the United States every step of the way. As a result, the United States succeeded through the use of all kinds of connections in arranging Bush's trip to mainland China, but apparently paid quite a price.

As gradually revealed by facts, the 2-hour meeting between U.S. Secretary of State Haig and Chinese Communist Ambassador Chai Zemin on 5 April was a very important meeting. At this meeting they not only discussed the entire issue about the $60 million military sales but forwarded President Reagan's letters to Teng Hsiao-ping and Chao Tsu-yang. In the letter Reagan affirmed the unofficial status of relations between the United States and Taiwan, reiterated the "one China" principle and that Taiwan is a part of China and stressed that the global threat of Soviet Russia and its satellite countries has impelled the United States and the Chinese Communists toward finding a firmer basis for strategic cooperation. In saying this, his most direct purpose was to persuade the Chinese Communists to officially invite Bush to visit mainland China.

Therefore, after all these twists and turns, Bush was from the start in a disadvantageous position during his trip to mainland China. Moreover, the fact that Bush himself has always been very warm and has striven to be accommodating to the Chinese Communists made the outcome of his visit not hard to predict. The United States has taken such an attitude toward the Chinese Communists mainly for two reasons.

1. U.S. sales of military equipment and weapons to the Republic of China is provided for in the "Taiwan Relations Act." Acting in accordance with this act, the Reagan administration should feel bold and assured because it is in the right and should be able to ignore any Chinese Communist threat and blackmail. In fact, however, the U.S. attitude is not bold and assured. Thus, the United States was taken in by the Chinese Communists' cunning, and it sought to take any opportunity to make a deal.

2. In its contacts and negotiations with the Chinese Communists, the United States has overstressed the threat of Soviet Russia and its satellite countries. In so doing, the United States is indeed exposing its own weakness and destroying its own prestige. Just think, if the person who is crying "help!" and asking another person to help him still tries to bargain, isn't he asking for humiliation? And Bush's recent trip to mainland China, from making arrangements to actual talks in Peiping, everywhere revealed the clumsiness and weakness of the United States. In particular, in addition to his letters to Teng Hsiao-ping and Chao Tsu-yang, Reagan this time again sent a letter to Hu Yao-pang. Moreover, before Bush arrived in Peiping, he stopped over in Hang-chou and had a meeting first with U.S. Ambassador Hummel and others to hear about the Chinese Communists attitude. This all the more showed his cautiousness and fear of offending the Chinese Communists.

This being the basic U.S. attitude, it was inevitable that in Bush's recent talks in Peiping the United States was the retreating side from beginning to end. For example, on the military sales issue, no breakthrough of any kind was achieved. Nor had they anticipated any breakthrough.

Yet Bush indicated that progress had been made in the talks on this issue, and he also predicted that the issue would be solved. On what basis did he say so? Will the concessions needed to solve the problem be made by the Chinese Communists or the United States? If the concessions are to be made by the United States, what will they be? No communique was issued on the result of their talks. However, before his departure from Peiping, Bush not only issued a statement to reporters but also made public Reagan's three letters to the Chinese Communist leaders, whose contents were equivalent to a joint communique on their talks. Bush's openly praising the positive manner in which the Chinese Communists handled the results of the talks added all the more to the importance of the three letters. In other words, the three letters have become the Reagan administration's new assurance to the Chinese Communists.

Besides the previously mentioned points, what is most offending to the eye in the three letters is that Reagan has for the first time approved of the Chinese Communists' united front offensive. He not only acknowledged that the peace proposal made by the Chinese Communists in September last year had some meaning, but also explained that the United States in its statement on 11 January this year on the military sales question had already made certain responses on the issue. At the same time, he also suggested that if the Chinese Communists continue to pursue their present policy and maintain peace in the Taiwan Strait, then U.S. military sales to Taiwan will naturally be reduced gradually. Thus, although the "Taiwan Relations Act" remains unchanged and the United States will continue to indicate that it will abide by this law, its practice of linking military sales to Taiwan with the Chinese Communists' peace posture is tantamount to revising the "Taiwan Relations Act," making the law change in spirit and gradually cease to exist except in name. Bush indicated before his departure from Peiping that after the talks he had a specific idea to take back to the United States. What after all is that idea? It merits close watching by us.

A spokesman of our Ministry of Foreign Affairs issued a statement yesterday on President Reagan's three letters and Bush's trip to mainland China, making three points: 1) We express serious concern about their ignoring our interests; 2) we shall never negotiate with the Chinese Communists; 3) we hope that the United States will abide by the "Taiwan Relations Act." We hope that the U.S. Government will understand our position and the Chinese Communists' united front scheme. We also hope that the U.S. Government will hold firmly to its own position, not dance to the Chinese Communists' magic flute and, particularly, not allow the Chinese Communists to interfere with the free will of the United States in implementing a domestic law.

Finally, we must remind the government and compatriots at home and abroad, as our yesterday's editorial pointed out, that while we "wait patiently for a change" in the Sino-American relations, the changing trend is not in our favor. Therefore, we cannot cope with changes by remaining unchanged ourselves. We must face up to the critical time element in the current development of the Sino-American relations and make our moves on our own initiative to open up new prospects in diplomacy and strengthen Sino-American relations. Viewing Sino-American relations from Reagan's three letters and the outcome of Bush's trip to mainland China, we want to reiterate the main point in yesterday's editorial and call on the government in handling the Sino-American relations to take actions in addition to and in coordination with protests in words and explanations of our position. We must not continue to wait patiently for the relations to change naturally.

CHINA NEWS 15 May Editorial

OW150611 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] In an editorial today, the English-language CHINA NEWS commented on Sino-U.S. relations by saying: The Republic of China must possess a great deal of intrinsic value, for its so-called friends in the United States are thinking of selling it to the Chinese Communists for a third time since Richard Nixon visited Peking [as heard] in 1972.

Nixon thought he was being very clever when he said in the Shanghai communique that Chinese on both sides of the Taiwan Straits agree that there is only one China and that Taiwan is part of China. Jimmy Carter thought he was being equally clever when he followed it up in December 1978, saying that he recognizes the communist regime as the only legal government of China without, however, specifically acknowledging that Taiwan is a province of Communist China. Now comes President Reagan, who in his recent letters to Chinese communist leaders assured them that he would not let the existing unofficial relations between the people of the United States and the people of Taiwan weaken American cognizance of the one China concept.

The Republic of China underwent a great trauma when Nixon went to Peking, but he said his new friendship with the communists would leave the Sino-American mutual defense treaty intact. The Republic of China underwent another trauma when Carter recognized Peking on the latter's terms, which were severance of diplomatic relations with the Republic of China, termination of the mutual defense treaty and the removal of U.S. forces and installations from Taiwan. But the U.S. Congress made amends by forcing the Taiwan Relations Act on a reluctant administration. There is a very important provision in the Taiwan Relations Act, which commits the United States to furnishing the Republic of China with an adequate supply of arms needed for its defense against any Chinese communist attempt to occupy Taiwan by force.

It seems that the Reagan administration, under the strong influence of the Bush-Haig team, may now try to get out of its commitment by tying it to so-called prospects of Taiwan's peaceful unification with the mainland. Hopes were high in the Republic of China when Reagan took over in January 1981. He said during the presidential campaign that if elected, he would upgrade U.S.-Republic of China relations. Later on, he had to backtrack somewhat by saying that he considered the existing relations as official enough and forgot about upgrading them.

Now, in his letters to Chinese communist leaders, Reagan was reportedly to have told them that there will be no need for the sale of arms while negotiations with Peking on the subject were underway, and he saw Taiwan's need for U.S. arms decreasing as the so-called prospects for peaceful reunification improve.

The CHINA NEWS continues its editorial by saying: What is most disturbing is that Reagan welcomes Yeh Chien-ying's nine-point peace proposal of last September. Does this mean he would now bring pressure to bear on the Republic of China to talk with Peking?

The editorial concludes: Relations between the United States and the Republic of China have come to a crucial point. The time has come for some plain talks between Washington and Taipei. The Reagan administration must be told that the government and the people of the Republic of China would not like to be sold again.

CHIANG ADDRESSES GOVERNMENT, OTHER OFFICIALS

OW151441 Taipei CNA in English 1422 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Taipei, 15 May (CNA) -- President Chiang Ching-Kuo [words indistinct] with high-ranking officials in the government, the ruling Kuomintang and the military, and he listened to their related briefings.

During the time of national crisis, the president said, he hopes all the military servicemen and the people will firm up their confidence and sense of purpose, not being affected by factors from abroad, and developing for themselves a bright future amid various difficulties.

President Chiang also asked the nation to strengthen internal unity. The national revolution was won with spirit and power, he said.

Concerning the national enemy — the Chinese communists — he said the nation should fight to the end and never leave any possibility of negotiation with them.

We are deeply convinced, the president assured, that the Chinese communists are seeking self-destruction, and the ROC should make every effort to accelerate their demise.

The ROC will, he promised, always stand on the side of the democratic camp, not only uncovering the Chinese communists' united front tricks in the international arena, but also helping deepen the understanding of the American Government toward our government and our people.

The ROC will take further steps, he said, to strengthen the time-honored pursuit of this nation with the United States toward "cooperation for mutual benefit."

CHIANG SAID TO BE GIVEN 'CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH'

OW150541 Taipei International Service in English 0120 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] The secretary general of the Central Committee of the ruling Kuomintang, Chiang Yen-shih, said at Hsinchu that President Chiang Ching-kuo has just been given a clean bill of health and is expected to resume his visits to various Taiwan rural communities in the near future.

Secretary General Chiang said since President Chiang's eye operation 2 months ago, he has been recuperating at home for a couple of months and was declared sound and healthy by his doctors.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 096 18 May 1982

CONTENTS

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

UNITED STATES

RENMIN RIBAO Cites Criticism of Chicago TRIBUNE [15 May] B 1
Haig Appeals for End to Domestic Squabbling [RENMIN RIBAO 15 May] B 2
Fang Yi Meets U.S. Engineering Academy Head B 3

NORTHEAST ASIA

RENMIN RIBAO Sees Bleak Future for Chon Tu-hwan [18 May] D 1
DPRK Envoy Marks Kwangju Uprising Anniversary D 2
KYODO: PRC Invites Direct Japanese Investments D 2

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

SRV Offensive in Kampuchea Said Defeated E 1
Australian Study Group Arrives in Beijing E 2

SOUTH ASIA

PRC, India Begin Second Round of Talks 17 May F 1
Press Delegation Concludes Visit to India F 1

WESTERN EUROPE

Portuguese Chief of General Staff Pays Visit G 1
Yang Dezhi Hosts Banquet G 1
Visit to PLA Units G 2
Meeting With Geng Biao G 2
Meeting With Zhao Ziyang G 2
Meeting With Xi Zhongxun G 3
PLA Commander Hosts Dinner G 3
Visit to Military Academy G 4
Military Delegation Concludes Visit to Spain G 4
Yao Yilin Meets Italian Foreign Trade Delegation G 4
Yao Yilin Meets With Austrian Audit Officials G 4

EASTERN EUROPE

Leaders Greet Newly-Elected Yugoslav Officials H 1
Ye Greets Dizdarevic H 1
Zhao Greets Planinc H 1
PRC Procurator Receives Romanian Delegation H 1

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Special Envoy He Ying Visits Syria, Libya I 1
Visit With PLO Officials I 1
Departure From Syria I 1
Meeting With Libya's Jallud I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

RENMIN RIBAO Urges Training Cadres by Rotation [14 May] K 1
Hu Qiaomu Discusses Educating Youths on Ethics K 3
[Beijing WANBAO 5 May]
RENMIN RIBAO Editorial on Highway Transportation [14 May] K 5
Women's Federation Meeting Ends in Beijing K 7
Xi Zhongxun's Address K 7
New First Secretary Announced K 8
Foreign Trade Official Stresses Opening Market K 9
LIAOWANG Discusses China Commodities Fairs [No 4, 20 Apr] K 9
State Council Issues Circular on Currency K 11
Progress on Major Construction Projects Noted K 12
Metallurgical Industry Tops Jan-Apr Targets K 13
Correction to Namelist of CCP Department Heads K 13

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Anhui People's Congress Views Draft Constitution O 1
Resolution Adopted O 1
Congress Concludes O 2
Kuomintang Committee Meeting in Fujian O 2
Shanghai Radio Urges Economic Crimes Crackdown O 3

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Further Reports on Flooding in Guangdong P 1
36 Dead in Huaiji County P 1
Flood Relief Conference Held P 1
Guangxi Congress Plans Economic Crimes Crackdown P 2
Resolution Issued P 2
Hainan PLA Cadres Study Resolution, Mao's Works P 3
Henan Conference on Huang He Flood Prevention P 3

SOUTHWEST REGION

Sichuan Youth Lectured on U.S.-Chiang 'Crimes' Q 1
Sichuan Holds United Front Work Conference Q 1
Xizang CCP Office Urges Studying Constitution Q 2
Yunnan Circular on Studying Draft Constitution Q 2
Yunnan PLA Company Fights 'Degeneracy' at Border Q 2
[YUNNAN RIBAO 29 Apr]

NORTHWEST REGION

Gansu's Feng Jixin Visits Drought-Stricken Area T 1
Central Work Group Visits Qinghai Disaster Area T 1
Qinghai Official Discusses Combating Snowstorms T 1
Ma Wenrui at Tang Literature Meeting in Xian T 2
Xinjiang Urgent Circular on Disaster Relief T 2

PRC MEDIA ON TAIWAN AFFAIRS

PRC Defeats Taiwan in Hong Kong Tennis Tourney U 1
Results of Women's Matches U 1
PRC Man Makes Finals U 1

TAIWAN

Papers View Reagan Letter to PRC, Bush Visit V 1
LIEN HO PAO Article [12 May] V 1
CHINA POST Editorial [15 May] V 4
Premier Sun Visits Matsu Installations V 5

RENMIN RIBAO CITES CRITICISM OF 'CHICAGO TRIBUNE'

HK150800 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 6

["Newsletter From America" by Yuan Xianlu [5913 0341 4389]: "Against the Tide, Against People's Wishes"]

[Text] I arrived in Chicago in mid-April. An American friend came to visit me that day, bringing a copy of the 13 April Chicago TRIBUNE; he said it contained an absurd editorial, and gave it to me to read. This paper has long advocated "two Chinas." After its 8 March editorial was criticized by Chinese public opinion, it published another editorial on 13 April to rebut that criticism. Apart from singing the old tune again, this editorial publicly proclaimed that the paper "has never accepted the foreign affairs concept that Beijing also represents Taiwan, which began with the Nixon administration and was confirmed by the Carter administration."

Two days later, I met Professor Jiang Yingcheng of Northeastern Illinois University in Chicago. He said that after the publication of the TRIBUNE's 8 March editorial, he wrote to the paper on 10 March criticizing the editorial as running counter to the 1972 Sino-U.S. "Shanghai communique" and pointing out that "the United States is interfering in China's internal affairs by arming Taiwan." There was no news of this letter for a long time, and he made many phone calls to make representations and protest before it was finally published on 3 April.

I read the 3 April edition of the paper. Published together with Professor Jiang's letter was a letter signed by (Charles Fisher). This letter pointed out: "Everyone familiar with the situation knows that neither Chiang Kai-shek and his successors on Taiwan nor mainland China have ever taken the stand that Taiwan should be separated from China and become a state." The TRIBUNE editorial's description of Taiwan as a "state" "seems to be taking liberties."

As far as the Chicago TRIBUNE was concerned, these criticisms from readers were falling on deaf ears. Apart from the 13 April editorial, the paper also published on 15 April, beside a table depicting U.S. arms sales to Taiwan over the years, a special drawing showing the American flag and the Taiwan "flag." This newspaper is quite impenetrably thickheaded in its open interference in China's internal affairs and insistence on "two Chinas."

"Don't think that the words of the TRIBUNE have much influence in Chicago," an American familiar with the situation explained to me. Chicago is the most important city in the Midwest; in the past, a conservative trend of thought prevailed there, and there is still a market for this paper's viewpoint. The American people have understood from the tremendous changes in the international situation in the past 10 years or more that American security and interests are closely linked with the overall world situation. The importance for America of developing relations with China is being realized ever more profoundly in Chicago. "The people of Chicago just regard the TRIBUNE as a bit of a clown for going against the tide and insistently acting as the vanguard in opposing China."

What I saw and heard in my few days in Chicago showed that there is a basis for this view. Many of the people of various circles I encountered repeatedly stressed the importance of Sino-U.S. relations for the peoples of the two countries and for world peace, and that these relations should be continually strengthened. When I mentioned the TRIBUNE editorial, those who had read it shook their heads and shrugged, objecting to it. Even a foreign affairs editor of the paper said that the editorial could not represent his own views or the views of the majority of editorial staffers.

In the Chicago First National Bank, a senior public relations man told me: It was no accident that this bank was the first in America to establish business ties with China. Excellent Sino-U.S. relations are very important not only for the world situation, but also in the area of economics. Chicago is one of the main consolidation and distribution centers for U.S. industrial and agricultural products and needs to develop trade with China. Many businessmen also declared that it is not in the interests of the people of Chicago to pursue "two Chinas" and sabotage Sino-U.S. relations.

The TRIBUNE did not even find much support among some people in Chicago who were not very familiar with the current state of development of Sino-U.S. relations. As arranged by the "Chicago International Visitors' Center," a young American couple kindly accompanied me on a tour of the city on Saturday. The woman, a housewife, said to me: "China is a distant land, and I know little about it. But I do have affection for it." When visiting O'Hare Airport, the old driver who took me there chatted with me in a friendly way along the road. He said he had been to Shanghai after victory in the anti-Japanese war and still remembered it well. He hoped that he could go to Shanghai again one day. None of these ordinary Chicago folk had read the TRIBUNE editorials. When I told them how things stood, their reaction was: "We will certainly not agree to actions that damage friendship between the American and Chinese peoples." The wishes of Chicago's people are very clear, yet the TRIBUNE's 8 March editorial boasted that it was "reflecting the views of the great majority of American citizens." On this point, an American friend said to me, laughing: "Did you notice that in the 13 April editorial the paper again described itself as 'the great paper with harmonious relations' with China, and said that they had in the past supported the 'new initiative' taken by the United States toward China? What does this mean?" Without waiting for me to reply, this friend continued: "They want both to go against the tide and maintain their opposition to China, and they are also scared by the tide and cannot help pretending that they are still friendly toward China. This is where they are so absurd and also so tragic!"

HAIG APPEALS FOR END TO DOMESTIC SQUABBLING

HK160210 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 7

[Unattributed report: "Haig Appeals for End to Domestic Squabbling and for Support for Reagan Proposal; Soviet Union Takes Advantage of U.S. Domestic Differences To Preach That Reagan Seeks Military Superiority"]

[Text] Three days after President Reagan proposed, on 9 May, negotiating with the Soviet Union on strategic arms reductions, Secretary of State Haig, testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, appealed for an end to domestic factional squabbling and for support for Reagan's proposal. At the same time, he expounded on the eight guiding principles for negotiating with the Soviet Union.

Reports and commentaries from Washington have concentrated on analyzing the urgency of Haig's appeal. They said that unless the serious domestic differences eased, and in particular, unless the forces advocating a freeze in U.S.-Soviet nuclear forces could not be weakened, it would be very difficult for President Reagan to carry out his strategic arms modernization plan, and the United States would also be in a position of weakness in negotiating with the Soviet Union.

The domestic differences Reagan faces after putting forward his proposal remain very serious. Demonstrations are continuing throughout the country in support of a nuclear arms freeze. A number of congressmen and politicians have expressed disappointment that the Reagan proposal did not mention a nuclear arms freeze, and some have sharply condemned him for this.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is currently holding hearings on the Reagan proposal. After Haig's testimony, it will hear testimony from Senators Kennedy and Hatfield, strong advocates of a nulcear arms freeze. At the same time, two previous defense secretaries, Schlesinger and Brown, came out with views that differed totally from Reagan's. They held that the United States and Soviet Union had a rough balance in nuclear arms, and demanded that Congress consider reviving SALT-II.

What is particularly embarrassing for the Reagan administration is that the Soviet Union takes full advantage of American domestic squabbles to create a momentum for its stand on opposing a reduction and insisting on a freeze in nuclear arms. TASS has quoted at length from congressmen and politicians dissatisfied with the Reagan proposal, proclaimed that they "have all seen through the tricks of the President" and held that the motive behind the Reagan proposal is to pursue "unilateral U.S. superiority."

In these circumstances, it seems that Haig's entire testimony was aimed at U.S. domestic squabbling. Haig has officially announced that SALT-II is dead and stressed that it was extremely important to replace it by renewed negotiations on major reductions in nuclear arms. This requires people in the United States who advocated approval of the treaty to believe that the Soviet Union can only be prevented from gaining superiority by having genuine "reductions" instead of merely nominal "limitations."

Haig held that in the face of the ever-expanding Soviet military strength, the U.S. Government "must go further than a freeze," and greatly reduce nuclear systems that have the greatest effect on the stability of the situation (by this he mainly meant land-based missiles, in which the Soviet Union is superior) in order to achieve "strategic stability." He also denounced more than 10 domestic proposals of various types on a nuclear arms freeze as "sabotaging" Reagan's new scheme and "enabling the Soviet Union to maintain its position of superiority."

Haig again requested Congress to approve the military modernization plan, which has encountered strong opposition. He stressed that whether or not this vast military expansion scheme was approved would determine the "success or failure" of the strategic arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union proposed by Reagan to be held in Geneva at the end of June or in early July. In conclusion, Haig also put forward eight principles for negotiations with the Soviet Union. He required that an agreement "permit the United States to develop and possess sufficient military capability to deter the Soviet Union and also to pursue U.S. national military strategy."

People are watching to see whether Haig's efforts will succeed in putting down the movement for a nuclear arms freeze which is now gathering strength, so as to strengthen the U.S. position in negotiating with the Soviet Union.

FANG YI MEETS U.S. ENGINEERING ACADEMY HEAD

OW171554 Beijing XINHUA in English 1530 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Fang Yi, Chinese state councillor and minister in charge of the State Scientific and Technological Commission, met with Dr. Courtland Perkins, president of the National Academy of Engineering and vice-chairman of the National Research Council of the United States, and his wife, Dr. Nancy Perkins, at the Great Hall of the People here this afternoon.

Fang Yi and Mr. Perkins exchanged views on the relation between pure basic sciences and applied sciences. Both said they hope that exchanges and cooperation in science and technology, especially in engineering technology, will be expanded. Present was Zhang Wei, vice-chairman of the China Association for Science and Technology.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins arrived in Beijing May 13 for a visit to China at the invitation of the China Association for Science and Technology. They are to leave here tomorrow for a visit to Shanghai.

RENMIN RIBAO SEES BLEAK FUTURE FOR CHON TU-HWAN

HK181151 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 18 May 82 p 7

[Article by Bao Kang [1405 1660]: "Futile Window-Dressing"]

[Text] In an attempt to confuse the basically antagonistic demarcation between fascist dictatorship and democracy, Chon Tu-hwan of South Korea has asserted that his "autocratic rule," backed by bayonets and tanks, is "democracy rooted in our political soil" and insisted that this is "politics of the people." However, this is just a waste of effort. This clumsy tactic of fraudulently changing concepts and confounding black and white will only more vividly reflect the ugly features of Chon Tu-hwan, this fascist dictator.

After Pak Chong-hui, the former dictator of South Korea, was shot dead, the Chon Tu-hwan clique staged a "coup d'etat," banned all political activities, closed the National Assembly, eliminated political opponents, deprived 567 National Assembly members, senior officials and responsible members of various political parties and public organizations of their political rights, carried out a bloody suppression in Kwangju, single-handedly controlled the election of the "unified National Assembly" and consequently ascended the throne of the "presidency" of South Korea and placed the people of South Korea under fascist rule. This is the "normal social atmosphere" Chon Tu-hwan promised to create on a "democratic basis" in South Korea when he took office!

In the autocratic system set by up Chon Tu-hwan, complaints are heard from people of every strata in South Korea, and discontent is growing. Therefore, Chon Tu-hwan has hoisted the banner of "democracy," announced the lifting of martial law, granted amnesty to, suspended the sentences of and released over 1,000 "criminals" and abolished "a second term for the president" in an attempt to gloss over his image and to divert the discontent of the people and win them over. However, while Chon Tu-hwan was giving an extravagant account of "democracy" at a press reception last August, when the reporters asked him whether he was contemplating removing the restrictions on the activities of his political opponents, he viciously answered: "Now is still not the time to consider this question." This penetrating remark has laid bare the hyprocritical motive of the "democracy" he talked so glibly about.

No longer willing to tolerate Chon Tu-hwan's rule and control and suppression of South Korea by the United States, the people of South Korea this March set fire to and burned the U.S. cultural center in Pusan. The Chon Tu-hwan clique hastily carried out an unbridled manhunt in Seoul and other places and arrested over 5,700 people. This is another exposure of the features of this fascist butcher.

In recent years, by relying on military dictatorship, all-round implementation of an imprisonment policy and strangling the democratic movement, the Chon Tu-hwan clique has encountered not only resistance from the people of South Korea, but also widespread international condemnation. Moreover, they have also made a mess of the economy. For the sake of extricating himself from the predicament of 2 consecutive years of economic recession, last January Chon Tu-hwan carried out a major reshuffle of the cabinet. Nam Tok-u, who had made such outstanding contributions to Pak Chong-hui and Chon Tu-hwan, was removed from his post as prime minister and became Chon Tu-hwan's scapegoat.

Although the democratic movement of the people of South Korea is temporarily at a low ebb because of ruthless suppression by Chon Tu-hwan, the serious crisis hidden in the political situation of South Korea and the fury hidden in society will erupt sooner or later. History is merciless. As long as the Chon Tu-hwan clique, which has vainly attempted to replace democracy with fascist dictatorship, exists, it will not have an easy time.

DPRK ENVOY MARKS KWANGJU UPRISING ANNIVERSARY

OW170834 Beijing XINHUA in English 0819 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Chon Chong-yong, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Embassy of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to China, gave a press conference at the embassy here today to mark the second anniversary of the Kwangju uprising of the people of South Korea.

Mr. Chon strongly condemned the fascist crimes committed by the Chon Tu-hwan clique in suppressing the Kwangju uprisers and praised the fighting spirit of the Kwangju people. He called on all the South Korean people, including students and other youth, to unite under the banner of democracy to oppose the Chon Tu-hwan clique's fascist rule and policy of division in South Korea. He said they should fight for the release of democrats, including Kim Tae-chung and patriotic youth and students who have been unjustly arrested and imprisoned.

After the press conference, a documentary film, "The Kwangju Popular Uprising Against the Military Fascist Clique," was shown.

KYODO: PRC INVITES DIRECT JAPANESE INVESTMENTS

OW151301 Tokyo KYODO in English 1241 GMT 15 May 82

[Excerpt] Beijing, May 15 (KYODO) -- China Saturday invited direct Japanese investments in Chinese enterprises in energy and agricultural development, farm improvement and such nonferrous metals as aluminum, copper, tungsten and titanium. The invitation was extended by Zheng Tuobin, Chinese vice-minister of foreign economic relations and trade, during an interview with a Japanese press delegation visiting here at the invitation of the Chinese Foreign Ministry.

Zheng said China is willing and ready to receive direct Japanese investments in such enterprises. He said the bilateral tax treaty now being negotiated between the two countries is intended to boost Japanese direct investments in China.

The vice-minister predicted that the emphasis of Chinese economic policy will switch from the acquisition of loans for giant industrial projects to inviting foreign funds and technological aid for the approximately 400,000 Chinese enterprises now in existence. Zheng added that not only big corporations but also smaller enterprises are welcome to make direct investments in Chinese businesses.

On the protection of China's domestic industries, the official said that some curbs would likely be imposed in a few years on the import of durable consumer goods, such as television sets, four-wheeled motor vehicles and refrigerators. Zheng said reports that China is already curbing the import of durable consumer goods made in Japan are true, but added that the measures are import restraints, rather than an all-out ban on imports. The official forecast that China's imports of some durable consumer goods, including television sets, would increase in the next few years.

SRV OFFENSE IN KAMPUCHEA SAID DEFEATED

OW151221 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0704 GMT 14 May 82

[Commentary by XINHUA correspondent Xiao Yang: "Another Defeated Dry Season Offensive"]

[Text] Beijing, 14 May (XINHUA) -- The fourth dry season offensive launched by Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea (November 1981 - April 1982) again ended in failure. Tested in four dry season battles, the army and civilians of Democratic Kampuchea have become stronger.

The direct military objective of the Vietnamese forces' dry season offensive this time was to regain the initiative they lost in the previous dry season, deal a decisive blow at the Democratic Kampuchean forces, take strategic Phnum Malai and seal off the Kampuchean-Thai border. Additionally, it was also designed to meet Hanoi's political and diplomatic needs. More than 3 years have passed since Vietnam launched its aggression against Kampuchea. It is faced with serious domestic economic difficulties, seething popular discontent and numerous internal contradictions. Obviously, the Vietnamese authorities attempted to win some "new victories" on the Kampuchean battlefield before the convocation of the Fifth Congress of the Vietnamese Communist Party at the end of March this year to divert the people's attention at home and alleviate internal contradictions. Internationally, the Vietnamese authorities, with their offensive, tried to show the world's public media that Vietnam still has the strength to annihilate the Democratic Kampuchean forces and occupy and control Kampuchea. At the same time, it also wanted to apply military pressure on Thailand and force Thailand and ASEAN into a dialogue with it and accept its fait accompli occupation of Kampuchea. However, all these attempts have come to nothing.

At the beginning of the dry season offensive, the Vietnamese forces threw in more than 10,000 troops along with a large number of tanks, artillery pieces and aircraft, and advanced quickly. Anxious to annihilate the invading enemy, the Democratic Kampuchean forces mounted a frontal resistance against the enemy's mopping-up operations and suffered some losses. They promptly readjusted their plan and strengthened guerrilla warfare, with squads and groups as fighting units, staying clear of the enemy's main force and striking at its weak points. They either mounted harassment attacks on the spot to obstruct the enemy's offensive or moved to the enemy's flanks and rear to launch surprise attacks on the enemy's campsites and strongholds and extensively destroy the enemy's transport lines, causing difficulties to the Vietnamese forces. At the same time, the Democratic Kampuchean forces also mounted extensive surprise attacks and pinned down enemy forces in other battlefields where the enemy forces were weak, effectively coordinating with counter-mopping-up operations on the main battlefield. In this way, they wore down and wiped out large numbers of enemy effectives both in areas of the enemy's main offensive as well as on other battlefields. In the end, they not only recaptured the lost territory, but liberated some new areas and expanded the guerrilla war area. On the Phnum Malai battlefield, where the Vietnamese forces launched their main offensive, the Vietnamese repeatedly brought in reinforcements, but they sustained more than 3,000 casualties and lost quite a number of tanks. The Vietnamese forces planned to launch another offensive on a rather large scale at the end of April and in early May. However, because the rainy season arrived early, in mid-April, they had to pull back in a hurry.

During this dry season, the Vietnamese forces managed to assemble some troops to launch a main mopping-up operation. But the troops were still insufficient in number, and their fighting capacity was low. Combat fatigue and desertions were quite widespread among Vietnamese rank and file soldiers. In contrast, the Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrilla forces gave play to their advantage in mobility and flexibility, preserving themselves and wiping out the enemy, and despite the fact that they faced a stronger enemy, they maintained the initiative on the battlefield.

The failure of the Vietnamese forces' fourth dry season offensive has made the Vietnamese authorities' assertion that "the Kampuchean situation is irreversible" all the more untenable. The victory has demonstrated the confidence and strength of the Democratic Kampuchean soldiers and civilians in fighting against Vietnamese aggression and for national salvation. Many foreign observers and foreign reporters who have visited Democratic Kampuchea-controlled areas are of the opinion that the Democratic Kampuchean Government's determination to resist Vietnamese aggression and the new policies it has adopted are supported by the people. It is impossible for the Vietnamese authorities to rely on military strength in their effort to wipe out the Democratic Kampuchean resistance. This firm, anti-aggressive force is making contributions to safeguarding tranquillity in Southeast Asia and world peace.

AUSTRALIAN STUDY GROUP ARRIVES IN BEIJING

OW151317 Beijing XINHUA in English 1303 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- A 3-member study group from Australia led by P.J. Judge, officer of the Australian Centre for Sciences and Industrial Research Organization, arrived here by air this afternoon.

During its 2-week visit in China, the group will study the possibilities of Sino-Australian technical cooperation project on agricultural educational information centre.

Australia will soon send four more study groups to visit China. Their study projects include centres for training middle school English teachers and staff members for packaging for export, plant quarantine and comprehensive control of small watersheds for soil conservation on loess plateaus.

A leading member of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade said: "At present, Sino-Australian technical cooperation is developing smoothly. The aid by Australia to China is undertaken through technical cooperation projects decided by the two sides.

"Since the signing of an agreement between the Governments of Australia and China on a program of technical cooperation for development in October 1981, the two sides have begun work on more than 40 technical cooperation projects. The Australian side has freely provided China with advanced technology and technical equipment with Australian features. Their key technical aid projects are in the fields of land use, agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry, natural and medical sciences and language training," he said.

It was learned that the Australian Government will soon make policy readjustments in the area of providing free assistance to China, adopting measures to speed up and expand bilateral cooperation by increasing the proportion of installations and arranging funding of bigger projects.

PRC, INDIA BEGIN SECOND ROUND OF TALKS 17 MAY

OW171619 Beijing XINHUA in English 1608 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] New Delhi, May 17 (XINHUA) -- The second round of Sino-Indian official-level talks began in the Hyderabad House here today to explore ways and means for the settlement of the border issue between the two countries.

Besides the border problem, officials concerned from both countries have begun to research into methods for further development of exchanges of culture, trade and science.

In his speech, Fu Hao, special envoy of the Chinese Government and head of the delegation, affirmed the positive outcome of the first round of talks in Beijing last December and expressed the hope to advance further from the good beginning.

The Indian delegation expressed warm welcome to the Chinese delegation and hoped to have a positive outcome from this round of talks.

PRESS DELEGATION CONCLUDES VISIT TO INDIA

OW150730 Beijing XINHUA in English 0726 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] New Delhi, May 15 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese press delegation left here yesterday evening, concluding a 15-day visit amid friendly atmosphere.

During their stay, Rajiv Gandhi, M.P., had a friendly meeting with them. Vasant Sathe, minister of information and broadcasting, and Eric Gonsalves, secretary of the External Affairs Ministry, also received them.

They visited Jaipur, Calcutta, Bombay, Bangalore and Madras, in addition to New Delhi, meeting many Indian editors and correspondents.

PORTUGUESE CHIEF OF GENERAL STAFF PAYS VISIT

Yang Dezhi Hosts Banquet

OW141758 Beijing XINHUA in English 1637 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Yang Dezhi, chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and his wife, Shen Gejun, gave a banquet at the Great Hall of the People here this evening for General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, Mrs. Egidio and their party. The guests, who arrived this afternoon, are on a 12-day official visit at the invitation of Yang Dezhi.

Yang Dezhi said world peace is being threatened and the international situation is turbulent because of the intensified aggression and expansion by hegemonists. "Together with other West European countries, the Portuguese people and armed forces have maintained vigilance, consolidated national defense and made constant efforts for safeguarding national sovereignty and world peace. They have won respect and praise from the world," he said.

Like the people of other countries, the Chinese are longing for a peaceful environment to build their country. They will contribute their efforts to oppose hegemonism and defend world peace with all peace-loving countries and people throughout the world, he said.

"Although China and Portugal have different social systems, they have a lot in common. To oppose hegemonism and safeguard world peace is where our common strategic interests lie. To develop friendship and cooperation between our armed forces both accords with the interests of our peoples and helps safeguard peace and security in the world," he said.

He said the visit of Egidio, as the first chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, will contribute to the friendship between the armed forces and people of both nations.

Egidio said: "The most ideal world is one without blocs and groups or conflicts between them. But, as long as there is hegemonism, Portugal will stand by other West European countries in the struggle against it." He said the difficult world situation has been created by the superpowers.

"Though Portugal and China have different political systems and are far apart, they are all devoted to world peace," he said. Egidio said he is following with great interest the development and progress for which China is working. "I know very well the Chinese leadership is concerned with the two things -- domestic development and world peace," he said. "China is marching on the correct road, although it will naturally meet difficulties."

Present were Qin Jiwei, commander of the Beijing units of the P.L.A.; his wife, Tang Xianmei; Yang Guoyu, deputy commander of the P.L.A. Navy; Wang Dinglie, chief of staff of the P.L.A. Air Force; and Chai Chengwen, director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Ministry of National Defense. Portuguese Ambassador to China Antonio Ressano Garcia also attended the banquet.

This afternoon, the Chinese Ministry of National Defense welcomed Egidio at a ceremony in front of the military museum of the Chinese people's revolution. Accompanied by Yang Dezhi, Egidio reviewed an honor guard of the P.L.A.

Visit to PLA Units

OW151358 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1137 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- Accompanied by Yang Dezhi, chief of the General Staff of the Chinese PLA, General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, and his party this morning went by car to visit a unit of the PLA Air Force and a unit of the armored forces of the Beijing PLA units on the outskirts of Beijing. They were warmly welcomed by commanders and fighters.

General Egidio and his party watched exhibitions of flying and shooting with live ammunition by tankmen. At a firing range of the armored unit, the distinguished Portuguese guests climbed into Chinese-made tanks and made detailed inquiries about the guns and equipment of the tanks. General Egidio told the tankmen: "I am very happy to watch your military exhibitions. Your displays show that you have done a good job in daily drills." After watching a flying exhibition by an air force unit, General Egidio and Chief of the General Staff Yang Dezhi warmly shook hands with the fliers. They had photographs taken together.

At the conclusion of his visit, General Egidio said: "Today is my first contact with the Chinese Armed Forces. I am very glad. I believe that my visit to China will certainly strengthen the relations between the Armed Forces of Portugal and China."

Also accompanying General Egidio to the PLA units today were Wang Dinglie, chief of staff of the PLA Air Force; Cheng Chao, commander of the armored forces of the Beijing PLA units; and Zhang Bingyu, deputy director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Ministry of National Defense.

Meeting With Geng Biao

OW151528 Beijing XINHUA in English 1519 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Geng Biao, Chinese state councillor and minister of national defence, met with General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, and his party at the Great Hall of the People here this afternoon.

In a friendly conversation, Geng Biao said that since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries in 1979, "our relations have progressed. We shall have more exchange of visits to push our understanding and friendship forward."

General Egidio said the exchanges of visits by military leaders of the two countries are important not only to the friendship between the two armies, but also to the friendship and cooperation between the two countries and peoples. Geng Biao briefed the guests on China's domestic situation. He pointed out that the Chinese people need stability and unity at home and a peaceful international environment to build their country.

They also exchanged views on a number of international issues.

Present on the occasion were Zhang Bingyu, deputy director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Chinese Ministry of National Defence, and Antonio Ressano Garcia, Portuguese ambassador to China.

Meeting With Zhao Ziyang

OW161514 Beijing XINHUA in English 1510 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, met with General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, and his party at Zhongnanhai today.

Zhao Ziyang said: "Since the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and Portugal in 1979, relations between us have progressed well. We are very satisfied with this. In international affairs, we hold similar or identical positions on quite a few questions."

He said Portugal has adopted wise foreign policies since the overthrow of the dictatorial rule. He praised General Egidio for his efforts to develop friendship between Macao and Guangdong when he was governor of Macao in 1979 and 1980. He said Egidio's visit will promote development of Sino-Portuguese relations.

General Egidio said: "It is my great honor to work for friendship between Portugal and China. The Portuguese people hope to develop friendly cooperation with China."

They also discussed international issues. Zhao Ziyang said: "China hopes the West European countries will unite. We feel a powerful, united West Europe is important to safeguarding world peace."

Present were Wang Benzuo, director of the West European Affairs Department of the Foreign Ministry; Zhang Bingyu, deputy director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Ministry of National Defense; and Antonio Ressano Garcia, Portuguese ambassador to China.

Meeting With Xi Zhongxun

OW160822 Beijing XINHUA in English 0814 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Xi Zhongxun, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, met here today with General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, Mrs. Egidio and their party. Xi and the general are old friends. In 1980, when Egidio came to visit China as governor of Macao, he was warmly received by Xi Zhongxun, then governor of Guangdong Province. Later, Xi paid a return visit as guest of Egidio.

Today, the two friends are very happy to meet again in Beijing. They had a hearty conversation, satisfied with the development of cooperation between Guangdong and Macao in the past years. Portuguese Ambassador to China Antonio Ressano Garcia was also present at the meeting.

PLA Commander Hosts Dinner

OW161625 Beijing XINHUA in English 1615 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Qin Jiwei, commander of the Beijing units of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and his wife, Tang Xianmei, hosted a dinner here this evening for General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, Mrs. Egidio and their party. Last year, a Chinese military delegation led by Qin Jiwei visited Portugal and was accorded a warm reception. At this evening's dinner, Qin Jiwei and General Egidio toasted the growth of friendship between the armies and peoples of China and Portugal.

After the dinner, the guests attended a performance with Qin Jiwei and his wife. The performance was staged by the song and dance ensemble of the Beijing units. They presented songs and dances reflecting the militant life of the Chinese army and from Portugal. At the end of the performance, Egidio mounted the stage, congratulating the performers on their success.

Visit to Military Academy

OW171234 Beijing XINHUA in English 1213 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- General Melo Egidio, chief of the General Staff of the Armed Forces of Portugal, and his party visited the Military Academy of the Chinese People's Liberation Army here this morning. They were warmly welcomed by Xiao Ke, vice-minister of national defence and commandant of the military academy, and Yang Zhen, deputy commandant of the academy. The visitors were briefed on the training of senior military officers in the academy and made a round of the lecture rooms and teaching facilities. Xiao Ke and General Egidio agreed that the exchange of visits and experience between Chinese and Portuguese military personnel is beneficial to the two countries. Later, the Portuguese guests toured the Great Wall and one of the Ming tombs outside Beijing.

MILITARY DELEGATION CONCLUDES VISIT TO SPAIN

OW161836 Beijing XINHUA in English 1830 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Madrid, May 16 (XINHUA) -- A military delegation of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA) left here today at the end of an 8-day friendly visit to Spain. The head of the delegation, Wu Xiuquan, deputy chief of the PLA General Staff, hosted a banquet at the Chinese Embassy Saturday evening in honor of Spanish military leaders. During the visit, Wu Xiuquan met with high-ranking leaders of Spain's Defense Ministry and its armed forces. They exchanged views on the current international situation and on ways of increasing cooperation between the armed forces of the two countries. They shared the view that in face of threats posed by one superpower, it is helpful and necessary for the two countries and their armed forces to increase cooperation to oppose hegemonism and maintain world peace. During its stay in Spain, the Chinese delegation toured a number of cities and visited an infantry academy, an aviation school and air force bases.

YAO YILIN MEETS ITALIAN FOREIGN TRADE DELEGATION

OW142018 Beijing XINHUA in English 1558 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Vice-Premier Yao Yilin met here today with visiting Italian Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade Baldassare Armato. They discussed furthering economic and trade relations between China and Italy. Present were Chinese Vice-Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Wei Yuming and Italian Ambassador to China Giulio Tamagnini. Armato and his Italian economic and trade delegation arrived May 10 and held talks with a Chinese delegation led by Wei Yuming.

YAO YILIN MEETS WITH AUSTRIAN AUDIT OFFICIALS

OW171626 Beijing XINHUA in English 1610 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Vice-Premier Yao Yilin met here this evening with Dr. Tassilo Broesigke, president of the Court of Audit of Austria and secretary-general of the International Organization of Supreme Audit Institutions, and another Austrian guest, Dr. Hubert Weber. Chinese Vice-Minister of Finance Tian Yinong attended the meeting. The Austrian guests have exchanged views with Chinese departments concerned on the promotion of Sino-Austrian cooperation in auditorial work since they arrived May 11.

LEADERS GREET NEWLY-ELECTED YUGOSLAV OFFICIALS

Ye Greets Dizdarevic

OW161629 Beijing XINHUA in English 1621 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Belgrade, May 16 (XINHUA) -- The chairman of the Standing Committee of the Chinese National People's Congress, Ye Jianying, today sent a message to Raif Dizdarevic, greeting his election as president of the Assembly of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

The message reads: "On the occasion of your assumption of the post as president of the Assembly of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, I would like to extend, on behalf of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress of the People's Republic of China and in my own name, the most heartfelt greetings and the best wishes. May the Yugoslav people win greater achievements in socialist construction and the cause of maintaining world peace. May you achieve new successes in the execution of this important duty." "I would like to take this opportunity to express my belief that the friendly and cooperative relations between the people of our two countries will develop continuously."

Zhao Greets Planinc

OW161637 Beijing XINHUA in English 1624 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Belgrade, May 16 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang today sent a message to Milka Planinc, greeting her assumption of the post as president of the Federal Executive Council of Yugoslavia.

The message reads: "On the occasion of your assumption of the post as president of the Federal Executive Council of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, I would like to extend, on behalf of the State Council of the People's Republic of China and in my own name, our warmest greetings and best wishes to you. I heartily wish you new and greater successes in executing this important duty. The friendly relations between our two socialist countries are undergoing an all-round development. These relations arebased on complete equality, independence, mutual respect and mutual understanding. I am convinced that such all-round friendly and cooperative relations will be consolidated and strengthened further."

PRC PROCURATOR RECEIVES ROMANIAN DELEGATION

OW101918 Beijing XINHUA in English 1526 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 10 (XINHUA) -- Huang Huoqing, chief procurator of the Supreme People's Procuratorate, met at the Great Hall of the People this evening with Nicolae Popovici, procurator general of Romania, and his party. Welcoming his colleagues, Huang Huoqing said their visit would help promote friendship between the peoples of the two countries. Popovici thanked his Chinese hosts for the tour. He said he hoped to study China's judicial system, thus bringing better understanding for himself and others. After the meeting, Huang Huoqing gave a dinner for the guests. They arrived this afternoon at the invitation of the Supreme People's Procuratorate.

SPECIAL ENVOY HE YING VISITS SYRIA, LIBYA

Visit With PLO Officials

OW160328 Beijing XINHUA in English 0242 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Damascus, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Special envoy of the Chinese Government He Ying called on President of the Palestine National Council Khalid al-Fahum here today, and had an exchange of views on the world and regional situation, and on the friendship between Palestine and China. He Ying reaffirmed that the Chinese Government and people firmly support the Palestinian people in their just struggle to restore national rights and to establish an independent state on their own land. He Ying also held cordial talks today with P.L.O. leaders Faruq Qaddumi, Abu Jihad and Abu Mahir.

Departure From Syria

OW160326 Beijing XINHUA in English 0238 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Damascus, May 15 (XINHUA) — Speaker of the Syrian People's Assembly Mahmud az-Zu'bi received here today the Chinese Government's special envoy He Ying before his leaving for Tripoli at the end of a three-day goodwill visit to Syria. The Chinese special envoy had held talks in a friendly atmosphere with Deputy Foreign Minister Nasir Qaddurah on the international situation and particularly the situation in the Middle East as well as bilateral relations. The Chinese envoy reaffirmed that his government and the Chinese people will absolutely support, as usual, the just struggle waged by the Arab and Palestinian people against imperialist invasion and Zionist expansion and for the recovery of occupied Arab lands and restoration of Palestinian national rights. Syrian officials said that Syria will continue to persist in its struggle against imperialist and Zionist conspiracies. Both sides expressed the desire to further strengthen and develop the bilateral relations of friendship and cooperation. Present at the airport to see the Chinese guests off were deputy Foreign Minister Nasir Qaddurah and other officials of the Syrian Foreign Ministry.

Meeting With Libya's Jallud

OW171937 Beijing XINHUA in English 1926 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Tripoli, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Libyan leader Staff Major Jallud said today that Libya was determined to develop friendly relations and cooperation with China in all fields.

Jallud said this when he received visting special envoy of the Chinese Government, He Ying here today. Mr. (Swedan), under secretary of the Libyan People's Committee for Foreign Liaison Bureau, and Pei Jianzhang, Chinese ambassador to Libya, were present on the occasion. Jallud told He Ying that "China has always shared the same historical lot with small and weak countries. We hope that China will stand on the side of the Third World countries in preventing the infiltration of the superpowers."

He Ying said continuous consolidation and development of the cooperation between China and Libya conformed with the fundamental interests of the people of the two countries and the Third World as a whole. The Chinese Government would make efforts in this regard, he added.

RENMIN RIBAO URGES TRAINING CADRES BY ROTATION

HK171031 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Training of Cadres on a Rotational Basis Is a Major Construction Measure of Strategic Significance"]

[Text] While simplifying our government structure, we should pay close attention to doing a good job of training our cadres by rotation. This is an intelligent investment in raising the quality of the whole rank of our cadres, and therefore it is a major construction measure of strategic significance and an important part of the reform of our cadre system.

What are the most basic requirements of our cadres at various levels that are demanded by the new situation and new task of the socialist construction of our country? In January 1980, Comrade Deng Xiaoping stressed the following two requirements in his report "The Current Situation and Tasks:" The first is adherence to the socialist road and the second is a certain degree of professional knowledge and competence. He said, "When we select cadres, we must pay attention to knowing whether they adhere to the socialist road. We should intensify our education of the cadres who fail to meet this requirement and shift them to other posts if necessary." "Whatever post a cadre is appointed to, he should have a certain degree of professional knowledge and competence. If a cadre does not have such knowledge and competence, he should study in order to acquire it. If a cadre already has such knowledge and competence, he should continue to study in order to increase it. Those who are not willing to study should be transferred to other posts." Our cadres are the practical organizers and leaders in building highly developed socialist material and spiritual civilizations and the leaders in guiding the thousands and millions of the masses in striving for a magnificent future. Therefore, whether they are able to adhere to the socialist road is vital to our cause. On the other hand, all our party or government cadres are responsible for certain work tasks in their actual posts in various fields. If they lack the necessary professional knowledge and competence, they will not be able to persistently carry out or promote the cause of socialsit construction. Therefore, building up a contingent of cadres who are revolutionary minded, younger, well-educated and professionally competent is a strategic task that our party must fulfill in the new historical period. Establishing the system of training cadres by rotation, while simplifying the government structure, is precisely aimed at further carrying out this task of construction.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, all departments and commissions of the CCP Central Committee and party committees at all levels have paid close attention to training cadres. According to statistics, over the past 3 yeras nearly 5 million cadres of various kinds and at various levels have received training by attending various kinds of rotational training courses and short-term training courses. Those comrades who have received the training have, to various degrees, gained results in correctly understanding the party's policies in the new historical period and in learning the scientific and technical knowledge related to their trades and professions. This has not only facilitated the performance of their duties, but also played a favorable role in improving the work of their organizations and raising the efficiency and quality of their work. However, taking the situation as a whole, the existing cadres throughout our country are poorly educated and more than 40 percent of them have only received an education up to or below the level of junior middle school. Though more than 50 percent of our cadres have received education up to or above the level of senior middle school or technical school, there is still an acute shortage of cadres who are really competent in their professions and trade to meet the requirements of their actual posts. Along with the development of our cause and the advance of science and technology, new things and new problems will continue to crop up and thus this shortage will become even more acute. Our party organizations at various levels should make up their minds to resolutely make great efforts to pay persistent attention to training cadres by rotation, making this training routine work and regularizing the training.

If they only engage in transferring, appointing and dismissing the existing cadres, the party's and people's hopes for establishing high-quality and highly-efficient work organs in all our departments at all levels will not come true owing to our failure to achieve a widespread improvement in the quality of our cadres.

During the course of this structural reform that is being carried out from the upper to the lower levels, there will be millions of cadres of various kinds and at various levels who will be attending various sorts of training courses by rotation. The age of most of these cadres ranges from 30 to 50. Some will study for 1 year and some will study for 2 or 3 years. During the duration of their study, they will remain cadres of the units they originally belonged to and will receive the same treatment in terms of salaries, benefits and other remuneration as those cadres who remain in their posts. During their training period they will mainly study professional knowledge, reading, writing, management, science and technology as well as political theory. When their training terms are over, they will have to undergo tests or examinations and the results of the tests or examinations will be recorded in their personal files and treated as an important reference for future appointments and promotion. The large-scale training of cadres by rotation at this time is an arduous task. We have to make arrangements and actually solve, one by one, a large number of problems, such as organization of the leading groups of the schools, construction of school buildings, selection of textbooks, raising of funds and the collection and purchase of materials. In the past, for a fairly long period, we failed to pay sufficient attention to giving in-service training to our cadres and thus have lost much time and delayed in providing many of our cadres with professional knowledge. As a result the ranks of our cadres fall short of the demands of the present new situation in terms of their professional knowledge and competence. It is imperative to bring a change to this state of affairs without the least delay. We should be as resolute as we are in simplifying our administrative structure in solving the problem of training cadres at their posts by rotation. We must set up a continuing system for training cadres by rotation and treat this system as an important measure for reforming our cadre system. All departments in the CCP Central Committee and the state organs that are being streamlined should take the lead in doing this work. The newly formed leading groups should include rotational training of their cadres on the agenda of their important items of work. All local departments at all levels should also adopt measures to vigorously strengthen their work in this respect.

Since the smashing of the "gang of four," the work of bringing order out of chaos has been very intense and many cadres, especially some leading cadres, have a thirst for the opportunity to study and improve. Now that such a fine opportunity is being offered by the party, they are heartily grateful to the party for its care and concern and have planned to take part in the study as soon as the organization decides to send them. Our party organizations should conscientiously cherish this valuable initiative for study among our cadres. In drawing up schemes of reforming the structure, some departments reported to the higher level that a certain number of cadres could be the first batch of cadres to receive rotational training. But actually, in carrying out their schemes, they found it impossible to spare so many people. This was very bad. It showed that some leading comrades failed to attach due importance to training cadres by rotation. Moreover, a small number of cadres are apprehensive that they will be excluded from the list of personnel in the departments where they are working if they are sent to the rotational training courses. This is a misunderstanding. We should explain to them that in the future all the cadres in our party and government organizations, enterprises and institutes should take training courses as long as there are conditions for them to do so. It will become a normal system that a cadre will leave his post to study for a time in order to improve his competence and then return to his work. In streamlining the structure at this time, we only fix a quota for the number of personnel in each department, we do not fix the appointment of the employees there. As a result, there is no distinction between people in regard to their being included in or being excluded from the list of personnel. This is aimed at sending cadres to study in a planned manner.

As long as the leading groups do a good job of ideological work and make a clear explanation of the significance and method of the rotational training, they will be able to allay people's apprehension and make the people pluck up their spirit and actively take part in the study.

While stressing training cadres through various schools, we should not neglect the training of cadres by sending them to take part in practical work at the grassroots and organize them to study when they are working. Both the training in school and training by practice are related to one another and neither is dispensable. For those young comrades who entered the organizations, especially the leading organizations, as soon as they left school, it is even more important for them to obtain experience in leading a commune, a factory, a school or even a county. In the past, we have obtained some experience as well as drawn some lessons in organizing cadres to study in schools and sending them to go deep into the grassroots. We should conscientiously sum up these experiences and lessons and strive to do this work more satisfactorily.

At present, some comrades are used to employing the cadres under them as much as possible and sending them to attend training courses as little as possible. The more helpful the backbone cadres are, the more some comrades begrudge providing them with the opportunities to attend full-time study courses to further improve them and raise their competence. This shows the shortsightedness of some comrades in their work related to cadres. They should understand the implication of the saying that "sharpening the ax will not hinder the work of cutting firewood." It is relative as to who are the backbone among our cadres. If the original backbone cadres fail to study and improve themselves, they will find it increasingly hard to adjust to the growing requirements in their work. If one only relies on a few backbone cadres who are helpful at present, he will not be able to create a situation of "one surge pushing the other forward" and will, therefore, not be able to bring a great change for the better to his work. A leader should regard this problem from the viewpoint of dialectical materialism and grasp in a more satisfactory manner both the task of raising the competence of the old backbone cadres and that of training more new backbone cadres.

HU QIAOMU DISCUSSES EDUCATING YOUTHS ON ETHICS

HK170952 Beijing WANBAO in Chinese 5 May 82 p 1

[Feature: "Comrade Hu Qiaomu Discourses on Education in Professional Ethics"]

[Text] Under the present situation, how do we explore new avenues for conducting political and ideological education for youths? On the afternoon of 3 May, Comrade Hu Qiaomu, secretary of the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee, told old and new CYL cadres who attended a forum held by the CYL Central Committee:

We should try by every method to understand the psychology, ideas and feelings of young people around us. While carrying out technical education for all trades and services, we should also promote education in professional ethics for all occupations. This is easier for our young people to accept. In so doing, we will help them change their low level of consciousness into a high level of consciousness in taking a patriotic and revolutionary road of contributing their all to the motherland.

Beijing RIBAO published a report on the deeds of Li Yumei, a model worker and bus conductor in Beijing. She conscientiously studied the psychology of passengers and set strict demands on herself that she cultivate good relations with passengers. When a young man refused to show his monthly ticket, she repeatedly and patiently asked him to show it, but he ignored her request. It was only after her fourth request that the young man, now in a huff, showed his monthly ticket. At that time, Xiao Li said with a kind and pleasant countenance: "All right, you may take your monthly ticket back." Although the manner of this young man was rude, he was not a bad person. When he got off the bus, he was escorting an old man. Seeing this, Xiao Li smiled and said: "Your spirit of helping others is worth learning from." The young man felt embarrassed, and said: "I am convinced your service attitude is truly good."

I am relaying this story to you with the hope that all comrades who are in charge of youth work will learn from this conductor. We should always be patient and trust and respect those young people whose political consciousness is not high enough. Such an attitude will eventually move them, just as Chairman Mao said that the foolish old man eventually moves God.

A Japanese TV series, "Sugata Sanshiro," currently shown by the Beijing TV station propagates a judo spirit which is incomparable with the communist spirit. However, the way Sugata Sanshiro handles his opponent Higaki makes the latter become an admirer of the former, which is a matter of educational significance. We communists should have a loftier realm of thought and a broader breadth of vision than Sugata Sanshiro.

When all comrades who are in charge of youth work feel that they are in a minority position, they should bear in mind that they remain the faithful representatives of the interests of the majority of the masses. Although some people do not understand and trust us at times, we should work for them wholeheartedly. In so doing, the majority of the people will sooner or later understand and trust us and unite with us. We should arouse their sense of self-respect and pride for their own work and being Chinese. This is very important work.

We should make young people in all occupations and those working in the state, collective or individual enterprises proud of their occupations and posts and understand that their work is in the people's interests. They should study professional skills and train themselves to be experts through self-study. They should make progress and attach importance to professional ethics. We should persist in propagating revolutionary ideals and theories. Therefore, we should organize various kinds of study classes and groups. On every front we need comrades like Li Yanjie, an expert who is enlightening people. However, we should also admit that such work cannot be completed overnight. By promoting the study of professional skills and attaching importance to professional ethics, it is easier for us to attract the broad masses of youths, because they will easily understand that this is a matter connected with their personal needs. We all appreciate our responsibility in our own posts, observe the rules and regulations of our own occupations and enhance the prestige of our enterprises and ourselves. Such practices are in accord not only with the interests of the whole society, but also with the need to improve the general mood of the entire society and enhance our youths' socialist consciousness.

Recently, Beijing WANBAO commended Hu Yanming, a nurse at Renmin Hospital attached to Beijing Medical College. One night, an accidental fire broke out in the hospital. Although she was not on duty, once she learned of the accident, she rushed to the spot. She knew where oxygen cylinders were located in the wards. Working with other comrades, she took out one oxygen cylinder after another. Although the fire was spreading rapidly, she removed all the cylinders, without concern for her personal safety. Not a single oxygen cylinder exploded in the hospital building. At the time, she thought that since she was a nurse, she should do her duty no matter what happened. It is obvious that education in professional ethics will help youths attain a lofty realm of thought.

Although students in schools have not taken up any occupation, they will obtain employment in the future. Therefore, it is necessary to provide them with advanced education in professional ethics. Professors of the Beijing Medical College provide students with education in medical ethics and have achieved very good results in this respect. Like this medical college, all colleges and universities and even middle schools should conduct education in professional ethics connected with students' future jobs. We may adopt various methods to carry out political education. Political education may link people's work with various aspects of their lives. After receiving education in professional ethics, students of the medical college have raised their political consciousness. This is a result which a political course in general cannot easily achieve. Most people are concerned with their occupations. What kinds of special ethics and skills are needed in their occupations?

This is also a problem which arrests young people's attention. Just as students learning medical science need medical ethics, those who study sciences should understand scientific ethics, those who study literature and art should know the ethics of literature and art and those who study pedagogy should learn the ethics of being teachers. These are the duties incumbent upon various occupations and the honors peculiar to various professions.

It is great experience to kindle the interest and zeal of our young people in CYL work. To acquire such experiences, we should rely on the assiduous study and creativeness of our entire CYL membership. I have only touched upon this experience. Our organizations will certainly study this experience well and their activities will make young people become vivid and vigorous. These interesting activities will not only arouse everybody's enthusiasm for knowledge and use of justice, but also promote the unity of youths so that they will serve and strive for the fundamental interests of society.

RENMIN RIBAO EDITORIAL ON HIGHWAY TRANSPORTATION

HK180351 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Actively Develop Highway Transport"]

[Text] In the past 2 years, Jiangsu, Shanxi, Liaoning and other provinces have actively developed highway transport and provided some good experience in managing and using highways well. For instance, they have accumulated experience in strengthening the maintenance and reform of the existing highways and the management of highway affairs to ensure that highway transport remains unimpeded. They have also accumulated experience in reforming the transport management system, enhancing transport efficiency, economic returns, and so forth. All these experiences will play the role of promoting the development of highway transport.

Ours is a country with a vast territory, mountain areas and hilly lands. Highway transport occupies an important position in all our communications and transportation. Highway transport is an independent transportation system and also an important means for railways and ports to collect and distribute goods. Highway transport is flexible and is distinctly superior for short-distance transportation. Most of the tasks of short-distance goods transportation in cities, and collecting and distributing agricultural and sideline products in rural areas, are performed by motor vehicles. Highway transport also accounts for a fairly high proportion of long-distance transportation. The present situation of highway transportation is unable to meet the demands of the development of the national economy. The present situation is characterized by an insufficient amount of highways, low standards, bad road conditions and a fairly great number of cul-de-sacs and impassable roads. Due to the chaos of the transportation sector, a large number of trucks are often sent out empty and the delivery of goods is indirect and ineffective. Therefore, the carrying capacity of highway transportation has been artificially reduced.

To develop highway transportation and enhance efficiency, we should formulate overall plans, strengthen maintenance, carry out improvement to actively develop key projects, and pursue scientific management to ensure that highways remain unimpeded. We have 900,000 kilometers of highways in our country. Strengthening maintenance of the existing highways and opening up the cul-de-sacs and impassable highways to traffic are the main tasks for our highway building at present. Because of the state of disrepair of various stretches of highway for several kilometers or scores of kilometers, or the failure to repair a bridge, motor vehicles and pedestrians are compelled to go the long way round. As long as we devote major efforts in this respect, we can greatly improve the carrying capacity of highway transportation. Recently, leading comrades of the central authorities instructed that cul-de-sacs be cleared as fast as possible. The State Council has issued a circular and the departments concerned have made arrangements. Various localities should grasp this problem firmly and solve it effectively. To do a good job of highway maintenance, we should strictly forbid various localities from embezzling highway maintenance funds.

At present, the order of highway transport in a number of places is in confusion. This affects the unblocking of transport. This problem should be solved conscientiously. Successful methods adopted by some localities include strengthening management of highway affairs and management of traffic safety and carrying out administrative intervention by relying on people's governments at all levels. We should give wide publicity to and strictly observe highway and communications rules and regulations and educate drivers and the broad masses of people so that they consciously abide by and maintain traffic order, take good care of highways and plant more trees along the sides of roads. We should resolutely stop people from digging ditches wantonly on the highways to get earth, drying and threshing grain, stacking goods, placing obstacles and damaging traffic signs and facilities, and other acts which interrupt communications. When necessary, we should impose disciplinary sanctions and fine them or even affix the responsibility for the incident according to law. When making arrangements for the sites of country fairs in the rural areas and towns, we should make overall plans to avoid occupying highways and blocking the traffic. We should change the situation whereby nobody takes care of the highways on provincial, prefectural and county borders. In so doing, we will be able to ensure that highway transportation remains safe and unimpeded.

With regard to the management of highway transportation, while implementing flexible policies, we should strengthen management. It will not do to develop highway transport by relying on specialized transportation departments alone. We should adroitly guide our actions according to circumstances, uphold the principle of relying mainly on the planned economy while making regulation by market mechanism subsidiary, make overall plans and pursue rational division of labor so that various transportation forces, whether they be the specialized transport of communications departments or the business transport of other departments, will fully play their role, get their due and do their best. Some localities have adopted various methods for joint management and joint transport to reduce the links of transfer. In so doing, transportation is carried out rationally and freight volume and energy have been saved. To organize joint management and joint transportation, we should adopt various means in light of local conditions, strengthen control over motor transportation and make great efforts to enhance the carrying capacity of highways.

Passenger transportation work occupies an important position in highway transportation. At present, passenger transportation is characterized by an insufficient number of lines and stations, poor service quality and undesirable environmental sanitation in stations. The masses have a lot of complaints about this. Highway transportation departments should take the improvement of the present situation of passenger transportation and making things convenient for the masses to travel by bus as the main task for making their work better. They should strengthen education for drivers, conductors and station workers, carry out the activities of "five stresses and four beauties" and decorum and courtesy, resist and combat various evil trends and practices, continuously improve their service attitude and enhance the quality of passenger transportation to contribute to the building of socialist spiritual civilization.

Basically speaking, to develop highway communications and transportation, we should strengthen the building of highways and build more highways of a higher standard. However, during the period of economic readjustment, it is impossible for the state to allocate enormous funds to build highways. It can only use a limited amount of money to build arterial and main highways in the overall interest. Most local highways should be built by relying on the efforts of all quarters. The southeastern area of Shanxi Province and communications departments of Jiangsu Province built highways in mountain and rural areas by relying on the efforts of local people and state subsidies. This is a good experience for developing highway transportation. Under the conditions that we are not allowed to spend or can only spend a limited amount of state funds, we must do a good job in gradually repairing and maintaining major highways, highways in counties and communes and tractor roads on farms, and linking them together so as to form a gigantic network of highway communications linking cities, the countryside, mountain areas and border regions.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION MEETING ENDS IN BEIJING

Xi Zhongxun's Address

OW180429 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1456 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 17 May (XINHUA) -- Xi Zhongxun, member of the CCP Central Committee Secretariat, pointed out today at the fourth enlarged meeting of the fourth executive committee of the All-China Women's Federation which concluded on 17 May: Large numbers of women have made important contributions on various fronts and in various trades and professions, thus playing their important role of shouldering "half the sky."

He hoped that all comrades engaged in women's work would brace up, carry forward the glorious tradition in this work and contribute to building a socialist material civilization and socialist ethics.

Xi Zhongxun said: A new situation has occurred in women's work, thanks to the efforts of women's federations at various levels and all comrades engaged in this work. Particularly, by giving wide publicity to an important directive on women's work issued by the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee in February 1981 and through practical work, comrades engaged in women's work have generally realized that successfully performing work among children and young people is the basic task for making China prosperous and strong. The entire party and society as a whole have also given support to this work. As a result, improvements have been made to varying degrees in providing children and young people with articles for daily use and mental pabulum. "Five-good family" activities have spread to cities and towns in various areas, and such activities are also developing in rural areas. Tremendous results have been achieved in this. This is a type of basic work to build ethics in various social cells, an effective way to tackle various social evils in a comprehensive manner, and an activity readily acceptable to the broad masses of workers and staff members, men and women, old and young. Pertinent experience gained by various localities shows that "five-good family" activities should be combined with "five stresses and four beauties" activities, that, as such, should be put on party committees' agendas, and that propaganda departments should take the lead in carrying out the activities and women's federations should take charge of them under the unified leadership of party committees and in coordination with various quarters. In this way, these activities will develop in depth and persistency and produce ever greater social effects.

Xi Zhongxun said: Vigorous efforts should be made to select and train women cadres and promote them to leading posts at various levels, especially those in their prime and with socialist consciousness and professional knowledge. What merits our attention is that the number of women cadres in leading bodies at various levels is currently tending to decline. Women's federations at various levels should be good at discovering, selecting and training young and middle-aged cadres and take the initiative in recommending them to local party committees and governments to increase the number of leading women cadres in party and government organizations at various levels.

Xi Zhongxun said: Women's federations throughout the country should put the stress of their work on bringing up and educating the more than 300 million children and teenagers. They should proceed from actual local conditions and take various measures to push forward the work of bringing up and educating children and teenagers.

He stressed that it is necessary to effectively protect the legitimate rights and interests of women and children. He said: Cases of maltreating women and children still often occur, and the feudal idea of regarding men as superior to women still exists in the minds of some people to a serious extent. Women are often discriminated against and cold-shouldered or even cursed and beaten by their husbands and mothers-in-law because they have given birth to a baby daughter. Cases of drowning baby girls have also often occurred.

Women's federations at various levels should investigate and study such cases and report them to party and government organizations in good time and wage a struggle against such acts. In coordination with the departments concerned, women's federations should maintain the sanctity of the law, deal blows at criminals maltreating women and children and, at the same time, successfully perform ideological and political work. It would be dereliction of duty if they should let this problem take its own course and not concern themselves with it.

In coordination with trade unions, women's federations should do their work well among women workers and staff members as well as among their family members. Some young women workers have problems in love, marriage or family affairs. Pursuing money and material comfort, they have married and then divorced in haste. Currently women account for 30 percent of the total of workers and staff members. If work among 1/3 of the workers and staff members is not done well, it will affect the other 2/3. Therefore, trade unions should welcome women's federations to do this work. In so doing it is necessary to bring the initiative of both trade unions and women's federations into full play.

Dealing with making women's federations a mass organization, Xi Zhongzun pointed out: The All-China Women's Federation and women's federations at provincial, municipal or autonomous regional levels throughout the country should overcome the phenomenon of acting as a government organization, forge close ties with the masses, gradually make themselves a mass organization and become a better link between the party and the masses of women. Women's organizations should do a good job in carrying out investigation and study at the basic level and among the masses. Women's federations at various levels should be concerned about women's weal and woe and listen to their voices in order to really become a mouthpiece for women, an important representative of their interests and the home of women.

Xi Zhongxun called on women's federations at various levels and the masses of women to actively participate in the discussion on the draft of the revised constitution, especially on the provisions concerning respect for and the protection of women's rights and interests, in order to raise women's self-esteem and sense of responsibility.

Deng Yingchao, honorary chairman of the All-China Women's Federation, today met with all the delegates attending the meeting and had group pictures taken with them.

Kang Keqing, chairman of the All-China Women's Federation, presided over today's meeting.

Attending the meeting were Ni Zhifu, Luo Qiong, Lei Jieqiong, Zeng Zianzhi, Gu Dachun, Lin Mohan, Pei Lisheng, Huang Ganying, A-pei Cai-dan-zhuo-ga, Lin Bomin, Lin Liyun, Guo Liwen, Guan Jian, Ma-yi-nu-er and Li Haifeng, responsible persons of the departments concerned.

The fourth enlarged meeting of the fourth executive committee of the All-China Women's Federation opened on 11 May. The meeting discussed the situation of work among women and children over the past year and opinions on future work. It also discussed the streamlining of the administrative structure of the All-China Women's Federation, the adjustment of its leading body and the draft of the revised constitution.

New First Secretary Announced

OW180120 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1420 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 17 May (XINHUA) -- At the sixth standing committee meeting of the fourth All-China Women's Federation held on 10 May, it was decided that the number of secretaries of the federation's secretariat be reduced from 12 to 9 and that Guo Liwen [6753 0500 2429] be first secretary and Huang Ganying, Dong Bian, Wu Quanheng, Wang Yun [3769 0061], Hu Dehua, Zhang Jiexun [1728 3381 3800], Yu Shuqin [0060 3219 3830] and Wang Liwei [3769 4539 1218] secretaries.

FOREIGN TRADE OFFICIAL STRESSES OPENING MARKET

OW180007 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1233 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- A responsible person of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade said at a recent meeting that China has made considerable progress in foreign economic relations and trade as a result of implementing the policy of opening to the world and that now is the time to sum up experience and continue to make progress.

The responsible person said: During the first quarter of this year, as the restructuring of the administration was underway, China's foreign economic relations and trade was still rapidly developing. In terms of export volume, China registered an increase of 14.9 percent over the same period last year. The growth rate was consistently higher than the overall national economy's.

He said that since our party introduced the policy of opening to the world more than 3 years ago, we have conducted reforms and experiments in the system and policies in foreign economic relations and trade. We have also done a great deal of work, and achieved remarkable results in utilizing foreign capital and loans in foreign exchange. Now we should sum up experience, confirm our achievements and continue to move ahead. We should gradually perfect legislative work and the management system, where there are still imperfections, so that we can better implement the policy of opening to the world and promote a sound development of China's foreign economic relations and trade.

The responsible person said: On the whole, China's trade volume is still small and falls short of meeting the needs of the modernization program. A very important question here is how to use foreign exchange so that foreign exchange capital can be fully used to speed up capital turnover and made to better serve national construction. In utilizing foreign exchange capital, we should not only consider our immediate needs, but should also take the long-term future into consideration. We should not only concern ourselves with providing food for the people, but also with carrying out socialist construction. We should not only maintain simple reproduction, but also engage in expanded production. This is currently a very important question in foreign economic relations and trade.

The responsible person of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade also touched on the question of utilizing foreign capital. He said that the present international situation was very favorable for us to utilize foreign capital and the channels were numerous too, namely, processing and assembly of materials furnished by customers, compensatory trade, foreign exchange loans and others. We should fully use low-interest loans, in particular. But the most important thing is to attract direct investment by foreign firms in establishing joint ventures with Chinese and foreign investment. By attracting foreign capital to China to set up enterprises, we will not only introduce advanced technology and equipment, but also learn advanced management methods. In summing up experience, we should also review successful ways to operate joint ventures with Chinese and foreign investment. We should decide the kind of projects best promoted by joint ventures, the kind better adapted to other forms of operation, and the kind of laws to enact, systems to institute and problems to solve in establishing joint ventures with Chinese and foreign investment. If we can sum up good experience in utilizing foreign capital and successfully establish a number of joint ventures in the next few years, then our foreign economic relations and trade will contribute more to the four modernizations program.

LIAOWANG DISCUSSES CHINA COMMODITIES FAIRS

HK170841 Beijing LIAOWANG in Chinese No 4, 20 Apr 82 p 13

[Article by Shi Meisi [0670 5019 3123]: "Widen the Contemporary 'Silk Route" Beginning With the Reform of the China Export and Import Commodities Fairs"]

[Text] The opening day of the China Spring Export and Import Commodities Fair was 15 April. These fairs are scheduled for spring and autumn every year. The 50th fair since they began in 1957 was held in autumn last year. They are dubbed by people the "silk route" of the contemporary era.

A point worth noting is that the fair currently being held is quite different from previous ones. On the surface, it seems that its scale is smaller than before and its duration is also shorter. Actually, this, in a certain sense, reflects a major reform which has taken place in foreign trade: While continuously running the fairs well, we have had to change the situation of "waiting for the arrival of customers." Instead, we have had to go out to solicit business.

In previous years, we had to overcome multiple difficulties in operating the fairs -- fairs which represented something unprecedented in the foreign trade history of the new China. At the very outset, the party Central Committee and the State Council showed great concern for them. Premier Zhou Enlai in particular devoted great efforts to them. When extremely great difficulties were encountered in running the fairs in the early stages of the "Cultural Revolution," Premier Zhou personally went to Guangzhou to try to overcome interference from ultra-leftist forces. The fair was thus able to open according to schedule. When the spring commodities fair was held in 1970, Premier Zhou spent nearly 4 hours from 12:30 a.m. to 4:15 a.m. studying exhibition problems. Premier Zhou said: "Foreign trade must be used to stimulate domestic trade and to stimulate production. Foreign trade must be built on the basis of internal factors. We must combine production, consumption and scientific research to stimulate the development of domestic production." On 9 April 1972, in Guangzhou, Premier Zhou received, throughout the night, the representatives attending the fair. He said sincerely: "We take the domestic market as the primary factor and the foreign market as a secondary one. But we must strive to export that which can be exported." He again later gave a series of instructions. The fair was thus never stopped and has run better and better. The first fair had an attendance of only 1,200-plus persons from 19 countries and regions. In the past 1 or 2 years, over 20,000 businessmen from over 100 countries and regions have attended each fair. The variety of commodities on show has increased from over 10,000 kinds at the first fair to more than 40,000 now. In the autumn of last year, the total export trade volume of the 50th fair was over 150 times that of the first fair. In the past few years, the export trade volume resulting from the fair has accounted for nearly one-fourth of the total foreign trade volume of our country.

The fair has become a grand meeting of international trade -- a focus of world attention -- and an important arena for the conduct of our foreign trade. Meanwhile, it has reflected the growth of our foreign trade and also our achievements in socialist construction. Many businessmen see the commodities fair as the "epitome" of socialist China.

There is not a shadow of doubt that the fair will continue in the future and will be made better and better. But with the development of our socialist modernization effort and the introduction of an open-door policy, the way of holding a fair by just "waiting for the arrival of customers" has become incompatible with the needs of the rapid development of our foreign trade. The planned reduced scale and shortened duration of the fair mean that the channels of our country's foreign trade are increasing. Trade activities in various forms are being started and strengthened. Apart from running more small and specialized fairs, setting up permanent trade organs in some countries to push export commodities and taking some other measures, we must pay particular attention to "going out to solicit business."

We must go out and make investigations and studies in foreign countries by adopting the method of seeing more, hearing more, asking more questions and making more analyses. Just like when the fair was first started, this means turning a new page in the foreign trade history of China. This helps our taking hold of important markets, important clients and important commodities and our missing no chance to boost our export commodities and increase trade volume. At a time when the capitalist market is in a recession, we must especially take the initiative to go outwards. Last September and October, the Guangdong provincial branch of the China Industrial Products Export Company sent a "light cavalry group" of four persons well acquainted with trade and well trained in foreign languages to Peru, Argentina and Venezuela. They were warmly welcomed by customers in the three countries and in the neighboring countries of Chile and Panama.

In a short period of a month or so, the volume of trade concluded in industrial products exceeded $7.1 million, four times the volume of trade the company had with these five countries in the preceding year. Foreign trade companies in Shanghai last year sent some people abroad on business and concluded export transactions totaling over $320 million.

Not long ago, the comrades of the Guangdong branch of the China Machinery Export Company saw construction work being carried out in an Arab country. They noted that at the completion of a project, all the tools were thrown away. It was thus not necessary for the tools to be of good quality, causing an increase in costs and in export prices. Very few of our products had entered the market of this country. They seriously studied the handcarts that Japan had sold to that country. They found that they were simple and handy with light materials being used. The selling price was very low. With reality in mind, they decided to improve on our existing products and to reduce prices. They immediately clinched a deal for 100,000 handcarts with a total value of $1.75 million.

It should be pointed out that we must strengthen leadership, as various areas and various relevant departments of our country vie with each other in seeking business orders abroad. Last September and October, because of lack of communication, five groups from our country were promoting the sale of leather gloves in West Germany at the same time. Competition among them became so keen that the trade results were not satisfactory. We must act in concert and adopt a unified approach in our international trade. This has always been our fundamental principle. We must adhere to it in developing international trade.

People believe that through the current reforms of foreign trade work, the contemporary "silk route" will become increasingly wide as time goes on.

STATE COUNCIL ISSUES CIRCULAR ON CURRENCY

OW172315 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1208 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 17 May (XINHUA) -- The State Council recently issued a circular demanding that people's governments at all levels and the various departments concerned under the State Council pool their efforts to earnestly do a good job in withdrawing currency from circulation and strictly control the practice of putting money into circulation irrationally.

The "circular" put forward the following 5 requirements:

1. Actively expand withdrawal of goods from circulation. It is essential to increase the production of some consumer goods which cater to social needs and the means of production for farming, on the basis of the growth of urban and rural purchasing power and according to changes in the people's need for consumer goods. Various localities must regard the sending of manufactured goods to the countryside as their important task, further stimulate the flow of commodities between urban and rural areas and vigorously organize withdrawal of currency from circulation in rural areas. Some of the slow-selling goods in cities may be readily marketable in the countryside. It is necessary to adopt measures to transfer such goods and sell them in the countryside. In commodity distribution, we must firmly adhere to the principle of giving priority to the countryside if such commodities are needed both in cities and in the countryside. Particularly, it is necessary to organize departments to coordinate the supply of building materials and daily necessities badly needed in the countryside and to adopt various measures to make even more manufactured goods available on the rural market. It is imperative to combat reluctance in selling commodities in great demand. It is necessary to sell them as much as possible.

2. Strictly control the extension of credits and loans. Banks at all levels must exercise control, according to state plans for credit and loans, in extending loans for floating capital as well as medium- and short-term loans for the purchase of equipment.

In extending loans of all types, it is necessary to pay attention to economic results, and to support enterprises in producing, marketing and selling products which cater to social needs. Efforts must be made to curtail and reduce production and procurement of slow-selling commodities and to refuse to extend loans for the production of unmarketable products. For the production of products not in great demand, it is necessary to reduce loans and curtail procurement of such products.

3. Strengthen accounting work and supervision over credits and loans in the procurement of farm and sideline products. Efforts must be made to support the work of procuring farm and sideline products. Funds must be provided, according to actual needs, for the procurement of products under the state monopoly purchase plan. Banks may refuse to give loans to those who have ignored state regulations, willfully expanded the range of farm and sideline products purchased with negotiated prices or purchased farm and sideline products at higher prices while lowering the base or themselves reducing targets for the purchase of such products which are subject to state monopoly purchase.

4. Do a still better job in encouraging savings in rural and urban areas. It is necessary to set up a savings network. At the same time, efforts must be made to improve organization of labor to provide convenience for the people in depositing or withdrawing their money.

5. Firmly strengthen control over the issuance of bonuses.

PROGRESS ON MAJOR CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS NOTED

OW171302 Beijing XINHUA in English 1248 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- A 350,000-kilowatt power generating unit, the first for the Baoshan iron and steel complex near Shanghai, has gone into operation, and bricklaying for a big blast furnace is nearing completion.

The Baoshan iron and steel complex will be the most up-to-date of all such enterprises in China. The basic structure for a coke oven battery at the complex has been completed and machinery is now being installed in the steel mill, the blooming mill and the sintering plant.

Baoshan is one of the major capital construction projects now being built in China. This year's government capital construction lays stress on the energy industry, transport and communications and light industry.

Other projects under construction include hydroelectric power stations, coal mines, a new railway, new wharves, fertilizer plants, a color television picture tube plant, a big chemical fiber plant and a synthetic leather factory.

Construction is going along smoothly on new coal mines in the Huolinhe area of Inner Mongolia and in the Huaibei and Huainan coal mining areas of Anhui Province. A new railway is being built to link up Yanzhou, a rising coal center in Shandong Province, with the transport hub at Shijiazhuang in neighboring Hebei Province.

Construction of the third power generating unit at the Yangtze River Gezhouba project, China's biggest hydro-engineering project, was completed in the first quarter of this year. The second stage of construction on the project is now in full swing. It includes the building of the 1,000-meter-long western section of the dam. The 1,600-meter eastern section was completed last year in the first stage of construction.

Construction is also going well at the Longyangxia hydroelectric power station on the Yellow River in Qinghai Province, which has a designed capacity of 1.2 million kilowatts.

A tyre cord factory in Pingdingshan in Henan Province and a color TV picture tube factory in Shaanxi Province have gone into trial operation and will be inspected and handed over for formal operation in the near future.

Four new plants at the Jilin chemical works will soon be put into trial operation producing ethylene, ethanol, butadiene-styrene rubber and other products. Installation of machinery is under way at the Shanghai petrochemical works. Daqing, one of China's leading oil fields, is building an ethylene plant with an annual capacity of 300,000 tons.

METALLURGICAL INDUSTRY TOPS JAN-APR TARGETS

OW170831 Beijing XINHUA in English 1616 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- China topped the January-April targets for the output of steel, pig iron, rolled steel, coke, iron ore and other major products, according to Li Dongye, minister of metallurgical industry, who addressed a national telephone hook-up here this evening.

The output of these products was bigger than in the first four months of last year, he said.

The output of gold was 12 percent over the corresponding period of 1981, he said.

More steel sheets, seamless tubes, welded pipes, steel strips and silicon steel were turned out by the iron and steel enterprises to meet the urgent needs for the manufacture of consumer goods and for technical transformation, the minister said.

At the same time, the output of those steel products for which there was no urgent demand at present was reduced appropriately, the minister said.

The output of steel sheets, plates, pipes and strips accounted for 34.7 percent of the total output of rolled steel in the January-April period of this year compared with the 32.1 percent in the same period of last year.

The minister pointed out that the iron and steel industry showed good performance in the first four months of this year. During the January-April period, the profit brought in by major iron and steel enterprises went up by 17.7 percent over the same period of last year while the total output value of these enterprises was up by seven percent.

The minister gave the following January-April output figures:

Steel output, 11.93 million tons;
Pig iron output, 11.4 million tons;
Rolled steel output, 9.44 million tons; and Coke output, 10.82 million tons.

CORRECTION TO NAMELIST OF CCP DEPARTMENT HEADS

The following corrections should be made to the namelist of CCP department heads published on pages K 2-K 4 of the 17 May DAILY REPORT:

On page K 2, under Deputy Directors of the General Office of the party Central Committee, the second name should read Kang Yimin [1660 0001 3046].

On page K 4, under Bureau Chief of the Compilation and Translation Bureau of the Central Committee, the name should read Song Shusheng [1345 2579 5116].

ANHUI PEOPLE'S CONGRESS VIEWS DRAFT CONSTITUTION

OW150222 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] The 13th meeting of the Standing Committee of the 5th Anhui Provincial People's Congress held a plenary session on 13 May at which the deputies spoke one after the other to voice their views and warmly discuss the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China. They also adopted a resolution in this regard. They unanimously held: This draft proceeded from reality and conformed with the state of affairs in China. It reaffirmed the advocation of the four basic principles, summarized China's experience in carrying out socialist revolution and construction, recorded the Chinese people's successes in waging valiant struggles and reflected the common desire and basic interests of the people of all nationalities throughout the country. It is of great current significance and far-reaching historic importance. It will definitely help China's modernization program to triumphantly advance along the socialist path.

Deputy (Lin Yongquan) said: The draft of the revised constitution pointed out that Taiwan is part of the sacred territory of the People's Republic of China. The entire Chinese people, including compatriots in Taiwan, have the sacred duty of accomplishing the great task of reunifying the motherland. This fully reflects the desire of the compatriots in Taiwan. We are determined to make our own contributions to the reunification of the motherland.

In their speeches, the deputies also made some suggestions on amending the draft. Vice Chairmen Hu Kaiming and Ma Changyan of the standing committee of the provincial people's congress presided over the plenary session held on 13 May.

Resolution Adopted

OW150226 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1105 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] The 13th meeting of the Standing Committee of the 5th Anhui Provincial People's Congress adopted a resolution on 13 May with regard to the discussion of the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China.

The meeting held: The publication of the draft of the revised constitution and the discussion of such a draft among the people of all nationalities throughout the country represents a major event in the political life of the people in China and shows that China has entered a new stage in developing its socialist democracy and legal system. In order to implement the resolution made by the NPC Standing Committee and do a good job in discussing the draft revised constitution, the meeting adopted a resolution as follows:

1. It is necessary to fully realize the significance of discussing the draft of the revised constitution.

2. It is essential to regard such discussion as a process by which the masses can study socialist democracy and the legal system. To build a modern and powerful socialist nation, it is necessary to bring socialist democracy into full play and improve the socialist legal system. Only by giving full play to socialist democracy will it be possible to whip up the enthusiasm of the people in carrying out modernization. Only by improving the socialist legal system will it be possible to ensure that work in the whole country will be developed along a correct path, and consolidate and develop the political situation of stability and unity.

3. Efforts must be made to organize and lead the broad masses in discussing the draft. All state organs, party and mass organizations, PLA units, schools, enterprises, rural communes and brigades, and grassroots units in the whole province must vigorously discuss the draft of the revised constitution between May and August of this year. It is also necessary to strengthen leadership.

4. It is essential to compile the suggestions offered by the masses in the course of discussing the draft. Various districts and units should divide the suggestions into different categories for amending the draft under each chapter, section, and article. All suggestions must be forwarded to the standing committee of the provincial people's congress by 15 August 1982 so that they will be reviewed, sorted and forwarded to the committee for the revision of the constitution on time.

The meeting held: The nationwide discussion of the draft of the revised constitution will definitely help the people in the province raise the level of their awareness in upholding the four basic principles, in participating in the management of state affairs and in exercising the rights and fulfilling the obligations of a citizen. It will certainly whip up the enthusiasm of the cadres and masses in promoting the modernization program and developing the material and spiritual civilization in the province.

Congress Concludes

OW161814 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Excerpts] The 13th meeting of the Standing Committee of the Fifth Anhui Provincial People's Congress concluded in Hefei on the afternoon of 15 May after 4 days in session. At the plenary session held on the afternoon of 15 May, those attending the session heard an explanation by Hu Kaiming, vice chairman and concurrently secretary general of the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, of the measures revised by the standing committee of the provincial people's congress for appointing and dismissing state functionaries. The plenary session then approved the above-mentioned measures. Those attending the session also received a briefing from (Gao Simin), vice chairman of the political and judicial committee under the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, on approving the request to extend the detention period for (Kong Xianwu) and others who are involved in six criminal offenses. Resolutions were then adopted on this matter.

The session also adopted a resolution on personnel appointments and dismissals.

Vice Chairman Hu Kaiming presided over the plenary session held on the afternoon of 15 May and delivered a speech. He said: The standing committee of the provincial people's congress has already made specific arrangements on how to organize the people throughout the province to discuss the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China. Various districts and units must earnestly implement this resolution. We must do a good job in organizing and leading all the people in discussing this draft.

Also attending the session were Vice Chairmen of the standing committee of the provincial people's congress Li Shinong, Huang Yan, Ma Changyan, Cheng Yetang, Yang Chengzong, Zhang Zuoyin, Zhao Minxue, Li Guangtao and Chen Yuanliang. Also present at the meeting as observers were Chen Yuanliang, president of the Anhui Higher People's Court; (Li Penglin), deputy chief procurator of the Anhui People's Procuratorate; and the responsible persons of various departments and bureaus at the provincial level.

KUOMINTANG COMMITTEE MEETING IN FUJIAN

OW150424 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0019 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Fuzhou, 15 May (XINHUA) — The revolutionary committee of the Chinese Kuomintang held a work meeting between 5 and 12 May in Xiamen. The meeting was presided over by Jia Yibin, vice chairman of the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Committee of the Chinese Kuomintang, and was attended by responsible persons from its local organizations in 24 provinces and municipalities. At the meeting the participants exchanged the experiences of these organizations in their work to serve the program of the four modernizations and promote the peaceful reunification of the motherland.

Discussions were held on such questions as how to further develop the work of the revolutionary committee of the Chinese Kuomintang and how to contribute more toward the consolidation of the political situation of stability and unity, the progress of socialist modernization and the peaceful reunification of the motherland.

SHANGHAI RADIO URGES ECONOMIC CRIMES CRACKDOWN

OW161010 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 15 May 82

[Station commentary: "Firmly Deal Blows at Economic Offenses"]

[Text] The Intermediate Court of Shanghai held a meeting today to announce sentences for four economic offenders. This was the first citywide meeting held in Shanghai to pronounce judgment since the NPC Standing Committee's decision on severely punishing crimials who cause enormous losses to the economy and the decision of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on cracking down on serious crimes in the economic sphere were made public.

The pronouncement meeting implemented the two decisions and relevant provisions of the criminal law and embodied the consistent policy of combining severe punishment with leniency. Those offenders who had seriously damaged the economy were meted out severe punishment, and those who had voluntarily surrendered and had made some contributions were meted out light punishment according to the law. Under the new historical condition, cracking down on serious crimes in the economic sphere marks a serious class struggle in the economic sphere in China's socialist society. Shanghai is China's largest industrial city and has close economic ties with various areas throughout the country. As Shanghai is open to the world and maintains frequent contacts with foreign capitalists, it is apt to be affected by the corrosive influence of capitalist ideology and the mode of bourgeois life.

Historically speaking, Shanghai was once a paradise of adventurers. Some social scums are still very good at smuggling, corruption, bribery, speculation, swindling, and embezzling state and collective property. Moreover, Shanghai was once run by the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques. In view of historical and other factors, we must not underestimate the seriousness of criminal activities in the economic sphere in our city. We must be mentally prepared for a long struggle.

At present, while paying attention to industrial and agricultural production, party organizations and governments at all levels should give more energy to successfully guiding this struggle. All economic offenders are warned that they should not make further mistakes. Although the 1 May deadline has passed, those economic offenders who voluntarily surrender, willingly return their unlawful gains and expose their accomplices are still entitled to a lighter punishment according to policy. If they continue to conceal their crimes, they will be severely punished according to law.

FURTHER REPORTS ON FLOODING IN GUANGDONG

36 Dead in Huaiji County

HK171500 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 17 May 82

[Summary] In Huaiji County, in Zhaoqing Prefecture, which has been very severely affected by floods, the broad masses of cadres are leading the people to combat floods and deal with the emergency to reduce the losses caused by floods. At present, the floods have subsided and the party and government organs are doing everything in their power to provide disaster relief and help commune members who have been affected by floods to restore production and rebuild their home villages.

Starting on 10 May, Huaiji County was hit by rainstorms for 3 successive days and tornadoes and hailstones occurred in some areas. In some other villages, torrents of water rushed down the mountains. "According to statistics, in the whole county 36 people died, 45 people were injured and 2,833 houses were damaged. In addition, 92,270 mu of paddy rice and 15,500 mu of industrial crops have been inundated."

After the occurrence of the floods, principal responsible comrades of the county CCP committee and people's government led more than 200 cadres to rush to five communes which were most seriously affected by the floods to rescue commune members who were stranded by the floods and give emergency treatment to the wounded masses. Four medical teams were sent to the flooded areas to provide medical treatment for those who were wounded and sick. The county government also allocated 680,000 jin grain and funds amounting to 80,000 yuan to provide relief to the disaster area.

At present, the floods are gradually ebbing. To help the people in the flooded area to rebuild their home villages and restore production, the county CCP committee and people's government have allocated chemical fertilizers and a large quantity of pesticides to assist the disaster area. More than 60,000 people have been sent to protect and maintain proper seedling growth and apply fertilizers to the fields and repair and consolidate 94 irrigation works throughout the county. Highways, bridges and electric wires have also been repaired.

Flood Relief Conference Held

HK171328 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 17 May 82

[Summary] This morning, the Guangdong Provincial People's Government held a conference on relief work to make arrangements for relief work in Qingyuan and Yingde Counties. At the conference, relevant departments reported the flood situation in these counties and the situation of combating floods and dealing with emergencies. They also put forth measures to do relief work. Vice Governor Yang Deyuan and Governor Liu Tianfu spoke.

In his speech, Yang Deyuan said that since floods occurred in Qingyuan and Yingde counties, all relevant departments have attached importance to the flood and quickly gone into action and coordinated with one another. PLA units of the army and the naval and air forces stationed in Guangzhou have done their best to combat floods, rescue people and do relief work. Yang Deyuan said: "In future relief work, we must lay stress on grasping the following several aspects of work:

"First, we must continue to grasp well reinforcing embankments, closing up leakages and building embankments.

"Second, we must quickly solve the problem of restoring communications, transportation and electricity supply.

"Third, we must actively relieve the people in the stricken areas to guarantee that the fundamental needs of their livelihood can be met and their normal living order can be restored.

"Fourth, we must quickly restore production. Relevant departments must promptly prepare sufficient seeds, manure and other means of production.

"Fifth, we must also conduct ideological education and tidy up social order. We must vigorously commend the good people and good events in combating floods. We must establish confidence in overcoming natural disasters."

Yang Deyuan stressed that all relevant departments must quickly send personnel to the stricken areas and organize materials to support these areas. He also said that the provincial people's congress standing committee, the provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government were prepared to send three comfort groups to the stricken areas to comfort the masses who had been affected by floods.

At the conference, Liu Tianfu emphatically pointed out that we must analyze and predict natural disasters which might possibly occur. We must be especially vigilant against floods this year. All relevant departments must seriously investigate and study the issue of production in the stricken areas in the future and quickly make decisions. We must quickly restore production to strive to reduce the losses caused by floods.

GUANGXI CONGRESS PLANS ECONOMIC CRIMES CRACKDOWN

HK141057 Nanning Guangxi Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 13 May 82

[Excerpts] A resolution on resolutely cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic sphere was adopted at this morning's closing ceremony of the 13th meeting of the Standing Committee of the 5th Guangxi Autonomous Regional People's Congress. The resolution called on all areas and departments to regard cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic sphere as a central task for this year.

Over the past 2 days, the standing committee members examined a report made by Zhang Fuhai, chief procurator of the autonomous regional people's procuratorate, on cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic sphere.

In his report, Zhang Fuhai pointed out the existing problems in cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic sphere and also put forth suggestions for carrying the struggle (against serious economic crimes) through to the end.

In examining Zhang Fuhai's report, the standing committee noted: Although our region has achieved initial results in the struggle to crackdown on criminal activities in the economic sphere, we must continue exerting ourselves in the struggle.

Resolution Issued

HK141059 Nanning Guangxi Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 13 May 82

["Resolution on Resolutely Cracking Down on Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Sphere" adopted by the 13th meeting of the Standing Committee of the 5th Guangxi Regional People's Congress on 13 May 1982]

[Excerpts] The meeting notes: Since the beginning of this year, under the leadership of the regional CCP committee, people's governments and judicial departments at all levels throughout the region have conscientiously implemented the NPC Standing Committee's resolution on severely punishing those who commit serious crimes in disrupting the economy, the decision issued by the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on hitting hard at serious criminal activities in the economic sphere and the relevant directives issued by the central authorities.

As a result, they have at the initial stage exposed a number of serious criminal cases of smuggling, trading in smuggled goods, corruption, accepting bribes, speculation, swindling and theft of state and collective property; severely punished according to law a number of criminals who seriously disrupted the economy and refused to make a confession and mend their ways; leniently handled a number of criminals who surrendered themselves to the police and made a clean breast of their crimes; educated and redeemed a number of cadres committing serious mistakes; and enabled vast numbers of cadres and the masses to become politically awakened, thus achieving initial results in the struggle.

The meeting calls on people of all nationalities throughout the region to unite as one and make joint efforts under the leadership of the party so as to ensure success in the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere, to promote the building of socialist material civilization and spiritual civilization in our region and to promote all tasks for this year including industrial and agricultural production tasks.

HAINAN PLA CADRES STUDY RESOLUTION, MAO'S WORKS

HK171113 Haikou Hainan Island Service in Mandarin 0330 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] The Hainan Military District recently held rotational courses for regiment-level cadres, organizing them to study the philosophical thought of Comrade Mao Zedong. A total of 100 regiment-level cadres from PLA units in the military district participated in the courses. With the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" and the directives concerned issued by the CCP Central Committee as their study guides, they have studied those works by Comrade Mao Zedong including "On Practice," "On Contradiction," "Problems of Strategy in China's Revolutionary War," "On Protracted War," "On New Democracy," and so on. In the studies, they concentrated their attention on the stand, viewpoints and methods which our party and Comrade Mao Zedong adopted in solving problems in China's revolutionary practice with dialectical materialism and historical materialism. This was in order to deepen their understanding of the spirit of the resolution; correctly appraise Comrade Mao Zedong's historical position and the guiding role of Mao Zedong thought; profoundly understand the great significance of the struggle launched by the CCP Central Committee against the corrosion by capitalist ideology and bourgeois liberalization in the ideological, cultural and economic fields; enhance their ideological consciousness; and maintain themselves as clear-headed, unwavering and promising Marxists.

HENAN CONFERENCE ON HUANG HE FLOOD PREVENTION

HK150648 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 May 82

[Summary] A Henan provincial conference on flood prevention on the Huang He concluded on 13 May. The meeting pointed out that the guiding ideology for this year is: "Put flood precautions on the Huang He in the first place in Henan's antiflood work, overcome lack of vigilance, strengthen people's concept of the overall situation, be prepared for the worst and for fighting a severe battle against great floods, and make thoroughly sound antiflood preparations, to ensure the safety of the Huang He during the flood season."

Important speeches were made at the conference by Li Qingwei, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor, and Cui Guanghua, vice governor. Li Qingwei said: It is essential to be ideologically and materially prepared for fighting great floods. There has been drought in successive years and no floods have occurred, after the precautions were taken. As a result some comrades lack sufficient understanding of the gravity of flood prevention work on the Huang He, and they have become blindly optimistic and relaxed vigilance. The party, government, army and people along the Huang He must overcome this mentality and get a good grasp of flood precautions.

The meeting pointed out: No breach has occurred in the Huang He embankments in Henan since the liberation. However, we must certainly not relax vigilance in the slightest on that account. The meeting demanded that the antiflood projects along the shore zone of the river be rapidly completed and that arrangements be made for evacuating people from that zone. Antiflood commands should be set up at all levels and put into operation on 15 May. Responsibility systems should also be worked out for antiflood work.

SICHUAN YOUTH LECTURED ON U.S.-CHIANG 'CRIMES'

OW151045 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0015 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Chongqing, 15 May (XINHUA) -- A report group for educating young people recently carried out education in revolutionary traditions and communist ideals and morality among urban and rural youth in Chongqing municipality, Sichuan. The group was composed of more than 100 veteran cadres and advanced, exemplary personages from various fronts in the municipality.

The report group was headed by Meng Guanghan, secretary of the Chongqing Municipal CCP Committee. Many of the group members were cadres who had left office to take convalescence leave; they were happy to participate in this social activity program, regarding the task of educating young people as their unshirkable responsibility.

Among the group members were a number of comrades, including Yang Yiyan, coauthor of the novel "Hongyan," who managed to escape from the U.S.-Chiang spy organization known as the "Sino-U.S. Cooperation Agency." In the past few days, these comrades were invited respectively to the Chongqing enamelware plant, the No 3 military medical univeristy and Beipei District to lecture the young people in those places on the crimes committed by U.S.-Chiang spies at the slaughterhouse called the "Sino-U.S. Cooperation Agency." They recounted the heroic deeds of Liu Jianye, Jiang Zhuyun, Liu Guozhi and other revolutionary martyrs in struggling against the enemy in the prisons where they were detained. The achievements of these comrades in studying revolutionary theory and cultural and scientific knowledge under very difficult conditions in the enemy's prisons were depicted. Aimed directly at what is currently in the youth's minds, the lectures were vivid and moving and were warmly welcomed by the young people.

SICHUAN HOLDS UNITED FRONT WORK CONFERENCE

HK170323 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 16 May 82

[Summary] A Sichuan provincial conference on united front work was held in Chengdu from 5 to 14 May. Provincial CCP committee Executive Secretary Yang Rudai, secretaries Xu Mengxia, Yang Wanxuan, He Haoju and Tian Bao, and standing committee members Ren Mingdao and Zhang Lixing attended the meeting. Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Tan Qilong, who was inspecting work elsewhere, gave important views on how to make a success of the meeting.

The meeting held: "The united front remains a great magic weapon of our party in the new historical period. United front work must be strengthened, not weakened. In order to build China into a powerful modern socialist state, bring Taiwan back to the motherland and accomplish the great cause of peaceful reunification, it is essential to mobilize all positive factors, unite all forces that can be united, and consolidate and expand the patriotic united front."

The conference damanded: "It is necessary to seriously study and implement the central instructions on united front work and profoundly appreciate the importance of united front work in the new period. We must further implement the policies on united front work. We must unswervingly implement the guiding principle of long coexistence and mutual supervision between the party and the democratic parties, and bring into full play its positive role in accomplishing the three great tasks. It is necessary to strengthen the ideological and organizational building of the united front departments."

XIZANG CCP OFFICE URGES STUDYING CONSTITUTION

HK171005 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 15 May 82

[Summary] The general office of the Xizang Regional CCP Committee recently issued a circular calling on CCP committees at all levels to immediately organize all people to carry out serious study and discussion of the draft of the PRC revised constitution.

The circular said: The discussion by all people on the draft constitution is a manifestation of enjoying democracy and handling state affairs by the people and also an education carried out for people of all nationalities in socialist democracy and legal system. The discussion will start in the middle of May. But the discussion should be arranged after the busy season of spring farming in the agricultural and pastoral areas and working groups must be dispatched at the time for giving explanations of the draft to the peasants and herdsmen. In the course of discussion, key points must be on the provisions for the state political and economic system and stipulations for regional autonomy of national minorities religious belief and rights and duties of citizens. Democracy must be displayed to the full and different opinions and suggestions are welcome. The standing committees of the people's congress and people's government at various levels must seriously collect all suggestions for revising the Constitution and submit them to their higher authorities before 10 August 1982.

YUNNAN CIRCULAR ON STUDYING DRAFT CONSTITUTION

HK150544 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] The Yunnan Provincial CCP Committee has issued a circular demanding that organizations throughout the province immediately take action to organize people of all nationalities to discuss the draft of the revised constitution.

The circular says: The process of organizing publicity and discussions on the draft, collecting opinions on amendments and consulting with the masses is also a process of conducting education for the masses. Thus, through the discussions, we should seriously consult with the masses and put forward opinions on amendments, so that the constitution eventually adopted will be still more perfect, and we should also conduct vivid and specific education for the people in upholding the four basic principles, in socialist democracy and legal system, and in patriotism. They will thus strengthen their sense of responsibility as masters of the country, enhance spontaneity to carry out and observe the constitution and the law, actively wage struggle against all unconstitutional behavior, and further promote the building of socialist material and spiritual civilization.

The circular demands that party members and cadres of party committees at all levels and of organs at and above county-level take the lead in studying the draft carefully, in order to make a success of organizing the mass discussion.

YUNNAN PLA COMPANY FIGHTS 'DEGENERACY' AT BORDER

HK130203 Kunming YUNNAN RIBAO in Chinese 29 Apr 82 p 2

[Report: "Ninth Company of a Certain PLA Border Defense Unit Grasps Education in Opposing Corruption and Degeneracy"]

[Text] The ninth company of a certain PLA border defense unit has carried forward the honorable revolutionary traditions and has grasped education in opposing corruption and degeneracy under the new situation. This company was conferred with the honorable title of "a model fortress on the border defense line" by the PLA Yunnan provincial command during the 1950's. All its cadres and fighters are free from corruption although they are stationed in a border trading center. They have rendered new meritorious services on the new Long March.

Last year, the company won a collective meritorious service award, third grade; 45 of its cadres and fighters were awarded for their meritorious services; and its CYL branch was conferred with the honorable title of "an advanced CYL branch" by the CYL Central Committee.

Wanding, a township near the place where this company is stationed, is one of our country's important border trading centers. With the market enlivened subsequent to the implementation of the party's various economic policies, foreign goods were put up for sale in the streets and activities of profiteering, smuggling and trading in smuggled goods were rampant. In particular, reactionary, obscene and vulgar books were sold and similar television programs were broadcast in the city on the other side of the boundary river. They seriously corrupted some youths in Wanding. The party branch of the ninth company realized that these new conditions in society would invariably be reflected in the fighters' minds and pose new problems in the company's ideological and political work and that close attention should be paid to conducting education in opposing corruption and degeneracy. In doing ideological and political work, therefore, the company's party branch took active measures to win the close cooperation of the local party committee and the fighters' families in educating the fighters in opposing corruption and degeneracy. Last year, the company's cadres led the fighters in twice going among the local residents to learn the local history of aggression by foreigners and the enormous changes in Wanding since liberation and educated the fighters by comparing the two different social systems before and after liberation. Some local comrades were also invited to tell how some local residents were hit by sugar-coated bullets and committed crimes, thereby teaching the fighters to observe law and discipline. The cadres and fighters were also organized to study Chairman Mao's speech at the Second Plenary Session of the Seventh CCP Central Committee and at the same time to discuss ways to oppose corruption and degeneracy. The CYL branch of the company and the Wanding middle school's CYL general branch which had been conferred with the title of "a shock force on the new Long March" by the CYL Central Committee formed a pair in periodically carrying out activities of helping and emulating each other. Last year alone, the cadres and fighters of the whole company did good deeds on 2,295 occasions. The company's cadres visited the fighters' families nearby. They wrote twice to the fighters' families that were in other parts of the country, telling them about the progress the fighters had made and the problems they had met.

The education in opposing corruption and degeneracy heightened the ideological consciousness of the cadres and fighters. Last year, none of the members of this company violated the regulations and bought smuggled goods. The fighters who carried out tasks single-handedly were also able to preserve the honorable true qualities of people's fighters. When fighter Jiang Chaopan was on duty, a foreign woman wanted to exchange her wristwatch for his raincoat. He saw through her attempt and sternly refused. Another fighter, Li Chengyan, was herding cattle when a young woman struck up a conversation with him, saying that she wanted to make friends with him. She also gave him a gift, which he courteously rejected. After herding the cattle, he reported the matter to the organization. The cadres and fighters remain uncontaminated although they are stationed in a border trading center. They are praised by the local masses.

GANSU'S FENG JIXIN VISITS DROUGHT-STRICKEN AREA

OW170943 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 15 May 82

[Excerpts] Feng Jixin, first secretary of the Gansu Provincial CCP Committee, together with engineers and technical personnel, recently visited the northern area of Jingyuan County to inspect the serious drought situation and to study and decide on measures for speeding up the construction of the (Xinpuzhichuan) electric pumping station. He asked the construction workers to ensure the good quality of the project and put it into operation as quickly as possible.

The drought situation in the northern part of Jingyuan County is most serious in central Gansu. The area has received no rain for 3 years. The people there have had poor crops and must rely on the government to make up for their grain shortage. Drinking water for people and animals has also been inadequate.

CENTRAL WORK GROUP VISITS QINGHAI DISASTER AREA

SK151251 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] According to QINGHAI RIBAO, a joint work group organized by the United Front Department of the CCP Central Committee, the State Nationalities Affairs Commission and the Animal Husbandry Bureau under the Ministry of Agriculture, with Comrade (Ji-lu-mu-tu), member of the State Nationalities Affairs Commission, arrived in Yushu Tibetan Autonomous Prefecture. The group was briefed by the prefectural CCP Committee and government on the situation of combating disaster to protect livestock. It relayed the concern of the CCP Central Committee and State Council over the disaster. The group will go deep into the communes, brigades and fodder storehouses in the disaster area to inspect the disaster situation and to express sympathy for the masses who are victims.

QINGHAI OFFICIAL DISCUSSES COMBATING SNOWSTORMS

SK140904 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] Comrade Ga-bu-long, chief commander of the provincial headquarters for combating disasters to protect livestock, recently delivered a speech urging the people in pastoral areas to combat snowstorms to protect animals. He noted that the damage caused by the recent snowstorms is serious. He urged all localities to strengthen livestock management in May and June in order to save more animals to reduce losses. He said: According to reports, about 103 communes and farms in 22 counties and cities throughout the province were hit by snowstorms, affecting over 6.6 million animals. Because of this snowstorm, the number of young animals that survived declined by 230,000 head, and the number of dead adult animals increased by 260,000 head as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, causing great difficulties to the life of herdsmen. Thanks to our early prediction, we have allocated grain and funds to the herdsmen and made all antidisaster preparations beforehand.

Leading departments from the provincial to the autonomous prefecture and county levels have adopted vigorous measures to deal with the aftermath of the snowstorm. The provincial people's government has issued circulars on two occasions urging all cadres and the masses to spare no effort to combat disasters and protect livestock. It also appropriated 700,000 yuan as a subsidy for antidisaster work and 770,000 yuan as relief funds and transported 27 million jin of fodder grass and 12 million jin of animal-feed to support the disaster-stricken areas. It has dispatched six work groups and three medical teams headed by competent departments to the forefront to direct the work. Other autonomous prefectures and countries also dispatched work groups and medical teams and cadres to help in the work.

Comrade Ga-bu-long urged leaders at all levels to work in the forefront and mobilize the masses to participate in the work, rationally arrange grazing lands for animals and make full use of the fodder grass allocated by the provincial government to enable the animals to overcome the difficult situation. He also urged efforts to make proper arrangements for the livelihood of the herdsmen.

MA WENRUI AT TANG LITERATURE MEETING IN XIAN

HK150558 Xian Shaanxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 0500 GMT 15 May 82

[Summary] The establishment meeting and first academic seminar of the All-China Association for the Study of Tang Dynasty Literature concluded in Xian on 11 May. Professor (Xiao Jifei) of Shandong University was elected chairman of the association, and (Cheng Qianfan), (Hu Guorui), (Huo Zhonglin) and (An Qi) were elected vice chairmen. Xiao Hua, Yang Zhilin, Feng Zhi and others were named advisers to the association.

The participants discussed various aspects of Tang literature in the spirit of "ancient things to serve the present." Over 50 theses were presented. Ma Wenrui, Yu Mingtao and Zhang Ze visited the participants.

The executive council of the association has decided to gradually turn the periodical TANGDAI WENXUE [TANG DYNASTY LITERATURE], recently published by the Shaanxi People's Publishing House, into the organ of the association.

XINJIANG URGENT CIRCULAR ON DISASTER RELIEF

HK160557 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] The regional CCP committee and people's government jointly issued an urgent circular on 14 May on immediately taking action to carry out disaster relief work in current agricultural and animal husbandry production.

The circular pointed out Xinjiang was recently hit by a intense cold wave which lasted a long time and affected a wide area. Various places were hit by frost, high winds, and hailstorms in varying degrees. In order to strive for an all-round bumper harvest in the region for the fifth successive year, the areas hit by the disaster must immediately mobilize and carry out disaster relief work in current agricultural and animal husbandry production, as follows:

1. The principal party and government leaders at all levels must immediately lead work groups to the disaster areas to investigate the situation. They must take practical and effective measures in light of the specific conditions, mobilize and organize manpower and material, and do a good job in disaster relief work.

2. It is necessary to inspect the young crops in all the field in the affected areas.

3. Where the communes and brigades suggest it, and it is confirmed that the losses are serious and replanting is needed, it is necessary to hurry to switch to other grain or oil crops according to the local climatic conditions and under the premise that they will be able to ripen. Maize fields affected by the disaster must be carefully inspected. If only a part of the crop has died, the surviving portion should be retained and there should be no arbitrary switching to other crops.

4. Do a good job in allocating and transporting seed, machines, tools, fuel and other materials needed for switching to other crops. It is necessary to step up care of weak and thin female and young animals, especially [word indistinct].

5. Prefectures and counties should strive to plant some more maize or other grains or pulses according to local soil, water and climatic conditions, under the premise of ensuring that these crops can ripen. They should strive to fulfill the region's grain production plan for the year.

PRC DEFEATS TAIWAN IN HONG KONG TENNIS TOURNEY

Results of Women's Matches

OW150323 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1520 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Hong Kong, 14 May (XINHUA) -- Chinese players Chen Juan and Hu Na separately met He Qiumei and Wen Xiuzhuan, players from Taibei, China, in the women's singles event on the second day of the Hong Kong hard-court tennis invitational championships on 13 May. After the match, players from both sides came to the net to shake hands. This is the first time players from both sides of the strait have competed in Hong Kong. The encounter drew hundreds of tennis enthusiasts and scores of reporters. It was a warm scene. From time to time, the audience applauded the good shots of the players from both sides. That was a rare scene at tennis tournaments in Hong Kong.

The result was: Chen Juan eliminated He Qiumei 2 : 0 (6-0; 6-4), and Hu Na knocked out Wen Xiuzhuan 2 : 0 (6-1; 6-1).

After the match, leader Wu Daixun and coach Bu Lushi as well as player Wen Xiuzhuan of the team from Taibei, China unanimously praised Chen Juan for playing so well. Wu Daixun said: In both matches Chen Juan played firmly and steadily. Bu Lushi held that Chen Juan's strokes are as good as those of some of the world famous players. They said that He Qiumei lacked experience in playing in international tournaments. She was below her usual level during the match. Wu Daixun said: Players win or lose in a tournament. Although the team lost this time, it will return next year.

Interviewed by a Hong Kong newspaper reporter after the match, Chen Juan said: He Qiumei's playing skill is excellent. Her offense in net play was fierce.

Wen Xiuzhuan's left leg was injured in a practice before she came to Hong Kong. Last night she played with an injured leg. Her spirit was praised by the audience.

The news media attached great importance to this tournament in Hong Kong with players from both sides of the strait participating for the first time. Today television and radio stations and press provided much coverage of the match.

After yesterday's match, China's four women players -- Chen Juan, Hu Na, Li Xinyi and Duan Lilan -- have fought to join the final eight players in the women's division, and their compatriot Liu Shuhua and Taibei's Wu Zhangrong each won a berth in the men's final eight.

This tournament was jointly sponsored by the Hong Kong Administrative Bureau and the Hong Kong Tennis Association. Participating in the tournament were 65 men and women players from 12 nations and regions such as Burma, China, Indonesia, Japan, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, South Korea, Amoy, Hong Kong and Taibei, China. It was the first time that players from Taibei, China had participated in this invitational championships. The championships included four events -- men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles and women's doubles. The championships began on 12 May and will end on 16 May.

PRC Man Makes Finals

OW151552 Beijing XINHUA in English 1538 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Hong Kong, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Chinese player Liu Shuhua entered the men's singles finals here today when he defeated his compatriot from Taibei Hu Shangrong 3:1 (7-5; 6-4; 6-1) on the fourth day of the hard-court tennis invitational championships. Liu Shuhua edged out Kim Song-wu of South Korea to meet Hu Shangrong who defeated Panomkorn Pladchuanil of Thailand in the semi-finals.

At the end of the match, Liu Shuhua shook hands with Hu Shangrong at midcourts and handed a cup of soft drink to his Taibei compatriot. The stadium was fully packed with spectators who came to watch the match between the players from the Chinese mainland and Taibei.

PAPERS VIEW REAGAN LETTERS TO PRC, BUSH VISIT

LIEN HO PAO Article

OW171221 Taipei LIEN HO PAO in Chinese 12 May 82 p 2

[Article by Wang Ching-hung, LIEN HO PAO'S Washington-based special correspondent: "Reagan's 'Three Letters' and Policy Toward China"]

[Text] The language used in President Reagan's three letters to the Chinese Communist leadership was rather offending to the eyes. However, U.S. officials emphasized that, in essence, these letters have not gone beyond the "basic principles laid down in the communique for the establishment of diplomatic relations" between the United States and the Chinese Communists.

The Letters Were Designed To Placate the Chinese Communists

Of course, it is obvious that Reagan's "three letters" are far less tough than the U.S. Government's statements regarding its policy toward China prior to 11 January of this year. The point is that these three Reagan letters were designed to placate the Chinese Communists. It was hoped that the Chinese Communists would show "understanding" because of the low U.S. profile and, thereby, the difficulties created by U.S. arms sales to Taiwan would be solved. Against this background, it was inevitable that the language used in the "three letters" should cater to the major principles.

In his separate letters to Chinese Communist Premier Chao Tzu-yang and Chinese Communist Party Vice Chairman Teng Hsiao-ping dated 5 April and his letter to Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hu Yao-pang dated 3 May, Reagan stated ways to resolve the differences between the two sides regarding the "Taiwan question." This was actually the so-called "Haig model," meaning the set of measures contained in the "memorandum" forwarded to Reagan by Haig on 26 November 1981.

The "Haig model" stresses the policy of "one China" as well as the "peaceful resolution" of the "Taiwan question," thus noting the necessity to "appreciate" [ling qing 7325 1906] the Chinese Communists' "peaceful policy." The "Haig model" also calls for imposing qualitative and quantitative restrictions on arms sales to Taiwan without setting a time limit, but depending on progress toward the "peaceful resolution." These measures have never been officially confirmed or denied by the U.S. side. Now that it is a proven fact that Reagan has accepted Haig's basic proposal and has included it in official documents addressed to the Chinese Communists, the shock we received is naturally greater than when things were uncertain.

Actually, if we make a cool analysis of the "three letters," we will find that on the surface, Reagan's language was not as tough as it used to be, but, in essence, he still hoped to save face for both sides by ambiguous means in coping with the difficulties in relations with the Chinese Communists so that the "strategic relationship" between the United States and the Chinese Communists, as well as the long-term friendship between the United States and the Republic of China, could be maintained. This was what President Reagan had advocated, namely, "one need not abandon an old friend in order to make a new friend."

In addition to the high-sounding "talk about strategic interests," Reagan's "three letters" essentially contained three main points: 1) an expression of "welcome" for the "nine-point proposal on peaceful reunification"; 2) the reaffirmation of the "one China" policy of the United States; 3) a discussion of ways to solve the question of arms sales to Taiwan.

Concern for the "Methods" for Resolving the Question

I. Regarding the "nine-point" proposal, the Chinese Communists have complained that the United States did not make a constructive evaluation of this "peaceful policy" of the Chinese Communists and have accused the United States of jeopardizing the implementation of the Chinese Communists' "peaceful policy" because of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan. Last autumn, Secretary of State Haig made a few complimentary remarks about the Chinese Communists' proposal, saying that "it is not insignificant" and that "it deserves attention."

In his letters to Chao Tzu-yang and Teng Hsiao-ping, Reagan further expressed his "welcome" for the "nine-point" proposal. Moreover, he emphasized that he made this stand clear to the Chinese Communists in late October 1981 when Huang Hua, Chinese Communist vice premier and foreign minister, visited the United States.

In his letter to Chao Tzu-yang, Reagan said: "We will welcome and support any peaceful resolution of the Taiwan question. In this connection, we appreciate the policies you have adopted for the peaceful resolution of the question." "Just as I told Vice Premier Huang in Washington, we welcome your nine-point proposal."

Reagan also told Teng Hsiao-ping that the United States has an abiding interest in the peaceful resolution of the "Taiwan question." "We fully recognize the significance of the nine-point proposal of 30 September 1981 and the (peaceful) policy set forth as early as 1 January 1979."

Reagan himself expressed "welcome" for the Chinese Communists' "nine points" and recognized their "significance." This is indeed offending to our eyes. However, it is more important to look beneath these outward statements to see whether the United States really intends to "support" the Chinese Communists' proposal for "peaceful reunification" and whether the United States has taken actions to bring about the "peace talks."

During and after the regular news briefing on 10 May, Fischer, a State Department spokesman, made clarifications on this point. He said: "The U.S. policy remains that the 'Taiwan question' should be resolved by the Chinese themselves. The only concern of the United States is that the question be resolved by peaceful means. Since peaceful means are embodied in the Chinese Communists' nine-point proposal, to that extent, we express our welcome."

According to Fischer, the United States is still only concerned with the "means" by which the question is solved and does not have anything to say as far as the "outcome" of the resolution is concerned. Nor does the United States side with the Chinese Communists in this respect. What the Chinese Communists presented was a "nine-point proposal on peaceful reunification" and Reagan, in his letter, stressed "peaceful resolution" and did not mention anything about the outcome of the "peaceful resolution." Fischer said: "The United States still does not intend to be a mediator or to promote peace talks between the two sides. This is basically a question that should be resolved by the Chinese themselves."

Deviation From "Balance" Policy

II. Reiteration of "one China" policy: This is based on the conclusion of an estimate on the attitude of the Chinese Communists made by the State Department. The State Department holds that the Chinese Communists suddenly bring up old scores again and make an issue of the arms sale because they think the Reagan administration will take the "two Chinas" road.

On 28 February 1982, Reagan and Chao Tzu-yang exchanged letters on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the issuance of the joint communique in Shanghai. In his letter to Chao, Reagan said that the U.S. side would adhere to the communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations. He is even more straightforward this time. In his letter to Teng Hsiao-ping, he said: "The United States firmly adheres to the positions agreed upon in the joint communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and China (Communist). There is only one China. We will not permit the unofficial relations between the American people and the people of Taiwan to weaken our commitment to this principle." In his 3 May letter to Hu Yao-pang, he also said: "...We will continue to adhere to the positions agreed upon in the joint communique on the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and China. Our policy will continue to be based on one China...."

A State Department official says: The United States has not deviated from the scope of "the joint communique on the establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations" and the "Taiwan Relations Act" when it reiterates the "one China" policy. The "one China policy" is also the common position shared by both sides across the Taiwan strait.

Nevertheless, the statement on the "one China" policy made by Reagan in his letter deviates, more or less, from his "balance" policy on which our people place their hopes. Even if he does not want to abandon the "balance" policy, his statement is put too strongly.

International Ambiguity in Discussion of Arms Sale Issue

III. The arms sale is the crux of the issue. Let us take a look at several passages of Reagan's remarks on this issue:

1. In his letter to Chao Tzu-yang, he said: "I have also told Vice Premier Huang (Hua) that we anticipate that Taiwan will naturally reduce its demand for arms amid progress towards peaceful settlement (of the Taiwan issue)." This is a passage of clever empty words rather than a U.S. "commitment." On this matter, the U.S. President is bound by the "Taiwan Relations Act." He may consider the arms sale according to Taiwan's defense "need"; however, he still avoided saying that the United States will reduce the arms sale when progress is made toward "peaceful settlement." Instead, he said that the United States "anticipates" that Taiwan will naturally reduce its demand for arms. In this way, his remarks are only ambiguously within the scope of the "Taiwan Relations Act" without making any commitment.

2. In his letter to Teng Hsiao-ping, he said: "The Taiwan issue has been a most difficult problem between our governments. Nevertheless, vision and statesmanship have enabled us to reduce our differences over this issue in the past, while we have built a framework of long-term friendship and cooperation." He told Hu Yao-pang that the U.S. arms sale to Taiwan is still a "remaining difference." He said: "I believe that we will strive forward toward elimination of this controversial problem if we apply the statesmanship and vision which we used in the past decade to settle our differences." These two passages can be reasonably interpreted as demanding that the Chinese Communists keep common ground while reserving differences, just as they did in the "Shanghai communique" and the "communique on establishment of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations" in order to prevent the "remaining differences" from affecting the overall situation.

3. In the same letter to Teng Hsiao-ping, Reagan fully recognized the significance of the Chinese Communists' nine-point proposal. He said: "The decisions and the principles covered in my instructions to your government on 11 January 1982 reflect our appreciation of the new situation created by these developments." This refers to the U.S. announcement of its decision not to sell FX fighters to the Republic of China in order to show U.S. "appreciation" of and concession to the Chinese Communists' "peaceful policy." The 11 January U.S. statement on the arms sale implied that strict restrictions would be imposed on both the quality and the quantity of the arms sale to our country according to demand, but it still persisted in the continued supply of defensive weapons to Taiwan. These "decisions and principles" have been cleverly reiterated in Reagan's letters.

These passages were made ambiguous intentionally. The U.S. side deliberately made a loose connection between the arms sale and the progress of "peaceful settlement" in order to sidetrack the problem. This is rather obvious. The U.S. side thinks that while no time limit has been set for the arms sale, this is a makeshift measure they can adopt according to the "Taiwan Relations Act."

At the press conference before his departure from Peiping, Vice President Bush evaded answering the question on whether the U.S. side will request revision of the "Taiwan Relations Act." However, State Department spokesman Fischer has said that the administration has no intention of demanding revisions of the "Taiwan Relations Act."

If the "Taiwan Relations Act" is not revised, the U.S. President will be unable to accept the conditions set by the Chinese Communists on coordinating a time for ending arms sales to Taiwan. If no time limit is set for the arms sale and no progress is made toward "peaceful settlement," the makeshift measure is in fact also empty words.

The Publication of the Contents of the Letters Gives One Much Food for Thought

Besides the actual contents of the "three letters," the publication of the contents of the three letters at this time by the U.S. side is also something which gives one much food for thought. At a time when the talks between the two sides have reached an impasse, the U.S. side is suddenly laying its cards on the table. It looks as if it is appealing to public opinion.

About 2 days before Vice President Bush arrived in Peiping, RENMIN RIBAO dished up the view of "whoever started the trouble should end it," trying to shift the responsibility of starting and ending the trouble onto the United States. The U.S. side made public Reagan's low profile letter, which was close to being meek and subservient and to "stooping to compromise." This was also aimed at shifting the responsibility onto the Chinese Communists. On the one hand, it "showed full respect for the feelings" of the Chinese Communists and lured them into making their move; on the other hand, it sought to let U.S. allies and voters know the "concessions" made by Reagan in an effort to avoid the deterioration of relations between the United States and the Chinese Communists, thus creating some form of pressure on the Chinese Communists. If the Chinese Communists accept the "Haig model" after the series of quibbles, the United States, except for its empty promises, will still seek to maintain the state of affairs of the past decade. This is why the Chinese Communist propaganda media demanded that the U.S. side verify its policy with deeds instead of vaguely talking about the "one China" policy. If the Chinese Communists are unwilling to compromise and seek to downgrade relations with the United States, the United States naturally can shift the responsibility onto the other side.

Bush said he would put forward some specific suggestions to President Reagan. At the same time, he said the two sides would continue to carry out negotiations at the "ambassadorial level." Reagan has already laid his cards on the table. What is his real intention, and how firmly does he adhere to the policy of arms sales? All this will perhaps become clearer in the next few months.

CHINA POST Editorial

OW180617 Taipei CHINA POST in English 15 May 82 p 4

[CHINA POST 15 May editorial: "Peiping's United Front Maneuvers"]

[Text] During U.S. Vice President George Bush's recent visit to mainland China, the Peiping regime once again played its united front maneuvers to the hilt. An AP dispatch from Peiping, dated May 10, reported that Bush was "accorded virtual head-of-state treatment." Quoting a well-informed Chinese source, it said that "if Communist China was not pleased with Reagan's letters and Bush's visit, the vice president would have received a more restrained welcome and met only 'Foreign Minister' Huang Hua. Instead, he met Red China's top leaders -- Communist Party 'Vice Chairman' Teng Hsiao-ping and 'Premier' Chao Tsu-yang."

Common courtesy requires a visiting dignitary to be entertained by his counterpart. Bush was only entertained by 'Foreign Minister' Huang Hua upon his arrival and 'Vice Premier' Wan Li prior to his departure; both Chao Tsu-yang and Teng Hsiao-ping were too busy to entertain him. What kind of "head-of-state treatment" was that?

This was a repetition of the snub Richard Nixon met with during his visit to the Chinese mainland, where he was only entertained by Chou En-lai, instead of Mao Tse-tung, as he should have rated. The haughty attitude of the Peiping regime reveals its true feelings toward the U.S. vice president, who asked to visit the Chinese mainland without any justifiable cause.

This attitude was a key element in Peiping's united front maneuvers in making all sorts of demands on the United States, and threatening to downgrade Communist China-U.S. relations without any intent to actually do so. The United States was so impressed by Peiping's empty threats as to cause President Ronald Reagan to dispatch Bush to Peiping and to write three letters to placate Peiping's feelings. It turned out that those letters were more damaging to the vital interests of the Republic of China than Peiping could have possibly hoped for.

The letters will be a subject of debate as to their implications and significance. They betray not only the interests of the Republic of China, but also Reagan's own stand on the China question. They are couched in terms most favorable to the Chinese Communist stand if not in that regime's own language.

As Vice President Bush will surely appear before U.S. congressional committees to report on his visit to Peiping, congressional leaders should seize the opportunity to find out exactly what transpired in Communist China and what promises were given to Chinese Communist leaders. Peiping is attempting to nullify the Taiwan Relations Act so that it may launch its offensive to conquer Taiwan with the help of the United States. This is, after all, the final objective of the Peiping regime in launching its phony peace offensive last year to create an illusion of peace in the Taiwan Strait and to lessen the U.S. concern over its security. U.S. support of that peace offensive is another sign of its having fallen into the Chinese Communist trap.

The people of the Republic of China should wake up to the danger of the changing U.S. position on its China policy and not entertain any more wishful thinking about the Reagan administration. He is surrounded by a group of pro-Peiping advisers and is liable to betray us again at any time.

We should heed the sound advice of Premier Sun Yun-hsuan, who last Thursday called on the people of this nation to unite to work for the interests of our country, to stick to our beliefs and fear no obstacles in order to build our own strength and confidence. We should realize the sinister nature of our enemy, who has many sympathizers in the United States and other parts of the world, many of whom contribute to the undermining of our efforts.

We must also warn the American people of the unreliability of the Peiping regime and its leaders, who would not hesitate to lie, cheat and deceive their best friends to achieve their goal. The Carter administration was naive enough to foresake a traditional and reliable ally and faithful friend to accommodate the Peiping regime, which has failed to live up to U.S. expectations in restraining the Soviets.

It would be a catastrophe if the Reagan administration should follow in the footsteps of Jimmy Carter in appeasing the Chinese Communists at the expense of the Republic of China. Perhaps, it is high time to remind President Reagan that Jimmy Carter suffered his disastrous defeat at the polls in 1980 largely as a result of his recognition of the Peiping regime.

PREMIER SUN VISITS MATSU INSTALLATIONS

OW180315 Taipei CNA in English 0239 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Matsu, 18 May (CNA) -- Premier Sun Yun-hsuan visited the military personnel and civilians here 16 May, praising their high morale in reconstructing this frontline bastion of the Republic of China. Accompanied by Gen. Hau Pei-tsun, chief of the General Staff of the Ministry of National Defense, the premier visited Tung Yin Tao, Peikan Tao and Nankan Tao, conveying President Chiang Ching-kuo's greetings to the armed forces personnel and civilians there. He also inspected the schools and community development programs, and listened to briefings by the anti-communist patriotic army and other related authorities here.

Premier Sun expressed satisfaction to the continuing progress of various reconstruction projects made by armed forces as well as the civilians.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 098 20 May 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

UNITED STATES

RENMIN RIBAO on Reagan's Proposed European Tour [19 May] B 1

NORTHEAST ASIA

Ni Shifu Meets Japanese TU Delegation 14 May D 1
Councillor Fang Yi Meets Japanese Delegation D 1
Yao Yilin Meets Japanese Insurance Delegation D 1
PRC, Japan Sign Oil, Gas Survey Agreement 19 May D 1

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

USSR Attempt To Bar DK From UN Meeting Foiled E 1
Zhao Ziyang Meets With Hong Kong Businessman E 1
Huang Hua Meets Outgoing Burmese, Nepalese Envoys E 1
New Philippine Envoy Presents Credentials E 1

SOUTH ASIA

Delhi Reports End of Official-Level PRC Talks F 1
Pakistani Army Deputy Chief of Staff Visits F 1
Arrival in Beijing F 1
Meeting With Geng Biao F 1
Yang Dezhi Hosts Banquet F 2

WESTERN EUROPE

Further Reports on Economic Group's FRG Visit G 1
Economic Cooperation Discussed G 1
Chen Muhua Meets Schmidt G 1
New PRC Envoy to Denmark Presents Credentials G 1

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Burundian, Zambian Women's Delegations Visit I 1
Ji Pengfei Meets Burundi Group I 1
Hu Yaobang Meets With Groups I 1
Trade Union Group Leaves Zimbabwe for Botswana I 1

WESTERN HEMISPHERE

XINHUA Correspondent Views Falklands Crisis J 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Commentator Stresses Aiding Poor Communes K 1
[RENMIN RIBAO 18 May]
Editorial Urges Promoting Primary Education K 2
[RENMIN RIBAO 17 May]
GUANGMING RIBAO Views Socialist Planned Economy [9 May] K 5
Article Views Changzhou's Economic Experience K 14
[RENMIN RIBAO 14 May]
Article Discusses Role of State Chairman K 18
Briefs: Broadcast Stations K 19

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Anhui's Zhou Zijian Speaks at Award Meeting O 1
Fuzhou PLA Commander Stresses Ideals, Tradition O 1
Former Kuomintang Personnel Released in Shanghai O 2
Zhejiang's Tie Ying on Anticrime Struggle O 2
[ZHEJIANG RIBAO 3 May]

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

NANFANG RIBAO on Ending Indiscriminate Bonuses [10 May] P 1
Henan Holds Public Security Progressives Meeting P 2
Opening of Meeting P 2
Dai Suli Address P 3
Liu Jie at Closing P 4
Hunan Hosts South China Animal Husbandry Meeting P 4

SOUTHWEST REGION

Sichuan Forum Analyzes Improving Economic Work Q 1
Sichuan Nationalities Affairs Committee Meets Q 2
Xizang Lithium Said Nearly Half of World Total Q 2

NORTH REGION

Hebei's Jin Ming Leads Fight Against Drought R 1
Nei Monggol Issues Measures To Implement Housing R 1

NORTHEAST REGION

Jilin CCP Committee Holds Industry Conference S 1
Opening of Meeting S 1
Qiang Xiaochu Address S 1
Liaoning Combat Hero Devoted to Youth Education S 2
Liaoning Reports Poor Field Crop Growth S 2

NORTHWEST REGION

Gansu's Feng Jixin Sets Tasks in Economic Field T 1
Xinjiang's Wang Enmao Views United Front Work T 1
Xinjiang Regional People's Congress Holds Meeting T 2

RENMIN RIBAO ON REAGAN'S PROPOSED EUROPEAN TOUR

HK191107 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 19 May 82 p 7

["Newsletter From America" by RENMIN RIBAO reported Yuan Xianlu [5913 0341 4389]: "'Weather Forecast' on the Eve of Reagan's European Tour"]

[Text] The "weather forecast" has already shown that President Ronald Reagan will hardly find the "weather" in Western Europe pleasant when he attends the 7-nation summit in Versailles and visits several Western European states in June. This was said by a U.S. reporter. By "weather forecast," he meant the relations between the United States and the Western countries as reflected in the recent annual ministerial meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris, the trade conference of the United States, Canada, Japan and the EEC, and the IMF ad hoc committee conference held in Helsinki.

For some time, the economic relationship between the United States and Western Europe has been clouded, chiefly because of high interest rates. The prolonged high American interest rate has caused the exchange rate of the U.S. dollar to rise, the Western European currencies to depreciate and a great deal of capital to flow out of Western Europe. Investment has decreased and unemployment has risen and all this has aggravated the economic recession in Western Europe. The economies of the Western European countries were at a standstill in 1981. Even in West Germany, which has all along been regarded as the "locomotive" of economic development, the GNP dropped and industrial production decreased. In particular, unemployment increased by a large extent. In the first quarter of this year, the unemployment rate in many Western European countries was near or surpassed the postwar record high. It rose to 13 percent in Britain. Yet, high American interest rates, being the major cause of the economic recession in Western Europe, remained at 16 percent and, because of the huge U.S. budget deficit, seem unlikely to fall in the near future. For this reason, since the beginning of this year, some Western European leaders have time and again reproached the U.S. for its financial and monetary policies having harmed the economy of the West. French President Francois Mitterrand, host of the Versailles summit, said not long ago that at the June summit the six nations "will form a united front to urge the United States to lower its interest rates." This shows the deep dissatisfaction of Western Europe with high American interest rates.

Moreover, the United States and Western Europe consider Japan to be their main rival in trade, but there are also some contradictions between them. At the beginning of this year, an intense trade war over steel and farm products broke out between them. There also was a difference of opinion between them on the economic relations between the East and the West. The United States asked Western Europe to stop laying a pipeline for the Soviet Union but did not get an answer. The United States also asked its allies to cooperate in reducing their loans to and trade with the Soviet Union, but many Western European countries were indecisive.

Washington obviously feels concern for this situation which President Reagan will face during his first tour of Western Europe since assuming his post. In mid-May, three U.S. senior economic officials including Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldridge and Special Trade Representative William Brock went to Europe to attend three meetings in Paris and Helsinki. Their purpose was to calm the dissatisfaction of Western Europe, to ease the economic contradiction between the United States and Western Europe and to create a better atmosphere for President Reagan's visit.

Reagan said at a meeting of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development that a low interest rate was by no means a panacea, that only by overcoming inflation would it be possible to revitalize the economy, that the Reagan administration's economic policy had produced good results in solving the problem of inflation, and that interest rates would soon drop, although they would remain very high for the time being.

Yet, this did not mean that the United States had succeeded in dispelling the dissatisfaction of Western Europe with high American interest rates. Other speakers at the meeting unanimously asked the United States to lower its interest rates by reducing its deficit. The communique of the meeting stressed the evil results of high interest rates. The economic growth rate of the 24 member states of this organization had been estimated to be 1.5 percent in 1983. Due to high interest rates, it will only be 0.3 percent. The high interest rates will increase the number of unemployed people to 6 million in these 24 states, making the unemployed population rise to a total of 30 million. In this situation, people are still unhappy although inflation in Western Europe has eased off. As for the U.S. economy, inflation has decreased noticeably in the past few months, but many people in the United States do not believe that this trend will last long. Many Western European countries doubt Reagan's promise that American interest rates will drop when inflation eases off.

What will President Reagan resort to in order to calm the dissatisfaction of Western Europe? Contrary to his prediction, the U.S. economy has not shown signs of recovery. The budget deficit has not decreased, thus putting him in a difficult situation. Certainly, he can lower interest rates for the time being by changing monetary policy and increasing the supply of money, but infaltion will worsen immediately and his whole plan of economic recovery will be foiled. For this reason, it is very difficult for the United States to lower interest rates. As for the contradiction between the United States and Western Europe, with their economies deteriorating and unemployment rising, there is not much room for them to make compromises.

Of course, President Reagan's first visit to Western Europe since assuming office is not only an important diplomatic activity for the United States but also a big event for Western Europe. Both sides hope to strengthen their relationship as allies and reiterate their unity and cooperation during this visit. However, in the depression of the economic recession in the West in the past few years, it will not be easy to usher in balmy sunshine in the relationship between the United States and Western Europe.

NI SHIFU MEETS JAPANESE TU DELEGATION 14 MAY

OW141946 Beijing XINHUA in English 1655 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Ni Zhifu and Wang Chonglun, president and vice-president of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, met and had a cordial talk here today with a delegation from the General Council of Trade Unions of Japan. The delegation, arriving yesterday, is led by Shizuo Mishima, director of the Organization Department of the General Council. Members of the delegation are representatives from the General Council's branch organizations.

COUNCILLOR FANG YI MEETS JAPANESE DELEGATION

OW180737 Beijing XINHUA in English 0719 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 18 (XINHUA) -- Fang Yi, state councillor and honorary president of the Chinese weiqi (go chess) association, met with a Japanese youth go chess delegation led by Kisei Shuko Fujisawa this morning. Among those present with Li Menghua, minister of the State Physical Culture and Sports Commission and president of the Chinese weiqi association, and Chinese go chess players Nie Weiping, Wu Songsheng and Kong Xiangming. The guests arrived May 14. During their stay in Beijing, they will play four matches.

YAO YILIN MEETS JAPANESE INSURANCE DELEGATION

OW181220 Beijing XINHUA in English 1215 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 18 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Vice-Premier Yao Yilin met and had a friendly conversation here this afternoon with a 21-member delegation from Japanese insurance companies led by Akio Hirata, president of the Yasuda Fire and Marine Insurance Company Ltd. The delegation consists of presidents and vice-presidents from 16 insurance and reinsurance companies in Japan. The Japanese guests arrived in Beijing May 16 for a visit to China at the invitation of the People's Insurance Company of China.

PRC, JAPAN SIGN OIL, GAS SURVEY AGREEMENT 19 MAY

OW181720 Beijing XINHUA in English 1518 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 19 (XINHUA) -- An agreement for the joint survey and exploration of petroleum and natural gas in the northern part of China's Eerduosi (Ordos) Basin was signed here this afternoon by the Chinese Ministry of Geology and Minerals and the Japan National Oil Corporation. According to the agreement, the Sino-Japanese cooperation projects will begin this month and will be completed in five years.

State Councillor Fang Yi attended the signing ceremony and met with a delegation from the Japan national oil corporation led by Akira Watari, executive vice-president of the corporation. Xia Guozhi, vice-minister of geology and minerals, and Vice-President Watari signed the agreement. Sun Daguang, minister of geology and minerals, was also present.

USSR ATTEMPT TO BAR DK FROM UN MEETING FOILED

OW181024 Beijing XINHUA in English 0804 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Nairobi, May 17 (XINHUA) -- The Soviet Union failed today to deprive Democratic Kampuchea of its right to attend the current session of the governing council of the United Nations Environment Programme. At today's credentials committee meeting, the Soviet delegate asserted that the Government of Democratic Kampuchea is a non-existent regime and therefore the credentials of its representative to this session are invalid. His remarks were immediately refuted by other members of the committee.

The Chinese delegate said that Democratic Kampuchea is an independent, sovereign state and its government is recognised by the United Nations as the sole legal government of the country. He said that the United Nations General Assembly has adopted resolutions recognizing the delegates sent by the Democratic Kampuchean Government as the sole legitimate representatives of the country to the United Nations. Therefore, he pointed out, as a U.N. subordinate organ, the United Nations Environment Programme should logically abide by all the resolutions of the U.N. General Assembly concerned. The Heng Samrin regime, he continued, is nothing but a puppet installed single-handedly by the Vietnamese authorities. "The question of defending the Kampuchean representation is, in essence, a question of principle in opposing aggression, upholding justice and safeguarding the U.N. Charter," he stressed.

The representative of Senegal noted that the question of representation of Kampuchea has been debated at successive U.N. General Assembly sessions and the current session of the United Nations Environment Programme apparently should abide by the General Assembly resolutions concerned. The representatives of Papua New Guinea and the United States also spoke in favour of this view. Chairman of the credentials committee Emanuel Agorsor of Ghana then declared that the committee considers the credentials of all delegates to the current session are valid, without putting it to vote. The credentials committee is composed of China, Ecuador, Ghana, the Netherlands, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Senegal, the Soviet Union and the United States.

ZHAO ZIYANG MEETS WITH HONG KONG BUSINESSMAN

OW192036 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1220 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 18 May (XINHUA) --Qiu Degen [6726 1795 2704], chairman of the Hong Kong Far Eastern Group, and his wife left Beijing for Shanghai today. During their stay in Beijing, Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, met and had cordial talks with them. Last evening, Liao Chengzhi, vice chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, gave a banquet to honor Qiu Degen and his wife.

HUANG HUA MEETS OUTGOING BURMESE, NEPALESE ENVOYS

OW141015 Beijing XINHUA in English 0813 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, met and had a cordial talk here this morning with Y.N. Khanal, Nepalese ambassador to China, and U Tha Tun, Burmese ambassador to China, on separate occasions. These two ambassadors will soon leave China at the end of their term of office.

NEW PHILIPPINE ENVOY PRESENTS CREDENTIALS

OW170732 Beijing XINHUA in English 0704 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Fortunato U. Abat, new Philippine ambassador to China, presented this morning credentials to Ulanhu, vice-president of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. Wu Xueqian, vice-minister of foreign affairs, was present. Fortunato U. Abat arrived here May 11.

DELHI REPORTS END OF OFFICIAL-LEVEL PRC TALKS

BK200859 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0830 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] The bilateral official-level talks between India and China ended in New Delhi this morning. The two sides met in plenary to review the 4-day discussions of the working groups on border, trade and economic affairs, science and technology and culture. Immediately after the plenary, leader of the Chinese delegation Fu Hao met External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao. He was with him for about half an hour.

Asked by newsmen whether there has been any breakthrough on the boundary question, Fu said everything has worked according to plan.

Leader of the Indian side, Eric Gonsalves, told the Akashvani correspondent that the two sides will be meeting in the afternoon for a brief wrap-up session.

PAKISTANI ARMY DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF VISITS

Arrival in Beijing

OW181505 Beijing XINHUA in English 1500 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 18 (XINHUA) — General Sawar Khan, deputy chief of the army staff of Pakistan, and his wife and party arrived here by air this morning for a 10-day visit to China at the invitation of Yang Dezhi, chief of General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army.

This afternoon, the Ministry of National Defense held a ceremony in front of the military museum of the Chinese people's revolution to welcome the Pakistan guests. General Sawar Khan reviewed an honor guard of the P.L.A. in the company of Liu Huaqing, deputy chief of the P.L.A. General Staff.

Meeting With Geng Biao

OW191306 Beijing XINHUA in English 1248 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 19 (XINHUA) — Geng Biao, state councillor and minister of national defense, met here this afternoon with General Sawar Khan, deputy chief of the army staff of Pakistan.

They reaffirmed that they would continue their efforts to strengthen Sino-Pakistan friendship and support the Afghan people's just struggle. Geng Biao said: "Close relations exist between the governments, armies and peoples of China and Pakistan. Such friendly relations have developed continuously." General Sawar Khan said China understands the problems that confront Pakistan and has given her active support. He said the Pakistan Government, army and people treasure their friendship with China. They are determined to make continuous efforts to develop this friendship.

They also discussed the grave menace to this area caused by the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Geng Biao said the Soviet Union, which has occupied Afghanistan for more than two years, has wrought calamities to the Afghan people and created a serious threat to the countries around. At the same time, its occupation of Afghanistan constitutes a heavy burden for itself. He said the Chinese people firmly support the Afghan people in their struggle to oppose Soviet occupation troops and appreciate Pakistan's position on this problem.

General Sawar Khan said the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan has constituted a direct threat to Pakistan. Pakistan hopes the Afghan people will carry the struggle through to the end.

The two sides also discussed matters of common interest.

President at the meeting were Liu Huaqing, deputy chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and Cai Chengwen, director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Ministry of National Defense. Also present were M. Afzal Qadir, charge d'affaires ad interim; Brigadier A.G. Abid, defence and army attache of the Pakistan Embassy in China; and General Sawar Khan's party.

Yang Dezhi Hosts Banquet

OW191540 Beijing XINHUA in English 1504 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 19 (XINHUA) -- Yang Dezhi, chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and his wife, Shen Gejun, gave a banquet at the Great Hall of the People this evening in honor of General Sawar Khan, deputy chief of the army staff of Pakistan, Begum Sawar Khan and their party.

Yang Dezhi and General Sawar Khan spoke at the banquet. They noted that Sino-Pakistan friendship is deeply rooted in the hearts of the two peoples and that the two countries have identical views on major international issues.

Yang Dezhi said that China and Pakistan share identical views on major international issues. The two peoples and armed forces have always been sympathizing with, supporting and helping each other in the common cause to build and defend their respective countries and to maintain the peace and stability of this region and the world at large, he said. "This profound friendship of ours has stood the test of time. No matter how stormy and unstable the international situation may be, we are convinced that our friendship will stand the future test and continue to develop in the struggle to safeguard national independence and state sovereignty and to oppose threats and interference from outside," Yang Dezhi said.

General Sawar Khan said in reply that Sino-Pakistan friendship contributes to peace in their region. He said: "Pakistan and China are two friendly neighbours, deeply concerned about the well-being of each other. The time-tested friendship and cooperation between our two peoples, governments and the armed forces is growing with the passage of each day."

Among the guests at the banquet were M. Afzal Qadir, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Pakistan Embassy here, and Mrs Afzal Qadir, and military attaches of the embassy. Present at the banquet were Liu Huaqing, deputy chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and his wife, Xu Hongxia, and Xu Xin, assistant to the chief of the P.L.A. General Staff.

This morning, General Sawar Khan and his party, in the company of Liu Huaqing, visited an armoured unit of the P.L.A. Beijing units, where they received a warm welcome by the commanders and fighters. The Pakistan guests will leave here tomorrow for other parts of China before returning to Beijing.

FURTHER REPORTS ON ECONOMIC GROUP'S FRG VISIT

Economic Cooperation Discussed

OW191716 Beijing XINHUA in English 1624 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Bonn, May 19 (XINHUA) -- The second session of the mixed committee for economic cooperation between China and the Federal Republic of Germany ended here today after reaching an identical view that their economic cooperation and trade have vast prospects. The three-day session was attended by Chen Muhua, head of the Chinese economic delegation, state councillor and minister of foreign economic relations and trade; Otto Graf Lambsdorff, West German minister of economics; and other officials from the two countries. Participants in the session noted with satisfaction the rapid development of trade between China and West Germany since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries in 1972.

In 1981 the volume of trade between the two countries hit an all-time high, totalling 2.34 billion U.S. dollars and representing a 14.6 percent increase over that of 1980. West Germany is China's biggest trade partner in Western Europe. It takes the fourth place in China's foreign trade. In the past one year and more, the two countries have reached cooperation agreements on several hundred joint projects.

At the session, the two sides exchanged views on the further development of their economic cooperation. They suggested, among others, better cooperation between different regions of the two countries and between their medium-sized and small enterprises, an expanded sphere of cooperation in third countries in the areas of services and commodity sales, conclusion at an early date of an agreement on investment promotion and protection and fresh efforts toward cooperation in the areas of energy and raw materials.

Chen Muhua Meets Schmidt

OW200340 Beijing XINHUA in English 0154 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Bonn, May 19 (XINHUA) -- West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt today met the Chinese Government economic delegation headed by State Councillor Chen Muhua. The chancellor highly appraised China's positive attitude in international political and economic affairs, saying that its approach was wise. He hoped to see China playing a bigger role in the 80's and 90's. Chen Muhua, who is also minister of foreign economic relations and trade, said that China and West Germany keep very good economic and political relations. She praised West Germany for its free trade policy and expressed appreciation of its support for China through the European Economic Community. She stressed: "Just as you hope to see a strong China, we also want to see a strong Europe." Present on the occasion were West German Economics Minister Otto Lambsdorff, Chinese Vice-Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Wei Yuming and Chinese Ambassador Zhang Tong.

NEW PRC ENVOY TO DENMARK PRESENTS CREDENTIALS

OW181928 Beijing XINHUA in English 1921 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 18 (XINHUA) -- New Chinese Ambassador to Denmark Ding Xuesong presented credentials to Her Excellency Margrethe II, queen of Denmark, in Copenhagen today, according to a report from the Danish capital. The queen had a warm and cordial conversation with the Chinese ambassador. Ding Xuesong arrived in Copenhagen yesterday.

BURUNDIAN, ZAMBIAN WOMEN'S DELEGATIONS VISIT

Ji Pengfei Meets Burundi Group

OW141301 Beijing XINHUA in English 1246 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 14 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Ji Pengfei met and had a cordial talk here today at the Great Hall of the People with a Burundi women's delegation led by Kandeke Euphrasie, secretary general of the Women's Union of Burundi. Lin Liyun, vice-president of the All-China Women's Federation, was on hand. The delegation, as the guest of the All-China Women's Federation, arrived here May 3.

Hu Yaobang Meets With Groups

OW151340 Beijing XINHUA in English 1330 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 15 (XINHUA) -- Chairman Hu Yaobang of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China met with a women's delegation from Zambia and another from Burundi at Zhongnanhai here today. He said that the China visit by the two delegations shows in a way the intimacy and unity of Third-World countries. The exchange of visits among peoples of the Third World demonstrates unity, mutual trust and support. He said: "The Third-World countries, having similar experience in the past, will share the same destiny in the future. Our present common task is to unite, safeguard our own independence and world peace and oppose imperialism, colonialism and hegemonism. At the same time, energetic efforts should be made to develop our national economies to provide a better guarantee for our national independence. Women are a great force in this endeavor." He expressed the conviction that the unity and friendship between China and the African countries would continue to develop.

The Zambian women's delegation is led by Mme. B.C. Kankasa, member of the Central Committee of the United National Independence Party of Zambia and executive secretary of the Zambian Women's League. Prior to today's meeting, she had transmitted to Hu Yaobang a letter from Zambian President K.D. Kaunda. Hu Yaobang asked Mme. Kankasa to convey his written reply and his best regards to President Kaunda upon returning home. The Burundi women's delegation is led by Mme. Kandeke Euphrasie, member of the Political Bureau of the Party of Unity and National Progress and secretary general of the Women's Union of Burundi. At the meeting, Hu Yaobang asked her to convey his best wishes to Burundi President J.B. Bagaza upon returning home.

Kankasa and Euphrasie outlined their impressions of the China visit. They agreed that the visit deepened mutual understanding and enhanced friendship between their own people and the Chinese people who are working heroically for progress. The two women leaders also conveyed the regards for Hu Yaobang from President Kaunda and President Bagaza.

Present at the meeting were Chinese Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Wen Yezhan, Deputy Head of the International Liaison Department of the CCP Central Committee Li Shuzheng, Vice-Presidents of the All-China Women's Federation Huang Ganying and Lin Liyun, Zambian Ambassador to China W.R. Mwondela and Mrs. L. Mwondela and Burundi Ambassador to China Sylvere Gahungu and Mrs. Agnes Gahungu.

TRADE UNION GROUP LEAVES ZIMBABWE FOR BOTSWANA

OW191912 Beijing XINHUA in English 1844 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Harare, May 19 (XINHUA) -- The delegation of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions led by its deputy chairman, Chen Yu, left here for Botswana after concluding its one-week visit to Zimbabwe. During their stay here, the Chinese trade unionists visited factories, schools and hospitals and exchanged views with their hosts on trade union activity. Zimbabwean Minister of Labor and Social Service Kangai met the Chinese guests and had a friendly talk with them yesterday.

XINHUA CORRESPONDENT VIEWS FALKLANDS CRISIS

OW200812 Beijing XINHUA in English 0752 GMT 20 May 82

["Commentary: Performance of Superpowers in Malvinas (Falkland) Conflict" -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, May 20 (XINHUA correspondent Tang Tianri) -- Nearly 50 days have elapsed since the eruption of the British-Argentine conflict over the Malvinas (Falkland) Islands. The two superpowers have been following it closely and exploiting it fully for their own interests. The United States first tried to mediate and then openly supported Britain and imposed sanctions against Argentina. At first, the Soviet Union tried to appear fair and objective but later turned to support Argentina and criticize the United States and Britain with growing bitterness. The changes of the U.S. and Soviet attitudes have thus cast over the Malvinas conflict a shadow of superpower contention. The attitudes of the United States and the Soviet Union reflect their strategic designs.

At the beginning, the United States viewed both sides in the dispute as treaty-bound allies. Hence the intense U.S. mediation efforts to avoid damage to its relations with the two sides. But as the U.S. proposals were essentially beneficial to Britain and created conditions for direct U.S. intervention in the strategic Malvinas, they were turned down by Argentina. The failure of mediation was followed by open U.S. support for Britain. Washington has thus revealed its appraisal of Britain as more important than Latin America on its chessboard of global strategy. Washington's open support for Britain has aroused growing resentment among Latin American countries and impaired its relations with them -- an unwise move in the view of some U.S. political figures.

From what filtered through the Soviet press, the escalation of the Malvinas crisis is viewed by Moscow as a golden opportunity. Shortly after the conflict broke out, the Soviet central T.V. station put on an unbiased appearance. It called for British withdrawal from the Malvinas while criticizing Argentina for using force. Argentina, it said, covets parts of the Antarctica, and the occupation of nearby islands helps enhance its position in its designs. But later on, Moscow put an abrupt end to its apparent objectivity in the wake of growing Latin American resentment to the U.S. position on the crisis and the appeal of some NATO members for a peaceful settlement. Since then, it has adopted the following tactics:

First, to launch a propaganda campaign against the United States, branding the U.S. action as anti-Latin American. The Soviet paper IZVESTIYA maintained that essentially, the Malvinas conflict is also one between the United States and Argentina. According to a TASS report, during talks with a Nicaraguan delegation on May 4, Leonid Brezhnev made known the first official Soviet view on the British-Argentine conflict with a single comment: "The imperialist nature of Washington's policy towards Latin American countries has been given further evidence by the British-Argentine conflict over the Falkland Islands." Moscow also seized the opportunity to present itself as a "friend" of Latin American countries by pledging solidarity with Latin American "patriotic and democratic forces" in opposing the United States (TASS, May 4).

Second, to drive a wedge deeper between Western Europe and the United States by exaggerating their differences on the British-Argentine conflict. Moscow accused the United States of disregarding the national interests of West European countries by involving them in the Malvinas crisis (TASS, May 7). It claimed that the West European countries did not necessarily want to act in the interest of Britain at the cost of their own relations with the Latin American states (SOVIET RUSSIA, May 9) and that the West European countries were seeking a way to extricate themselves from blindly following Washington's policy (SOVIET RUSSIA, May 9).

The Malvinas crisis is now at the crossroads between peace and war escalation. This situation, indeed, calls for close attention.

COMMENTATOR STRESSES AIDING POOR COMMUNES

HK200643 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 18 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Enthusiastically Assist Poverty-Stricken Communes and Production Brigades and Teams"]

[Text] This paper carried a report today on how victory No 1 production team of Changan County was transformed from a rich into a poor production team. The report put forth an important problem of the existing rural work and it is worthwhile to read it.

Victory No 1 production team was once a famous advanced team. During the cooperative period, it built its enterprises through arduous efforts. Everybody was concerned about it and supported it. Based on the life of this production team, author Liu Qing wrote "The History of the Pioneers" to praise its achievements in transforming a poor production team into a rich one during the initial stage of the cooperativization movement. During the 10 years of internal disorder, this production team was seriously disrupted by "leftist" policies and was again transformed into a poor production team. Up till now, it is still in straitened circumstances. However, this has not drawn the attention of the people for a relatively long period of time. The resolution on agricultural problems which was issued at the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee called for the whole party to "concentrate its efforts on promoting a speedy development of the country's very backward agricultural situation," so that the peasants who comprise 80 percent of the country's population would be able to get rich through joint efforts and through arduous work. It is now 3 years since we implemented the policies stipulated at the third plenary session. However, people have not paid due attention to the fact that the once famous rich production team several kilometers away from Xian municipality has now been transformed into a poor production team. This has given us much food for thought.

Since the third plenary session, the party's policies of enlivening the rural economy have scored significant results and there have been satisfactory changes in the rural areas. Many communes and brigades that have been in straitened circumstances for a prolonged period of time have now started to lift themselves out of poverty and embarked on the road to prosperity. The total number of production teams like victory No 1 production team is on the decrease. However, we must note that to a certain extent, poverty-stricken communes and brigades still exist. Over the past few years, their production and living standards have not improved much. A small number of them have not made any improvement at all. It is precisely in these areas that our inadequacies are concentratedly manifested.

Over the past few years, the rural economy has taken a turn for the better; the income of the peasants has increased and their living standard has improved. This tallies with the actual situation. However, this is not an all-sided point of view. Let us take grain production as an example. Under the circumstances that serious natural disasters occurred in a number of districts in our country last year, the production of grain has increased by 1.4 percent over 1980 with a net increase of more than 10 billion jin. This is an excellent situation. However, the increase of production varies in different localities and only a small number of have increased production by a large margin. Although some localities have had a relatively rapid increase in production, poverty has not been eased because their foundation is weak and they have been in straitened circumstances over a prolonged period of time. Some localities, communes and brigades suffered a decline in production last year and they are now confronted with great difficulties. For example, quite a number of peasants in victory No 1 production team of Changan County were short of food last winter and this spring. Let us have a look at the peasants' income. According to the sample investigation of the State Statistical Bureau, the average annual income of a peasant (including income from agricultural and sideline occupations and income after redistribution) is 223 yuan, an increase of 16.8 percent over the preceding year. Such a large margin of growth is unprecedented since liberation. However, there are differences in peasants' income. The average per capita income can be as much as 500 to 1,000 yuan annually and it can be as little as 10 or 20 yuan.

The Shaanxi Provincial CCP Committee seized the typical example of victory No 1 production team and the first secretary himself personally analyzed the situation and conducted in-depth investigations to sum up experiences. They were resolved to give priority to assisting the poor communes and brigades and treated this as an important task of rural work this year. This is an imperative task.

We must not simply give money or commodities to the poverty-stricken communes and production teams and brigades or simply make arrangements for the policies and measures. First of all, we must resolutely implement the party's various policies for the rural areas and carry out meticulous personnel work. In particular, we must devote efforts to doing a good job of straightening out the leadership groups in communes and brigades and to correct the confused ideas in the course of carrying out the policies for the rural areas. The fact that victory No 1 production team was transformed from a rich production team into a poor one was due to problems in the leadership group. During the 10 years of internal disorder, a relatively good leadership group had been attacked and destroyed. The situation has not improved over the past few years because the cadres of the leadership group who came to power after readjustments are lazy and they are only interested in seeking private gains. They have not implemented the responsibility system but still carry on with the old practices. They do not grasp production nor do they promote scientific cultivation. Very often they do farm work in the wrong season. In this case, how can they mobilize the enthusiasm of the masses, promote production and lift themselves out of the straitened circumstances? One of the major tasks of the existing work in the rural areas is to establish a leadership group at the grassroots level that will resolutely implement the four basic principles, act according to the line stipulated at the third plenary session and be trusted by the masses. If the leadership group is weak and incompetent, loosely organized, and lacks a good work style, the party's policies will not be correctly implemented. If we do not put an end to the bureaucratic practices and the lax and weak leadership in the relevant leadership departments, we will not be able to rectify the leadership at the grassroots level. In order to rapidly assist the poverty-stricken communes and brigades to take on a new outlook and to do a good job of various tasks in the rural areas, CCP committees at all levels must devote major efforts to strengthening the training of the rural grassroots cadres and be resolute in promoting the building of the leadership group at the grassroots level so that they will genuinely become the key and the fighting bastion which promote unity and guide the masses to advance in the correct direction.

EDITORIAL URGES PROMOTING PRIMARY EDUCATION

HK200632 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 17 May 82 pp 1, 4

[Editorial: "Greatly Strengthen Educational Undertakings in Rural Areas"]

[Text] Strengthening educational undertakings in rural areas is an urgent and great task. The party and the government have always shown great concern for the development of educational undertakings in rural areas. Since the party's third plenary session, the central authorities have issued many directives on this type of development. The draft of the revised PRC constitution which was adopted recently by the NPC Standing Committee attaches great importance to the education issue. According to the draft of the revised constitution, citizens have the right and obligation to receive education. The state operates, and encourages nongovernmental bodies to operate, various types of schools in order to wipe out illiteracy, universalize primary education and develop secondary, vocational and higher education. The discussion on the draft of the revised constitution and the adoption and implementation of this draft will give an impetus to the development of education in our country and particularly to the development of educational undertakings in rural areas.

Although the educational undertakings in our country's rural areas have achieved great successes, they are still very backward. At present, primary education has not been universalized in most rural areas.

Following the implementation of the agricultural production responsibility system, some areas have failed to solve in a timely manner some new problems in this work. As a result, there has even been a decline in the school attendance rate of children of school age. There are still many illiterates among adult peasants. Quite a few areas have not effectively carried out work to eliminate illiteracy and the sparetime cultural and technical education. Our secondary and higher education accounts for a very small proportion of the whole educational system. This is not keeping pace with our population of 1 billion including 800 million peasants. The contradiction between these backward conditions of our rural education and our modernization programs are becoming more and more salient.

The building of our socialist material civilization and spiritual civilization must proceed on a proper cultural and educational basis. If we do not greatly develop our educational undertakings, building our country into a modern socialist power with a high degree of democracy and civilization is nothing but a fine wish.

It is a pity that many comrades so far still fail to understand the education issue. Although some comrades have paid lipservice to the argument that agricultural development depends on science, they do not understand that the development of science depends on education. In fact, the backwardness of education is the source of the backwardness of agricultural science and technology. It is inconceivable that illiterates and those who have become literate but have not received agricultural and technical education should master modern agricultural science and technology and scientific management knowledge. Although some comrades also want to grasp the building of spiritual civilization, they do not attach importance to educational undertakings. The scale and the level of the development of educational undertakings are precisely important signs of the degree of civilization in a society. In building spiritual civilization in our rural areas, we still have to do a lot of work, such as strengthening ideological and political work, perfecting our socialist democracy and legal system and raising the scientific and cultural levels of our peasants. If we have a large number of illiterates and if our people's cultural level is very low, our country will not be lifted out of ignorance and backwardness. In short, to build our material civilization and spiritual civilization, it is quite necessary to strenghthen our educational undertakings in rural areas.

To strengthen our educational undertakings in rural areas, we must now do well in grasping the following major tasks:

1. Uphold the guiding principles for universal education in rural areas. Children of school age must enter primary schools and must not discontinue their schooling before graduation. In 1980, the party Central Committee and the State Council issued a "Decision on Certain Issues Concerning the Universalization of Primary Education," saying: "During the 1980's, the whole country should basically realize the historical task of universalizing primary education. Areas where the conditions exist may also universalize junior middle school education." The decision also provided policies and measures for realizing this historical task. It is imperative to guarantee fulfillment of this task.

2. Strive to do well in running educational undertakings for peasants; adopt varied forms such as evening schools and winter schools which are popular with the peasants; eliminate illiteracy among adult peasants; and help adult peasants make up the cultural and technical lessons they have missed.

3. Develop in a planned way agricultural vocational education and secondary agrotechnical education including agricultural middle schools, agrotechnical schools and agricultural polytechnic schools; and offer agricultural courses in ordinary middle schools.

4. Colleges and universities should train more people with professional skills such as agrotechnicians, forestry professionals, medical doctors and teachers for rural areas. Colleges and universities will gradually enroll more sons and daughters of the peasants who will return to rural areas after graduation.

Here we would like to stress issues concerning the universalization of primary education. Universalizing primary education in rural areas is the foundation of the whole rural educational cause. Due to the quick development of our agriculture at present, the great majority of our peasants, communes and brigades have received increases in their income. As a result, the peasants have become more eager for studying culture and science and for setting up educational undertakings This is very advantageous to universalizing primary education and to developing other types of education in our rural areas. New trends have already emerged in the development of educational work in some areas. We must achieve a full understanding of this kind of favorable situation and energetically promote the universalization of primary education. Following the implementation of the production responsibility system, new problems have emerged in the universalization of (primary) education. The following are some of these problems: How are we to fix remuneration for teachers of schools run by the local people? How are we to resolve the contradiction between the teachers' teaching work and their participation in agricultural labor? How are we to raise funds for building schoolhouses and for making improvements in schools? How are we to solve the problems created by some peasants who make their sons and daughters do auxiliary labor and are not willing to send them to schools? With regard to all these problems, we should make a thorough investigation and study and properly solve them. Quite a few areas have already gained successful experience in solving these problems. The masses in Yunnan's Luliang County have raised funds for building primary schoolhouses on a large scale; Yunnan's Jinggu County has adopted a flexible and diversified teaching system to develop rural education; Hubei's Guangji County has simultaneously eliminated illiteracy and ignorance of science; and Shuhe commune in Shanghai's Chongming County has established an educational network which suits the needs of the rural development. All these are effective measures to strengthen the educational undertakings in rural areas.

Due to the fact that one area's local conditions are different from another's, it is imperative to take such measures that are suitable to local conditions. However, every area must adhere to the following principles: guarantee that the teachers' income will be increased when the peasants' income has been increased; guarantee that the teachers will be allowed to concentrate their energies in carrying out their teaching duties and that their participation in agricultural labor will not affect their teaching duties; guarantee that investment in education will be gradually increased and that the methods for running schools will be improved; and convince the peasants that they should subordinate immediate interests to long-term interests, that they should actively send their sons and daughters to schools and that they will not be allowed to force their sons and daughters to discontinue their schooling before graduation. With regard to some children who do have problems in attending full-time primary schools, we should assist them in solving their problems by adopting one of the following forms: half-day schools, mobile schools; morning, afternoon or evening classes, and tutoring students at their homes. By doing so we can enable these students to receive education. It is true that universalizing education in the rural areas of a big country like ours requires a period of time and the adoption of some measures. It is also imperative to make some adaptations in areas where economic and cultural conditions are particularly backward. However, we must first be determined to implement and uphold the principles for universal education. Although there are difficulties, we must not take a vacillating attitude toward the principles nor must we slacken our efforts to implement and uphold these principles. Under this premise, we should actively discover measures for universalizing education that are suited to the current rural conditions. By doing so we can advance steadily, achieve the goal of universalizing primary education throughout the country in the 1980's, and attain the goal of universalizing junior middle school education in areas where conditions exist.

Now is the time to greatly strengthen educational undertakings in rural areas. It is also now possible to do so. We should be confident of fulfilling this task. We hope that the whole party and the whole society will go all out to fulfill this task!

GUANGMING RIBAO VIEWS SOCIALIST PLANNED ECONOMY

HK190701 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 9 May 82 pp 1, 3

[Article by Xue Xin [5641 5640] and Ma Biao [7456 7516]: "It Is Imperative To Practice Planned Economy If We Are To Adhere to the Socialist Path"]

[Text] In recent years, a great deal of discussion has evolved in China centered on the question of reforming the economic system. As a result of the practice of local reform, this discussion is gradually developing in depth. One important question of principle involved in this discussion is: how to understand and handle the socialist planned economy. This not only has a bearing on how to understand the Marxist theory of the planned economy, but also on how to correctly sum up the practice of our socialist planned economy and how to adhere to the socialist road in our modernization so that the national economy will develop smoothly along the correct orientation. Therefore, there is a necessity to examine this question in depth. Below are some of our views.

Planned Economy Is the Essential Feature of a Socialist Economy

How can we understand the essential feature of a socialist economy? For the sake of distinguishing this question in theory, we must study again the theses of the writers of the Marxist classics.

In the 1840's, when Marx and Engels were in the initial period of jointly creating their theory of scientific socialism, they made this prediction of the future "new social system": "All production departments will be controlled by the whole society, or in other words, for the sake of common interests management will be based on a general plan and carried out with the participation of all members of the society." By the 1870's, they further pointed out: "With the seizure of the means of production by society," "the anarchy within social production is replaced by conscientiously planned organization" and "the producers will consciously engage in social labor in accordance with a common and rational plan." They held that this was the goal drawing the great economic movement of the 19th century. ("Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 1, p 217; vol 3, p 323 and vol 2, p 454)

Very clearly, a socialist economy is established on the basis of public ownership of the means of production, and a planned economy is carried out for the sake of the common interests of society. This was not a conjecture made by Marx and Lenin but a scientific conclusion obtained by them in accordance with the law governing the economic movement of capitalist society.

As everybody knows, the impetus given by the capitalist system to production has become exceedingly socialized. From decentralized and small-scale individual production, it has changed into centralized and large-scale social production. The division of labor in society has become smaller and smaller, the extent of cooperation has become broader and broader and ties between various enterprises and departments have become closer and closer. This means that production is more and more of a social nature. This objectively requires the coordination of the production of the whole society in an organized and planned manner so that a suitable proportion will be maintained between various departments of the national economy. However, the means of production of capitalist society belong to the capitalists, and more and more become concentrated in the hands of a handful of monopoly capitalists or monopoly groups. Therefore, production can only be organized and planned in individual enterprises and individual companies, but the production of the whole society is unorganized and in a state of anarchy. The various proportionate relations required for the development of the national economy can only be achieved by means of competition among the capitalists, spontaneous regulation of the law of value, cyclical economic crises and coercive measures. In other words, the capitalist economy is a market economy dominated by the laws of competition and anarchy in production. That will inevitably often give rise to confusion and waste in both production and circulation.

To break away from this condition, we must replace capitalist private ownership with socialist public ownership and must use a planned economy in place of anarchy in production. The founders of scientific socialism held that this is a trend of historical development independent of people's subjective will.

Since the death of Marx and Engels, scientific socialism has gradually developed from theory into reality. As a developer of the socialist cause, Lenin had, under the new historical situation, enriched and developed the scientific principles expounded by Marx and Engels. He pointed out: "the inevitability of the replacement of capitalism by a new social order, which will establish the planned regulation of the economy." He stressed: "Socialism is inconceivable without planned state organization, which keeps tens of millions of people to the strictest observance of a unified standard in production and distribution." "Collected Works of Lenin," vol 35, p 555 and "Selected Works of Lenin," vol 3, p 545) Here, Lenin regarded the planned economy as the essential feature of a socialist economy. This means that if a planned economy is not carried out on the basis of public ownership, and if production and distribution are not for the sake of common interests and carried out in accordance with the general plan regarding the products required for the subsistence of members of the whole society but for the interests of individuals and groups, then departmentalism, decentralism and the trend of liberalization will grow in the economic sphere, a state of anarchy of blind competition and blind development will become rampant again as in the case of capitalist society, and the achievement of socialism will be out of the question. We can say without reservation that the practice of a planned economy is a question of fundamental principle of adhering to the socialist road.

There is a kind of view which holds that planned economy is not socialist ownership but an inevitable trend of socialized mass production. They hold that some developed capitalist countries are now also practicing planned economy, and moreover, their degree of planning is very high. However, as it is restricted by the capitalist system, it still cannot break away from the market influence. This kind of view has confused the economic intervention of bourgeois countries with the socialist planned economy.

The planned economy is a national economy consciously managed by society based on the demand of objective economic law and in accordance with a predetermined plan. It does not refer to the planning of individual enterprises and departments, but to the planning of the entire process of production, distribution, exchange and consumption of the whole society. It is a socioeconomic system established on the basis of public ownership of the means of production. Countries practicing a planned economy must draw up and implement various economic plans, including fiscal, medium-term and long-term plans. However, the planned economy practiced by some countries may not necessarily be a planned economy. After World War II, although such developed capitalist countries as West Germany, France and Japan drew up all kinds of economic guidelines and plans and energetically strengthened state intervention over socio-economic life, any economic plan of the capitalist countries can only play a role to a certain extent and to a certain degree, and at the very most, it can only be a kind of anti-crisis measure to temporarily mitigate some contradictions. Basically speaking, the so-called economic plans of bourgeois countries are in the service of monopoly bourgeoisie. However, because of the acute contradictions existing among various monopoly groups, plans are only implemented when they serve the interests of a certain monopoly capitalist group. Conversely, no matter how the plans may be needed by society and how they may coordinate production and conform to law, they will inevitably devise means of smashing all these to pursue and achieve their own goal. The reason? Because they are privately owned, their actions are motivated by the pursuit of the greatest profit. Therefore, under the capitalist system, the carrying out of conscious social regulation over production for the sake of public interests is basically out of the question, and the practice of a planned economy is also out of the question. The whole society must carry out production in a unified and planned manner on the basis of consciously understanding and mastering objective laws, and it is imperative to replace capitalist private ownership with socialist public ownership.

After the establishment of socialist public ownership when the whole national economy has become a unified entity with a unanimity of fundamental interests, it is imperative to carry out unified planning, management, organization and consumption of the whole society. Otherwise, socialist public ownership will deteriorate. Therefore, the planned economy is inseparable from the socialist system. In "Problems of the Soviet Socialist Economy" written by Stalin in his latter years, he profoundly expounded: "There is a law governing the planned development of the national economy. It is the antithesis of the law of competition and anarchy in production under the capitalist system." "The reason for its role is because the socialist national economy can only be developed on the basis of the economic law governing the planned development of the national economy." ("Selected Works of Stalin," vol 2, p 544) This is the development of scientific socialism.

As we have so strongly stressed the necessity of carrying out a planned economy on the basis of public ownership and stressed that a planned economy embodies the essence and superiority of a socialist economy, are we depreciating the significance of commodity production and commodity exchange? The answer is, of course we are not. The CCP Central Committee has not only affirmed the necessity of carrying out a planned economy on the basis of public ownership, but has also affirmed the energetic development of socialist commodity production and commodity exchange. This is the correct conclusion obtained by learning from historical experiences and lessons. One important policy of the reform of the economic system we are carrying out is to fully take into consideration and apply the law of value in promoting production and circulation and to apply such economic levers as profits, prices, interests and taxes in promoting the enterprises to strengthen economic auditing, develop urban and rural commodity production and commodity exchange and expand foreign trade.

The social productive forces of our country are still not highly developed at the present stage, there are still the two kinds of socialist ownership of the state and the collective, and various production units of the state-run economy to a certain extent still have different economic interests. Under these conditions, there is an objective inevitability for the existence and development of commodity production, and the planned socioeconomic system must still draw support from the form of commodity exchange. In the past, under the influence of erroneous leftist ideas, the adoption of an irresolute, suspicious and even negative attitude toward commodity production and commodity exchange, which objectively exist in socialist society and should be energetically developed, was wrong. However, it is also inappropriate to regard the commodity economy as the essential feature of a socialist economy.

The economic feature should reflect the nature of the socioeconomic system. Commodity production, which emerged in the latter period of the primitive society a long time ago, has by now a history of several thousand years. Yet it has never determined the nature of any socioeconomic system. Even in the capitalist society with such a high degree of development in commodity production, not only have all products of labor become commodities, but even the labor of the people has also become a commodity. Marx also did not regard the commodity economy as the essential feature of capitalist economy. On the contrary, he exhorted the people to pay attention; so that the distinction between the capitalist mode of production and other modes of production lies not in the production of commodities, but in the transformation of labor into commodities and the manifestation of labor as wage-labor. ("Collected Works of Marx and Engels" vol 25, p 994) Therefore, we cannot use whether or not a commodity economy is implemented to explain the nature and feature of a pattern of socioeconomic system, and what is more, we cannot regard commodity production and commodity exchange as the basic features of a socialist economy.

The Planned Economy Has Demonstrated Tremendous Superiority in China

China, with a population of nearly a quarter of the world's people, has stepped into socialist society, established socialist public ownership and carried out a socialist planned economy. This is a flying leap of far-reaching significance in the progress of mankind.

When completing the socialist transformation of the private ownership of the means of production in China, Comrade Mao Zedong said: "The development of mankind goes back hundreds of thousands of years, but here in China it is only today that conditions have been secured for the planned development of our economy and culture." ("Selected Works of Mao Zedong," vol 5, p 250) This thesis is completely correct. In China, precisely because of the establishment and consolidation of the people's democratic dictatorship which is based on the worker-peasant alliance and led by the working people, or the state power of the dictatorship of the proletariat, we have established the leading position of the socialist state-run economy over the whole national economy by means of confiscating bureaucrat capital and buying out national capital. Generally speaking, this kind of state-run economy is already socialized mass production. Its main components already have a certain level in production and technology and its controls the lifeline of the national economy. At the same time, by taking the path of the cooperative movement, we have organized the ocean of the individual economy into a socialist collective economy closely linked to the socialist state-run economy. In this way, for the sake of the public interest, our country is able to manage the economy, culture and other undertakings in accordance with a general plan.

Some comrades have negated this point. They hold that as our national economy is backward and the degree of socialized production is not high, we do not have the conditions for practicing a planned economy at the present stage, and only with the full development of the productive forces can we practice a planned economy. Some people have even declared that practicing a planned economy in our country is a kind of daydream and an artificial coercive system contrary to objective laws. This kind of viewpoint is untenable.

No doubt, socialized productive forces are the material prerequisites for practicing a planned economy. Before the appearance of socialized mass production, it is impossible to raise the objective demand of using a unified plan to regulate the production of the whole society. However, in observing and studying the question of the relations between socialized mass production and the planned economy, we do not have to raise the whole national economy to a highly socialized plane, but we should see whether or not socialized mass production occupies the leading position in the national economy and whether or not the socialized productive forces are owned by society. Generally speaking, the present level of development ofour productive forces is still not high enough, and moreover, there are also great imbalances existing side by side from the tools of handicraft to the tools of modern production. In this kind of unbalanced development, the degree of socialized production has already reached a certain level. In particular, such industrial departments of our economy as industry, communications and transportation and construction are almost all socialized mass production, and the technical equipment of their main parts is comparatively advanced. They already have modern large-scale machinery and automatic mechanical systems, and moreover, these socialized productive forces are in the hands of the state. By means of financial, taxation and banking organs, the state can centralize the various funds of society and carry out planned distribution. The state has also established material distribution organs and commercial networks throughout the country. The production of the agricultural collective economy and the purchasing and marketing of farm produce are also basically carried out under the planned guidance of the state. Market prices are controlled by the state, In short, the state is in control of the lifeline of the whole national economy. Precisely because of this economic fact, the practice of a planned economy is of decisive significance. The viewpoint which asserted that our country does not have the conditions for practicing a planned economy is groundless. The comrades who support this viewpoint have obviously forgotten this question of historical condition in their discussion: our country has been practicing a planned economy for 30 years.

Our historical experience shows that the socialist planned economy has many remarkable advantages in our country.

First, the stability of the people's livelihood has been guaranteed.

When expounding the Marxist principle of historical materialism, Engels said: "A simple fact, which was neglected before, that mankind must first of all eat, drink, have shelter and clothing, that is, must engage in labor, before it can pursue politics and be engaged in political, religious and philosophic activities — the authority of this simple fact in history has finally been recognized." ("Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 3, p 41) New China was founded on the shambles of devastation and disasters. There was instability of prices, inflation, unemployment and famine everywhere, in urban and rural areas, and the people were greatly upset. Under such circumstances, if the CCP failed to create the most fundamental living conditions for the people, such as things to eat, to drink and clothes to wear and places to live, the people's life could not have been stable and the people's democratic dictatorship could not have been consolidated, not to mention the socialist economic and cultural construction. However, how can we have solved this knotty problem in a big country with a backward economy and hundreds of millions of people? It is the result of practicing a planned economy, with priority given to the planned purchase and sales of the important products such as grain and cotton, which greatly concern the national economy and people's livelihood. In the process of the successful socialist transformation of private ownership of the means of production, production, the supply of raw materials, the ciruclation of commodities, employment, wages, prices and so forth were all arranged under a plan. In short, as a result of the planned production, distribution, exchange and consumption, the basic needs of the hundreds of millions of people were satisfied,the antithesis between the rich and the poor was eliminated, the problem of unemployment was solved and the market and prices were kept stable. Thus, the stability of the people's livelihood in the past decades was essentially guaranteed.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, our party and government have made the utmost efforts to improve the people's living conditions. The peasants' income has been increased by raising the purchase prices of the agricultural and sideline products and reducing rural taxation. The income of staff and workers has been increased by raising wages and bonuses, and 26 million of their children have obtained employment. At the same time, the construction of residential quarters for staff and workers, and urban public facilities, schools and hospitals has been expanded. From 1979 to 1981, the funds the state used to improve the people's living conditions reached more than 140 billion yuan. Besides, as a series of measures have been adopted in readjusting the structure of enterprises, the good situation characterized by constantly developing the production of the means of subsistence has been maintained. Owing to this significant policy decision, economic life in our society was rapidly revived, which laid a sound economic foundation for the political situation of stability and unity. The reason we could achieve these remarkable successes in such a short period of time is that we have displayed the advantages of the socialist planned economy. Just think, if the planned economy were not practiced in our country and all important products that concern the national economy and the people's livelihood had not been produced and circulated in a planned way, if everyone had to seek employment all by themselves and everything concerning people's food, drink, shelter and clothing was controlled by the ups and downs of the prices of the free markets, what would have happened in China's situation? Obviously China would have returned to the old society or become the same as the countries in the modern capitalist world. The consequences would be dreadful to contemplate. Of course, with the present development of our productive force, it is impossible and unnecessary to solve all the problems concerning the livelihood of 1 billion people. However, it is imperative that we make planned arrangements to control the principal aspects of the people's livelihood. This is essential for the stability of a country, or a society. Taking the whole situation in the past 30-odd years into account, in spite of the serious turbulence in the "Great Cultural Revolution," our country is still, politically, one of the most stable countries in the world. This is certainly the result of giving play to the superiority of the planned economy.

Second, an independent and relatively perfect industrial productive system and national economic system have been established.

As everyone knows, there was a very small proportion of modern industry in old China's national economy and it was of a colonialist or semicolonialist nature. In other words, it mainly consisted of light industry, most of which were processing industries relying on the import of materials from other countries. Although we also had some heavy industry, most of it consisted of repair factories serving the imperialist countries or mines and factories providing the imperialist countries with raw materials and semifinished products. When China was liberated, the fixed industrial assets of the whole country were only about 12.8 billion yuan. Starting from 1953, by giving play to the superiority of the socialist planned economy, we made every endeavor to accumulate all the funds that could be collected in the national economy and began our planned construction for the building of a powerful socialist material and technological foundation. As a result of carrying out several 5-year plans, a number of steel works and oil bases have been built or expanded, the machine building, automotive, shipbuilding, aircraft and other industries have been established all over the country, the electronics, petrochemical, atomic energy, laser and other new industries have also emerged in China, and the power, coal, textile and other industries have been greatly strengthened, a number of new industrial bases have been established in the broad interior of our country and the minority nationality areas and the railways, highways, water and air transportation, as well as posts and telecommunications have been greatly developed. In 1980, the fixed industrial assets of the whole country reached 410 billion yuan, 2,800 percent of the fixed industrial assets accumulated in old China for nearly 100 years, calculated at original value. At the same time, all forces in the material and technological fields and in financial and economic departments as well as all leading and organizational forces have been amassed and mobilized in a planned way to support agriculture by every possible means. Water conservation facilities have been greatly improved and the production of agricultural chemicals, electricity and machinery has been increased by a big margin. The conditions for agricultural production have been notably improved. Besides, we have also conducted construction in the educational, scientific and cultural fields under the state plan. Our outstanding achievements in nuclear technology, in launching man-made satellites and carrier rockets and in other fields fully show that our industrial and scientific and technological levels have reached a new height. Of course, there are many reasons for such brilliant achievements in our poor and backward country within as little as 30 years. But the practice of the planned economy is undoubtedly a decisive factor.

It is true that we suffered setbacks in practicing the planned economy. We did come across a lot of difficulties after history had pushed our country, which was a vast country with a large population and a complicated and backward economic and cultural basis, onto the socialist path. Our past mistakes in economic work were largely due to insufficient recognition of the actual conditions and difficulties in our country and going beyond what the actual conditions allowed. As we were impatient for success, the control by the state plan, which went into too much detail, was overemphasized and was too rigid while the necessary regulation by market mechanism was neglected. As a result, the development of the national economy in a coordinated way was obstructed and we suffered from losses and waste which should not have occurred. The aim of our economic development, which should have been reached, was not reached, and the people's living conditions were not improved as had been expected. In other words, the setbacks and errors in our past economic work were chiefly the results of the "leftist" guiding ideology. We should not regard these mistakes as mistakes caused by the planned economy. On the contrary, they are results of running counter to the demands of the planned economy, results of failing to reflect the demands of the objective economic laws in our economic plans, such as the basic law governing the socialist economy, the law governing the development of the national economy in a planned way and the law of value. In short, they were results of lacking a scientific spirit in our plans. We must also realize that our past dislocations in the national economy were rapidly changed and the national economy was redeveloped vigorously only when effective measures were adopted to give play to the regulation by plans. This is also an example of the great vitality of the planned economy.

The title of this article, "It Is Imperative To Practice Planned Economy If We Are To Adhere to the Socialist Path," is a basic experience drawn from our practice in the past 30-odd years, To judge whether we are adhering to the socialist road, it is not only necessary to see whether we are safeguarding the socialist public ownership of the means of production and the economic system of distribution according to work, safeguarding the political system of the people's democratic dictatorship (that it, the dictatorship of the proletariat), and the dominant position of the socialist and communist ideologies in the ideological field, but also to see whether the organization and management of the entire socioeconomic activities are serving the public interests of the whole society, that is, the immediate and long-term interests of the broad masses of people. If economic activities are not organized and managed in accordance with the public interests of the whole society but in accordance with the partial interests the enterprises or individuals, we will certainly deviate from the socialist road. In order to truly organize and manage the economy in accordance with the public interests of the whole society, we must practice a planned economy and take the interests of the whole into account. It is inconceivable that deviating from the planned economy and allowing the enterprises and units to act in accordance with their own interests and in an unplanned manner can result in ensuring the public interests of the whole society. We have been adhering to the socialist road. An important symbol is that our socialist economic and cultural construction has been conducted in a planned way for the public interests of the whole society and a foundation has been established for safeguarding the economic and political independence of our country and for building our country into a great socialist country.

A Basic Guiding Principle Ensuring the Smooth Development of Our National Economy

The "Resolution on Certain Question in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC," of the CCP Central Committee clearly points out: "It is necessary to have a planned economy and at the same time give play to the supplementary role of regulation by market mechanism on the basis of public ownership." This is an important guiding principle for our socialist modernization drive.

How do we correctly understand and implement this guiding principle? This question is being discussed in the theoretical and economic circles. In our opinion, there are three main points in this principle:

First, the planned economy must be practiced on the basis of public ownership. There are two forms of socialist public ownership in our country, the ownership by the whole people and collective ownership. The ownership by the whole people, that is, the ownership by the state, is the leading force in the whole national economy and the foundation for practicing the planned economy. On the condition that the lifeline of our national economy is under the control of state ownership, the collective ownership can and must be developed in a planned way.

Some people hold that the root of the various disadvantages in our socioeconomic life lies in the state ownership and that the nature of the economic reform is to change the state ownership into collective or enterprise ownership. This view is obviously wrong. The various disadvantages in our socioeconomic life were mainly the results of the longstanding "leftist" errors in the guiding ideology in the economic field. Of course, they were also the results of flaws in our economic management system which did not suit our conditions. The reform of our economic system is aimed at reforming the concrete systems and methods in the state management of the national economy, including the reform of the management systems in planning, financial, taxation, price, commercial, supply and foreign trade departments as well as banks and labor and wages departments. It is especially aimed at improving the management systems in enterprises. If we do not carry out economic reform, the development of our socialist economy will be obstructed. However, this reform is not aimed at reforming the state ownership system. Along with the raising of the degree of socialization of our production in the process of large-scale socialist construction, the ownership and management by the state, which represents the whole society, become more necessary.

How can we act counter to the demands of the socialization of production and make socialist state ownership retrogress to collective ownership or any other ownership systems? Without the system of state ownership, the socialist planned economy will have no basis. This is a question to be treated earnestly and seriously.

Second, practice the planned economy. In accordance with the demands of objective economic laws and with needs and possibilities, we must in a planned manner arrange various proportionate relations of the national economy and formulate annual, intermediate and long-term plans for economic development, thus allowing the most effective use of manpower, material and financial resources of the whole society and the minimum consumption of such resources to create more social wealth to satisfy the evergrowing material and cultural needs of society. Based on the different systems of ownership of enterprises and the importance, nature and variety of their products, we must adopt a system that combines plans of a mandatory nature and of a guiding nature. For backbone enterprises bearing on the economic life of the country or the production of important products concerning national planning and the people's livelihood, for the procurement of important agricultural and industrial products and for major construction projects, we must chiefly adopt plans of a mandatory nature. For other enterprises and products, we must chiefly follow plans of a guiding nature. In the latter case, the State Council and various departments make known plans of a guiding nature for the reference and implementation of plan enforcement units. The state chiefly relies on economic policies, the economic lever and economic laws and decrees to guide the economic activities of plan enforcement units, so that such activities are in line with the demands of state plans. But concerning those wrong practices, such as departure from unified state plans, interference and tampering with the unified socialist market, and disruption of the effort to coordinate all the activities of the state like pieces in a chess game, the state must interfere, order prohibition, and forbid anyone to go their own way.

One school of thought holds that the direction in the reform of our economic system should call for our gradually turning plans of a mandatory nature into plans of a guiding nature. This is to say that the state generally imposes no plan of a mandatory nature. Only policy decisions on the macroeconomic activities concerning the strategic problems of the development of the national economy are made. Such a viewpoint is wrong. It is undoubtedly entirely necessary for the state to strengthen planned guidance over macroeconomic activities. In the plans for the national economy, the state chiefly specifies the direction and objectives of development of the national economy, major proportionate relations, the pace of economic growth, the level of development of production of major industrial and agricultural products, the scale of capital construction, the direction of investment, regional distribution, the degree to which the living standard of the people regarding their material and cultural needs is to be raised, the state budget, issuance of currency, the international balance of payments, the prices of important products, major technical and economic policies, and so forth. All these are macroeconomic problems bearing on the national economy as a whole. Only with macroeconomics properly taken care of can the steady development of the national economy be guaranteed. But within the scope of microeconomic activities we cannot completely do away with plans of a mandatory nature either and let all enterprises allow the action of the market and their own interests to determine economic activities in production, circulation, distribution and other fields. It is correct to take presence or absence of plans of a mandatory nature as an important mark of distinction between a planned socialist economy and a capitalist market economy. The problem is that we should strengthen the scientific and predictive nature of plans, bear reality in mind, conduct serious and systematic investigations and studies and put plans on a steady, reliable and feasible basis. If we do not do so and instead get rid of plans of a mandatory nature, with microeconomic activities completely detached from macroeconomic activities and with all enterprises following their own policies, the macroeconomic policy decisions in national plans would come to naught.

Just as in the case of capitalist national plans, this would at most have only the effect of coordination. Meanwhile, given the planned economy, only with things handled by the whole country in a planned manner and with the proportionate and coordinated development of the whole national economy, can enterprises be enlivened. If the whole plan of the state is upset and if the national economy is unbalanced, it is also impossible to make enterprises thrive.

Third, we must give full play to the supplementary role of the market as a regulating factor. So-called regulation by market mechanism essentially means the spontaneous regulating action of the law of value, or the organization of production and exchange by enterprises themselves according to market changes. This chiefly refers to those industrial and agricultural products which cannot be controlled in a unified manner or do not readily lend themselves to such control and which do not involve a high output value but a great variety. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, while doggedly introducing the planned economy, we have given full play to the supplementary role of market forces as a regulating factor and vested different degrees of decisionmaking power in the economic activities of different enterprises. The previous situation of excessive control over production, circulation and other fields has begun to change. The whole national economy has become more active. This has played a positive role in stimulating the development of production, satisfying the varied needs of the people in their everyday life and making up for what is lacking in national plans. We must firmly and unswervingly carry on the tried and true measure of taking the market mechanism as a regulating factor -- doing so on the basis of initial results achieved. In formulating economic plans, we must also fully consider and apply the law of value and pay attention to the role of market mechanism. We must realistically do away wtih planned production and planned purchase programs detached from market needs. However, as far as the whole national economy is concerned, the planned economy is to be practiced. Regulation by market mechanism can only play a supplementary role within the limits of state policies, decrees, regulations and systems. If such limits are exceeded, the socialist planned economy will be weakened or even disrupted.

Another school of thought holds that since in the current socialist period of our country, the whole of social production is commodity production and the law of value plays a regulating role in the fields of production and circulation, then the economic activities of the whole society should be subjected to overall regulation by market mechanism. Such a view actually means idealizing the regulatory role of market mechanisms. It should be noted that unlike the planned economy, the regulating role of the market mechanism cannot enable us to take the satisfaction of the material and cultural needs of the people's life as a basis and to study problems, make overall arrangements and plans and seek conscious social regulation with the overall interests of society in mind. We also cannot consciously organize economic activities with the long-term interests of the whole country in mind and will suffer from a certain degree of blindness. Just as Marx and Engels quoting the classic British economist Adam Smith said: "Like the goddess of destiny in ancient times, such relations will be elusive and high above the earth and dispense happiness and disaster among people with an unseen hand." ("Collected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 3, p 40). Ours is a unified socialist country. We must have unified plans and a unified domestic market. In no way can we entrust the overall interests of our nation and people to this "unseen hand." This should be a firm and unswerving principle, as far as we are concerned.

The "resolution" also contains the line: "We must energetically develop socialist commodity production and exchange of commodities." How should we also explain this? We believe that in our approach to commodity production and exchange of commodities under the socialist system, we must grasp the following two points: first, we must have everything taken care of. Second, we must be in charge of everything. To have everything taken care of means that the whole society must work on commodity production. Not only do collective production units take up commodity production but also state-run production units do so. Not only do agriculture and light industry take up commodity production but also heavy industry does so.

This is to say that we must develop commodity production and exchange of commodities in regard to both means of production and means of livelihood. To be in charge of everything means that we must take practical measures to put commodity production and exchange of commodities in the orbit of economic plans. That socialist commodity production is built on the basis of the socialist system of public ownership is aimed at satisfying the material and cultural needs of the people's life. This requires that unlike the case of capitalist commodity production marked by blindness and anarchism, our approach must call for getting organized in a conscious and planned manner within the scope of the whole society. Only by putting state or collective commodity production and exchange of commodities in the orbit of economic plans can we ensure their socialist nature. And only in this way can such terms as socialist commodity production and exchange of commodities be so called.

Upholding the implementation of the planned economy on the basis of the socialist system of public ownership is an important mark that distinguishes our socialist system from the capitalist system and other previous exploiting systems. It is a major principle that protects the future development of our socialist economy and socialist society. This has been solemnly put forth by the party Central Committee to the whole party and the people throughout the country. We must seriously study fundamental Marxist theories on the planned economy and sum up in an overall manner the fundamental experiences of our country in implementing the socialist planned economy. We must foster the idea of coordinating all the activities of the country like pieces in a chess game, recognize the overall interests of the state and take the whole situation into consideration. We must achieve the aim of subordinating partial to collective interests and immediate to long-term interests, resolutely overcome departmentalism, decentralism and the tendency toward liberalization in the economic area, and consolidate the front of the planned economy. Now, our party's awareness of the socialist planned economy obviously exceeds the level in any period since the founding of the PRC. The principle of taking the planned economy as the primary factor and regulation by market mechanism as the supplementary one put forth by Comrade Chen Yun embodies this new level of awareness. So long as we firmly and unswervingly carry out the party Central Committee's instructions, unify thinking and take concerted actions, then we can definitely ensure the steady development of our national economy and maintain the socialist orientation of the building of modernization.

ARTICLE VIEWS CHANGZHOU'S ECONOMIC EXPERIENCE

HK191305 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p 5

[Article by Ren Tao [0117 3447] and Zheng Hongqing [6774 3163 1987]: "Use Economic Methods To Promote Reorganization and Integration of Enterprises -- the Experience of Changzhou Municipality in Practicing Internal Cooperative Pricing" — capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] Among the medium-sized municipalities throughout the country, Changzhou is an advanced model which is making quick progress in promoting coordination between specialized departments and has achieved good economic results. The reasons why Changzhou has been able to do a good job in promoting coordination between specialized departments are manifold, the most important of which is that, with the stabilization of market prices, the municipality has practiced internal cooperative pricing for some products produced by economic integrated entities, regulated the economic interests of various parties in a relatively rational way, and thus vigorously consolidated the results of enterprise reorganization and integration, and facilitated further development.

The Cause and the Measures

The practice of internal cooperative pricing in Changzhou is an objective demand arising from the coordination between specialized departments which has been promoted among enterprises under the current economic system.

In the early 1960's, based on the lessons drawn from the "Great Leap Forward," Changzhou municipality laid down a new path of stepping up the development of the urban economy by giving full play to the established industrial base and by promoting a "coordinated process." In carrying out the coordination between specialized departments in the agricultural machine building industry, this municipality encountered a prominent contradiction in its first "coordinated process" organized in the tractor manufacturing industry. Those components which had formerly been produced by the tractor plant itself were now provided by the coordinating units instead. And, since the market prices of all components were fixed, and also due to some other reasons, the prices of the brought-in components were always much higher than the prices of the ones they made themselves. This really forced the assembly cost up and gave rise to an unreasonable phenomenon that the component producing plants made profits out of the losses which the assembly plant was suffering, and therefore seriously harmed the initiative of the latter. As production in the assembly plant stagnated, production in the component producing plants was forced to slow down in turn. Thus, the coordination between specialized departments failed to give play to its merits, but produced negative effects. In such a case, the mechanism could no longer work.

This phenomenon taught the comrades of the Changzhou Municipal CCP Committee that, in promoting the coordination between specialized departments, solely considering things from the aspect of production is by no means enough. Attention must also be paid to properly regulating the distribution of profits among various enterprises, and the principle of mutual benefit must be upheld. Only in this way can the integration of enterprises obtain a solid foundation. Based on this understanding, they tried the measure of enhancing the integration of enterprises by practicing internal cooperative pricing. Having repeatedly consulted with each other, the tractor plant and its major coordinating partner, the diesel engine plant, reached an agreement on trial implementation of internal cooperative pricing in 1967. According to the agreement, all diesel engines supplied for assembling tractors were to be sold at a 20 percent discount. In other words, the real price was reduced to 800 yuan while the list price was 1,000 yuan. The price was further reduced to 720 yuan later. Moreover, due to improved management, increased mass production and other factors, the production cost of a hand-held tractor was reduced from 2,420 yuan in 1966 to 2,171 yuan in that year, while the selling price was set at 2,500 yuan. In 1970, the tractor plant managed to make up deficits and enjoy profits -- a profit of more than 1.1 million yuan was made after the industrial and commercial tax was paid for the first time.

At the time, the administrative department concerned in Jiangsu Province thought that doing so would reduce the state's financial revenues. So, the department ordered the suspension of the practice of internal cooperative pricing. But, what was the actual situation? In order to find out the truth, our comrades in Changzhou carried out meticulous analysis and calculation. As a result, they found that the profit made from a single diesel engine decreased since the price based on internal coordination was lower than the list price; and consequently the industrial and commercial tax handed over according to the sales volume would decrease as well. However, if the whole "coordinated process" is taken into consideration, it can be found that the reduced profits and taxes on diesel engines were transferred to the tractor plant; and some portion of these transferred profits and taxes turned out to be profits handed over by the tractor plant to the state, while another portion was used to make up the financial subsidies formerly provided by the state to the tractor plant. Therefore, on an overall account, the state's financial revenues were not reduced; and, on the contrary, more financial resources were explored because the coordination between specialized departments had greatly raised the enterprises' overall productivity, increased output and reduced the production cost. Having taken lessons from actual practice, the departments concerned in the province cancelled the previous order suspending the practice of internal cooperative pricing and, instead, vigorously popularized elsewhere the methods adopted by Changzhou municipality.

At present, the practice of internal cooperative pricing has already been enforced among various economic integrated entities and is being constantly improved. All these enterprises have adopted different methods of profit transfer according to their own capital-to-profit ratio and cost-to-profit ratio. In some cases, profits are appropriately transferred from component producing plants with high profit rates to assembly plants with low profit rates; in other cases, profits are appropriately transferred from finished product plants with high profit rates to raw material producing plants with low profit rates.

In implementing internal cooperative pricing, Changzhou has made great efforts to properly handle the relationship between the state and enterprises. All along they have tried to readjust the redistribution of interests among enterprises, with the state's revenues being guaranteed. From an overall consideration, practicing internal cooperative pricing is advantageous to both the state and enterprises. However, if administrative work fails to meet the demand of the changing situation, the state's revenues will be decreased in some fields. In order to avoid this, Changzhou municipality has, on the one hand, strengthened the ideological education in the principle of simultaneously taking the interests of the state, the enterprise and the individual into account, and on the other, strictly enforced financial and economic discipline. As stipulated, any enterprise must submit itself to a joint investigation by the municipal departments of finance, taxation, pricing, and so on, and must obtain their approval before taking part in internal cooperative pricing. At the same time, they also have to complete some application procedures. So, Changzhou managed to prevent some problems which may arise from practicing internal cooperative pricing, and thus make the internal cooperative pricing a real and powerful economic lever in facilitating the integration of enterprises and increasing the state's financial revenues. In view of the present situation of the state's economic system, Changzhou municipality has adhered to the principle of discriminating between member enterprises and nonmember enterprises, namely, the internal cooperative price must only be offered to enterprises inside an economic integrated entity providing each other with components, while the state's current list price will still be applicable to enterprises outside the entity.

Internal cooperative pricing is a redistribution of interests among enterprises. At present, although the price system is unreasonable, it is not ready for change. By asking through consultation those enterprises with relatively high profit rates in an integrated entity to appropriately give away some profits to other enterprises with relatively low profit rates, we can enable all enterprises to equally share profits and harmoniously develop together. For those enterprises which enjoy more profits because of relatively high profit rates, it is by no means easy to accept this arrangement in the beginning. In order to overcome this difficulty, the party organizations at various levels in Changzhou have done a lot of arduous and meticulous ideological work. When carrying out cooperative pricing, they properly gave special consideration to those enterprises with a relatively high profit rate, trying to keep their capital-to-profit ratio or cost-to-profit ratio a bit higher than others; thus they managed to convince these enterprises to voluntarily sign contracts. As a reasonable internal cooperative price can hardly be reached and fixed once and for all, they reviewed the price again and made certain necessary adjustments in light of changes in the actual situation after a period of practice. Therefore, they were able to ensure that all enterprises in an economic integrated entity would voluntarily and conscientiously carry out the internal cooperative prices, and thus speeded up the development of the entity.

The Effect and the Significance

The long practice in Changzhou municipality shows that their direction is correct and good results can be achieved by practicing internal cooperative pricing for some products.

First of all, THIS MEASURE CAN GREATLY SPEED UP THE PROCESS OF COORDINATION BETWEEN SPECIALIZED DEPARTMENTS AND THE RATIONALIZATION OF THE ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE OF ENTERPRISES.

At present, because the price system is irrational, there exists a common phenomenon that prices of components are too high, and assembly plants and finished product plants can hardly make any profit or even suffer losses; or there exists another common phenomenon that the prices of raw materials are too low and, without making any objective effort, finished product plants can easily make excessive profits, of which quite a portion is in fact transferred from raw material producing plants. Both these circumstances will lead enterprises to proceed in all cases from their own interests -- on the one part, some enterprises do not want to increase raw material production; and on the other part, the processing enterprises try every means to develop into "small but complete" or "big and complete" ones. Undoubtedly, both of these forms go against our goal of developing social large-scale production and enhancing the social economic returns. At present, under the circumstances that the conditions for an overall readjustment of the whole price system are still unavailable, to regulate the distribution of profits among enterprises by adopting the expedient measure of internal cooperative pricing will help to pressure enterprises into giving up backward organizational forms of self-supporting systems and all-round plants, and thus voluntarily take the road of integration and coordination between specialized departments. Today, there is basically no all-round plant in Changzhou, and the overall degree of organization of industrial production is quite high.

In the second place, THE PRACTICE OF INTERNAL COOPERATIVE PRICING CAN GIVE FREE REIN TO THE POTENTIAL OF THE COORDINATION BETWEEN SPECIALIZED DEPARTMENTS AND HELP TO VIGOROUSLY INCREASE THE SOCIAL PRODUCTIVE FORCES. Practicing internal cooperative pricing can eliminate, to a certain degree, the negative influence on the production and management in enterprises due to prices being seriously divorced from value. It can push enterprises to combine integration, reorganization and technical reform, and increase profits by enhancing the degree of mass production, raising labor productivity and reducing production cost. Therefore, it can efficiently mobilize the initiative of every part, fully activate the potential of the coordination between specialized departments rapidly, and thus increase social productive force. For example, the Changzhou tractor plant and the Changzhou diesel engine plant, which had long ago established a "production line" coordinating relationship, succeeded in greatly increasing the development speed after implementing internal cooperative pricing in 1967. The production of hand-held tractors rose sharply from 2,125 in 1966 to 23,400 in 1981, an increase of more than 10 times. At the same time the unit cost was reduced from 2,420 yuan to 1,807 yuan, a decrease of 25 percent. The production of diesel engines rose from 6,425 in 1966 to 60,000 in 1981, an increase of more than 8 times; and the unit cost fell from 758 yuan to 471 yuan, a decrease of 38 percent.

As production was developed, the economic results were improved and the profits and taxes handed over to the state were doubled. The two enterprises thus not only managed to make greater contributions to the state but also consequently increased the income of the enterprises themselves as well as of their staff and workers.

In the third place, PRACTICING INTERNAL COOPERATIVE PRICING ACTUALLY MEANS CHANGING THE PROFIT RATES OF ENTERPRISES WITH THE PRICING LEVER. IT THUS ACTS UPON THE PRODUCTION OF THE ENTERPRISES TO A CERTAIN DEGREE AS A REGULATING MECHANISM. As this regulating function only involves the distribution of profits among enterprises and does not affect the market price, it is readily practicable. Therefore, it is of more practical significance and is one of the extremely important measures for enforcing the reorganization and integration of enterprises by economic means. At the same time, as the internal cooperative price is generally closer to the production price (average production cost plus average profit rate per unit of capital) than the previous price, it will redress to a certain degree the malpractice that price is seriously divorced from value. Thus it will be able to reflect more accurately the production and management level of an enterprise.

Of course, we must also be aware that Changzhou municipality has only carried out internal cooperative pricing to a certain extent within various economically integrated entities. With regard to those questions such as whether internal cooperative pricing is feasible for enterprises outside economically integrated entities, what conditions are needed for large scale popularization of the system, how should financial and taxation departments be reorganized to keep up with the changing situation, and so on, thorough studies and investigations still have to be conducted. But, in any case, we can be sure that the coordination between specialized trades and internal cooperative pricing are closely related under the condition that the current price system remains unchanged. Now, while we are enforcing the integration of enterprises along with industrial reorganization, we can gain valuable hints from the experience which Changzhou gained in practicing internal cooperative pricing, and thus more conscientiously adopt various economic methods to solve the problems emerging from enterprise integration.

ARTICLE DISCUSSES ROLE OF STATE CHAIRMAN

HK190956 Beijing ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE in Chinese 0200 GMT 19 May 82

[Article by Wang Shuwen [3769 0647 2429], duty director of the Jurisprudence Research Center of the Academy of Social Sciences: "Why Does the Draft of the Revised Constitution Reinstate the Post of State Chairman?"]

[Text] Beijing, 19 May (ZHONGGUO XINWEN SHE) Reinstating the post of state chairman is an important characteristic of the draft of the revised constitution. It is also a great event in China's political life. China's 1954 Constitution included a provision for the post of state chairman but the 1978 Constitution did not. This draft of the revised constitution reinstates the provision of the former.

The following provisions on the state chairman's duties in the draft of the revised constitution are the same as those in the 1954 Constitution: Nominates the candidate for the post of premier of the State Council; promulgates laws, appoints and removes personnel on the State Council, confers medals and titles for the state, issues decrees of special amnesty, proclaims martial law and states of war and issues mobilization orders according to the decisions of the NPC or the NPC Standing Committee; and represents our country in foreign affairs, accepts foreign diplomatic envoys, dispatches and recalls plenipotentiaries to and from foreign countries in accordance with the decisions of the NPC Standing Committee and approves treaties concluded with other countries. There are also some differences in the draft of the revised constitution: 1) It clearly stipulates the position of the chairman of the state, that is, he represents the country in both domestic and foreign affairs. 2) It appropriately raises the minimum age of the candidates for the post of state chairman from 35 to 45, in consideration of the fact that this post must be held by a person rich in political experience who also has considerable prestige. 3) It stipulates a term of 5 years for the post of state chairman. The chairman may be reelected, but he shall not serve more than two consecutive terms. 4) It does not stipulate that the chairman of the state commands the armed forces of the country or that he is chairman of the Council of National Defense, because it establishes in another provision the Central Military Commission to command the armed forces of the country. 5) It does not stipulate that the state chairman has the power to convene the supreme state conference when necessary, because in the 1954 Constitution the supreme state conference was allocated to make proposals for state affairs, not decisions, and has been proved to be unnecessary in the political life of our country. All this shows that since the post of state chairman was established by the 1954 Constitution, the situation has changed and it is necessary to make new provisions in the light of our actual conditions and needs.

Reinstating the post of state chairman in the draft of the revised constitution is advantageous to the perfection of China's state system, the maintenance of stability and unity and the advance of the construction of the four modernizations. It is necessary that a large country with 1 billion people have a chairman to represent it in its international contacts. At the same time, facts show that the provision in the 1954 Constitution for the post of state chairman did play a useful role in the political life of our country and was advantageous to the stability and unity of the political situation. During the 10 years of turmoil, this system was sabotaged. After the smashing of the "gang of four," an excellent stable and united situation emerged in our country. Thus, reinstating the post of state chairman will be advantageous to the maintanence and development of political stability and unity and promotion of the socialist modernization drive.

BRIEFS

BROADCAST STATIONS -- According to GUANGMING RIBAO, broadcasting stations have been set up in all of China's municipalities and counties. Seventy-two percent of the production brigades and 65 percent of the production teams have rediffusion facilities. Loudspeakers have been installed in 49 percent of the rural households, totaling approximately 90 million in number. Wire broadcasting is major means of propaganda in the countryside. [Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 0900 GMT 11 May 82 OW]

ANHUI'S ZHOU ZIJIAN SPEAKS AT AWARD MEETING

OW190135 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 May 82

[Excerpts] A meeting to sum up the experience in developing five stresses and four beauties and all-people decorum and courtesy month activities and to present awards to the advanced was held this afternoon. (Yuan Zhen), secretary of the Anhi Provincial CCP Committee, presided over today's meeting. To a background of music, the responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's government, the provincial people's congress and the provincial CPPCC committee presented awards and citations to 811 advanced collectives and individuals who have distinguished themselves in such activities.

At today's award meeting, Zhou Zijian, acting first secretary of the provincial CCP committee and governor of Anhui, delivered an important speech entitled "Develop the Five Stresses and Four Beauties Activities Extensively, Penetratingly and Persistently; Strive To Develop Socialist Spiritual Civilization." Comrade Zhou Zijian said: Doing a good job in developing socialist spiritual civilization constitutes a basic guarantee for persistently following the socialist road and realizing the four modernizations program. We must regard the development of spiritual civilization as one of our long-term historical tasks. Communist thinking is the core and soul in the development of socialist spiritual civilization. Efforts must be made to foster the thinking of simultaneously developing the two civilizations. To pay attention to the five stresses and four beauties and improve social ethics is essential in developing the socialist spiritual civilization. Comrade Zhou Zijian offered a four-point proposal on how to regularly and systematically carry out the five stresses and four beauties activities:

1. The party committees at all levels, including the basic-level party organizations, must firmly grasp the guiding thought of simultaneously developing the two civilizations. This constitutes the ideological guarantee for developing the five stresses and four beauties activities extensively, penetratingly and persistently and promoting the socialist spiritual civilization.

2. Attention must be paid to the basic-level units. We have the speeches of the central-level leading comrades as our guiding thought. The central authorities and various localities have summed up their experiences in this regard. Another group of new advanced collectives and individuals has emerged. At present, our important task is to consolidate our achievements and further develop such activities in the basic-level units.

3. We must bring into full play the exemplary role of party and CYL members in forming a strong contingent in developing the five stresses and four beauties activities.

4. It is necessary to fully arouse and bring into full play the enthusiasm of all departments and all the people. Various departments must take the initiative in fulfilling their tasks in the development of the five stresses and four beauties activities.

FUZHOU PLA COMMANDER STRESSES IDEALS, TRADITION

OW170135 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Excerpts] Braving rain, Yang Chengwu, commander of the Fuzhou PLA units, recently visited the Red 4th Company, where he gave a lecture on traditions and ideals. The Red 4th Company, a Red Army company with glorious fighting traditions, made noticeable achievements in carrying forward revolutionary traditions and in developing socialist spiritual civilization in the past year and was named by the Fuzhou PLA units as a vanguard unit in developing spiritual civilization. Commander Yang then listened to a report on progress made in promoting the "four haves, three stresses and two fearlessnesses" in the company.

Commander Yang said: Building spiritual civilization in PLA units means fostering revolutionary ideals, without which one cannot have a correct sence of honor and the ambition to make progress; without which one may pursue personal gain. Without revolutionary conviction, one can lose the goal and determination to wage struggle, the tenacity to overcome hardship and the initiative to develop courage and wisdom. To help the company study revolutionary traditions, Commander Yang presented his memoir, "In Memory of the Long March," and encouraged the fighters to emulate the Red Army veterans by following in their footsteps and raising aloft the heroic company banner and to advance courageously in the new Long March.

FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL RELEASED IN SHANGHAI

OW191125 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] In accordance with a resolution adopted by the 22d Session of the 5th NPC Standing Committee on the lenient release of all former Kuomintang party, government and army personnel and special agents at or below the county or regimental level still in custody, the Shanghai Municipal Intermediate People's Court held meetings respectively at the Shanghai municipal prison and the second reform-through-labor contingent on 14 and 18 May to announce the lenient release of all such personnel in custody in the municipality. Those released were granted civil rights and issued release certificates. At the meetings, representatives of those released emotionally expressed their gratitude to the Communist Party and the people's government for educating and redeeming them. They pledged to observe the law and discipline, study harder, continue to remold themselves ideologically, follow the Communist Party's instructions, take the socialist road and devote their energies to the state and the people during the remaining years of their lives.

The public security organ in charge of reform through labor issued a new set of bedding and clothing and 100 yuan in pocket money to each of those released. Those who wanted to go home were provided with adequate travel expenses. Those who have families or relatives to go to and seek refuge with may do so, and proper jobs will be arranged by the departments concerned at their discretion for those who are able to work. Those who are unable to work will be supported by their families or relatives, and those who experience difficulties in livelihood will be given social relief by local governments. The government will make arrangements for those who have neither families nor relatives to go to according to their individual cases. Those who have lost their ability to work will be provided for by the state.

ZHEJIANG'S TIE YING ON ANTICRIME STRUGGLE

OW132124 Hangzhou ZHEJIANG RIBAO in Chinese 3 May 82 p 4

[Article by Zhejiang First Secretary Tie Ying: "Conscientiously Study the 'Decision,' Unify Ideology and Understanding"]

[Excerpts] Since the promulgation of the "Decision on Dealing Blows at Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Field" of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council, party committees at all levels in our province have carried out timely studies of the "decision." Correctly understanding the guidelines and essence of the "decision" and implementing the "decision" without the slightest deviation are important guarantees for resolutely and correctly carrying out the struggle to deal blows at serious criminal activities in economic fields. Some comrades who lack adequate understanding of the seriousness and the perniciousness of criminal activities in the economic field have said with an attitude of indifference: "Our place is neither an important locality nor a border defense or port area; therefore, there is nothing irregular here." Obviously, such an understanding is one-sided. As a province, it must have some important localities and some ordinary places, but that does not mean that there are no problems in places that are not "important localities," nor does it mean that it is not necessary to carry out this struggle in these places. A great deal of evidence indicates smuggling, trading in smuggled goods, corruption, bribery, speculation and other serious economic crminial activities are quite rampant in some places.

Under the temptation of money, a small number of veteran cadres who were tested in war and a handful of advanced individuals who were repeatedly selected as models have been knocked down by "sugar-coated bullets" and have embarked on the road of crime. It is particularly worth mentioning that a very small number of members of leading bodies have colluded with criminal elements in society and blatantly embezzled property of the state and the collective, thus disarming some of our organizations and units and even making them degenerated and rotten! Their activities have damaged the party's prestige and harmed the relationship between the party and the masses of people. Such situations are truly shocking.

Some people have attributed the problems that emerged in the economic field to the principles and policies adopted and carried out since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, alleging that they "resulted from the policy of opening to the world and enlivening the domestic economy." Such a belief is totally mistaken. Facts have proved that it is correct to carry out the policy of opening to the world and enlivening the domestic economy. In the last few years, our province's industrial production has continuously developed at a relatively high speed and its agricultural production has eliminated disasters in rural areas despite "adverse weather conditions." Besides, the living standard of commune members has risen year after year and the employment problem of educated young people in the urban areas has basically been solved. All this is a result of implementing the policy of the central authorities. Of course, while carrying out such a policy, some bad things will inevitably infiltrate into our country, some unresolved elements will inevitably degenerate and some illegal elements will inevitably use the opportunity to undermine socialist economic activities. This is nothing unusual.

Some comrades have held that this struggle is nothing more than handling a few cases and punishing some bad persons and that it is not necessary to involve many people. This is a very incomplete understanding. It should be noted that since the implementation of the policy of opening to the world, the influence of corrupt capitalist ideology and bourgeois lifestyle has increased, some imperialist elements have vainly attempted to use the form of "peaceful transition" to change the color of socialist China and some people have even claimed that they will turn some places in our country into societies of luxury and dissipation like Hong Kong. Faced by such bourgeois "perfume and gas," the majority of party members and cadres have maintained the communist's noble quality of resisting corruption and always refraining from being contaminated. However, it is true that some party members' ideology is undergoing a change and a small number of people have been hit by the capitalist "sugar-coated bullets." In view of this situation, the central authorities have pointed out that Communist Party members should keep their communist purity and should never allow Communist Party members' ideological level and political awareness to decrease nor permit themselves to degenerate. This has the same important meaning as the admonition put forward by Comrade Mao Zedong on the eve of the country's liberation to the comrades of the whole party to be vigilant against the attack of "sugar-coated bullets" of the bourgeoisie. Some comrades are afraid that carrying out such a struggle will affect production and bring about deviation from the central task of building the economy. Actually, such anxiety is unnecessary. Serious criminal activities in the economic field are undoubtedly interfering with and sabotaging the central task of socialist economic construction. Our purpose in carrying out this struggle is to eliminate obstacles and guarantee a successful fulfillment of the central task of socialist economic construction.

NANFANG RIBAO ON ENDING INDISCRIMINATE BONUSES

HK130945 Guangzhou NANFANG RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 4

[Article by Shen Yan [3088 7159]: "Correct Understanding, Put a Stop to Indiscriminate Bonus Payments"]

[Text] Since the practice of issuing bonuses was revived, most units in our province have acted in accordance with relevant policies of the State Council and the provincial government and have seriously carried out work in giving awards. This has played an active role in implementing the principle of distribution according to work, arousing the enthusiasm of the broad masses of workers and staff members, improving enterprise management and operation, promoting the development of production and improving the people's livelihood. However, the phenomenon of indiscriminately issuing bonuses exists in some units. This is a manifestation of the present unhealthy trends in the economic field.

According to investigations, the main aspects of some units in our province which indiscriminately issue bonuses are as follows: First, the funds for bonuses are increased by fair means or foul. Some units do not actively fulfill the state plan, but change without permission the orientation of operations in order to secure extra income. Some violate policies and illegally deal with large quantities of imported goods or contraband. Some exaggerate production costs, and repeatedly issue bonuses for a single reason. Some illegally change state prices into negotiated prices in order to obtain illegal profits. Some illegally raises prices or secretly raise prices and shift the burden to consumers. Some charge at will for services provided and even practice blackmail in order to "increase" income. Second, the relationships between the state, the collectives and individuals are not properly handled. Some enterprises issue as bonuses, or spend on eating, all of the funds allocated from profits which are intended for a respective enterprise's use. They issue as bonuses welfare funds and funds for developing production. Third, various pretexts are concocted for indiscriminately issuing bonuses. In some enterprises, in addition to normal bonuses, there are many as 30 kinds of unaccountable "subsidies." In some enterprises, heavy losses are incurred due to mismanagement. In some cases when bonuses should not have been issued, improper means were used to continue issuing bonuses.

That bonuses can be indiscriminately issued in some units is mainly due to unsound regulations and improper management. No appropriate, overall balance based on the reasons for bonuses has been reached among the province's 10 major trades and professions. There is no scientific basis for determining the percentage of profits to be retained by (or shared among) various enterprises and departments, nor is there a scientific basis for determining the distribution percentage of funds for developing production welfare or awards. The work in this respect is not done carefully and some essential numbers are too low. For a time, the upper limit for bonuses has not been stipulated, and there is no strict supervision. Besides management problems, there are also problems in the party's work style. Some departments and units pay no attention to the instruction issued by the provincial CCP committee and the provincial government that forbids indiscriminately issuing bonuses. Others "take what they need" or even overtly agree but covertly oppose.

In addition to problems of the party's work style and of management, there are also problems of understanding. Some cadres think that "bonuses are almight" and they try to arouse the enthusiasm of workers and staff members simply by increasing bonuses. Practice has proved that indiscriminately issuing bonuses cannot arouse the socialist enthusiasm of the workers and staff members, but will lead them to becoming "money-minded," losing their sense of responsibility as masters of the country and developing the hired hand mentality of "doing no more than one is paid for."

There are also some cadres who think that issuing more bonuses means "doing more for the people's interests" and that issuing more bonuses always means working harder for the interests of the workers and staff members. This is a one-sided view. We must adhere to the principle of giving consideration to the interests of the state, the collectives and individuals and giving consideration to the immediate and long-term interests as put forth by Comrade Mao Zedong.

The question at present is that we need to improve the livelihood of individuals and to build our country. In order to improve livelihood more quickly, we must maintain the building of our country at a certain speed. This means that we have to maintain a rational proportion between accumulation and consumption. If we use profits or issue as bonuses funds for the enterprise's production that should go to the state treasury, we are acting no wiser than someone who kills a hen for its eggs, and are damaging the fundamental interests of the people.

Some comrades may say that they duly hand over to the state what should be handed over and retain only what should be retained, and ask why they cannot issue more bonuses if they do not violate the law. They think that it is reasonable to issue bonuses. These comrades do not understand that this question involves the relationship with other units. We should say that under normal conditions, profits comprehensively reflect the results of an enterprise's operation. However, since there are still many drawbacks in our existing economic system, including the commodity price system, the supply system and the financial management system, and there are also differences in resources and other conditions, the profits gained by an enterprise cannot, therefore, fully reflect whether the enterprise's operation is good or bad. If we do not take other units into consideration, we are not acting in line with existing economic reality and will harm the overall interests of the laborers as a whole.

Some people think that indiscriminately issuing bonuses is a drawback attributed to the implementation of the special policy for enlivening the economy. We cannot agree to this. It is the CCP Central Committee's wise decision to implement this special policy in Guangdong. The basic demand of this policy is to improve various links of production, distribution, circulation and consumption according to the principles of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and not to indiscriminately issue bonuses, nor is it to permit dishonest practices. It is wrong to indiscriminately issue bonuses, but it is not wrong to enliven the economy.

We should say that the number of enterprises that indiscriminately issue bonuses is small. However, this has exerted a very bad influence. As a result of this, the growth rate of bonuses greatly exceeds that of other economic targets. Moreover, this has again given rise to workers having unequal shares of comforts and hardships, affected the unity within the ranks of the working class, aggravated the disproportion of market supply and demand and price instability and encouraged unhealthy trends. It is time to resolutely stop indiscriminately issuing bonuses.

We do not oppose issuing bonuses, but we oppose issuing them indiscriminately. In order to give awards in a reasonable manner and to stop indiscriminately issuing bonuses, we should control the sources of the bonuses, their amounts and the requirements for issuing them. We should carry out strict supervision so that bonuses can truly play the role of encouraging the advanced and arousing the socialist enthusiasm of the workers and staff members. We should fix an upper limit for bonuses. The amounts of bonuses may vary in different enterprises and the amounts of bonuses in enterprises that make very great contributions should be allowed to exceed this limit if permission has been obtained from relevant departments at a higher level. We should carry out strict supervision and investigate and affix responsibility to leading groups which continue to indiscriminately issue bonuses and severely punish them. In the meantime, we should also adopt effective measures, including short-term measures for developing production and stopping price increases and measures involving orientation such as structural reform and experimental work in reforming the wage system, in order to solve the problems in issuing bonuses in an overall manner.

HENAN HOLDS PUBLIC SECURITY PROGRESSIVES MEETING

Opening of Meeting

HK100829 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 9 May 82

[Summary] The Henan Provincial congress of progressive collectives and progressive workers on the public security front opened in the Henan people's hall this morning.

One thousand delegates from throughout the province attended the congress. Responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the standing committee of the provincial people's congress and the provincial government, including Dai Suli, Zhao Wenfu, Li Fuxiang, (Chen Bingji) and Yue Xiaoxia, attended the opening ceremony. Vice Governor Yue Xiaoxia presided over the congress. Provincial CCP committee Secretary Zhao Wenfu spoke.

In his speech, after fully affirming the achievements made since the end of 1979 in tidying up social order, striking blows at counterrevolutionaries and criminals and educating and redeeming young people and juveniles who have taken a false step, Zhao Wenfu said: "At present, our country is at a great turning point. The focal point of our work has been shifted to economic construction. However, the class struggle will still exist within a certain scope for a long time. We must maintain a high degree of vigilance against the sabotage activities of the elements who are hostile to socialism and resolutely struggle against them. We must seriously implement the instruction of the central authorities on strengthening political, legal and public security work, adhere to the principle of comprehensive control, mobilize the forces of all quarters and further consolidate social order to ensure a greater improvement in social order within this year."

Zhao Wenfu pointed out: "The struggle which is now being waged against serious crimes in the economic sphere is a struggle to adhere to the purity of communism and to oppose decadence and degeneration among Communist Party members and state cadres. This struggle has a bearing on the success or failure of the four modernizations in our country and on the prosperity or decline and rise or fall of our party and country. All public security guards, cadres and policemen must take a firm and clear-cut stand, stand in the forefront of the struggle and resolutely strike blows at the serious criminal activities in the economic sphere."

Zhao Wenfu said: "The NPC Standing Committee recently promulgated the draft revision of the constitution and handed it to all people for discussion. This is a major event in the political life of all people throughout the country." He demanded: "All political, legal and public security cadres and policemen must take an active part in the study and discussion of the draft revision of the constitution." He encouraged all delegates present at the congress to be modest and prudent, to shun arrogance and impetuosity and to unite and lead all cadres, policemen and public security personnel to render new meritorious service in striving for a greater improvement of social order and in defending the smooth progress of the four modernizations.

(Bai Jun), deputy of the political and legal group of the provincial CCP committee and director of the provincial public security department, made a report entitled "Sum Up Experiences, Advance on the Crest of Victory and Struggle Hard To Achieve a Greater Improvement in Social Order." Congratulatory letters from the Ministry of Public Security and the Henan Provincial Military District were also read at the congress.

Dai Suli Address

HK140811 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts of speech given by Henan provincial Governor Dai Suli at closing ceremony of Henan provincial meeting of representatives of advanced public security collectives and workers]

[Excerpts] Dear comrades: The provincial meeting of representatives of advanced public security collectives and workers, which has lasted for 4 days, is going to close today. This has been a successful meeting. On behalf of the provincial CCP committee and people's government, I would like to extend my warm congratulations to the meeting and the representatives.

Since the beginning of this year, we have waged struggles against criminal activities which seriously undermine the economy. In March, a series of activities for the all-people decorum and courtesy month were launched. As a result, the party work style, the work style of the people and the general mood of society have taken a turn for the better.

Since we have implemented the policies of readjustment, restructuring, reorganization and upgrading, agricultural production has made an overall development and industry is making steady progress amid readjustments. Revenues and expenditures are balanced and there is a small surplus. Markets in towns and cities are prosperous and the income of the peasants has increased by a large margin. The living standard of people in the urban areas has also improved. At present, the political and economic situation is excellent. How about the situation of social order? It is also excellent. Over the past 2 years or more, we have cracked a number of counterrevolutionary criminal cases and handled a number of serious criminals according to the law. We have improved reform-through-labor and education-through-labor work, educated and redeemed a number of juvenile delinquents and arranged employment for people awaiting jobs. The safety responsibility system has been implemented in some plants, mines and enterprises. Village regulations and people's pledges have been established in some communes and brigades and precautions against social disorders have been strengthened.

Comrades working on the public security front have made due contributions to improving social order and ensuring that the readjustment of the national economy is carried out in a smooth manner. Although the social order is to a certain extent improved, we must also note that the situation is not thoroughly changed. In some places, there are many problems of social order, and many of them are major problems. This is because the pernicious influences left by Lin Biao and the gang of four cannot be eliminated within a short period of time and there are many factors that might lead to social instability. Within a certain scope, class struggle will remain for a long period of time. Counterrevolutionaries, enemy agents, criminals who seriously undermine socialist order, people who have degenerated and people who are engaged in corruption, speculation and profiteering are sabotaging the social order in various aspects. The task of rectifying the social order is both arduous and formidable. We must not be satisfied with the results scored and slacken our vigilance.

The year 1982 is the time for us to work hard for the prosperity of our country. In accordance with the demand of the central authorities, we must adhere to the policy of promoting material and spiritual civilizations at the same time. We must enhance our revolutionary vigor and work very hard to strive for new achievements in both aspects.

Public security organs are important tools to ensure the democratic dictatorship of the people. They are on the frontline of struggle and their tasks are formidable. It is our unshirkable duty to strive for a basic change for the better in public order. We must make efforts to rectify the public order and promote all tasks with primary emphasis on rectifying the public order.

The draft of the revised constitution has been promulgated. We must seriously organize the masses to carry out discussions so as to strengthen their sense of governing by law, spontaneously abide by the constitution and use the constitution to struggle against all criminal offenses. At present, we are carrying out activities to combat serious criminal activities in the economic field. This is an important struggle which is related to the success and failure of socialism in our country and to the prosperity and decline of our party and our country. Comrades on the public security front play an important role in this struggle. They must have a clear and firm stand and must seriously publicize and implement the resolution of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on dealing severe blows at criminal offenses in the economic field.

Since the 3d plenary session of the 11th Central Committee, the central leading comrades have reiterated that the ranks of public security personnel must be strengthened, and the discipline and work style of the public security force must be rectified, so as to curb unhealthy trends of the public security force with regard to politics, organization and work style.

Over the past 2 years, the number of public security forces has increased and the management has improved. However, regarding the present situation, the public security forces cannot satisfy the demand of the struggle. The CCP committees at all levels must continue to attach importance to the building of public security forces, strengthen the ideological work and professional training and provide essential work conditions so as to further enhance their combat effectiveness.

Leading comrades of all units must take a clear stand to support the advanced public security collectives and workers, devote major efforts to publicizing advanced ideologies and experiences and mobilize the policemen to compare themselves with the advanced, to learn from them and to catch up with them, so that there will be more and more advanced collectives and workers. We must work incessantly with concerted efforts so as to make more contributions to bringing about a basic change for the better in social order and to safeguarding the building of the socialist four modernizations.

Liu Jie at Closing

HK130337 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82

[Summary] The Henan provincial meeting of representatives of advanced collectives and workers on the public security front, which lasted for 4 days, successfully concluded this afternoon. "In the course of the meeting, all the participants conscientiously studied important speeches delivered by leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee and the people's government and reports made by responsible comrades of the provincial public security bureau." They also took part in the discussions and exchanged experiences. They now have clear understanding about the fighting tasks under the new situation. All the participants are energetic and have inspired their spirits and are determined to bring the good ideas, fine work style and precious experience recommended by the meeting to their own units so that they will be further carried forward and yield positive results throughout the province. "Leaders of the provincial CCP committee, the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, the provincial people's government and the provincial military district, including Liu Jie, Dai Suli, Zhao Wenfu, Li Qingwei, Zhang Shude, Yu Yichuan and others, attended the closing ceremony." The closing ceremony was presided over by (Li Fuxiang), executive secretary of the provincial CCP committee and chairman of the provincial political and judicial leading groups. Dai Suli, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and provincial governor, delivered an important speech. Provincial Vice Governor Yue Xiaoxia read the decision made by the provincial people's government on commending advanced collectives and workers in the public security field. At the meeting, all participants also unanimously approved a written proposal for public security cadres, people's policemen and political and judicial workers of the entire province.

HUNAN HOSTS SOUTH CHINA ANIMAL HUSBANDRY MEETING

HK140241 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] A south China animal husbandry work conference was held in Hunan's Chengbu Miao Autonomous County from 5 to 13 May. The meeting was convened by the State Council's Ministry of Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fishery. Attending were responsible comrades of agricultural committees, offices and departments and animal husbandry bureaus of 20 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions and a number of key counties. Departments concerned of the State Council sent people to take part in the meeting. Comrade Lin Hujia, minister of agriculture, animal husbandry and fishery presided and spoke. Comrade Zhang Pinghua also spoke. The meeting focused discussions on how to exploit and use the mountains and waters in south China to develop the raising of poultry and herbivorous livestodk, and also the question of animal husbandry in agricultural areas. The meeting pointed out: China has vast areas of grassy hills and slopes, waters and shores. This is a superior feature. Exploiting and using the grassy hills and slopes, cultivating fine-quality forage grass and turning grass into milk and meat will help to bring into play south China's superior feature of being comprised of 70 percent mountains and 10 percent waters. It will also benefit soil conservation and the ecological balance. This is a practical path to follow. While ensuring steady growth of pig production, we should vigorously develop the raising of poultry and herbivorous livestock such as cattle, goats and rabbits, and gradually work to basically solve, within 5 years or a bit longer, the problem of meat, eggs and milk supplies for large and medium-sized towns. This should be regarded as a strategic aim in developing animal husbandry. The meeting summed up and exchanged experiences of various places in speeding up animal husbandry development. The participants visited the (Nanshan) livestock farm in Chengbu County, discussed initial schemes for developing animal husbandry during the Sixth 5-Year Plan and also studied how to achieve steady and sustained development in pig raising.

SICHUAN FORUM ANALYZES IMPROVING ECONOMIC WORK

HK170744 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] In order to comprehensively straighten out industrial and communications enterprises in the province and push ahead with the overall reorganization of these enterprises, the Sichuan Provincial People's Government convened a forum in Chongqing from 5-14 May. This forum, as an occasion to exchange experience and arrange work for the future, will be of great significance in improving economic returns in the industrial and communications enterprises in the province and increasing production development. Present at the forum were more than 200 people, including leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government, responsible comrades of the departments concerned at the prefectural, municipal, autonomous and provincial levels and responsible people of key enterprises.

At this forum for straightening out enterprises, the participants first reviewed the progress of enterprise rectification work in the province during the last 2 months. Practice has proved that the circumstances are correct in the 389 enterprises which comprise the first group of rectified enterprises. The forum realized that most of these enterprises have now entered the stage of consolidation. At this stage, which is of extreme importance to the comprehensive rectification and overall management of enterprises, the economic responsibility system must be improved and perfected. Those forms of the economic responsibility system which have already been adopted, such as the system of proportionate distribution of profits in cash, the system of proportionate distribution of profits from overfulfilled tasks, the contract system of full responsibility for profits and losses, the system of paying taxes instead of handing over profits and so on, will be maintained this year. Moreover, we must extensively popularize the experience of the Shoudu iron and steel corporation and, in the light of our own experiences obtained in the last 4 years, continue to perfect the economic responsibility system in enterprises; make workers, administrative personnel and leading cadres clearly aware of their particular duty and administrative competence; and strengthen their sense of responsibility, thus linking economic interests to production and management results. Therefore, every post in an enterprise is subject to certain responsibilities, every job is to be accomplished in accordance with certain standards, all assessments are governed by certain criteria, and rewards and punishments are based on one's achievements and faults. In this way. competence, responsibility and interests will be closely related to each other. We must establish and amplify the system of assigning full responsibility to the factory director and the system of staff and worker representative congress under the leadership of the CCP committee, and set up the leadership system under which the factory CCP committee carries out collective leadership, the staff and workers take part in democratic administration and the factory director undertakes overall administration.

The participants in the forum conscientiously discussed and studied how to enhance the reorganization and unification of enterprises. They unanimously realized that the unification and reorganization of enterprises is the inevitable trend for the development of the national economy, and is also an important approach to improving economic returns. At present, as the unification and reorganization of the enterprises in our province are making slow progress, we must quicken our steps so as to meet the deamnd of economic development. The unification and reorganization of enterprises must be based on key cities and industrial bases. The responsible comrades of the administrative departments of various bureaus in charge of supply and marketing declared that they would make efforts to assist Chongqing, Chengdu, Zigong and nine other municipalities under prefectural jurisdiction, including Luzhou, Wanxian, Yibin and others in working out the transregional unification and reorganization plan, in organizing the coordination between specialized trades with an emphasis on those marketable key products of famous brands and in promoting mass production in these localities. Economic unification must adhere to the principle of voluntary participation, mutual benefit and economic rationality. Cooperation and unification must be carried out not only within an enterprise, but also between industry and agriculture and commerce, institutions of higher learning and scientific research units, so as to speed up economic development.

The forum also deliberated on questions of joint economic issues concerning planning and statistics, material supply, product marketing, fund allocation, taxation and so on, and put forth corresponding suggestions and regulations.

SICHUAN NATIONALITIES AFFAIRS COMMITTEE MEETS

HK130428 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpt] The second enlarged meeting of members of the provincial nationalities affairs committee was held in Chengdu from 6 to 12 May. The meeting conveyed and implemented the spirit of the second enlarged meeting of the State Nationalities Affairs Commission and the provincial CCP committee's recent instructions on nationalities work, summed up the work since the last meeting and formulated future tasks. Tian Bao, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor, spoke on further emancipating the mind, implementing the party principles and policies, developing the excellent situation in the nationality areas, further improving relations among nationalities, strengthening minority-nationality work in areas of mixed or sparse minority population and doing a good job in ideological and political work in the nationality areas.

Comrade Tian Bao stressed: It is necessary to put economic work first in nationalities work. Unity of nationalities can be built on a sounder foundation only by developing the economy of the nationalities and gradually eliminating the discrepancies between the different nationalities. He said: The nationality areas must further relax the policies and implement and perfect the various production responsibility systems. It is necessary to develop all kinds of joint undertakings and integrate the rich resources of the nationality areas with the advanced technology of the interior. On the question of improving relations among nationalities, Comrade Tian Bao pointed out: The key to promoting nationality unity lies in the unity of the leading cadres. It is necessary to carry out education in unity of nationalities.

(Zaxi Zeren), chairman of the provincial nationalities affairs committee, delivered a work report. He pointed out: The tasks in future nationalities work in Sichuan are to further improve relations among nationalities, further strengthen unity of nationalities and promote economic and cultural construction. The provincial nationalities affairs committee must work hard to do a number of things for the minority nationalities within a definite period.

Also speaking at the meeting were Wu Jinghua, vice chairman of the State Nationalities Affairs commission, member of the provincial CCP committee standing committee and vice chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee; Ren Mingdao, member of the provincial CCP committee standing committee and secretary of the provincial nationalities work committee; and Fei Xiaotong, adviser to the State Nationalities Affairs Commission.

XIZANG LITHIUM SAID NEARLY HALF WORLD TOTAL

OW180547 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0010 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 18 May -- Preliminarily verified lithium deposits in China's Xizang region account for nearly 1/2 the world's total, it has been learned from the Ministry of Geology and Minerals. Lithium, a type of metal with the lightest specific gravity, low fusion point, high boiling point and very high heat conductivity and absorption capacity, can be used as fuel for hydrogen bombs, rockets, nuclear submarines and modern jet planes. It can be widely used in the metallurgical, chemical, glass, ceramics, electronics and atomic energy indistries. Occupying a very important position in modern-day science and technology, it is dubbed a "metal upstart."

As early as the mid-1950's, the geological department of our country discovered lithium in the sediments of many salt lakes in Xizang. Beginning in 1980, it started regular work in salt lakes in northern Xizang. Some 600 samples were collected, laboratory tested and analyzed, thereby verifying that these salt lakes contained very rich lithium ores with high industrial value. Moreover, it is fairly easy to extract and purify them.

HEBEI'S JIN MING LEADS FIGHT AGAINST DROUGHT

HK200423 Shijiazhuang Hebei Provincial Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] The Hebei Provincial CCP Committee recently decided that the provincial organs should transfer a further group of cadres, led by responsible comrades of the province, to the frontline of the struggle against drought to further guide and promote the struggle. The responsible comrades of the province going down to the countryside on this occasion include Jin Ming, Wang Zheng, Guo Zhi, Yang Zejiang, Wang Dongning, and Wang Kedong.

"At present the drought in Hebei is continuing to develop and is extremely serious. In the face of this serious drought, the provincial CCP committee and government on 11 May held mobilization meetings of responsible comrades of all departments, committees and offices to mobilize them to go down to the countryside to fight drought." The meetings called on the cadres to help the grassroots cadres to concentrate efforts on fighting drought, and conduct rectification of weak and lax grassroots leadership groups.

NEI MONGGOL ISSUES MEASURES TO IMPLEMENT HOUSING

SK161014 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] The autonomous regional people's government recently promulgated measures for implementing the State Council regulations of administration of land for housing construction in villages and towns, urging localities to administer well and make good use of land and develop villages and towns step by step in a planned way. The implementation measures call on localities to quickly draw up an overall plan for villages, towns and residential areas or an overall system for the approval of land use. The measures call for economical and rational use of land for housing and facilities for production, culture, education, commerce, services and other use, putting an end to arbitrary use of land and for carrying out construction in accord with the plan.

The measures prescribe limits on residential areas for commune members: the maximum area in suburban areas of cities is 200 square meters; 300 square meters in banners, counties and towns; 450 square meters in flatland farming areas; and 600 square meters in hilly, saline or undeveloped land and deserts. Within these limits, the commune authorities may decide on specific limits for the residential area of commune members in line with the local population and farming area. As for the residential area of commune members in pastoral and forestry areas, the regional government formulates only general regulations; league, municipal, banner and county authorities may draw up specific plans in line with their characteristics of production and the custom and folkways of nationalities, paying attention to drawing up well-conceived plans and making economical use of land.

The measures stipulate that approval must be acquired for use of land in housing construction by commune members, drawing up development plans of villages and towns and requisition of land by enterprises and establishments. Banner and county governments may approve the requisition of vegetable plots and forestry land of less than 3 mu, grassland of less than 10 mu and saline and undeveloped land of less than 30 mu; requisition of land exceeding these limits must be approved by the league administrative office or municipal government. Approval must be acquired from the regional people's government for requisition of vegetable plots and forestry land over 10 mu, farmland and grassland over 30 mu and saline and undeveloped land over 50 mu.

The measures point out that those who build houses without authorization will have to return the land within a specified time, will be fined or ordered to pay compensation. Cadres of communes and brigades and state functionaries involved in illegal land use will be punished by disciplinary sanctions. Administrative, disciplinary or criminal responsibility will be imposed on those who abuse their positions to engage in malpractices for selfish ends or to retaliate against others.

JILIN CCP COMMITTEE HOLDS INDUSTRY CONFERENCE

Opening of Meeting

SK120219 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] The Jilin provincial industrial conference, sponsored by the provincial CCP committee and the provincial government, opened today at the auditorium of the provincial guest house in Changchun municipality. Attending the conference are leading party and government comrades from the various municipalities, prefectures and counties, leading comrades of enterprises subordinate to the municipalities, prefectures and counties, responsible comrades of the various departments, commissions, offices and bureaus under the provincial CCP committee and government, responsible comrades of the provincial court, procuratorate, trade union council, CYL committee and women's federation and representatives of some units — over 1,000 in all. Leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee and government including Qiang Xiaochu, Zhang Gensheng, (ZHAO XIU), Li Diping, Yu Lin and Song Kiehan, attended today's opening session.

The major task of this conference is to study and implement the guidelines of the national conference on industrial and communications work and the important speech delivered by Premier Zhao Ziyang to further straighten out the guiding ideology in enterprise operations and modify our thinking to improving economic results. By focusing on enterprise consolidation, improving economic results and intensifying ideological and political work, the conference will earnestly examine and sum up the province's industrial and communications work since last year, allot this year's tasks and mobilize the vast number of party members, cadres, technical personnel and workers on the province's industrial, communications, trade, financial and other fronts to enhance their vigor, work hard, make our province's industry break a new path in improving economic results and comprehensively fulfill or overfulfill this year's state plan.

(Zhao Xiu), secretary of the provincial CCP committee, presided over the conference. Zhang Gensheng, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and acting governor, delivered a report on successfully executing enterprise consolidation, improving economic results and striving to promote the province's industry.

Qiang Xiaochu Address

SK190931 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 May 82

[Excerpt] According to our reporters, the provincial industrial conference concluded today in Changchun after an 8-day session. It was a relatively large-scale conference, of the type which has not taken place in the past several years. The provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government have attached great importance to the conference. At the conference, participants conscientiously studied the speech of Premier Zhao Ziyang delivered at the national industrial and communications work conference. Comrade Qiang Xiaochu, Zhang Gensheng and Yu Lin delivered speeches at the conference.

In his speech, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu first reviewed the situation in our province's industrial production in the first 4 months of this year. He said: In the first 4 months of this year, there was an obvious turn for the better in our province's industrial production. The situation as a whole was good. The total industrial output value was 6.5 percent higher than that of the corresponding 1981 period. Economic results were also much better. The growth rate of industrial output value and revenue was better than what we expected. This is a good beginning. But we should not be blinded by this good beginning and become optimistic. We should be able to see the problems hidden behind the growth rate. We should use the method of dividing one into two to analyze the situation of our production in the first 4 months of this year. After conducting a thorough analysis, we will find that the production growth is very uneven, partly because of some factors which cannot be compared and partly because of inflated reports. We should be keen and sober-minded so as to locate the problems and expose and solve the contradictions. Only by objectively studying the current situation of our industrial production can we give play to our strong points, avoid our weak points, further develop the excellent situation and continuously advance on the basis of the achievements scored in the first 4 months of this year.

Comrade Qiang Xiaochu emphatically pointed out: Promoting our province's economy and achieving a balance between revenue and expenditures are major tasks in the work of the provincial CCP committee this year. We must seize the opportune time, and adopt practical and effective measures to realize our goals. He said: Great efforts should be made to tap the potential of existing enterprises. This is the most practical and effective and fastest way. When we say we should emphasize the need to tap the potential of existing enterprise, we do not mean that there is no need to expand production capacity, nor do we mean to oppose building plants which will be needed later. What we mean is to carry out construction projects in a planned and guided manner within our financial and material capacities. At present, the most practical and reliable way is to arouse the enthusiasm of staff and workers in existing enterprises and to further tap their potential to increase production and incomes.

After dwelling on the issues of doing a good job in readjusting product mix, promoting marketing of products and conducting the activities of emulating, learning from and catching up with each other, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu said: The key to whether or not we can promote this year's industrial production lies in the work style and mental state of leading bodies. The first thing in consolidating enterprises is to rectify the work style of leading bodies in ideological issues. As long as leading cadres at all levels brace themselves and set an example for others, they will be able to arouse the enthusiasm of the broad masses of staff and workers and make contributions to the building of the two civilizations.

At the conference, 14 units, including the Liaoyuan Municipal CCP Committee, the Shiping Municipal CCP Committee, the Tonghua County CCP Committee and the Jilin chemical industrial company, introduced their experiences in conducting enterprise consolidation, improving economic results and strengthening ideological and political work.

LIAONING COMBAT HERO DEVOTED TO YOUTH EDUCATION

SK120237 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Nationally noted combat hero (Wei Jianyi) has deemed it his glorious duty to educate young people since he left his job for recuperation. [words indistinct] Since last July, when (Wei Jianyi) was permitted to leave his job for recuperation, he has concentrated his efforts on the education of young people and has pledged to devote all his remaining years to the cultivation of the younger generation.

Last November, when he was attending the Fourth Session of the Fifth National People's Congress in Beijing, he recalled that a teacher at a Xicheng District school had written asking him to introduce to the students the heroic deeds of Dong Cunrui. Although he wrote a letter in reply at that time, he always felt dissatisfied. Therefore, taking the opportunity of attending the session in Beijing, he went to the school to give reports during the session's breaks.

During (Wei Jianyi's) recuperation period, he was often invited to other places to give repots. Regarding the platform as a bastion for publicizing Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the revolutionary traditions, he gave 37 reports to youths of various school in 9 months.

LIAONING REPORTS POOR FIELD CROP GROWTH

SK170515 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Field crop planting in our province has been completed. However, because of the very serious drought which resulted in scant soil moisture and extended planting cycles, field crop growth is rather poor, with many seedlings missing or broken. In most areas, only 80 percent of the seedlings emerge, and on a few fields, only 50 percent emerge. Such a poor field crop growth situation is rare. If no timely measures are taken, some communes will find their efforts to complete spring sowing in (? vain).

Therefore, inspecting fields and replanting crops if necessary are extremely urgent tasks for the present. Practices in agricultural production prove that the more the seedlings emerge in spring, the better the harvest will be in autumn. Only a full stand of crops will yield a bumper harvest. All localities should regard the inspection of fields and replanting as tasks of spring farming and as important links in reaping a bumper harvest, and strive to replant all missing seedlings at one time.

GANSU'S FENG JIXIN SETS TASKS IN ECONOMIC FIELD

SK150334 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] According to GANSU RIBAO, on 11 May Feng Jixin, first secretary of the Gansu Provincial CCP Committee, gave a report on the current economic situation to over 1,200 cadres at or above section level and worker representatives of the Lanzhou oil refinery. On 12 May Li Dengying, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and governor of the province, also made a report on the same topic to over 1,000 cadres form provincial level organs. Such report meetings have been carried out under the arrangement of the provincial CCP committee in order to conduct education on the current economic situation.

According to the arrangement, permanent members of the provincial CCP committee and deputy governors of the provincial people's government are responsible for separately giving an economic situation report to departments and organs of politics, judicature, agriculture, forestry, propaganda and education and cadres and the masses of enterprises. In addition, leading comrades of departments and units are urged to give and economic situation report to their subordinate cadres and workers and to do a good job in conducting education on the economic situation.

In their reports, Feng Jixin and Li Dengying, bearing in mind the actual situation of the province and the country, enumerated a host of facts and statistical figures to prove that the party and state had made all-out efforts over the past 3 years and had done a great deal of good in improving the people's livelihood. As a result, the living standard of most staff and workers has been substantially upgraded. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the party's policy on economic construction has proved a correct one and played a tremendous role in practice.

In referring to current problems in the economic field, they also analyzed them in a seek-truth-from-facts, manner and urged the broad masses of cadres and staff and workers to affirm the achievements, to face difficulties squarely and to redouble their efforts in work.

In his report, Feng Jixin put forward the following five tasks for staff and workers among enterprises:

1. It is necessary to carry forward the pioneering spirit developed by the working class.

2. It is necessary to learn from advanced units and individuals so as to operate enterprises better.

3. It is necessary to define a clear-cut production orientation among enterprises, adopt a viewpoint of taking the whole country into account and take a correct attitude toward the relationship among the state, enterprise and individual.

4. It is necessary to enhance scientific management among enterprises.

5. It is necessary to vigorously upgrade economic results and concentrate on expanding processing technology, raising quality and labor productivity, curtailing expenditures and lowering costs. Meanwhile, under the state's unified plan, it is necessary to turn out more products needed by the society.

XINJIANG'S WANG ENMAO VIEWS UNITED FRONT WORK

HK150352 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 10 May 82

[Summary] A regional CCP committee united front work conference, held from 24 April to 7 May stressed: the united front remains an important magic weapon of the party. We must strive to consolidate and expand the patriotic united front and continually strengthen and develop the great unity of all nationalities, strata, parties and all patriotic forces. The meeting seriously conveyed and discussed the spirit of the national united front work conference and the speeches of leading central comrades, summed up the situation and outlined the tasks. Regional leaders Wang Enmao, Ismail Amat, Qi Gho and Janabil took part in the meeting.

Comrade Wang Enmao made an important speech. He said the party committees and united front departments in Xinjiang have done a lot of work in united front work in the past 2 years.

"However, a lot remains to be done in bringing order out of chaos in this respect. At present we must concentrate on continuing to correct the errors of leftism. Secondly, we must avoid and overcome certain laissez-faire trends."

Comrade Wang Enmao stressed: "United front work is particularly important in Xinjiang, a region of many nationalities, various religions [words indistinct], and a border region in the antihegemonist frontline." He put forward the following tasks for bringing about a new situation in the region's united front work:

1. Promote the unity of nationalities. There can be no social stability in Xinjiang, nor can the four modernizations be smoothly accomplished, without the unity of nationalities. In our united front work, we must do a good job in work regarding the upper-strata figures among the nationalities. We must unite them and carry out nationality unity work through them. We should further strengthen the unity of nationalities. As for the upper-strata figures among the nationalities, we must care for them politically, and make proper arrangements for their work and daily life.
2. Do a good job in work concerning religion. We must firmly implement the policy on freedom of religious belief. The masses are free to believe or not to believe in religion. In freedom of religious belief, we only allow normal religious activities and cannot permit abnormal activities. We must consolidate and expand the patriotic alliance among the religious circles in the nationalities, and win over and unite figures in religious circles. [Words indistinct].
3. Do a good job in work concerning the various democratic parties. It is also necessary to launch work to bring Taiwan back to the motherland.
4. [Words indistinct]
5. Implement the policies on intellectuals.

XINJIANG REGIONAL PEOPLE'S CONGRESS HOLDS MEETING

HK180316 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1650 GMT 17 May 82

[Summary] The 15th Meeting of the Xinjiang 5th Regional People's Congress Standing Committee opened in Urumqi on the morning of 17 May. The main topic at the current meeting was to discuss the draft of the revised constitution. At the same time, the meeting will also listen to and examine a report by the regional people's government on the 1981 final accounts and the 1982 financial budget and listen to a report by the regional forestry department of the trial implementation of the forest law, on the implementation of the decision of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on certain questions concerning the protection of forests and the development of forestry as well as on the launching of the all-people voluntary tree planting activity.

"Regional people's congress standing committee Chairman Tomur Dawamat presided over the meeting yesterday."

Tomur Dawamat said: The people's congress standing committee should, under the leadership of the CCP, attach great importance to the discussion of the draft of the revised constitution. It is necessary for the people's congress standing committee members and the participants to take an active part in the discussion and to propose amendments with the attitude of being the masters of their own affairs. The regional people's congress standing committee should provide good practical guidance to the regional discussion of the draft of the revised constitution so that the task can be completed in our region according to the schedule.

"Group discussion on the draft of the revised constitution started yesterday afternoon. Regional people's congress standing committee Vice Chairmen Wang Zhenwen, Yang Yiqing, Mushayef, Lu Xuebin, Zhao Yuzheng, Yu Zhanlin, Amantuer, Tuerxun Atawula, Mahsut Teibov, Wang Heting and Liu Sicong attended the meeting. Regional people's government Vice Chairman Liu Zimo, regional higher people's court President Nuryuv and regional people's procuratorate responsible persons attended the meeting as nonvoting delegates."

FBIS DAILY REPORT

China

CONTENTS

Vol I No 101 25 May 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

UNITED STATES

U.S. Press Criticism of British Support Cited B 1

WESTERN EUROPE

Austrian Foreign Minister Concludes PRC Visit G 1
Trade Delegation Concludes Visit to Austria G 1
Hong Kong Paper Cites Portuguese General on Visit G 1
[STANDARD 24 May]

WESTERN HEMISPHERE

Further Reports on Falklands Developments J 1
Un Envoy's Speech J 1
Report on UNSC Meeting J 2
Further on UNSC Meeting J 3
Argentine Envoy Hosts National Day Reception J 4

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Further on Draft of Revised Constitution K 1
Four Basic Principles Stressed K 1
[RENMIN RIBAO 24 May]
Peng Zhen LIAOWANG Interview [No 5, 20 May] K 3
Two Articles Criticize 'Fairytales in Spring' K 7
YANGCHENG WANBAO [20 May] K 7
NANFANG RIBAO [14 May] K 12
Commentator Views Peasants Who Get Rich K 16
[RENMIN RIBAO 20 May]
HONGQI Article on Role of Individual Tradesmen K 18
[CHINA DAILY 22 May]
Cadres' Relatives Return To Work in Coal Mines K 19
Increased Hog Production Noted at Conference K 21
Ni Zhifu, Others Award Prize-Winning Writers K 21

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Fujian Releases Former Kuomintang Personnel O 1
Xu Jiatun Addresses Nanjing University Ceremony O 1
Jiangxi Marks Anniversary of Mao's Yanan Talks O 2
Briefs: Jiangsu Media Conference O 2

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Measures Against Guangdong Flood Damage Continue	P 1
Meeting on Disaster Relief	P 1
Further Relief Arrangements	P 1
Railroad Section Reopened	P 2
Hong Kong Paper Cites Official on Plane Crash [STANDARD 22 May]	P 2
Shenzhen Curbs Illegal Construction Work	P 3
Hubei's Zhang Caiqian Inspects Wuhan PLA Farm	P 3
Hubei Letter Notes Dangers of Misleading Slogan	P 3
Minister Lin Hujia Inspects Hunan's Li County	P 4
Hunan Prefecture Steps Up Flood Rehabilitation	P 4

SOUTHWEST REGION

Chi Biqing Attends Guizhou Sports Meeting	Q 1
Zhang Aiping, Tan Qilong Attend Sichuan Soiree	Q 1
Yin Fatang Addresses Xizang Entry-Point Staff	Q 1
Yunnan Discusses Policy Toward Intellectuals	Q 2
YUNNAN RIBAO Commentary [10 May]	Q 2
Yunnan Holds Cooperation Invitation Meeting	Q 4
Briefs: Sichuan Local Disease Control	Q 4

NORTH REGION

Beijing Work Conference on Economic Criminals	R 1
Tianjin People's Congress Appoints Acting Mayor	R 2
Tianjin First Secretary on Individual Economy	R 2
Tianjin Congress Committee Studies Constitution	R 3
Tianjin Carries Chen Bing Article on Work Method	R 4
Briefs: Tianjin Worker Education Conference	R 4

NORTHEAST REGION

Jilin's Qiang Xiaochu on Economic Situation	S 1
Jilin Industrial Conference Adopts Letter	S 1
Jilin Commentary on Paddy Rice Transplantation	S 2
National CPPCC Team Inspects Dandong, Liaoning	S 3
Liaoning Urges Leaders' Rectification Campaign	S 3
LIAONING RIBAO on Need To Stop Enterprise Losses [9 May]	S 4
Briefs: Jilin Business Meeting; Liaoning KMT Personnel	S 6

NORTHWEST REGION

NINGXIA RIBAO on Developing Diversified Economy [7 May]	T 1
NINGXIA RIBAO Stresses Population Control [13 May]	T 2
NINGXIA RIBAO on Supporting Production Teams [10 May]	T 3
SHAANXI RIBAO Article on Mobilizing Masses [7 May]	T 4
SHAANXI RIBAO Discusses Employment Problem [7 May]	T 7
Briefs: Ningxia TV Broadcasting; Qinghai Wheat Crops; Qinghai Foreign Trade	T 8

TAIWAN

Media Comments on U.S.-Taiwan Relations V 1
LIEN HO PAO Editorial [18 May] V 1
Radio Commentary V 2

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

MING PAO on Danger of 'Peaceful Evolution' [25 May] W 1
Guangzhou Mayor Cited on Price Problem W 1
[TA KUNG PAO 24 May]

U.S. PRESS CRITICISM OF BRITISH SUPPORT CITED

OW241512 Beijing XINHUA in English 1500 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Washington, May 23 (XINHUA) -- Many press opinions here are beginning to point out that the United States is damaging its interests by siding with Britain over the Falklands (Malvinas) Islands dispute. An article headlined "Losing Latin Friends" by columnist Jack Anderson on today's Washington POST called the U.S. administration's decision as "untimely, undiplomatic and unnecessary." It "has caused damage to U.S. interests in Latin America that will take years to repair" and "the results have been disastrous beyond the wildest imaginings of the White House and the State Department," the article said.

Fear of Soviets taking advantage of the troubled situation, an article by Bernard Gwertzman in today's New York TIMES points out that the American political role in the Western Hemisphere "has been dealt a serious blow by the decision to side with Britain politically and to a limited extent militarily, and that blow may be irreparable" because "the Soviet Union, which has for years been seeking opportunities to gain influence in South America" will undoubtedly be looked to "as an alternative source of military supplies and a market for South American exports, a trend that had been under way in recent years any way."

The paper reported that many of the administration's leading experts on Latin America believe that the Falklands conflict "is creating a longterm, major shift in attitudes and policies throughout South America that will inevitably be harmful to United States interests."

The Washington POST said, "now all of Latin America is united in its anger and resentment at what it regards as U.S. championing of old-fashioned colonialism" and "the real danger to U.S. policy goals is that the Falklands crisis will cause various realignments in the balance of political forces within Latin America that are likely to leave the Reagan administration increasingly isolated as it searches for allies."

It is reported that Venezuela has made an unannounced decision not to participate in joint naval training maneuvers scheduled for June by the United States and Latin American countries.

Regarding the economic field, the Falklands conflict has already begun to produce an adverse impact. With a "sense of nervousness," some American bankers have kept themselves at home instead of usually travelling through Latin America. There were 76.4 billion dollars in loans outstanding by the U.S. to Latin American nations at the end of 1981, with Argentina repaying 9.3 billion dollars. Some bankers fear that the U.S. position might prompt Argentina to renege on part of its foreign debt.

AUSTRIAN FOREIGN MINISTER CONCLUDES PRC VISIT

OW241548 Beijing XINHUA in English 1514 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 24 (XINHUA) -- The Austrian foreign minister, his wife and their party left here by air today at the end of their visit to China. Seeing off the Austrian guests at the airport were Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Zhang Wenjin and Austrian Ambassador to China Wolfgang Wolte. The minister and his party arrived here this afternoon after a visit to Chengdu and Lhasa.

TRADE DELEGATION CONCLUDES VISIT TO AUSTRIA

OW240738 Beijing XINHUA in English 0725 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Vienna, May 23 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese economic and trade delegation led by Wang Yaoting left here for home this morning after attending the international symposium on strengthening economic relations with China and a visit to Austria. Wang, also chairman of the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, told XINHUA yesterday that the delegation's visit was a success. During the symposium sponsored by the Organization for International Economic Relations, the delegation briefed the participants on the current economic situation in China and explained to them principles and policies governing China's economic ties and technical exchanges with foreign countries. It had extensive contacts with representatives of companies and banks of many countries. After the symposium, the delegation saw some small and medium-sized enterprises with high technology which had expressed interest in developing cooperation with China. Wang told executives of these enterprises that they will have more opportunities to enter into cooperation with China.

It was reported that a delegation of the Organization for International Economic Relations will visit China this autumn to further broaden bilateral economic cooperation.

HONG KONG PAPER CITES PORTUGUESE GENERAL ON VISIT

HK240307 Hong Kong STANDARD in English 24 May 82 p 16

[Text] General Melo Egidio, former governor of Macau, now leading a six-member military delegation on a mission to China at the invitation of the Chinese authorities, has found time for reminiscences on the second last leg of his visit. Despite his busy schedule during his current stop in Guilin, the scenic tourist city in the heartland of Guangxi region, the chief of staff of the Portuguese Armed Forces gave a special interview yesterday with STANDARD correspondent Leonel Borralho. Summing up his travels through China so far, Gen Egidio said: "We have accomplished our mission and the results are well beyond our expectations. I'm most happy, everybody in our group is happy, and there are all the reasons for us to feel like that." It is no wonder that the ex-Macau governor looked so relaxed and fresh, for Guilin means "forest of sweet osmanthus."

The Portuguese mission has, since it left Lisbon 10 days ago, visited Beijing, Tianjin and Shanghai and will head for Guangzhou this morning. Delegation members will then spend the night at Guangdong's Chungshan County, just across the border from Macau, before arriving in Hong Kong on Tuesday.

Gen Egidio was specially impressed by the hospitality of his Chinese hosts wherever they went since arrival in Beijing on May 14. Asked what the team has achieved in the visit, Gen Egidio mentioned two objectives. "Firstly, our talks with the Chinese Government officials will contribute towards better understanding between our two armies, and relations between the two nations. Second, although it was not our aim to discuss the future of Macau, all the top-ranking officials, military and civilian, including Premier Zhao Ziyang, referred to the vital role that Macau is playing in improving Chinese-Portuguese relations, despite its size."

Gen Egidio and his mission members will take a boat ride across the Lichian River for the last official programme in Guangzhou, where the delegation will be hosted to a lunch by Gen Wu Kehua of the Guangzhou Military Region.

FURTHER REPORTS ON FALKLANDS DEVELOPMENTS

UN Envoy's Speech

OW250308 Beijing XINHUA in English 0246 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] United Nations, May 24 (XINHUA) -- Ling Qing, Chinese permanent representative to the United Nations, today deplored the heightened tension in the Malvinas (Falkland) Islands and appealed once again to the United Kingdom and Argentina to cease their military actions immediately and resume negotiations in order to seek a peaceful settlement of their dispute.

Speaking at the U.N. Security Council meeting on the situation in the islands, Ling Qing said: "The secretary general's efforts to mediate in the dispute between the United Kingdom and Argentina have failed to achieve the desired result. British troops have now landed on the Malvinas Islands. The armed conflict is rapidly escalating and there is a danger of its continued expansion. The Chinese delegation deeply deplores this turn of events, which has not only heightened tension in the South Atlantic region, but also posed a grave threat to international peace and security."

He paid high tribute to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar for his enormous efforts in the past two weeks to seek a peaceful solution to the dispute. "It is regrettable that negotiations can go no further because of the gap between the positions of the two parties, and particularly because the party with superior military strength has taken a tough stand," he added.

He pointed out that the question of the Malvinas Islands is essentially a legacy of colonialism. "The United Nations has adopted resolutions relevant to the decolonization of these islands. The conferences of heads of state or foreign ministers of the nonaligned countries have also adopted resolutions on more than one occasion clearly supporting Argentina's claim to sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands and calling on both sides to accelerate the process of negotiations," he said.

He stated: "The Chinese Government and people have always firmly supported the struggle of the nations of the Third World to safeguard their sovereignty and territorial integrity. The national aspiration of the Argentine people to safeguard their sovereign right is understandable. In our view, the Security Council should respect the recent decisions of the Coordinating Bureau of Nonaligned Countries as well as the meeting of consultation of ministers of foreign affairs of the Organization of American States and support Argentina's claim to sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands."

"Any escalation of the military conflict between the United Kingdom and Argentina," he went on, "not only gravely threatens peace and stability in the South Atlantic region, but is also against the interests of the peoples of both countries. We believe that if only both sides show goodwill and make such mutual concessions as are necessary, they can achieve through peaceful negotiations a fair and reasonable solution to this dispute."

The Chinese representative said: "The first imperative now is to halt the hostilities so as to create the conditions for resuming negotiations. We hope that the secretary general will continue to use his influence and play an active role in this matter. In turn, the Security Council should continue to render him full support and cooperation in this endeavour."

Report on UNSC Meeting

OW241236 Beijing XINHUA in English 1159 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] United Nations, May 23 (XINHUA) -- More speakers at the U.N. Security Council meeting today called on Britain and Argentina to end their hostilities and find a negotiated settlement to their dispute over the Malvinas (Falkland) Islands.

On the third day of the emergency session of the Council, most speakers expressed grave concern over the escalation of the British-Argentine armed conflict following the British landing on the islands on Friday and urged the Security Council to give a formal mandate to the U.N. secretary general to continue his efforts in search of a peaceful solution to the dispute.

Luis Gonzalez Arias, representative of Paraguay, pointed out that what his delegation was essentially concerned about at this moment was the escalation of war in the Malvinas area. The Security Council should find a formula aimed at the cessation of hostilities in the first stage, and then finding a machinery for search of a peaceful and lasting solution he proposed.

Peruvian representative Juan Jose Calle y Calle declared that Peru supported Argentina's just claim to its "sovereignty over the Malvinas, South Georgia and the Sandwich Islands". He said the islands had been wrenched out of Argentine hands by means of force, and there had been no legal ruling on the legal validity of the 149 years of British rule over the islands. If the origin of the problem -- colonialism -- had been adequately recognized, a peaceful solution could have been reached.

Colombian representative Carlos Sanz de Santamaria reaffirmed that Colombia unconditionally supported the Argentine claim in the present conflict. He stressed that the international community should call for an immediate cease-fire, military withdrawal from the area and a negotiated solution to the situation.

Dario Lobo, representative of Honduras, pledged that his government stood by the Argentine claim to the Malvinas Islands. In the present situation, he urged both Argentina and Britain to find, once and for all, a point of agreement which could serve as a basis for a just and peaceful solution to the crisis.

Indonesian representative Abdullah Kamil said that today, with the war situation worsening in and around the islands, the first urgent and prompt thing the council should do was to call for an end to the war, for a cessation of hostilities.

Polish representative Eugeniusz Wyzner said that Poland deplored Britain's position as well as its escalation of armed aggression. He pointed out that an immediate cease-fire should be followed by military withdrawal and negotiations on the future of the islands.

French representative Luo de la Barre de Nanteuil said that France, without taking a stance on the substance of the issue, had stressed the need for the immediate implementation of resolution 502. Every possible effort should be made to bring about a cessation of hostilities. What had been achieved by the secretary-general in his negotiations should be upheld.

Representative of New Zealand Harold H. Francis and representative of Belgium Edmonde Dever in their speeches expressed support for Britain's position. However, both of them also called for peaceful settlement to the dispute.

No resolution has yet been submitted. But it was reported that discussions took place last night between the foreign ministers of Argentina and Panama and a draft resolution is being under consultations [as received] among the Latin-American group members.

The Council, which began its latest round of debate on Malvinas crisis on Friday, is scheduled to meet again tomorrow.

Further on UNSC Meeting

OW250724 Beijing XINHUA in English 0710 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] United Nations, May 24 (XINHUA) -- The U.N. Security Council met for the fourth consecutive day today to debate the Malvinas crisis with more speakers calling for an immediate end to the Anglo-Argentine armed conflict and a peaceful settlement of their dispute.

Representative of Zaire Kamanda wa Kamanda said that two fundamental principles were involved in the present dispute: non-use of force in international relations and the peaceful settlement of disputes. The world community, he went on, should definitely put an end to the cycle of wars and conflicts that did damage to the lives and values of all people. He said that while it accepted the colonial nature of the question, Zaire could not accept that the issue could only be resolved by force.

Ugandan representative Olara Otumo said, on the substance of the dispute, the Non-aligned Movement had consistently recognized the just claim of Argentina, in the special case of the Malvinas Islands, without prejudice to the general principle of self-determination and it had always called for negotiations, leading to a peaceful and just settlement of the dispute. He suggested that the U.N. secretary-general should be mandated by the Council to continue his peace efforts within the framework of Resolution 502.

Greek representative Mihalis Dountas said that the principle of non-use of force had been flagrantly violated by the sad events in the South Atlantic area. All forces should be withdrawn as soon as possible and a provisional United Nations administration installed in order to facilitate the conduct of meaningful negotiations, he added.

Liberian representative Abedodu B. Jones called for the immediate restoration of peace and the return to the rule of law. She requested that the mandate of the U.N secretary-general be renewed to enable him to continue peaceful negotiations in the Malvinas (Falkland) crisis without any pre-conditions, for the implementation of Resolution 502 of the Security Council and in keeping with the principles of the U.N. Charter.

Kenyan representative Charles Maina expressed his reservations on Argentina's taking over of the islands by armed force. He charged that Argentina was engaged in a pure territorial claim against the United Kingdom based on history and in total disregard of the people who now lived on the islands.

The Council will meet again tomorrow morning to continue its discussion.

Meanwhile, three working papers circulated by Panama, Ireland and Japan separately, each intended as the basis for a possible resolution to be adopted by the Council for resolving the crisis, were discussed privately while the Council was holding public debate today.

Panama's three-point draft resolution calls upon Argentina and Britain to "cease all firing and terminate all military activity immediately," to implement Council Resolution 502 "in all its parts," and "immediately and concurrently with the cease-fire" begin peace negotiations under the auspices of the U.N. secretary-general.

The Ireland's version asks for a limited cease-fire to create favourable conditions for the resumption of peaceful negotiations and a mandate for the secretary-general to continue his peace efforts.

Japan's formula calls for immediate implementation of Resolution 502 and renewal of the U.N. secretary general's good offices to achieve the earliest possible cessation of hostilities and realize a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

ARGENTINE ENVOY HOSTS NATIONAL DAY RECEPTION

OW250752 Beijing XINHUA in English 0737 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- Hector A. Subiza, ambassador of the Republic of Argentina to China, gave a reception to mark the National Day of the Republic at the embassy here today.

Among the guests were Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Yang Bo, minister of light industry; Han Xu, vice-minister of foreign affairs; Chi Haotian, deputy chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army; and leading members of other government departments concerned and the Beijing Municipality. Diplomatic envoys of various countries to China were present.

FURTHER ON DRAFT OF REVISED CONSTITUTION

Four Basic Principles Stressed

HK241326 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Adhering to the Four Basic Principles Is the General Guiding Thought for Revising the Constitution"]

[Text] At present, the draft of the revised constitution is being enthusiastically discussed among people of all nationalities throughout the country. In the course of this discussion, it is of primary significance to clarify the general principles or guiding thought to which we adhere in revising the constitution. What is the general guiding thought of the draft of the revised constitution? It is the four basic principles of adherence to the socialist road, adherence to the people's democratic dictatorship, adherence of the party's leadership and adherence to Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought. These four basic principles put forth by the CCP Central Committee have fundamentally summed up our country's historical experiences and are truths which have been verified by long-term tests in our actual practice. They reflect the laws governing the development of history which is independent of man's will and are the crucial decision of the hundreds of millions of Chinese people made during their long-term struggles. The preamble of the state's fundamental law has recorded and affirmed this fundamental historical experience. It has also explicitly stipulated that, the Chinese people will continue to adhere to the four basic principles and struggle for the completion of the basic tasks of the new period. This is an extremely essential and important task. Hence, this has laid down a general principle for the establishment and perfection of various political and economic systems in the country and has pointed out the correct orientation for our country's development in the future.

Only socialism can save China, and only socialism can enable our country to realize the modernization drive and achieve a high degree of democracy and civilization. Adhering to the socialist road means upholding the various socialist economic and political systems, continuing to launch social reforms and economic cultural construction in the socialist orientation, and creating a high degree of socialist material and spiritual civilization. This is a concentrated representation of the will and interests of the working class and the people throughout the country. Adhering to the socialist road cannot do without the system of the people's democratic dictatorship. Our country's system is the system of the people's democratic dictatorship which is under the leadership of the working class and based on the alliance of the workers and peasants. First, our country is under the leadership of the working class because the working class is the most advanced and prosperous class ever to appear in history. Only by working in accordance with the stand and will of the working class can our country unswervingly adhere to the socialist road. Second, the alliance of the working class and the broad masses of peasants is the foundation of our country. This alliance encompasses an extensive area and the foundation of the people's democratic dictatorship is also extensive and solid because 80 percent of our population are peasants and the nonagricultural laborers also belong to the worker-peasant alliance, the majority of the intellectuals have already become intellectuals of the laboring masses, and that the exploiting class has already been eliminated in our country. Third, in a country where the system of people's democratic dictatorship is practiced and where the system of democracy is extensively practiced among the people, the people are the masters of the country and the state organs are the tools to execute the people's will. Fourth, since class struggle will still exist for a long period of time in certain areas, besides safeguarding the motherland and opposing foreign invasion, we must also wage resolute struggles against the remnant elements of our enemies who are hostile to and sabotage the socialist cause. Thus, the function of dictatorship cannot be weakened. Only by practicing the system of dictatorship toward a small number of enemies, can we safeguard the people's country and the people's rights. These are both aspects of a single matter. In short, the system of the people's democratic dictatorship is, on the one hand, an important component of our country's socialist system and on the other hand, is a prerequisite for our country's adherence to the socialist road.

The socialist system and the people's democratic dictatorship are our country fundamental systems. Therefore, they are not only affirmed in the preamble of the draft of the revised constitution but also run throughout all its articles and become the basis for all other concrete systems. Article 1 of the general principles of the draft stipulates: "The People's Republic of China is a socialist state of the people's democratic dictatorship led by the working class and based on the alliance of workers and peasants. The socialist system is the basic system of the People's Republic of China. Disruption of the socialist system by any individual and in any form is prohibited." Other articles of the general principles contain concrete stipulations about our country's socialist economic system and political system and how to safeguard, strengthen and perfect these systems.

The socialist system is a completely new social system and is being developed and perfected in practice. We must carry out reforms in the socialist economic structure, political structure and the state leadership structure on the basis of our country's reality and the positive and negative experiences of the past 30 years or so in order that they will be conducive to developing production, raising the level of the people's material and cultural life and to building material and spiritual civilization. Only in this way are we correctly and really adhere to the socialist road. We have been doing so since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. Various stipulations in the draft of the revised constitution have recorded in principle the positive results of reforms in various fields achieved since the third plenary session and have affirmed the orientation for further reforms. Consequently, after the new constitution is officially adopted, we will further concretize, systemize and legalize the political principles of adhering to the socialist road and upholding the people's democratic dictatorship and will form systems and laws with binding force for the people of all nationalities and all state organs, political parties and mass organizations. These stipulations in the draft of the revised constitution are of great significance in ensuring that our country will develop along the socialist road.

The leadership of the CCP is the basic guarantee for winning victories in the socialist cause. The party's leading position was shaped by history. In China, without the leadership of the CCP, it will be impossible to adhere to the socialist road; whereas whether or not the party's leadership is good and whether or not the party's leadership can win the support of the broad masses depend on whether or not the party can correctly lead the people in adhering to the socialist road. Therefore, the party's leadership is also explicitly affirmed in the preamble of the draft of the revised constitution.

The party is the vanguard of the working class. Apart from the interests of the broad masses of people of the whole country, it has no particular interest of its own. In the past, the party led the people in the struggle to seize political power. At present, it is leading the people in the struggle to consolidate political power and to build a new life. It has all along been wholeheartedly serving the people and struggling for the people's right to become masters of their own affairs. The party's leadership is not at all contradictory to all power belonging to the people. On the contrary, the former ensures the realization of the latter. The party's leadership over the country should not be exercised by means of administrative orders but should be realized mainly by putting forth correct principles and policies which are in conformity with objective reality and the people's interests, relying on the guidance of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and according to the ideological line of seeking truth from facts. Besides, the party's leadership is realized by means of the positive role and exemplary deeds of its members and cadres in government organs and other organizations, ideological and political education among the broad masses given by party organizations at all levels and their close ties with the masses.

After the party's stand and the principles and policies it puts forth are accepted by state organs of power and become the country's systems and laws, all party members and cadres should struggle to safeguard these systems and laws at their respective posts and take the lead in observing these systems and laws and should establish extensive ties with the masses of people, educate them and lead them in observing these systems and laws. In this sense, observing the country's constitution and laws is upholding the party's leadership. Otherwise, the party's leadership will be damaged. Except stipulating that "all political parties" (of course, the CCP is included) must observe the constitution and laws, that is, must carry out their activities within the limits permitted by the constitution and laws, the articles in the draft of the revised constitution have not made stipulations on the party's leadership. This is because the party's nature and functions are entirely different from those of state organs of power and government administrative organs. The realization of its leadership does not depend on stipulations in articles of the constitution.

We often say that in order to strengthen the party's leadership, we must improve the party's leadership. We must carry out work in various respects to improve the party's leadership. One important aspect in improving the party's leadership is to correctly understand the nature of the party and to correctly understand the relationship between the party and the country and the methods for the party to exercise leadership over the country's life. Some past practices of mixing the party with the government and equating the party's leadership with the functions of state organs of power were not conducive to strengthening the party's leadership but were harmful to the party's correct leadership. The draft of the revised constitution has correctly summed up the historical experiences in this aspect. This will certainly be conducive to strengthening the party's leadership over the country's life.

The reason why the CCP can become the force at the core of the people of the whole country in carrying out socialist construction is that it is the vanguard of the proletariat armed with Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought. By using the scientific theory of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought as a tool to observe the country's destiny and to guide the revolution and construction, it is able to lead our country and the people in advancing smoothly along the socialist road and in overcoming any hardships and dangers until final victory. Since the citizens of the PRC support the socialist road and acknowledge the leadership of the CCP, they are bound to acknowledge the guiding role of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought in the country's life. The entire content of the draft of the revised constitution is the product of integrating the basic principles of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought with China's present reality.

In short, upholding the four basic principles is not only affirmed in the preamble of the draft of the revised constitution but is also manifested in all its content and articles. Through the discussion of the draft of the revised constitution by all the people of the country, we should make the whole party and all the people of the country understand better that the four basic principles are four mainstays of our country and are the foundation of our country. As long as we persistently and correctly uphold the four basic principles, we will certainly be able to build our country into a modern and strong socialist country with a high degree of democracy and a high degree of civilization!

Peng Zhen LIAOWANG Interview

OW200519 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0015 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 20 May (XINHUA) -- Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the committee for the revision of the constitution, pointed out: Discussion of the draft of the revised constitution by people throughout the country "is an important form of direct participation by the 1 billion people in state administration."

He said: "In discussing the draft of the revised constitution, people throughout the country should first make conscientious efforts to understand its content. If they do not, how can they discuss it properly? In discussing the draft, people should grasp the major questions in it in order to see whether it serves the best interests of the overwhelming majority of the people. What are the major questions? The eight questions I explained on behalf of the committee for the revision of the constitution are all major ones. If people throughout the country can reach a consensus on the major questions, the matter will be easy to handle. We should grasp the major questions and not be so disturbed by, or get so entangled over, secondary or minor issues so as to divert our attention from the target or the key points."

Comrade Peng Zhen emphatically pointed out: "In discussing the draft of the revised constitution by people throughout the country, attention should be paid to giving scope to democracy and letting them speak uninhibitedly so that they can express various opinions. Even if a small number of people have dissenting views, we should also pay attention to them, because this is conducive to doing a good job in revising the constitution."

Issue No 5 of the journal LIAOWANG, published on 20 May, carries an interview by Zeng Jianhui and Xu Minhe with Comrade Peng Zhen on questions concerning the draft of the revised constitution. The interview reads as follows:

When we went to his house, Comrade Peng Zhen cordially welcomed us into his living room and asked us to take a seat. He laughed when we told him the purpose of our visit. He said: "Our discussion today will be an informal one. The publication of the draft of the revised constitution is a major event, which is worth discussion."

He first dealt with the initial responses received since the publication of the draft of the revised constitution. He then cited some specific comments by people at home and abroad on the draft of the revised constitution -- some described it as "having epoch-making significance," some as "a milestone," some as "a complete deletion of the legacy of the 'cultural revolution'"....

After making a brief summary, he said: "These responses show that most people at home and abroad have realized that the draft of the revised constitution is a summing-up of the achievements of our struggle over the past 30 years and more and of our experiences, both positive and negative. Many articles in the draft of the revised constitution could not have been written without the experience and lessons of the 'Cultural Revolution.' The achievements and experiences of our protracted revolutionary struggle are comprehensively consolidated and affirmed in legal form in the draft of the revised constitution, the fundamental law. It appears that the draft of the revised constitution is tenable. As to whether the draft is flawless and what revisions should be made, it is of course to be discussed by people throughout the country."

What is the biggest characteristic of the draft of the revised constitution Comrade Peng Zhen went on to say: "It is proceeding from China's actual conditions. China has a population of 1 billion and a territory of 9.6 million square kilometers plus a sea area. The political, economic and cultural conditions, as well as customs and habits in various parts of the country, are quite different, and development is uneven. We should proceed from this reality and draw on our historical experiences and lessons as well as those of other countries — draw on what is suited to our actual current conditions, meets our country's needs and is useful to us."

Comrade Peng Zhen pointed out: "There is one fundamental principle running through this draft of the revised constitution from beginning to end: serve the best interests of the greatest majority of the people. All of us should serve this end. In the explanations I made at the NPC Standing Committee session on the draft of the revised constitution, I discussed eight subjects and this fundamental principle was stressed in the discussion of each of the subjects."

He said: "A constituion is drafted mainly by proceeding from current reality. At the same time, the future should also be taken into consideration. This constitution must be kept stable for a time. Because a constitution is the foundation of our socialist democracy and legal system and a foundation is not something that can be wontonly altered. Therefore, we must give full consideration to the constitution's stability."

Proceeding from the best interests of the greatest majority of the people, the draft of the revised constitution has embodied the four fundamental principles; it has specified that the fundamental task of the Chinese people in the new historical period is to concentrate their energies on promoting socialist modernization; it has laid down many new regulations aimed at bringing the socialist economic and political system to perfection; it has reflected the integration, to a high degree, of socialist democracy and the socialist legal system; it has stressed the need to provide practical protection for the legal rights and interests of the minority nationalities; and it has provided a number of principles on building socialist spiritual civilization...all these are there for the sake of the best interests of the greatest majority of the people of China.

The draft of the revised constitution has made big strides both in respect of giving scope to democracy and of bringing the legal system to perfection. Comrade Peng Zhen said: "The current draft of the revised constitution underlines the development of democracy -- it pays attention to spelling out practical and specific regulations regarding the basic rights of citizens, it strengthens and developes the system of the people's congress, it pays attention to a reasonable division of rights among state organs...."

Continuing, Comrade Peng Zhen noted: "Democracy was given full scope during the revision of the constitution itself -- it was revised under the leadership of the party Central Committee. And the revision was made by all those present after each had made his suggestions. The whole process of the revision was marked by unity between the opinions of the party and that of the people."

The draft of the revised constitution now publicized is the outgrowth of an extensive solicitation of suggestions from all quarters and 1 and 1/2 years of work.

The Third Session of the Fifth NPC adopted a resolution in September 1980, saying that it decided to form the committee for the revision of the constitution of the People's Republic of China, which would be in charge of the revision of the 1978 Constitution. Ye Jianying was appointed chairman and Soong Ching Ling and Peng Zhen vice chairmen of the committee for the revision of the constitution. Later, the committee set up a secretariat and Hu Qiaomu was appointed secretary general.

The Secretariat solicited ideas from the CCP Central Committee, the various departments under the State Council, the PLA, the CPPCC National Committee, the various democratic parties and mass organizations and the various provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions. It studied proposals made by the NPC deputies and the large number of suggestions made by the masses of the people concerning the revision of the constitution. It invited scholars of the sciences of law, politics and economics and specialists well versed in work in their respective fields from both Beijing and other localities to attend more than 10 forums, which studied the 3 constitutions and relevant documents of new China, the constitutions of old China and current constitutions of some countries. It was on the basis of this that the secretariat started to draw up the draft of the revised constitution.

The draft of the revised constitution for discussion put forward in February 1982 was drawn up after putting together the opinion of various localities, departments and quarters throughout the country. This draft for discussion was examined in detail and revised by the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee before approval in principle by the Politburo.

During the period when this draft for discussion was examined and deliberated on by the second plenary meeting of the committee for the revision of the constitution, the various departments under the central authorities and leading organs of the army and various provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions also discussed it and put forward many suggestions for revision. Having studied the opinions in detail from many angles, the committee for the revision of the constitution again made enormous revisions in content and wording in the draft for discussion before presenting the revised draft. The revised draft was approved in principle by the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee and submitted for deliberation at the third plenary meeting of the committee for the revision of the constitution. The committee discussed the revised draft very carefully and seriously and weighed and deliberated, not only chapter by chapter and article by article, but also sentence by sentence and word by word.

Comrade Peng Zhen described to the reporters the process of revising the constitution for the purpose of explaining that, while our party leads the people in drawing up the constitution and law, it also leads the people in abiding by them.

He pointed out: "The constitution is a set of rules for the 1 billion people of our country and all the people must abide by it. Since it is necessary for all the people to abide by it, it must be presented to the whole people for discussion in furtherance of the spirit of socialist democracy.

"The process of discussion by all the people means a process of repeated discussions among them and a process of repeated discussions between the party and the masses. This does not mean that it is done in a superficial and perfunctory way. Whether or not our party's opinion is fully focusing the opinion of the masses of the people cannot be ascertained until they are practically discussed and tested.

"Discussion by the whole people is also a very good way to unify the opinion of the people of the whole country. The opinion of the party and the people must be unified, the opinion of the people of the whole country must also be unified. How could it work if the democratic style of work is not developed and the draft is not fully discussed by all? The adherence to the four fundamental principles advocated by us means a summing up of the basic experience in the modern history of our country and is the truth verified in practice. In the draft of the revised constitution, adherence is comparable to the four pillars of a house; without a unified understanding how can the house be built? The adherence of the four fundamental principles, clearly written in the draft of the revised constitution, is fully compatible with the fundamental interests and demands of the people of our country. Through discussion by the whole people, I believe, the people's understanding of the importance of this question will be certainly be further raised.

"Discussion by the whole people is an important form of direct participation in the administration of the affairs of the state by the 1 billion people. The constitution is the fundamental law of the state. People's participation in discussion of the revision of the constitution means that they are taking part in drawing up and learning to grasp this legal weapon, the constitution. It also means that they are taking part in administering the affairs of state."

"Therefore," Comrade Peng Zhen said emphatically, "organizing the whole people to discuss the draft of the revised constitution is a very important matter. The constitution will certainly be much more perfect after discussion and revision than it is now."

TWO ARTICLES CRITICIZE 'FAIRYTALES IN SPRING'

YANGCHENG WANBAO

HK250551 Guangzhou YANGCHENG WENBAO in Chinese 20 May 82 p 2

[Article by Yi Zhun [2496 0402]: "Commenting on the Erroneous Tendencies of 'Fairytales in Spring'" -- a speech at a forum -- reprinted from June issue of ZUOPIN [WORKS]]

[Text] "Fairytales in Spring," a novel written by Comrade Yu Luojin (published in the No 1, 1982 issue of HUACHENG), is a work with an erroneous theme. The plot of the novel is about the mishaps of the protagonist, Yu Shan, with regard to her love affairs, marriage and family problems. The emphasis is on her dubious relationship with an old cadre, He Jing, her divorce from her second husband, Shu Ming, and the attacks and frameups resulting from these two incidents. The novel has not only publicized the decadent bourgeois moral ethics which advocate extreme egotistic ideas, but also uglified the real picture of life since the party's third plenary session. By means of allegories and insinuations, it attacks the reality of society to the extent that it denounces the socialist society. The vulgar appeals and the erroneous political tendencies manifested in the novel are definitely not an accidental or isolated literary phenomena. Instead, this is an outstanding representation of the bourgeois liberalization trend in the present society.

Here, I am not going to make an overall analysis or appraisal of the novel; rather, I would like to give my superficial opinion regarding the protagonist, the setting and the theme itself.

On Yu Shan as a Person

What kind of person is the novel's protagonist, Yu Shan -- the "I" in the novel?

Yu Shan claimed that "I am not a shy person. I cannot recall blushing in the past 32 years." Indeed, her acts confirmed her words. She first married an educated youth, Er Bao, because she wanted to settle her residence registration problem. Later, they were divorced because she fell in love with another educated youth named "Nie." She then married a worker, Shu Ming, because "he has a room of his own." After their marriage, she was again dissatisfied, this time with Shu Ming. She often indulged herself in her fantasy of a "fancy lover." Eventually, she fell in love with a married man -- He Jing, the deputy chief editor of SHI BAO. She insisted on divor ing Shu Ming and attributed the failure of her marriages to a lack of love. According to her, she married twice because she was driven to it by unfavorable circumstances and she had to "marry someone for a living": not because she loved the new and loathed the old. It seemed that if she had not changed her mind the moment she saw someone new, she would not be able to "register her residence" and "find a place to settle down." In other words, she was not responsible for her sufferings in these "loveless mariages," and her failure in marriage was the result of social suppression.

On the other hand, Yu Shan called her seduction and courtship natural legitimate acts. In her love letters to He Jing, she said, "Why can't I take you more seriously (than Shu Ming -- author's note)? Since you are more worthy of my love...the whole world will agree with my declaration of love." Thus, we can see that she used absurd logic in handling her love affairs, marriage and family problems, by which she would love whomever she consideres "more worthy of her love" -- regardless of the fact that she was a married woman and the other person a married man. In her mind, she could discard moral and legal constrictions and had the right to seduce whomever she loved. She regarded her love for He Jing as "a challenge to the theory of parentage" and considered her egotistic attitude toward love as the purest "love" in the whole world. "My love is very inspiring. It is so open, positive and rare. Such love should go down in history." To put it in more common terms, "she wants to be remembered both as a prostitute and a virtuous woman." Such absurd logic that deceived herself as well as others and such extreme egotistic, pragmatic ideas on love affairs, marriage and family problems have thoroughly penetrated her soul and manipulated her acts. This also reflects how seriously her thought and soul have degenerated.

Yu Shan's "egotistic" ideas and acts are even worse than the bourgeois ideas that regard "love as something supreme." She believes in free sex and is pursuing a "sexual revolution." This is a challenge to socialist morality. This is a typical manifestation of the decadent and degenerate bourgeois morality and attitude toward love.

It is rather surprising that such an unconventional, unrestrained and degenerate woman was praised through the mouths of positive figures such as Yan Yan and Xu Yang. Yan Yan said: "He (He Jing) has always wanted to cover up your intimate relationship. However, he happened to have met you, a sun goddess; you want to treat your relationship as something open and above board." At the end of the story, the novel depicts how Yu Shan returns ingratitude with kindness by risking her own "life and future" at a very critical moment. Such a detailed description of this "revengeful goddess" is as good as crowning her with a pure and holy halo. This has beautified her image. No wonder Xu Yang was deeply moved and tried his best to comfort her and praise her. She said: "In any case, I know that you are innocent even if the whole nation condemns you." Reading through the whole novel, we can see that the author is sympathetic to Yu Shan and completely agrees with her. She is praised as a tragic "heroine" who represents "truth" and "light." By so doing, truth and falsehood are confused and the degenerate is treated as the noble, the obscene as the decent and the contemptible as the open and above board. What will be the effect of these descriptions on the readers in these days when we are devoting major efforts to publicizing socialist spiritual civilization? It is obvious that they will only corrupt people's mind and poison their souls.

On the Typical Setting of the Novel

The background of the novel is based on the period between the party's third plenary session and 1981, that is, the time our country was in the new historical stage. During this new historical period, we brought order out of chaos and liberated our minds. The social life of our country experienced great changes and the people throughout the country were heroically marching toward the four modernizations with heightened spirit and vitality. The title of the novel is "Fairytales in Spring," which is rather cynical. Reading through the novel, one cannot feel the atmosphere of a prosperous spring which signifies the social life of our country since the third plenary session, not to mention the positive spirit of the times. On the contrary, one can only see schemes and intrigues that make people feel somber and oppressed; one cannot see any hope or future, but only a gloomy picture. By saying this, I do not mean that there is no dark side of things in our social life since the third plenary session, nor that we cannot expose the dark side of things. What I am saying is that in exposing the dark side of things, the author has not adopted a correct stand, nor made use of the contradictions and struggles between the old and new to correctly reflect the essence of our social life.

How, then does the author handle and reflect the actual situation of our society?

The party newspaper, the state news agency, the press and the literary circles, the people's court, the public security organs and the judicial organs are mentioned by the author in her novel. According to the author, all these departments, units and people are organs that create obstacles for Yu Shan. They framed, attacked and persecuted her. At the same time, the one who stood behind the scenes, who exerted his influence over these departments and units, was an old cadre who had no principles but steered according to the wind. It was he who led a decadent life and dallied with Yu Shan and deceived her -- the hypocrite and double-dealer He Jing. To put this in Yu Shan's words, "all rumours are created on purpose, out of the same machine." The implications of what she said gives us much food for thought. Normally, anything "created on purpose" can only refer to conspiracies or schemes. Since all these rumours have been created, there must be a consiracy against somebody. If all the departments, units and cadres mentioned in the novel are acting in collusion with each other, then, there must be a certain social force which represents a certain clique behind them.

If this is the case, isn't Yu Shan too naive in taking only He Jing and his wife, who never appears, as the manipulators of the "rumor machine?" As for He Jing, it is absolutely right that his acts should be thoroughly exposed and castigated. However, the question is whether these press, literary, political and legal organs under the party's leadership have departed from the party's stand, abandoned their organizational principles and willingly submitted themselves to the manipulation of He Jing and his wife. Have they become the mass media and the instrument of dictatorship of some conspiracies? We cannot help but ask: does the author want to expose the dark side of things or to slander and distort our socialist society? Does it tally with the four basic principles that socialist literature must uphold?

We can quote some incidents in the novel to analyze how the author reflects and appraises our actual life.

First, the divorce. Yu Shan was extremely unhappy about the decision of the intermediate people's court that her application for a divorce was rejected. When she held the court's ruling in her hand, the novel states: "She stared at the court's ruling and the DAILY NEWS. A familiar feeling came back to her -- she suddenly recalled her brother being sentenced to death at the intermediate people's court...." Now, it was also this intermediate people's court that aggravated the hatred between the two parties and she was condemned as a "chen shimei" -- an ungrateful person. The novel confirmed Yu Shan's attitude with sympathetic tones; it writes: this is the same court that sentenced her brother to death during the 10 years of internal disorder. The discussion on the divorce case in the JUDICIAL journal after the court had announced its judgment was regarded as "confused" discussion. In the end, the ordinary people are cheated. This has not only confused the period when the "gang of four" ran rampant with the period after the third plenary session, but also equated them with each other. Can we regard this as merely airing one's personal grievances?

Second, the Internal REFERENCE NEWS incident. According to the novel, after the publication of the story of "a degenerate woman" in the Internal REFERENCE NEWS, everybody was talking about the matter. This created the strong social opinion that put Yu Shan in an isolated position. The novel says: "People in the offices, workshops, corridors, canteens, gardens, roads, public vehicles...wherever there are people, are discussing me behind my back.... Since the founding of the PRC, no one has been humiliated and slandered like me -- I am being discussed, criticized and abused by thousands and millions. Who can understand my feeling?" On the other hand, the Internal REFERENCE NEWS was no longer "internal." "The news was dispatched by foreign news agencies to the United States, France...." However, responses at home were entirely different from those abroad. Yu Shan said: "People abroad are condemning He Jing while those at home are condemning Yu Shan." It is crystal clear that she held different opinions of the socialist society and the capitalist society. Old cadres like He Jing, the hypocrite and the double-dealer, were protected by people at home and nobody dared to criticize him. He was only criticized and condemned by people abroad. On the other hand, a "victim" like herself, who is both pure and innocent, was not supported and protected at home. Instead, she was humiliated, slandered and condemned in a way unprecedented since the founding of the PRC. In her view, our socialist society is an unjust society that confuses right with wrong and only capitalist states such as the United States and France can distinguish right from wrong and promote healthy tendencies.

Third, the incident of the appraisal. The novel depicts how the prize for "A Story of the Past" was canceled after the divorce incident and how Xu Yang defended her at the appraisal meeting and held that "the talent of Yu Shan should be cherished and protected by Socialist literary circles." However, she was now "destroyed" by it and was "charged" with being "a degenerate woman." Yu Shan herself was extremely agitated and held that "many in the literary circles are indignant and they compare my case to Ruan Lingyu's in the old society. The slanders I suffered were far greater than those suffered by Ruan Lingyu!" As everybody knows, Ruan Lingyu was a film star in old China and she was persecuted by the old society. Yu Shan compared herself to Ruan Lingyu and like Ruan, she had "thought of death" as a solution. Moreover, in the eyes of Yu Shan, the socialist society today is far worse than the semifeudal and semicolonial old society, to the extent that it was "several times" "worse" than the old society.

What is more the novel describes a monologue by Yu Shan, saying: "Should I thank my brother for dying early so that I may compare my situation to a death cell, so that I can remind myself that I am living in a paradise." This monologue has further exposed the internal world of Yu Shan: In her opinion, the Chinese society during the Cultural Revolution was a "death cell" and now she compared her social environment -- the Chinese society after the third plenary session -- to a "death cell," and she used the irony of "making me feel that I am living in a paradise" to express her hatred toward the socialist society.

Of course, the above judgment is not based only on several of the heroine's monologues and words. Of course words express thoughts. All these monologues and words of Yu Shan have indeed nakedly exposed her mean thinking and soul, and very strongly showed her hostility and resentment toward the new society. It is natural that the thinking and behavior of an extreme individualist like her are incompatible with the socialist society. Her opposition to and conflict with the new society originate from the nature of her character. However, the novel entirely attributed the origin of such thinking and the behavior of Yu Shan to the society. It did not make even the least criticism of this political emotion and attitude which were voiced, full of resentment, from the heart of Yu Shan. On the contrary, the author tried her best to hide her intention, in creating a sentimental and sad emotion and atmosphere by cultivating the plot of the novel, the relationship between different characters, the creation of images and the exaggeration of environmental atmosphere, so that the novel could call forth an emotional response from readers. Thus, it could imperceptibly push them to show sympathy for Yu Shan's misfortune, making them believe that she was really living in a social environment as cold and cruel as a "death cell," and was suffering from a "torture which other people seldom face!" And this is exactly the typical environment described in the novel, and exactly what the socialist new China after the third plenary session looked like in the eyes of Yu Shan!

The novel described the socialist society as a "death cell" which is no different from the society under the tyrannous rule of the "gang of four," a society which is inferior to the capitalist society and old China, and where innocent people are easily framed, personality is trampled, and a "helpless and innocent lady" was almost persecuted to suicide. What social system, then, did it actually want to sing the praises of? What social system did it oppose? What social system did it look forward to and pursue?

On the Theme of the Novel

The author claimed that her work is "literature of truth." Yes, it is true that the main character in the work is a real figure in actual life and all those major scenes in the novel are irrefutable facts. These include the speech at the views-exchange meeting on theories, the divorce case, the disturbances arising from the discussion on the divorce, the unfair failure of "The Tales in the Past" in the prize competition, the annulment of the publication of "The Tales of Today," despite its publication being announced, the report on "A Degenerate Woman" in the Internal REFERENCE NEWS, and so on. (Of course, this does not mean that there are no fictitious characters or scenes in this work.) Therefore, it is no wonder that Yu Shan claimed her work "The Tales of Today" as a biographical novel.

Now it is clear that a biographical novel is a more convenient form for the author to expose the dark side of life by the means of naturalism and distort the substantial reality of life under the cloak of the so-called "depiction of truth." Such a form facilitated Yu Shan's going all out to air her resentment and grievances against actual life. Therefore, compared with those novels based on the artistic condensation of life, this novel is more puzzling to the vast number of readers, and thus can more effectively deceive and corrode them, in particular the young readers. For this reason, the social effects it will have in spreading these erroneous viewpoints and pessimistic emotions will be much worse.

Perhaps some of our comrades will say that what the novel depicts is nothing other than problems concerning love, marriage and the family; and that there is nothing to be surprised at, even though it publicizes wrong moral principles.

Certainly, we can write on problems concerning love, marriage and the family. But the question is, from what standpoint, based on what thoughts and feelings, and guided by what moral principles are we going to write on them? "Fairytales in Spring" has not only gone against the socialist ethics in terms of its ideological content, but is also harmful to the party's leadership and the socialist system in regard to the various social contradictions and struggles which it reflects through description of love, marriage and the family. It can be seen how profoundly and extensively the mass media, the literary and artistic circles and the political and legal circles were involved, through the thread of love in the novel, and what acute and complicated contradictions and struggles were reflected in the novel. All these social problems the novel concerned itself with are far beyond the scope of the problem of love. More, those political, sociological, historical, moral and aesthetic views it presented are obviously erroneous.

Therefore, although the author devoted a lot of space to the problem of love, the theme of the novel, judged from the social life it reflected through the scenes of love, was obviously not a simple tragedy of love, but rather, the author's understanding and evaluation of the reality she reflected through the overall description of artistic images. The author's understanding and evaluation of that reality are exactly the creative urge which she wanted to express through those artistic images. This creative urge of the author can be seen not only in the panorama the novel showed, but also, and even more clearly, in the speeches of the heroine as the agent of the author. Yu Shan said: "Can I not wish it (referring to 'The Tales of Today,' namely, 'Fairytales in Spring' -- the writer) to be published soon?.... It is, in my view, a bill of indictment of mine." This declaration is the best footnote to the author's creative urge, and the key words to indicate the theme of the work. At the same time, it is a clue the author has left us for understanding the theme of the work.

Who then, does this "bill of indictment" accuse? Is it just He Jing, whom Yu Shan denounced as a "slaughterer?" If we approach the problem in this way, we are underestimating the importance of this "bill of indictment." Judged from the overall image of the reflected social life, and the general political content and political tendency embodied in the novel, the object of accusation is by no means only He Jing! In our opinion, all the organs and departments which defamed and made Yu Shan suffer were the objects of accusation; including newspapers, news agencies, people's courts and public security organs of the party and the state, and even the whole new society, which she condemned as a "death cell." Of course, a literary work can never "accuse" someone of something like a "bill of indictment" does, and the author herself is quite aware of this. Therefore, the so-called "bill of indictment" is the equivalent of a "condemnation!"

From the above preliminary analysis, we can clearly see the creative intent of "Fairytales in Spring." This novel tried to give its readers the idea, through artistic images, that Yu Shan continued to live in a social environment which was as hopeless as a "death cell" even after the party's third plenary session; and all her misery and tragedies in her life were the results of various defamations and persecution by society. In actual life, Yu Shan lost the case. However, she insisted that she was framed in a certain wicked "plot." Feeling helpless, she was forced to take up the literary and artistic weapon to bring to light some people's "secrets" and expose the so-called "truth of the matter" with "Fairytales in Spring." She realized that those press organs, literary and art bodies, political and legal departments, led by the party, and the social environment in which she lived were the cause of the tragedy in her life; they had damaged her reputation and thus obstructed her work from winning the prize and being published. Therefore, she now wanted to create another public opinion with a biographical novel, to accuse and launch a counteroffensive against them. This is probably the real reason why she wanted to "publish a novel as a bill of indictment!"

NANFANG RIBAO

HK220652 Quangzhou NANFANG RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p4

[Article by Wu Zhiqiang [0702 1807 1730] and Wang Chunfu [3769 2504 5346]: "What Morality Does Is Preach, How Does it View Reality -- Commenting on the Long Novel 'Fairytales in Spring'"]

[Text] Editor's note: The No 1, 1982 issue of HUACHENG carried Comrade Yu Luojin's long novel "Fairytales in Spring." This has drawn the attention of readers in our province and in other provinces. They hold that this is a shameful, secret literary work which exposes others' shameful secrets in order to give vent to the author's discontent, and that this is an outstanding reflection of bourgeois liberatlization. From beginning to end, it openly propagates extreme individualism and decadent bourgeois views on marriage, family, ethics and morality. It prettifies an egoist as a warrior who has emancipated her mind. The author has given a very untruthful description of our country's social reality since the third plenary session. It has given us an impression that up to now, justice is still being suppressed and evil is still manipulating man's destiny in our socialist society. Is this not an obvious distortion? Evidently, it will exert a bad influence on the readers, especially on young readers.

Since the Central Committee held a forum on problems of the ideological front, the ideological and cultural fronts have gone all out to publicize the building of a socialist spiritual civilization, oppose bourgeois liberalization, oppose ideological corrosion of capitalist ideology and repeatedly stress the social effects of literary works. At present, a nationwide struggle against corrosion and degeneration is being carried out in order to remove obstacles to the four modernizations. At this time, the HUACHENG editorial department has published "Fairytales in Spring," which propagates the decadent bourgeois ideology. It should not have done so because this novel is very harmful and will damage the building of a socialist spiritual civilization.

In order to eliminate the bad influence of this novel, we publish today a commentary article written by Wu Zhiqiang and Wang Chunfu. [end editor's note]

After reading the long novel "Fairytales in Spring" which was carried in the No 1, 1982, issue of HUACHENG, one is bound to ask: Where is spring? What is love? We think that there is a seriously erroneous ideological tendency in the novel's views on love, marriage, family, ethics, morality and in its description of our country's social reality since the third plenary session.

I

Outwardly, this novel seems to be a love story about a young woman called Yu Shan and an old cadre called He Jing. However, as a matter of fact, it gives vent to discontent with the social reality since the third plenary session under the disguise of "putting love before all other things." Of the two leading charcters in the novel, Yu Shan and He Jing, one has a husband and the other has a wife. Should these two persons love each other? Is their love moral or immoral? The author tells us: Yes, they should! And, besides, their love is moral and noble. Although Yu Shan's love for He Jing comes to naught, it is not the fault of this kind of love itself but because she has loved the wrong person. The author uses Yu Shan's mouth to say: If I had not loved He Jing, I would have loved somebody else. In order to express her thinking on love, ethics and morality, the author describes how Yu Shan shakes off "common views" and stubbornly woos the ideal lover and happiness shines in her yes. At the same time, she strives to play up Yu Shan's melancholy and bitterness from a "marriage without love" by means of her two marriages and divorces.

Who is the ideal lover in Yu Shan's eyes? The novel reads: "How happy I would be if I have a lover who regards my kisses during the day as a pleasure, as something he craves and as the greatest happiness." "His footsteps would intoxicate me. The smell of his cigarettes would exult me. Even each wrinkle of his clothes, no matter how shabby they may be, would be very dear to me. When he holds my hand in his, I would be happier than being hugged or kissed. Each leaf of the books he turns and each page on which he writes would seem to speak to me. I would never read enough of his beautiful handwriting. His figure, either viewed sideways or from behind, would always be the world's most beautiful statue. The handkerchief he uses, even if it is dirty and should be washed, would have a unique fragrance that penetrates right into the heart. On the sofa, in the kitchen or on the boulevards in the evening, I could hug him, caress him and kiss him as if he were a child...." This is the vulgar "ideal love" which the author admires and praises with such minute descriptions. In reality, it is not strange at all that different classes or people with different world outlooks have different temperaments and interests. However, as a socialist literary and art worker, one should guide the people, by means of art, to base their love on their common cause and ideals, mutual confidence and mutual concern, to shake off mean and vulgar tastes and to seek lofty and fine sentiments. However, the novel spares no effort in propagating and playing up the bourgeois sentiments of immersing oneself all the time in deep love and affection. This is entirely incompatible with our rapidly progressing era, with the vigorous mental attitudes of the broad masses of people and with the socialist spiritual civilization.

The novel does its utmost to play up Yu Shan's bitterness stemming from her marriage and family. It repeatedly states that this bitterness results from a "marriage without love." The novel describes Yu Shan's first husband, Er Bao, as a cruel and rude person who often beat her. In the 3 years Yu Shan was married to him, she was "once raped by him" and no affection had ever existed between them. Therefore, Yu Shan fell in love with an educated youth called Nie, freed herself from an "immoral" marriage and sought "noble" spiritual comforts from Nie. Although Yu Shan's second husband, Shu Ming, had a comfortable set of rooms, was well off and capable and was not meddlesome or lacking anything, there was no love between them. Why was this so? It was because Shu Ming was not educated or cultivated. He "never thought of holding my hand and much less of walking arm in arm with me." This was something which Yu Shan could not tolerate and called an "immoral" marriage. Therefore, she once more ignored her legal marriage and family, wrote love letters to He Jing, who already had a wife, and became on very intimate terms with him. The author considers all this natural and beyond reproach. No love existed when she got married and she did not try to cultivate love after her marriage. Finally she got a divorce under the pretext that the married lacked love. She was entirely responsible for all this. How could she blame the society? In fact, how Yu Shan behaved on the questions of love and marriage was out-and-out egoism and pragmatism. In order to solve the problem of registering her family's residence, she voluntarily married Er Bao. In order to have a cosy home in the city, she married Shu Ming. Later, she fell in love with He Jing. To put it point blank, she wished to publish her work "A Story of the Past." When she was divorced on two separate occasions, her difficulties had already been overcome and a third party had appeared. She would marry anyone who helped her overcome her difficulties and who was useful to her. This behavior of exchanging marriage for something is the greatest blasphemy to proletarian morality. No matter how the author may argue, she will never be able to cover up the ideological nature of extreme individualsim in what Yu Shan did on the questions of marriage and family.

In order to propagate an erroneous concept of love, the author has distorted what Engels said -- "Marriage without love is immoral" -- and uses it as a theoretical basis.

On the one hand, she has cleverly fabricated the love story about Yu Shan's father. This story was romantic, complicated and confusing: Her father, an engineer who had studied in Japan, and her mother, a factory director, married each other of their own choice. Their family life was satisfactory and they had three children. However, her father happened to meet a woman called Bian Hong at a ballroom and fell in love with her at first sight. He then abruptly proposed to divorce her mother with the only excuse that her mother was "far from being tender." The novel does not criticize such a man who loved the new and loathed the old, who changed his mind the moment he saw something new and who disregarded the bitterness of his wife, children and the whole family. Instead, it says: "I have paid the price for love and I bear him no grudge." In fact, Bian Hong, whom her father loved at all costs, was a woman who defrauded others of their money and belongings by peddling sexual favors. Nevertheless, swayed by "emotions," her father took her for a "goddess" and said: "This is only her disposition and not her fault." Ah! Emotions can be put before anything else. Ethics, morality and marriage norms can all be abandoned. This is a view on love which the novel propagates. Stuff about which bourgeois writers wrote to an excessive degree in the 19th century are now praised in the 1980's as new ideas that have broken through common views. This is indeed very astonishing.

In the book "The Origin of Family, Private Ownership and State," Engels said: "If we say that only marriage based on love is moral, then only marriage that continues to maintain love is moral." This was how Engels, in analyzing the social development of marriage and family, castigated "slave marriage" under the exploiting system. This was also his profound criticism on how kings, nobles and the bourgeoisie regarded marriage as commodity exchange and a means to extend their political influence. It is ridiculous to think that what Engels said means that the deeds of those who do not keep themselves within bounds of legal marriage, ignore social ethics and develop dubious relationships with a woman who has a husband (or a man who has a wife) are moral. In the same book, Engels also said: "Full freedom of marriage can be universally realized only after capitalist production is eliminated and all kinds of economy branched from it as result of its tremendous influence are eliminated." This profoundly expounded that love, marriage and family are governed and influenced by social relations, develop with social development and change with social changes. The relationship in marriage and family in a socialist society is fundamentally different from that in a feudal society or a capitalist society. It ensures that the broad masses of people can universally enjoy freedom of love and freedom of marriage. As PRC citizens, we are obliged to conscientiously observe and safeguard our country's marriage system. All those who edge into other people's families thus bringing harm to these families are immoral and should be criticized or even punished according to state law. In the novel, Yu Shan and Nie, Yu Shan and He Jing, Yu Shan's father and Bian Hong brazenly flirted, came together, acted indecently and even developed dubious relationships when they were all still bound by law in marriage. Therefore, no matter what "noble" feelings the author may bestow on them, their dubious relationships which are not accepted by law, are extremely immoral and not permitted by the socialist law. "Fairytales in Spring" advocates and preaches a breakthrough in socialist ethics and morals and a breakthrough in our country's existing marriage system. This will play an extremely harmful role by adding fuel to the flames among some young people who blindly hanker after ideas of the so-called "feelings come first" and "sexual revolution" in capitalist countries. Today, when the Central Committee has repeatedly stressed building a socialist spiritual civilization, opposing bourgeois liberalization and resisting capitalist ideological corrosion, the social effect of publishing this novel is very bad.

II

While noisily propagating a view on love which goes against the moral codes of socialism and playing up the decadent and obscene ways of love of the bourgeoisie, "Fairytales in Spring" also seriously distorts the social reality of our people's political life after the party's third plenary session.

The "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the People's Republic of China" pointed out: "The victory won in overthrowing the counter-revolutionary Jiang Qing clique in October 1976 saved the party and the revolution from disaster and enabled our country to enter a new historical period of development." "The 3d plenary session of the 11th Central Committee in December 1978 marked a crucial turning point of far-reaching significance in the history of our party since the birth of the People's Republic. ... Since then, it has gained the initiative in setting things right and has been able to solve step by step many problems left over since the founding of the People's Republic and the new problems cropping up in the course of practice and to carry out the heavy tasks of construction and reform, so that things are going very well in both the economic and political spheres." It is a fact that after the third plenary session, fundamental changes took place in the people's political and economic life in our country. In the spirit of seeking truth from facts, our party redressed the cases of those who had been wrongly classified as rightists in the antirightist movement in 1957 and the false and wrong cases in the past political movements and shifted the focus of the work to economic construction. This has greatly aroused the socialist enthusiasm of the people of the whole country and has brought about a very favorable situation of building the four modernizations with one heart and one mind. The background of the story of "Fairytales in Spring" was set precisely in the period after the third plenary session, from 1979 to 1981. However, in the novel, we do no find anything about the smashing of the "gang of four" and in particular the profound changes in our society after the third plenary session. Nor do we see any change in the political life of Yu Shan, the main character. There is no flavor of "spring" at all. On the contrary, what we find is only cold and gloomy scenes of a bitter winter, new occurrences of false cases and continuation of Yu Shan's tragedy.

Yu Shan grew up in a family in which one member -- her brother -- was classified as "an active counterrevolutionary" by the "gang of four." After she graduated from a secondary technical school, she went to work. Shortly after she began working, "she was taken by the Red Guards to the public security bureau as an object of dictatorship because of a few lines she wrote on a book which were not reactionary at all." When she was released from a reeducation farm, she was sent to labor in a village in Heilongjiang. Later, she was allowed, "by luck," to "resign on account of illness" and she went to a city. Undoubtedly, her misfortunes arouse sympathy, but we should square the accounts with the "gang of four." In April 1979 the public security bureau redressed her case simply by saying that her case was "improperly handled" and did not give her a certificate of redress. This made her very angry. She regarded this as a new blow which was even heavier than previous ones and caused her ever more pain. In order to court her "ideal lover," she submitted a plea of divorce with Shu Ming. After they were granted a divorce by the district court, the intermediate court tried her case again. This gave rise to a nationwide discussion. Then her misfortune began. The first thing was RIBAO's report on the trial of her divorce case by the intermediate court which slandered her. This was followed by a vilifying passage entitled "A Degenerated Woman" which was carried by the Internal REFERENCE MATERIALS of a news agency. Consequently, her new work, "A Story of Today," was not published in the journal TUDI although her work had been included in its table of contents which had been announced in advance. Likewise, no prize was awarded to her work "A Story of the Past" which had been published. The journal SIFA, which was formerly in her favor in the discussion of the divorce case, also changed its attitude. "The inconstancy of human relationships is not only manifested by individuals but even organizations are jumping on the bandwagon." Society showed no mercy to her and her family cast her aside. "At a moment when dark clouds blotted out the sky," she thought of committing suicide but finally she looked at the bright side of things. However, at the end of the story, what awaits Yu Shan is not "greater happiness." She is still engulfed in bitterness without any support from society or her family.

Why did she suffer? What was the cause of her sufferings? This is how the author painstakingly described the intermediate court retrying her divorce case: The same intermediate court which sentenced her brother to death is now retrying Yu Shan's divorce case. As written in the novel, when Yu Shan received the court's ruling, she "realized all of a sudden -- as if she had been something of the past -- that her brother was sentenced to death by the same intermediate court...." Much thought has really been given to this "finishing touch" which explicitly says: After the smashing of the "gang of four," the intermediate court is the same as before and it tries cases in the same way as it tried her brother. We can only say that the description here is a malicious attack on the court, which is a dignified state organ.

We should point out: The author has "ingeniously" worked out the plot to describe Yu Shan's sufferings. In the very beginning of the novel, the author put words in Yu Shan's mouth to ask: Have things really changed this time? Can we, who are at the bottom of the society, really raise our heads?" The time in question was already April 1979. At first glance, this state of mind of the main character seems difficult to understand. But if we read on, we will think that this doubt of Yu Shan's was not at all unnecessary. Through Yu Shan's experiences, the novel purposely tells the readers: Things really have not changed, Yu Shan is still "at the bottom of the society" and she has not been "really able to raise her head." Through vivid descriptions of Yu Shan's bitter experiences, the author draws the conclusion that it is unimaginable not to have resentful sentiments against our time.

What is worth noting is why Yu Shan's tragedy becomes worse and worse in a hew historical period. The novel tells us that this is because the whole society is shrouding over her like a net and that although she continues to seek and struggle for her own "ideals," she will not be able to escape from the restraints of this net. The intermediate court censures her. The news in RIBAO slanders her. The newsletter in the journal SIFA attacks here. The news agency's Internal REFERENCE MATERIALS vilifies her...according to what the author has written, the socialist society is cruel, ruthless and dark. No wonder in the end, the author makes it plain with what Yu Shan said, that her story, "A Story of Today" was "to be issued as an indictment." Here we have to ask: Who is she doing to "indict?" Obviously, she means the society in which she is living. This is intolerable.

To sum up, politically and ideologically speaking, this novel has spread the poison of the bourgeois ideology. We should eliminate its harmful influence through criticism.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS PEASANTS WHO GET RICH

HK220422 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 20 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Protect Peasants Who Get Rich Through Hard Work"]

[Text] Recently, there has been some confusion about the demarcation line between getting rich through hard work and illegal economic activities by people in some rural areas. In a few cases, peasants who have gotten rich through hard work have even been bitterly criticized and publicly denounced. This phenomenon is really abnormal. Here is a good example -- a report published today on Zhang Xiangheng, a peasant living in the Sanjing administrative district of Nanzhang County in Hubei Province, was publicly denounced for getting rich by engaging in household diversified economy. Wherever events like this occur, the implementation of the party's policies toward rural areas will be obstructed, ideological confusion will result among peasants, and their initiative in production will be hurt. Therefore, such a case really is worth our attention.

Encouraged by a series of party policies toward rural areas, a number of peasants, who used to be called "outstanding households" in the past, have become rich through hard work in rural areas over the past several years. The name "outstanding households," being quite ambiguous, can easily give rise to some incorrect interpretations. Therefore, in some places, they are called "households getting rich through hard work" or "households getting rich through labor" which sounds relatively clear. These peasants enthusiastically support the line and the policies laid down by the third plenary session. They resolutely carry out various forms of the responsibility system, some having signed contracts for agricultural, animal husbandry and sideline productions with the collective, some promoting household sideline production and specialized production, and the rest being engaged in production activities which are approvable according to the party's policies. Through industrious labor they have achieved marvelous results, increased the wealth of the state and the collective as well as well as their own income, thus lifting themselves out of poverty and becoming rich in a relatively short period. Therefore, they have played an exemplary role and worked as a driving force for the vast number of peasants in developing production.

Why are those peasants who have gotten rich through hard work been criticized in some places? The reason is that "leftist" thinking still influences some people. Being doubtful about the policies toward rural areas which have been implemented since the third plenary session, they have a muddled understanding of the new circumstances and new issues currently emerging in rural areas. So, they always think and act in the old manner at the mere rustle of leaves in the wind. In criticizing Zhang Xiangheng, a peasant who got rich by engaging in household diversified economy, the authorities of the Sanjing administrative district in Nanzhang County called as many as more than 1,000 people to participate in the mass accusation rally. They carried the Chinese pistache tree trunk on which Zhang Xiangheng had planted tremella seedlings to the meeting place, and seemed to be practicing again those excesses such as "clearning out chicken coops," "cutting off the tail," and so on. Fortunately the county CCP committee became aware in good time of their action, and thus immediately criticized and corrected this wrongdoing.

One of the accusations some people bring against those peasants who have gotten rich through hard work is that the latter "solely seek private interests." They say, "we can only encourage becoming well off collectively but not becoming rich individually." Such a point of view which places collective prosperity against individual prosperity is contrary to the spirit of the third plenary session with regard to developing agriculture. The third plenary session suggested that some places where favorable conditions prevail be allowed to speed up development of production and become prosperous first. The session realized that this is not a bad thing but a good thing. Similarly, we should also let some peasant households with favorable conditions become rich first. Truly, to get rich together is our goal. However, it is inevitable that some people will go faster and others slower in getting rich; and this has been exactly the case in rural areas in the past few years. Generally speaking, the livelihood of the vast number of peasants has been improved. But, due to various reasons, the degree of improvement varies. Plenty of facts prove that individual prosperity and collective prosperity can aid each other in moving forward. In planting gastrodias, cultivating tremella and breeding pigs and sheep, Zhang Xiangheng has freely pursued his specialities. He earned a total of 2,360 yuan last year and thus became the "outstanding household" in the whole commune. He taught the technique of planting gastrodia to more than 300 people in his vicinity, and helped those households in difficulty to promote sideline production. His techniques and experiences have been turned into public wealth and the income of quite a few commune members has increased. How can a peasant like Zhang Xiangheng, who shows concern for the collective, is glad to help others and works hard to get rich, be regarded as "practicing speculations and profiteering?" How can a peasant like him be criticized and publicly denounced? Is it not true that the more peasants like him there are, the better off we will be?

Like Zhang Xiangheng, quite a few peasants are making use of surplus household labor power to engage in diversified economy and are trying to get rich through hard work. This is what the party's policies encourage. The CCP Central Committee has repeatedly pointed out that the principle of simultaneously making the collective and the individual rich must be upheld when developing diversified economy in rural areas. This is the correct policy which is based on the actual situation in our country. Recently, it was pointed out again in the "summary of minutes of the national conference on rural work": "At the present stage, many items should mainly be run by peasant households in most areas. The experiences obtained in the recent years show that dispersed material and financial resources and personnel with technical specialities can be fully utilized in promoting household sideline production and developing specialized households. This is really a tremendous economic resource." The document clearly explained that a policy of active assistance must be carried out toward the peasants who are engaged in these legal production activities. Aid and guidance should be provided in the form of funds, techniques, supply and marketing facilities, and so on.

In short, we should respect politically the majority of the peasants who promote production and get rich through hard work while abiding by the party's policies, encourage them spiritually, and assist them in the actual production. We must resolutely protect the fruits of their labor.

Those peasants who are getting rich are not too many but too few in the rural areas throughout our country; the agricultural and sideline products we produce are not plenty but insufficient. We must organize peasants to learn from the techniques and experiences of these advanced elements, open various legal means for getting rich, explore the rich natural resources, and strive for making more peasants rich. Of course, we must be aware as well that there are actually a bunch of peasants who are disregarding the state's policies, refusing to carry out the principle of "paying simultaneous attention to the interests of the state, the collective and the individual," practicing speculation and profiteering, and harming the collective to benefit themselves. We must carry out appropriate criticism against erroneous behavior like this. As for those activities which involve economic crimes, we must, after determining the actual facts, deal with them according to the law.

HONGQI ARTICLE ON ROLE OF INDIVIDUAL TRADESMEN

HK220132 Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 22 May 82 p 4

["Opinion" column article headlined "Trade Apprentices Are Not Subject to Labor Exploitation," which is Dong Yangcheng's article in HONGQI No 10, entitled "Is an Individual Undertaking Practicing Exploitation if It Employs Assistants and Takes on Apprentices?"]

[Text] In today's Chinese economy, a small number of individual tradesmen own some means of production and, under the permission of the state managerial departments of commerce and industry, have one or two assistants or several apprentices. These tradesmen make more money than their assistants and apprentices.

Is this exploitation through hiring labour?

To answer this question, it is necessary to examine the sources and nature of the earnings of these individual tradesmen.

The amount tradesman earns includes, first, the value created by his own labour. An individual tradesman owns a little production means but unlike a capitalist, he is a labourer at the same time. More often than not, he also has higher skills and more managerial competence, playing an important role in the process of production. He does more sophisticated labour than his assistants or apprentices, so it is right that he earn more than they.

Second, the earnings of a tradesman includes the money made through his earlier investment in the business. These earnings are equal to or modestly higher than the bank interest for the same amount of money. Therefore, although it is earnings on investments, it is justified and permitted by the socialist economy.

Third, since some problems still remain in balancing supplies and demands in China's market today, and some prices are not reasonably set, a tradesman can often make over-valued sales and discounted purchases. This extra income is not made by his assistants or apprentices, but made by the labourers in other trades. It is also transferrable to the state through price adjustments and tax collections.

Fourth, individual tradesmen earn some profit from the surplus labor of their assistants or apprentices. But the amount of this is determined by the number and productivity of the assistants or apprentices. The productivity of individual trades is rather low, and one individual tradesman is permitted to have no more than two assistants, or, if he has some special skill, no more than five apprentices. This ensures that the value of the surplus labor of his assistants or apprentices cannot provide the bulk of his income.

One cannot without discrimination regard the individual tradesman who has assistants or apprentices as an exploiter of hired labour.

The nature of exploitation is that the workers have no alternative to selling their labor to the capitalists. The relationship between the capitalists and the workers is characterized by the workers' forced labor and the capitalists' gratuitous ownership of the surplus value created by the workers.

Instruction

But the relationship between the assistants or apprentices and the masters of such individual trades is a coalition based on contract, which sets down the rights, obligations, tenure and income of both parties. Even though the assistants and apprentices are not paid for a part of the value they have created, it can be thought of as payment for the technique they have learned. They are not working to earn sustenance, but rather to make themselves masters, too.

These two kinds of relationships should not be confused.

Small commodities production like these individual trades, needless to say, has a spontaneous tendency to enlarge itself, to involve more manpower and make more profit. But socialist public-ownership and state policies regulate the scope, marketing prices and service charges of individual trades. So, with efficient management and proper guidance, the negative aspects of individual trades can be restrained and the businesses of individual tradesmen can play a positive role.

CADRES' RELATIVES RETURN TO WORK IN COAL MINES

OW241151 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0210 GMT 23 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 23 May (XINHUA) -- XINHUA editor's note: Recently leading comrades of the party Central Committee have commended the rather remarkable improvement of the ideological and political work done by the Ministry of Coal Industry, saying that the key reason for this improvement is that the leading cadres themselves have been in the vanguard in taking action. Many responsible cadres of coal mines have urged their sons and relatives, who had previously transferred to work posts aboveground, to go back to the mines and work as coal extractors or excavators. This has influenced other coal miners who took up aboveground jobs; they have vied with each other in going back to work in the mines.

This very fact is another indication of the vital importance of the cadres exemplary conduct to the rectification of our party style and the success of the ideological and political work among the masses. Example is better than precept, and party style affects the general practice among the people. As a matter of fact, the exemplary role of cadres is the most convincing way in doing ideological and political work. (end of the editor's note)

Report by XINHUA reporter Huang Fengehu: In the collieries located in various parts of the country whose products are distributed under the unified state plan, 886 workers who are sons or relatives of leading cadres at or above the mine or departmental level have thus far returned to the first production line in the mines, accounting for approximately 90 percent of such workers who should be transferred back to underground mining work.

With the cadres' sons and relatives coming back to work in the mines, the workers now feel better than before. There has been an improvement in relations, between cadres and the masses and everyone is working with greater enthusiasm. Those who had transferred from underground mining work to aboveground work posts were deeply moved when they saw the large number of cadres' sons going back to the mines. They said: Now that sons of secretaries and mine directors have taken up work in the mines, what else can we say? Many of them returned to work in the mines on their own initiative. At the same time, it has become a general practice for fathers to urge their sons, and wives to persuade their husbands, to work in the mines as coal extractors or excavators. Up to now, in these collieries a total of 21,000 workers previously transferred to aboveground work have come back to work in the mines, accounting for over 90 percent of those who should do so.

For many years, a big, difficult and longstanding problem confronting collieries whose products are distributed under the unified state plan was that many underground coal miners transferred to work posts above ground. This problem resulted in a reduced labor force in the mines and low work morale among the underground miners, thus causing an adverse effect on coal production.

To solve the problem, the Ministry of Coal Industry first of all put emphasis on the ideological work among leading cadres at various levels with the request that they play an exemplary and leading role. Between last October and March, the Ministry of Coal Industry wrote three open letters to them. The first letter asked the leading cadres concerned to set an example by their own conduct, declare their attitude in the party organizations and send their sons and relatives back to the mines within a certain time limit. Failure to do so, the letter added, would result in disciplinary action. The second letter commended the units which had acted quickly in this regard. It also stressed that, if a leading cadre stubbornly refused to send his son or relative back to the mines, the son or relative would be fired or his name removed from the rolls regardless of the level of this cadre. The third letter criticized by name those units which had refused to carry out the instruction. It asked the coal industry bureaus of various provinces to take up the responsibility to supervise and speed up the work and set a deadline for its completion.

After receiving the three letters, many coal mine leading cadres took prompt action despite the interference from their wives, daughters-in-law and relatives. They overcame inside and outside pressures and determinedly persuaded their sons and relatives to go back to work in the mines.

The Ministry of Coal Industry decided to carry this work through to the end. On 15 May it issued a fourth letter, asking that leading cadres at all levels continue to do well in this work until it is finished. The letter requested that administrative rules be set up for underground mining workers and firm steps be taken to prevent their transfer to work posts above ground so as to maintain a steady work force on the first line of coal extraction and excavation.

INCREASED HOG PRODUCTION NOTED AT CONFERENCE

OW231112 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0207 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Changsha, 21 May (XINHUA) -- Reporters of the Central People's Broadcasting Station and XINHUA learned from a recent conference on south China's animal husbandry work held in Hunan Province's Chengbu Miao Autonomous County that during the first quarter of this year the output of hogs in China gradually picked up again. The number of hogs procured in the first quarter increased by 620,000 head, or 22 percent, over the same period last year.

During the 2 pervious years, because of new situations and problems unexpectedly appearing in the rural areas, and because the policy was not thoroughly implemented, the output of hogs in many localities dropped.

To ensure a sustained and steady growth in hog output, the State Council at the end of last year approved and transmitted a decision of Anhui Province calling for the vigorous promotion of hog production. Many provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions have strengthened their leadership over hog production, adopted a series of effective measures to restore and persist in the original policy encouraging commune members to raise hogs, raised incentives or implemented new measures to encourage the selling of hogs to the state and formulated quotas. Some localities have implemented a contract system for procuring hogs. These measures have raised the commune members' enthusiasm in raising and selling hogs.

NI ZHIFU, OTHERS AWARD PRIZE-WINNING WRITERS

OW231024 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Cinese 1305 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 21 May (XINHUA) -- Prizes were presented to winners of a national short story and one-act modern drama writing contest of workers. They were presented at a meeting held in Beijing on the afternoon of 21 May.

Ni Zhifu, Zhu Muzhi, He Jingzhi, Zhou Weizhi, Zhao Xun, Lu Bozhao, Cao Ming, Gu Dachun, Wang Chonglun, Song Kanfu and other comrades presented cash prizes, certificates and autographed albums amid warm applause to writers of 40 prize-winning short stories and one-act modern dramas.

Zhu Muzhi, He Jingzhi, Zhou Weizhi and Wang Chonglun addressed the meeting. They encouraged the amateur writers to strive to write about the exploits of the working class in establishing a material and spiritual civilization. They also encouraged the writers to depict their communist spirit and fine quality and use outstanding writings to enrich the cultural life of the workers.

He Zhuguang spoke at the meeting on behalf of all the prizewinners. He pledged to work even harder at his workpost and to study harder Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought, literary and art theories and writing skills. He also pledged to portray constantly, precisely and artistically our socialist new people, the great era in which we live and the spirit of being the masters displayed by the working class.

FUJIAN RELEASES FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL

OW241215 Fuzhou Fujian Provincial Service in Mandarin 1120 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] In accordance with a resolution adopted by the 22d Session of the 5th NPC Standing Committee, the judicial department of our province leniently released all former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and special agents below the county and regimental levels held in custody. They were issued a written judgment stipulating their release and granting them political rights. At the time of release, each received clothes, cotton-padded quilts and other daily necessities, as well as 100 yuan as pocket money.

A number of the leniently released personnel, including (Chang Huimin), former adjutant with the rank of major of the fourth district party office under the special party committee of the Kuomintang Sichuan provincial air defense headquarters, expressed gratitude for the efforts made by the CCP and the people's government in educating and redeeming them and praised the wisdom and greatness of the CCP's remodeling policy, which transformed them into new men who are well-disciplined, law-abiding and capable of earning their own living. They said that they would, during the remaining years of their lives, contribute their share to the socialist modernization program, the early return of Taiwan to the motherland and the reunification of the country.

XU JIATUN ADDRESSES NANJING UNIVERSITY CEREMONY

OW211217 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpts] Nanjing University held a rally at the Nanjing Wutaishan stadium this afternoon to warmly celebrate its 80th founding anniversary. The rally was attended by 10,000 people.

Responsible comrades of Jiangsu and Nanjing municipality Xu Jiatun, Hui Yuyu, Kuang Yaming, Hua Chengyi, Ding Guangxun, (Xu Ju) and Wang Zhaoquan attended the rally. Mr (Tian Zhiyong), representative of the Johns Hopkins University of the United States and honorary professor of Nanjing University; Prof (Wang Hao) of the New York State University; Prof (Fan Zhangyun) of the University of Arizona; Dr (Chen Shicai), U.S. jurist; and nearly 20 alumni from overseas were also present. Over 400 alumni from various parts of China and nearly 10,000 faculty members and students of the university also attended the rally.

Du Ping, political commissar of the Nanjing PLA units; Liu Shunyuan, deputy secretary of the Central Discipline Inspection Commission; (Zhou Lin), former secretary of the Nanjing University party committee and presently responsible person of the planning group for the compilation and publication of ancient books under the State Counci; Pan Shu, formerly first president of Nanjing University after liberation and presently director of the Psychology Research Institute of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences; and other comrades were also invited to attend the rally. Comrade (Zhang De), secretary of the Nanjing University party committee, presided over the ceremony.

Comrade Xu Jiatun, first secretary of the provincial party committee, spoke at the rally. He said: [begin recording] Comrades, I am happy today to attend your grand rally to celebrate the 80th anniversary of the founding of your university. On behalf of the Jiangsu Provincial CCP Committee, I wish to extend you the warmest congratulations! [applause] I also wish to express my warm welcome to the alumni from home and abroad and the responsible comrades of the institutes of higher learning in fraternal provinces and municipalities who have come from afar to attend the university anniversary celebrations. [end recording]

(Zhou Lin), former secretary of the Nanjing University party committee, and Kuang Yaming, honorary president of Nanjing University, spoke at the rally. They expressed the hope that teachers and students of the university will inherit and develop the revolutionary traditions, uphold party leadership, persist in taking the socialist road, turn Nanjing University into a new socialist university which is both a center for education and scientific research and make contributions to developing China and promoting socialist material and spiritual civilization.

JIANGXI MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF MAO'S YANAN TALKS

OW210957 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpts] To commemorate the 40th anniversary of Comrade Mao Zedong's "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art," the provincial federation of literary and art circles and the provincial cultural bureau jointly sponsored a discussion meeting yesterday morning to discuss the questions of how to correctly assess and uphold Mao Zedong's thought on literature and art and how to further develop and invigorate the work of literary and art creation during the new historical period.

The discussion meeting was presided over by (Yu Lin), deputy director of the propaganda department of the provincial CCP committee and chairman of the provincial federation of literary and art circles. Attending the meeting were over 120 people, including responsible persons from the provincial federation of literary and art circles and its various associations as well as noted personages from the literary and art front of the province and Nanchang municipality. Xu Qin, standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee and provincial vice governor, addressed the meeting. Also speaking at the meeting were (Li Baokun), director of the provincial cultural bureau; (Wu Jiguo), director of the provincial publications bureau; (Liu Tianlang), vice chairman of the provincial federation of literary and art circles; and five other comrades.

Xu Qin said: Today, Comrade Mao Zedong's "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art" still is an important document guiding our literary and art work. He called on literary and art workers to use this document as an instrument in properly summing up both positive and negative experiences in their work and to uphold the four basic principles. Writers and artists, he said, should be mobilized to go among the masses and to plunge into the vigorous struggle of the four modernizations so that they may create more and better novels, dramas, movies, poems, fine art works, music and dances to serve the people and socialism and to educate the broad masses with the ideologies of communism and patriotism and the spirit of revolutionary heroism.

During discussions, the comrades said that Mao Zedong's thought on literature and art is the crystallization of the collective wisdom of the party and the people and is a major treasure of Marxist literary and art theory. The broad masses of literary and art workers, they urged, should adhere to the orientation directed by Comrade Mao Zedong, go among the people and forge ties with the masses of the new era so as to make their literary and art works truly reflect the ever-improving, rich and colorful social life. In addition, they hoped that literary and art workers would strive to learn about ancient Chinese literature and art and from foreign works so that they would improve their ability of portrayal, create outstanding literary and art works for our great era and contribute to the construction of the socialist motherland.

BRIEFS

JIANGSU MEDIA CONFERENCE -- A Jiangsu provincial conference on radio and television work was held in Nanjing 11-17 May. Comrade Hua Hong spoke at the conference, stressing the role of radio and television in educating and inspiring the people to build a socialist material and spiritual civilization. He called on party and government leaders to pay attention to propaganda work in radio and television broadcasting. The conference earnestly transmitted and studied the relevant directives of the CCP Central Committee. The conference held that comrades on the radio and television front have worked hard and made fresh contributions over the past 2 years. Radio and television stations have generally improved propaganda on adhering to the four basic principles, readjusting the national economic policy and implementing agricultural production responsibility systems. [Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 17 May 82 OW]

MEASURES AGAINST GUANGDONG FLOOD DAMAGE CONTINUE

Meeting on Disaster Relief

HK220222 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 21 May 82

[Summary] Provincial CCP committee First Secretary Ren Zhongyi and Governor Liu Tianfu held a meeting in Qingyuan County seat on 21 May with responsible comrades of the party, government and army in Shaoguan Prefecture and of the Qingyuan County CCP Committee and government to discuss flood relief measures and make arrangements for future work. They called on the people in the disaster areas to brace their spirits, unite as one, overcome difficulties and rebuild their homes.

Qingyuan County CCP Committee Secretary (Liang Shuisong) gave a report. Ren Zhongyi and Liu Tianfu said after hearing the report: This flood in Qingyuan was indeed the worst since liberation. It was almost impossible to do anything about it, in existing conditions. The county CCP committee has made tremendous efforts in the antiflood struggle. The prefectural CCP committee and the provincial departments concerned have also provided effective support. This particularly applies to the PLA commanders and fighters.

Ren Zhongyi and Liu Tianfu agreed with the county CCP committee's arrangements on future disaster relief work. They demanded that the provincial departments concerned include support for the disaster areas in their plans and do a good job of it. Ren Zhongyi also stressed: "It is necessary to strengthen political and ideological work, brace revolutionary spirit and eliminate pessimism. This was a catastrophic disaster. The material losses are serious. However, far from being damaged, our revolutionary spirit should be further strengthened by tempering in the struggle against the disaster. As long as the cadres and masses brace their spirits and strengthen confidence and resolve, we will be able to turn a bad thing into a good one."

Vice Governor Yang Deyuan, leader of the provincial comfort group, has gone to Guangning and Sihui Counties to inspect the disaster and comfort the masses. He arrived in Sihui County from Qingyuan on 20 May. He encouraged the people to brace their spirits, overcome difficulties and rapidly restore production and rebuild their homes.

Work on repairing the washed-out section of the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad between Jiuhengshui and Shengping has now entered the crucial stage. The temporary bridge to span the gap was constructed on 21 May. Efforts are being made to have the line reopened at 1800 on 26 May.

Further Relief Arrangements

HK250647 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Yesterday (24 May) the Guangdong Provincial People's Government made a decision urging all areas to further strengthen leadership over disaster relief. All areas must attach importance to and grasp well relief work in areas where disaster struck recently and in areas where disaster struck last year. At the same time, we must allocate 4.7 million yuan more in order to make further arrangements for the livelihood of people in areas where disaster struck last year. The province's production dropped last year because certain areas in the province had been stricken by natural calamities and many areas had shifted to producing industrial crops. The current grain ration level in some areas is relatively low. Due to the recent floods in parts of Shaoguan and Zhaoqing Prefectures, a certain number of the masses encountered real problems in their daily life. The responsible comrades of the provincial government recently pointed out that the outstanding problem at present is that some areas have not made practical arrangements for the people's livelihood. Therefore, all areas should carry out serious investigations in this aspect and make good arrangements for the people's livelihood and grain supply. It is necessary to check whether the grain quotas and relief funds have been allocated to individual households by means of carrying out investigations. It is necessary to make proper arrangements for the livelihood of the aged and widowed people, dependents of martyrs and armymen, households enjoying the five guarantees and households which encounter difficulties during natural calamities. All areas must report to leading organizations at higher levels the practical problems such as insufficient grain quotas for households discovered in the course of carrying out relief work.

In order to help the disaster-stricken areas resume production and rebuild houses, the provincial people's government allocated 3.8 million yuan for relief funds on 18 May, 1.3 million yuan for water conservancy construction and 1 million tons of chemical fertilizers. In addition to this, the provincial people's government decided yesterday [24 May] to allocate 1.8 million yuan as funds for flood prevention, 7,000 tons of cement and 6,300 cubic meters of timber. Responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee and people's government stressed that currently, whether in making arrangements for people's livelihood or grasping resumption of production, we must do things in order of importance and urgency and use the manpower, financial and material resources where they are needed most. The funds set aside for water conservancy construction will be primarily used on repairing the dikes and water conservancy facilities which should be promptly restored. Other projects can be carried out in batches later on or even in the following year. If funds are insufficient, people can apply for certain loans. Certainly, people in disaster-stricken areas must carry forward the spirit of self-reliance and arduous struggle to promptly promote production and rebuild their homes.

Railroad Section Reopened

HK241515 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] The Boluokeng-Pajiangkou section of the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad which was damaged by a flood was completely crash-repaired ahead of schedule. It reopened to traffic at 1845 yesterday. In this battle of crash-repairing, the leading comrades of almost all departments of the Guangzhou railroad bureau and the Guangzhou railroad subbureau personally went to the forefront to direct work. Under the leadership and concern of the Ministry of Railways and the Guangdong and Hunan Provincial People's Governments, and with the vigorous support of organs at all levels of the party and the government in localities and fraternal enterprises, they mobilized and organized all cadres, staff and workers and their dependents to fight hard day and night. At last, they completed the crash-repairing task ahead of schedule.

Yesterday, the Ministry of Railways and other units sent comfort messages to the Guangzhou railroad bureau on the southern section of the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad being completely repaired and reopening to traffic ahead of schedule. They also sent messages of thanks to the Guangdong Provincial People's Government, the Guangzhou PLA units and the Guangdong Provincial Military District.

After the southern section of the Beijing-Guangzhou railroad reopened to traffic, freight trains were allowed to run first. Tomorrow, some passenger train service will be resumed. Trains which will leave Guangzhou station tomorrow will be: the No 54 Guangzhou-Shanghai special express, the No 304 Guangzhou-Huaihua direct express, the No 550 Guangzhou-Hengyang slow train, the No 16 Guangzhou-Beijing special express, the No 144 Guangzhou-Zhengzhou direct express, and the No 314 Guangzhou-Shaoguan direct express. Today, Guangzhou stations are selling tickets for tomorrow. The service of other trains which are still suspended will be resumed.

HONG KONG PAPER CITES OFFICIAL ON PLANE CRASH

HK220250 Hong Kong STANDARD in English 22 May 82 p 12

[Dispatch from Shenzhen, by Christine Cheung]

[Excerpt] The "black box" flight recorder on the ill-fated plane in the Guilin crash, which can help ascertain the cause of the incident, may have been damaged, a Chinese civil aviation official said yesterday. But he ruled out sabotage as a possible cause of the crash.

The party secretary of Guangzhou civil aviation authority, Du Guoguang, told the STANDARD this after the funeral rites for 42 crash victims in Shenzhen. He said the black box was now in Beijing and efforts were being made to find out if there had been any damage to it.

The causes of the crash would be made public, the official promised, and a report would be submitted to the State Council before the announcement.

Mr Du said a tape recording of conversations between the pilot of the crashed plane and the control tower in Guilin had been studied in Beijing, but the contents did not give any clues to the accident. However, he denied Japanese reports that the crash was due to sabotage. The reports, carried by Japan's MAINICHI SHIMBUN, said that a mainland group calling for the immediate release of the gang of four claimed responsibility for the sabotage. The April 26 tragedy, the most serious in China's aviation history, claimed 112 lives. Among the casualties were 52 Hong Kong residents and 2 Americans.

Mr Du said some debris of the crashed jetliner was still left on the scene, but he declined to say how the authorities would deal with it. Concerning aviation safety measures, he said instructions for extra precautions were given to Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC) regional offices throughout the country immediately after the incident. In Guangzhou, he said, a "safety month" had been launched and the public would be mobilised to help ensure air safety.

SHENZHEN CURBS ILLEGAL CONSTRUCTION WORK

HK250655 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] In order to check the sinister trend of illegal construction of private houses, Shenzhen municipality forcibly demolished last December the houses which had been illegally built by six cadres who refused to repent despite numerous warnings and education. At the same time, four households were fined and three construction teams were either fined or ordered to leave Shenzhen. Hence, this served as a warning to those who disregard law and discipline and who are bent on having their own way. Recently, 2 households have dismantled their illegal structures on their own accord and some 300 households have halted their construction projects and are waiting for further instructions.

HUBEI'S ZHANG CAIQIAN INSPECTS WUHAN PLA FARM

HK220251 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 21 May 82

[Summary] Wuhan PLA units Commander Zhang Caiqian, Deputy Commander (Hou Runtao) and Logistics Department Political Commissar Ma Zhaokun recently visited the fighters and inspected agriculture at the (Chenhu) farm. This farm, founded more than 10 years ago, is a large agriculture and sideline production base of the Wuhan PLA units. Zhang Caiqian listened to reports on conditions at the farm, watched rice sowing by plane and visited various enterprises, including the large pumping station, paper mill, mechanized pig farm anf forestry nursery. Zhang Caiqian urged everyone to learn modern agricultural technology, improve production management and build the farm into a production base with all-round development of agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline production and fisheries.

HUBEI LETTER NOTES DANGERS OF MISLEADING SLOGAN

HK220319 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 21 May 82

[Excerpts] A letter from (Yan Hui) of (Oule) commune in Yicheng County proposes that the slogan "Strike blows at upstarts" should be not put forward indiscriminately.

The letter says: While striking at serious criminal activities in the economic field, the rural areas have also scored initial results in inspecting financial discipline and putting financial affairs in order. However, due to lack of correct understanding of the intentions of the central decision, certain cadres and peasants hold that "we must now strike blows again at upstarts." When the slogan "strike blows at upstarts" is mentioned, people are reminded of the scenes of "cutting off the tail of capitalism" during the 10-year catastrophe, and harbor lingering fear. A few people who have committed economic crimes intend to confuse people's minds in this way and get through in the confusion.

I suggest that the leadership at all levels step up the work of publicizing and explaining the Central Committee's decision and help the cadres and masses to draw clear demarcation lines in the policies. A station commentary on this says: The issue raised by listener (Yan Hui's) letter from rural Yicheng County should arouse attention throughout the rural areas. In dealing blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field, we must certainly not follow again the old road of the Great Cultural Revolution in "cutting off the tail of capitalism" and "striking blows at upstarts." To raise afresh the slogan "strike blows against upstarts" will cause ideological confusion among the masses, and those people who work hard to become rich will suffer oppression and blows, while the real criminals will slink off. The orientation of the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field will thus deviate.

MINISTER LIN HUJIA INSPECTS HUNAN'S LI COUNTY

HK210307 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] According to HUNAN RIBAO, Lin Hujia, minister of the State Council's Ministry of Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fishery, made a special visit to Li County in the afternoon of 17 May. Together with responsible comrades of the provincial agricultural bureau, the Changde commissioner's office and the county CCP committee, he studied the question of how to make a success of building the Dongting Lake area commodity grain base. After hearing a report given by a responsible person of the county CCP committee, Lin Hujia said: Your county [words indistinct] has done well in promoting the responsibility systems. However, grain production here is not as high as in the Taihu Lake area. Your early rice yield is 100 to 200 jin per mu less than theirs. The discrepancy is caused mainly by the manure issue. You must make big efforts in manure provision. This means you should adopt the method of concentrating superior forces for battle, concentrating the peasant technicians at high-yielding points, formulating responsibility systems for agrotechnology and promoting production in low-yielding areas. Thus there will be prospects for improving the yield by 100 jin by 1985. Comrade Lin Hujia also spoke on how to develop animal husbandry and fisheries. He also inspected production conditions in the plain of the Li and Yuan Rivers.

HUNAN PREFECTURE STEPS UP FLOOD REHABILITATION

HK241221 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Two prefectures -- Chengzhou and Lingling -- which were recently struck by torrential rain and mountain torrents have sent approximately 1 million laborers to vigorously restore production and rebuild homes. At present, these two prefectures have removed the seedlings of the majority of crops on or reseeded or cultivated other crops on the fields which were flooded or covered by sand. They have already repaired or are repairing the roads, bridges and water conservation facilities damaged by floods. In the middle of May, there was medium to heavy rainfall in some places. Fourteen counties and municipalities in the two prefectures -- Chenzhou and Lingling -- were hit by mountain torrents. After the natural disaster, leadership organs of the prefectures and counties immediately organized work groups and sent them deep into the stricken areas to carry out relief work. Lingling Prefecture has sent 72 leading cadres at and above the levels of a department or office of the prefecture and its counties and some 2,400 office cadres to areas including Ningyuan, Dao, Lanshan and Jianghua Counties, where the disaster situation is relatively serious, to reassure the public and lead the masses to plunge into antidisaster work. Secretaries of the Chenzhou Prefectural CCP Committee and the administrative commissioner of Chenzhou Prefecture have led 536 cadres to go to the stricken areas to investigate the disaster situation, comfort the victims and organize relief work. In addition, the prefecture and its counties have appropriated 1.1 million yuan as relief funds and supported the stricken areas with some 20 million jin of grain, which was produced by these areas and sold back to them by the state at negotiated prices, and with 600,000 jin of chemical fertilizers and agricultural chemicals. The concern of the party and the government has encouraged the cadres and the masses in the stricken areas to rely on their collective strength, unite, cooperate, restore production and rebuild their homes.

CHI BIQING ATTENDS GUIZHOU SPORTS MEETING

HK230343 Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 22 May 82

[Summary] The first Guizhou minority-nationality traditional sports meeting concluded in Guiyang on 22 May. Responsible comrades of the party, government and army in the province, including Chi Biqing, Wang Chaowen, Miao Chunting, Chen Xinggeng, Wu Shi, Wu Su, Geng Wanqing, Meng Ziming and He Ming, attended the closing ceremony.

ZHANG AIPING, TAN QILONG ATTEND SICHUAN SOIREE

HK240941 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0300 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] According to SICHUAN RIBAO, on 23 May PLA Deputy Chief of Staff Zhang Aiping, Sichuan Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Tan Qilong, Yibin Prefectural CCP Committee First Secretary Feng Zhenwu and other responsible persons attended, together with the literary and art workers and the prefectural and municipal cadres in Yibin, a soiree that was held to mark the 40th anniversary of the publication of Mao's "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art." After watching the performances of the literary and art workers in Yibin Prefecture and Yibin municipality, Zhang Aiping, Tan Qilong and other comrades kindly met the performers and the stagehands.

YIN FATANG ADDRESSES XIZANG ENTRY-POINT STAFF

HK200529 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Addressing a recent gathering of cadres and staff of organs and PLA units stationed at the (Zhanglu) entry point, Xizang Regional CCP Committee First Secretary Yin Fatang said: The comrades working here must establish the concept of the overall situation, strictly adhere to party policy and discipline, unite as one, work hard to run the entry point well and strive to build a stable, prosperous and civilized (Zhanglu).

Reviewing the work of the CCP committee of the entry point since its establishment, Comrade Yin Fatang said: Our border defense is consolidated and the border is stable. Unity in all aspects is basically good. The situation has become even better since the third plenary session, and especially since implementing the central authorities' important instructions on work in Xizang. The current problem is how to follow the party's line, principles and policies, carry forward the achievements, overcome the shortcomings and bring about a great improvement.

(Zhanglu) is a main entry point between Xizang and the outside world. It holds a very important position in the context of consolidating national defense and the border and building up the border. We should proceed from the overall situation and see its role for Xizang and for the entire country. Every comrade must work well and fulfill the arduous and glorious tasks assigned us by the party.

Comrade Yin Fatang said: In the future we must make further great efforts to deal blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field. The regional people's congress standing committee has decided to extend to 1 June the deadline for criminals who have done serious economic sabotage to turn themselves in. If they give themselves up before then, they can be dealt with leniently; otherwise, they will be dealt with by new methods. The struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field must be carried out in greater depth. The focus is on combating serious criminal activities. Leading cadres must be dealt with severely.

Speaking on the question of border controls, Comrade Yin Fatang pointed out: The general principle is to exercise control without stifling things to death and to have liveliness without disorder. We must set up various control systems. A department should take charge of commercial work. Business licenses should be issued and a taxation system established for local border people carrying on trade.

Speaking on the question of the masses' production and living standards, Comrade Yin Fatang said: Production of the two communes at the entry point has risen and the living standard of the masses has shown a big improvement. In the next stage, it is necessary to promote production still more and improve living standards on the basis of expanded production. The entry point should mainly rely on labor and the development of production to improve living standards; it cannot just rely on doing business. It should not become a consumer entry point. The organs and the PLA should take the lead in labor and set a good example to influence the local residents.

In conclusion, Comrade Yin Fatang hoped that everyone would study well, enhance his or her political and ideological level and his or her grasp of policy, promote ideological style, work in concert to make a success of work at the entry point, make contributions to building a united, rich and civilized new Xizang and to promoting the modernization drive throughout the country, and strive to build a stable, prosperous and civilized (Zhanglu) entry point.

YUNAN DISCUSSES POLICY TOWARD INTELLECTUALS

HK141240 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 13 May 82

[Summary] YUNNAN RIBAO says that in accordance with the directives of the CCP Central Committee and provincial CCP committee, the provincial educational, scientific and technological, public health and physical culture departments recently examined their work regarding intellectuals.

"Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the CCP committees and organizations of the provincial scientific, educational and other units have gradually eliminated the influence of the "leftist" ideology, deepened their understandings of the role played by intellectuals in the new historical period, and have done a lot of work to implement the party's policy on intellectuals. In these units, 809 professional and technical cadres who were examined in special cases during the 10 years of disorder have been reexamined, and realistic conclusions have been drawn on their cases; 686 intellectuals who were involved in frameups, false charges and wrong sentences and 153 who were wrongly labeled as rightists ahve been rehabilitated; and 347 others who were involved in other historical problems have been appropriately dealt with. Besides, the personnel records of 2,687 people have been sorted out and corrected." "At the same time, 310 professional and technical cadres have been admitted into the party organizations in various units. Among them are 48 senior professional and technical cadres and 138 middle-ranking professional and technical cadres. Rearrangements have been made in the work of 64 professional and technical cadres who did not apply what they have learned, and 57 senior experts have been provided with assistants. Four hundred ninety-seven professional and technical cadres who firmly follow the socialist raod and have leadership and organizational ability have been promoted to the leading posts at various levels." Moreover, they have also restored the titles of the technical and professional posts, granted titles to 4,850 people, upgraded nearly 3,000, solved the problems of the couples living in different areas and the problems of the old and weak, and improved the living conditions of the professional and technical cadres. Since 1978, the 12 universities in this province have built more than 109,000 square meters of dormitories for staff and teachers, and 1,857 teachers, comprising 32.1 percent of the total number of teachers, have obtained new flats. As a result, great changes have taken place in the spiritual outlook of the intellectuals.

Although they have done a lot of work to implement the party's policy on intellectuals, there are still many problems which need to be solved in the future.

YUNNAN RIBAO Commentary

HK211332 Kunming YUNNAN RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "We Must Seriously Review the Work Concerning Intellectuals"]

[Text] We should fully trust and rely on our intellectuals. This is an important problem in the four modernizations Without the participation of intellectuals, our efforts to build material and spiritual civilization will not be crowned with success.

Since the smashing of the "gang of four," and at the third plenary session in particular, the CCP Central Committee has repeatedly stressed: Just like workers and peasants, intellectuals in our country are a part of the labor force and are an important force on which the party relies. Various localities and units in our province have done a lot to implement the party policy toward intellectuals and achieved certain results in arousing the enthusiasm of the broad masses of intellectuals. However, the progress of our work for intellectuals is uneven and a number of problems have occurred in some localities and units. The suicide of Huang Yuling, a female engineer who worked with a research institute of the provincial meteorological observatory, is a striking example. The department and leading cadres concerned should be held responsible for this accident to a certain extent and draw a bitter lesson from it. From this incident, we have clearly learned: Due to the fact that the "leftist" erroneous influence has not been completely eliminated, certain leaders have not fully realized the status and roles of intellectuals in the new era, and prejudices of this or that kind against intellectuals still exist in their minds. Therefore, they are not able to conscientiously implement the party policy toward intellectuals and bring their role into full play. This problem has seriously existed in a small number of localities and units.

We should realize that among our intellectuals today, some are old intellectuals and some are in special fields for which they were trained during the 1950's and 1960's. Due to our party's education for many years in the past, most of them have succeeded in reforming their world outlook and have withstood the severe test of various political storms and waves and have behaved well or comparatively well. They have been fighting on various fronts for a long time to make contributions to the construction of the motherland. Since the smashing of the "gang of four" these comrades have resolutely supported the party's line and guiding principles and policies adopted after the third plenary session and made contributions to the four modernizations with strong dedication and a sense of responsibility for making China powerful and prosperous. History has proved that the broad masses of intellectuals love the party and socialism. Working together with workers and peasants, they play a great role in revolution and construction. They are indispensable forces which we rely upon in the cause of socialist modernization. We should firmly believe that the broad masses of intellectuals will work together with our party with one heart and one mind and share weal and woe with the people to overcome all diffuculties arising on our road of advance and actively carry out their strenuous mental work for the growth and prosperity of our country and nation. If we fail to fully trust and rely on our intellectuals, who are part of the working class, and create necessary conditions so that they can bring their wisdom and talent into full play; if we fail to properly use them or completely refuse to use them; if we fail to "trust" them and discriminate against them and do not treat them as "our own people," our four modernizations will be adversely affected. With regard to their mistakes or erroneous tendencies, we should give them necessary help, education and criticism. However, we should on no account allow our confidence in the party policy toward intellectuals to be shaken because of this, or even jump to an erroneous conclusion that intellectuals are not "our own people" and that they "should not be trusted."

In accordance with the instructions of the CCP Central Committee, we should review the work concerning intellectuals, conscientiously implement the party policy toward them, thoroughly eliminate the erroneous "leftist" influence, further erase prejudices against them, treat them without political discrimination, give them a free hand in their work and be concerned with their well-being so that they will bring their wisdom and talent into full play. We should encourage leading cadres to make friends with intellectuals, have an intimate understanding of what they think and how they work and live and listen attentively to their opinions.

We should praise them when they have made achievements, give them guidance when they have doubts and misgivings and patiently help them correct their erroneous views. We should adopt active measures and methods of persuasion and avoid adopting oversimplified methods and passive restrictions. We should praise leading cadres who attach importance to and take good care of professional personnel and are good at bringing their role into full play. We should sum up and spread their experience. Any act which deliberately suppresses, attacks and harms professional personnel should be expeditiously stopped and seriously dealt with. At present, most of our backbone personnel in all trades and professions are middle-aged intellectuals. They are shouldering the responsibility of forming a connecting link between the old and the new and carrying forward the revolutionary cause and forging ahead into the future. They are assuming very strenuous tasks. A number of our intellectuals have fairly poor conditions in their work, study and livelihood. We should truly help them solve practical difficulties which can be solved after exerting efforts. Any bureaucratic attitude of ignorance and dilatory work style will not do. Through conscientiously implementing the party policy, we will make intellectuals truly feel the warmth of the party and socialist motherland and have the peace of mind to make contributions to the four modernizations.

YUNNAN HOLDS COOPERATION INVITATION MEETING

HK230336 Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 22 May 82

[Summary] The provincial people's government held an economic and technological cooperation invitation meeting in Kunming from 11 to 16 May. The meeting was held to take advantage of the province's superior features, promote joint undertakings, make full use of the province's existing economic foundation, further exploit Yunnan's rich resources and develop its economy, so as to make greater contributions to the state. Responsible comrades of 11 ministries and commissions and 18 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions attended. Provincial CCP committee First Secretary An Pingsheng and Second Secretary Li Qiming met them and expressed welcome and thanks. Provincial CCP committee Secretary and Governor Liu Minghui made a speech.

"After repeated consultations, 109 agreements on technological cooperation and 6 initial agreements on economic joint undertakings were reached. In addition, 29 initial agreements of intention were reached, 3 of them major ones involving many parties." Representatives of Yunnan and Tianjin Municipality held talks on long-term economic and technological cooperation, and reached initial agreement.

BRIEFS

SICHUAN LOCAL DISEASE CONTROL -- Sichuan Province has done well in preventing and treating local diseases, and the number of patients suffering from diseases such as schistosomiasis, malaria and uncinariasis is now greatly reduced. The provincial CCP committee's leadership group on local diseases recently held a meeting to make arrangements for this year's work. The meeting demanded that all places further strengthen leadership and do well in preventing and treating local diseases. (Yang Xidong), provincial CCP committee deputy secretary and head of the leadership group on local diseases, presided over the meeting. The province now has 11 kinds of local diseases, including schistosomiasis and malaria, which are found in the southern part of the country, and Keshan disease and Kaschin-Beck disease, which are found in the northern part of the country. [Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 11 May 82 HK]

BEIJING WORK CONFERENCE ON ECONOMIC CRIMINALS

OW221129 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1510 GMT 21 May 82

[By XINHUA reporters Qiu Yongsheng and Zhou Hongshu]

[Text] Beijing, 21 May (XINHUA) -- At the Beijing municipal work conference on the inspection of the party's discipline on 20 May, leading comrades of the municipal CCP committee stressed that leading cadres at all levels should further study the "decision of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council concerning the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field," earnestly review the work in the previous stage, advance on the crest of victory, redouble their efforts and adopt effective measures to deepen the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field and carry it through to the end.

At the meeting a leading comrade of the municipal CCP committee said: Beijing municipality has investigated and handled a number of serious economic criminal cases. As a result of the efforts in publicizing the "decision" of the NPC Standing Committee and passing sentence over the typical cases, more than 700 people made a clean breast of their problems in April. Some stubborn criminals received the punishment they deserved and some people who were willing to get out of a rut and turn over a new leaf were reclaimed. The broad masses of the people have vigorously supported this struggle by providing numerous clues related to the economic criminal activities. Having realized the determination of the party and the government, the people are more confident about the success in waging this struggle. The practical activities in the past few months have showed the necessity in waging this struggle.

The leading comrade of the municipal CCP committee said: However, a few leading cadres are not fully aware of the fact that this struggle is imperative, complicated and long-standing. Thus, they tend to feel somewhat content after achieving initial results, saying: "We have relayed the documents and investigated the cases. Now let's take a break." Some comrades do not take the initiative to investigate and handle serious economic criminal activities; instead, they handle the problems only when they surface. Some comrades simply shelve the cases and refuse to take action, so there is no progress at all in their work. The leading comrade of the Beijing Municipal CCP Committee maintained that, based on the information obtained by the Discipline Inspection Department of the municipal CCP committee, the current struggle is far from satisfactory and should not be considered good enough. A great deal of work needs to be done and we should guard against and overcome laxity and slackened vigilance, which are undesirable.

What should be done to deepen this struggle? The leading comrade of the municipal CCP committee proposed the following measures:

-- Leading cadres at all levels should further study well the "decision" of the party Central Committee and the State Council, review the work in the previous stage, make conscientious efforts to find out where they fall short of the requirements, have a profound understanding of the document's guidelines, fully realize the fact that the struggle against serious economic criminal activities is imperative and urgently, continually, vigorously and voluntarily follow the central authorities' principles and policies in guiding this struggle well. This is the key that guarantees the success in this struggle.

-- It is necessary to earnestly investigate and handle important cases with satisfactory results. It is necessary to make plans and proceed in groups and by stages in our continued efforts to thoroughly investigate and close the important cases that have yet to be investigated and handled. It is necessary to hold on to the new clues to the big cases and thoroughly investigate the cases until they are cracked. It is necessary to quickly reinforce the law-enforcing personnel when they seem to be inadequate in handling the cases.

-- It is necessary to proceed from two aspects: One from law enforcement, one from education. The struggle against the serious economic criminal activities is a serious struggle against the corruption of the capitalist ideas. It is not simply ferreting out a few economic criminals. Therefore, it is imperative to carry out among cadres and masses the education on struggling against corruption. Two things need to be done now: 1) Leading cadres should strengthen the education over their children in accordance with the requirements of the circular of the Central Discipline Inspection Commission; 2) It should be made certain that, before October, positive and negative examples are used and party lectures and guidance report meetings sponsored to conduct an education among party members in Beijing regarding upholding communist ideology and combating the corruption of capitalist ideas so as to fundamentally enhance the ability of the large numbers of party members and cadres in combating corruption.

-- Strengthen investigation and study the bounds of the policies in order to guide the advance of the struggle.

TIANJIN PEOPLE'S CONGRESS APPOINTS ACTING MAYOR

OW211726 Beijing XINHUA in English 1635 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Tianjin, May 21 (XINHUA) -- Li Ruihuan [2621 3843 3883], 48, was chosen as acting mayor of Tianjin at the 18th meeting of the Standing Committee of the Ninth Tianjin Municipal People's Congress here today.

The former vice-mayor was a national model worker in 1960. He studied at the Beijing Architectural Engineering Spare-Time Institute for six and a half years and is author of the book "Simple Calculation Methods in Carpentry". The methods were first tried out in 1959 when he took part in building the Great Hall of the People at the head of a shock brigade of carpenters. He also has experience in city construction.

TIANJIN FIRST SECRETARY ON INDIVIDUAL ECONOMY

OW190108 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0206 GMT 18 May 82

[Excerpts] Tianjin, 18 May (XINHUA) -- Comrade Chen Weida, first secretary of the Tainjin Municipal CCP Committee, said: The development of the urban collective and individual economy as a supplement to the system under which all means of production are owned by society as a whole is a part of our policy to activate the economy at home. Like the policy of opening to the outside world, we must firmly and continuously implement the policy of developing the urban collective and individual economy. We must not have doubts about or even change our policy of activating the domestic economy because we are cracking down on economic crimes. Chen Weida made the above remarks in an interview with a XINHUA reporter.

Chen Weida said: The development of the collective and individual economy has brought three obvious benefits to the people in Tianjin Municipality. First, it has activated the market; second, it has provided employment for more than 80,000 young people waiting for jobs; and third, it has increased service outlets and helped the masses solve their difficulties in finding places to eat, make clothes and repair various things. Therefore, from both the viewpoint of economic results and the viewpoint of social benefit, the policy of developing the collective and individual economy in cities and towns is quite correct.

Chen Weida pointed out: Tianjin has made some achievements in developing the collective and individual economy. However, these achievements are far from enough to meet the actual need. We definitely cannot say that the development of the collective and individual economy has exceeded the limit. We must not limit its development.

Chen Weida said: There are still more than 100,000 young people in Tianjin's urban area who are waiting for jobs this year. The problem cannot be solved by the state alone. We should further develop the collective and individual economy to solve the problem.

In conclusion, Chen Weida said: We admit that there are some criminal activities in the collective and individual economy as there are in other sectors of the economy. However, they are not caused by our policy of activating the domestic economy or by the development of the collective and individual economy. They are mainly due to the fact that our political and ideological work and administrative work have not kept up with the new situation of opening to the outside world and activating the domestic economy. Therefore, we must on the one hand resolutely crack down on economic crimes such as smuggling, selling smuggled goods, graft and embezzlement, speculation, fraud and bribery, and on the other hand strengthen our leadership over the urban collective and individual economy. We should carry out education on the legal system and policy for those who help them increase their ability to resist corruption by bourgeois ideology. We should also protect their legitimate rights and interests.

TIANJIN CONGRESS COMMITTEE STUDIES CONSTITUTION

HK171447 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 7 May 82

[Summary] On 6 and 7 May, the 9th Tianjin Municipal People's Congress Standing Committee held its 17th meeting to study and discuss the draft revision of the constitution. The meeting looked into the issue of mobilizing and organizing all people throughout the municipality to seriously discuss the draft revision of the constitution and adopted a resolution.

The resolution holds: "The constitution is the fundamental law of the state and is the code for the 1 billion people throughout the country to observe. Promulgating the draft revision of the constitution and handing it to the people of all nationalities in the whole country for discussion is a major event in the political life of all people throughout the country and is an important way in which the people exercise their democratic rights and take part in the administration of the affairs of the state."

The resolution points out: "In accordance with the resolution of the NPC Standing Committee and with the spirit of the circular of the municipal CCP committee, we must work well and mobilize and organize all people throughout the municipality to discuss the constitution seriously."

The resolution also points out: "In accordance with the explanations given by Peng Zhen, vice chairman of the Constitution Revision Committee, on the draft revision of the PRC Constitution, we must organize publicity and discussion. We must seriously grasp the fundamental spirit and the main contents of the draft revision of the constitution."

The resolution demands: "On the basis of understanding the spirit and essence of every chapter and every article of the draft revision of the constitution, we must seriously conduct discussion. In the course of discussion, we must fully develop democracy so that people of all circles and all nationalities will speak without any inhibitions and air their views. Thus we can pool the wisdom of the masses and revise the draft revision of the constitution even more perfectly."

Municipal People's Congress Standing Committee Chairman Yan Dekai presided over the meeting. Vice Chairman Wang Enhui, Zhou Shutao, Lu Da, Wang Peiren, Yang Jianbai, Fan Quan and Xu Ming attended. Responsible persons of the municipal people's government, the municipal CPPCC committee, the municipal higher people's court, the municipal people's procuratorate, relevant department and the people's congress standing committees of all districts and counties attended as nonvoting delegates.

TIANJIN CARRIES CHEN BING ARTICLE ON WORK METHOD

HK140918 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 4 May 82

[Issue No 9 of ZHIBU SHENGHUO [PARTY BRANCH LIFE], published today [5 May], carries an article by Chen Bing, deputy secretary of the Tianjin Municipal CCP Committee and director of the Propaganda Department, entitled: "It Is Necessary To Handle Well Two Relationships -- Some Experience in the Method of Work"]

[Text] This article deals with two relationships: First, the instructions of the central authorities, that is, the relationship between upper-level instructions and the actual situation of local areas and local units. The article says: We must link the spirit of the instructions of the central authorities with the specific practice of our local areas and local units. Proceeding from the actual situation in our local areas and local units, we must implement the instructions of the central authorities. We must use the ideology of the instructions and the policies of the central authorities to solve the actual existing problems of our local areas and local units. Only by doing so can the instructions of the central authorities be fully implemented in our local areas and local units and can our work be constantly improved and promoted.

Second, the article deals with the relationship between the ideology of leadership organs and the ideology of the cadres and the masses. The article points out: Leadership organs must regularly pay attention to the ideological state of the cadres and the masses of local areas and local units and, after meticulous analysis, solve in a planned and systematic way the important problems which they generally want to solve and which can be solved. The article points out: Some of the work and the tasks of the leadership organs are put forth by the central authorities or upper-level leadership organs and some are put forth by the cadres and the masses. At present any series of important policy decisions of the CCP Central Committee is formulated in accordance with the needs and the interests of the Chinese people at any given point in time. It does not simply fall from the sky nor can it be found in books. In response to these interests and needs of the people the CCP Central Committee has promptly, accurately and scientifically formulated corresponding tasks, principles and policies and put them before the whole party. The article says: When our ideology corresponds with that of the masses, we can successfully, spontaneously and resolutely implement these policy decisions of the central authorities.

BRIEFS

TIANJIN WORKER EDUCATION CONFERENCE -- The Tianjin Municipal People's Government convened a conference on worker education 18-20 May. Responsible persons of the district and county CCP committees, educational departments at various levels, the municipal trade union council, the municipal women's federation, the CYL committee and other relevant departments -- 300 in all -- attended the conference. Liu Gang, secretary of the municipal CCP committee, and Yang Huijie, standing committee member of the municipal CCP committee and chairman of the municipal peasant-worker education committee, attended the conference. It urged leadership at all levels to enhance understanding of the importance of workers' education to achieving the four modernizations. [Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 21 May 82 SK]

JILIN'S QIANG XIAOCHU ON ECONOMIC SITUATION

SK240007 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 23 May 82

[Excerpts] According to our sources, the provincial meeting on offering suggestions to improve industrial economic results concluded on the afternoon of 22 May. At the meeting, Comrade Qiang Xiaochu emphasized: Our industry should rely first of all on policies and second on science. We should include science and technology in our major agenda and develop new techniques to gradually enliven our economy.

The provincial meeting on offering suggestions to improve industrial economic results was a union of the broad masses of scientific and technical workers, economic theorists and professional managers. Experts and scholars from all fields attended the meeting to offer suggestions. Leading cadres at all levels attended the meeting to hear their suggestions.

The provincial CCP committee, the standing committee of the provincial people's congress and the provincial people's government have attached great importance to the meeting. Comrade Qiang Xiaochu, (Zhao Xiu), Yu Lin, Cheng Shengsan and (Li Zhenjiang) attended the meeting and heard the suggestions advanced by the participants.

Comrade Qiang Xiaochu delivered a speech at the meeting. On behalf of the provincial CCP committee, he first thanked the broad masses of scientific and technical workers and economic theorists for concerning themselves with the economic results of our province's industry and offering many good suggestions. He urged economic and managerial departments to pay attention to the suggestions, study their feasibility and actively promote and apply them. He urged efforts to bring into play our province's advantageous conditions in science and technology, persistently carry out the campaign of offering suggestions and make contributions to the industrial development of Jilin Province.

The meeting adopted a proposal on carrying out activities to offer suggestions to improve our province's economic results. (Li Zhenjiang), deputy governor of the province, delivered a summing-up speech at the meeting.

JILIN INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE ADOPTS LETTER

SK200822 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 May 82

["Text" of letter of proposal adopted on 18 May by all participants of provincial industrial conference to the staff and workers on the province's industrial front]

[Text] Staff members and workers on the province's industrial front: The provincial industrial conference has successfully concluded. In response to the militant call put forth by the provincial CCP committee and the provincial people's government for executing enterprise consolidation, improving economic results and promoting the province industrially and to comprehensively fulfill this year's industrial production plans, achieve a balance between revenue and expenditures and catch up with the pace of national industrial development, we, the 1,070 participants of the conference, propose an immediate campaign on the province's industrial front to emulate, learn from, catch up with, help and in turn surpass each other, with emphasis on improving economic results.

1. Strive to improve product quality. The quality of all manufactured goods must be significantly improved this year. The quality of major manufactured goods must be raised to a higher grade and lower the reject rate to the best level on record. Efforts should be made to produce high-quality and famous-brand products, have 190 products designated by the state, ministries and province as good quality, trial produce 100 new products and vigorously develop more good-quality, low-cost products with a ready market.

2. Economize on energy and cut down on consumption. This year we must lower energy consumption in producing each 10,000 yuan of products by 3 percent, lower electricity consumption by 3 percent, lower coal consumption by 4 percent and lower petroleum consumption by 5 percent. Enterprises should strive to achieve the lowest level of raw material consumption on record. Those which have been able to lower raw material consumption to the lowest level on record should strive to catch up with or surpass the advanced level of the same trade both at home and abroad.

3. Make a vigorous effort to end deficits and increase profits. The aggregate profits of enterprises and establishments in the province should increase 10 percent or more this year. Total losses should be reduced by 30 percent. The number of money-losing enterprises should be reduced to less than 30 percent of the total. All money-losing enterprises, if conditions permit, must strive to remove their designation.

4. Strive to reduce costs of production and the amount of idle capital. This year we must lower the production cost of enterprises and establishments in the province by 1.5 percent in terms of comparable items, raise the productivity of workers by 3 percent and reduce by 10 percent idle capital.

5. Oppose waste, plug loopholes and reduce expenditures. Enterprises should devise specific goals for increasing income and economizing on expenditures in line with their actual conditions and have these goals assigned to the workshops, work teams and workers. Staff members and workers should be urged to love their workshops, enhance their sense of being the master of the workshop, suggest more rationalization proposals and pool their efforts to achieve increased production and revenue.

Comrades: The provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's government and people of all nationalities throughout the province place great hope in our industrial front. We must inspire zeal, strive to develop more six-good enterprises and exert ourselves to carry out the tasks in a better, more practical and more fruitful manner.

JILIN COMMENTARY ON PADDY RICE TRANSPLANTATION

SK170501 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Station commentary: "Race Against Time and Concentrate Efforts on Transplanting Paddy Rice Seedlings"]

[Excerpts] The sowing of field crops has just been completed and transplanting of paddy rice seedlings has begun. All localities must seize the opportune moment to transplant rice seedlings in order to reap a bumper harvest this year. In recent years, all localities have paid more attention to paddy rice production and have expanded the acreage of paddy rice field. This year our province has expanded the paddy field acreage to about 4 million mu.

Practice by various localities has proved that we will have a better chance to reap a bumper harvest if we transplant rice seedlings before the end of May. Late transplanting will cause a big reduction in crop output. This problem must arouse our special attention this year.

According to the forecast and analysis released by meteorological departments, there will be more cloudy and rainy days in August and autumn frost will come earlier than usual, adversely affecting the growth of paddy rice. Therefore, we must exert utmost efforts to complete paddy rice transplanting before the end of May so as to lay a solid foundation for reaping a bumper paddy rice harvest.

During the winter-spring period, the eastern part of our province experienced scanty rainfall and snowfall, resulting in a drastic decrease in the capacity of reservoirs, dams and dikes. This has posed a threat to the transplanting of paddy rice seedlings.

Leadership at all levels must not let down their guard but foster the idea of combating disaster to win a bumper harvest. Efforts must be made to try all possible means to dig more ditches to accumulate water and ensure sufficient water for paddy rice transplantation in order to transplant seedings in a timely manner and not to miss the farming season.

NATIONAL CPPCC TEAM INSPECTS DANDONG, LIAONING

SK170513 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] The 16-member national CPPCC inspection team, with Wang Shoudao, vice chairman of the National CPPCC Committee, as its leader and Li Jinde, Cheng Siyuan and Wang Guangmei as its deputy leaders, arrived in Dandong municipality today to begin an inspection tour in our province. Comrade Wei Zhi, vice chairman of the provincial CPPCC committee, and Comrade Sun Yibei, deputy director of the united front work department of the provincial CCP committee and secretary general of the provincial CPPCC committee, made a special trip from Shenyang to Dandong to welcome the national CPPCC inspection team. Leading comrades of the Dandong municipal CCP committee, people's congress standing committee, people'e government and CPPCC committee were also present at the station to welcome the team.

The inspection team is composed of gray-haired old men in their 80's, middle-aged persons in the prime of life, weather-beaten revolutionaries of the older generation, noted scholars and experts, literary and art workers skillful in song and dance and senior editors and schoolmasters of the press and the educational circles.

LIAONING URGES LEADERS' RECTIFICATION CAMPAIGN

SK221348 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] According to Shenyang RIBAO, the Shenyang municipal meeting of responsible party-member cadres at and above county and regimental level held on 20 May decided that in intensifying the struggle against serious economic crime, efforts should be made to launch a successful rectification campaign among leading bodies. The meeting points out: On the basis of the previous stages of rectification, the various departments and county-level leading bodies must continue to solve problems concerning impure ideology, unhealthy party work style, economic corruption and organizational impurity in some units. We should seize the main problems, practice criticism and self-criticism, sum up experiences and lessons and devise measures to correct them. Attention should be paid first to solve problems which the masses complain about most. Self-criticism, if called for, should be offered voluntarily. Where it is necessary to return what one has unlawfully taken or pay compensation for it, this should be done voluntarily. Whatever should be corrected must be corrected. We must, by way of rectification, enhance the party spirit of members of leading bodies, strengthen their ability to resist corrosive influences and enhance their combat capability.

To carry out a successful rectification, the Shenyang Municipal CCP Committee decided to unfold a general investigation of party work style and discipline in June. The contents of the investigation are: First, whether leading bodies have enhanced their understanding of the significance of cracking down on serious unlawful activities in the economic field, and whether they have actually taken action to implement the crackdown and scored noticeable achievements. Second, whether they have investigated such ideological and work style problems as lax and weak state of affairs in the leading bodies, disunity, listlessness, isolation from the masses and a bureaucratic style of work. Some cadres have illegally arranged jobs for their children, relatives and friends, [words indistinct], occupied more houses than they needed, embezzled public funds and property, built private houses on public land, established illicit connections to have their children enrolled at schools, [word indistinct] and purchased goods. Have these and other problems concerning the economy and organization been investigated?

Third, whether they have devised feasible measures to redress the main problems among leading bodies and their members.

Fourth, whether the rectification of leading bodies has forcefully advanced the struggle against economic crime and promoted the development of the two civilizations.

By this general investigation of party work style and discipline, we must concentrate our attention on solving the following four problems this year:

1. Abusing one's position and power to occupy more houses than one needs and appropriating public funds and property to build private houses.

2. The problem of impurity in personnel matters.

3. Illicit change of status from a farming household to nonfarming household and transfer of residence from a rural to an urban area.

4. Purchasing goods through illicit connections.

We must rectify in a well-guided and planned manner a handful of party and government organs which are seriously impure in ideology, politics and organization. The following three kinds of people should be resolutely removed from leading bodies: smash-and-grabbers; those who followed Lin Biao and Jiang Qing and rose to power through rebellion; and those who engage in factionalist ideology, have stubbornly resisted the party's line, principles and policies, and politically seriously damaged the party's guiding principles governing party life and economically violated the law and regulations.

LIAONING RIBAO ON NEED TO STOP ENTERPRISE LOSSES

HK201004 Shenyang LIAONING RIBAO in Chinese 9 May 82 p 2

[Article by Sun Fuli [1327 4395 0448]: "Don't Use Losses Allowed for Policy Reasons To Conceal Losses Caused by Management Defects"]

[Text] In 1981, the amount of grain purchased and sold by our province increased by about one-third, while total losses decreased by almost 50 percent compared to 1976, thereby accumulating capital funds for the state's modernizaton program. However, we should realize that the situation of using the losses permitted for policy reasons in order to conceal the losses caused by management defects basically has not changed for the better, more ways have yet to be opened up for acquiring funds and there is great potential for achieving better economic results.

First, there is great potential for saving transportation and miscellaneous expenses and storage charges. The transportation and miscellaneous expenses on grain and edible oil paid each year by our province accounted for about one-third of the total losses incurred by the grain enterprises. Reducing transportation and miscellaneous expenses had a direct bearing on curbing losses. Last year's transportation and miscellaneous expenses surpassed that in 1980 by 17.29 percent.

Second, labor efficiency has decreased. The volume of work done by grain enterprise workers in 1981 decreased by 1.7 percent as compared with that in 1980. If labor efficiency could be maintained at 1980 level, it would be possible to save more than 10 million yuan. Third, the costs for grain and edible oil processing are high but the ratio of end products to raw materials is low. Production costs in 1981 increased by 1.4 percent compared with that in 1980. Fourth, enterprise management is disorganized and the losses of public money and property are appalling. According to preliminary estimates, the losses resulting from offenses of financial discipline in grain enterprises in the whole province amounted to more than 4 million yuan.

The above conditions show that the grain enterprises in our province have great potential for achieving better economic results. A basic way for grain enterprises to increase their profits is to complement commerce with industry, support shops with factories, support growing of staple crops with growing of nonstaple crops, and complement the purchase of goods at list prices with the purchase of goods at negotiated prices. This is a new path to be followed by grain enterprises in achieving better economic results under the new conditions.

We should strengthen our sense of responsibility for business management and expand the production of the processed food supply. Rice, flour and edible oil are not the end products of grain. In the past, economic results were neglected in dealing with grain supply, and food grains were processed coarsely and sold as semifinished products. As a result, consumers had to pay more for further processing of the products and the enterprises carried out their businesses with fewer results. This harmed the interests of the state and the people. For this reason, grain enterprises should combine their grain and edible oil businesses with the food industry, take the path of "purchasing -- processing -- marketing," gradually discard the practice of producing a single product and adopt means appropriate to actual conditions to expand their businesses to include processed food supplies and food processing. While regulating the supply of fine and coarse grains, enterprises which acquire grain at negotiated prices should tightly grasp food processing and, in particular, supply the peasants with greater quantities of processed foods. Food supply enterprises in cities and towns should run their businesses in such a way that the front portion of a house is used as a shop and the rear portion as a food factory, so that they can supply consumers with various kinds of processed foods and earn money for the state.

Efforts should be made to improve enterprise management, increase production and practice economy. The focal point of grain enterprises is to serve production and the consumers. Guided by the policy of developing economy and ensuring supplies, grain enterprises should focus their work on achieving better economic results and overcome their one-sided view of paying attention only to buying and selling at the expense of profits. Grain and edible oil processing enterprises should vigorously reduce production costs. Grain storage enterprises should strive to expand their capacity, reduce the number of open-air depots, and lower the use of manpower and materials in such work procedures as purchasing, drying grain in the sun and storage. Allocation and transportation departments should organize circulation of commodities according to economic zones, strengthen management and prevent transporting goods back to their places of origin. Urban grain enterprises in the province can save tens of millions of yuan each year by improving their management.

Efforts should be made to uphold the policy and control marketing. Under the conditions mentioned above, a subsidy policy had been carried out in grain and edible oil purchase and marketing. The amount of money used for grain subsidies each year in our province exceeded 10 percent of provincial revenues. A subsidy of 0.1 yuan was paid for each jin of grain sold and 0.8 yuan for each jin of edible oil sold. For this reason, controlling grain sales would greatly lighten the state's financial burden. According to the current policy, the state resells grain to disaster-stricken and poverty-stricken areas, and communes and production teams which grow industrial crops. That is, the state purchases grain at a high price from some rural areas and sells it at a low price to other rural areas. About half of the state-purchased grain from the peasants is resold to the rural areas. This means a great waste in manpower and materials. In the past few years, more and more grain was resold to rural areas at a rate which increased about 10 percent each year. In most cases, the grain sales accorded with the policy and were reasonable. But some cases were unreasonable and even illegal because the grain was resold for unfair profits and some loopholes existed in grain management in some localities.

Grain spending was unreasonably increased and fraudulent applications and claims were made for public grain, which was allocated among individuals. This increased grain spending. While making adequate arrangements for the everyday life of the urban and rural residents, grain departments at all levels should decrease unreasonable grain sales so as to reduce the deficit in the state grain purchase and lighten the state's financial burden.

Efforts should be made to expand businesses and increase the utilization rate of equipment. The operating capacity of grain enterprises, like other enterprises, is determined by material labor and human labor. Compared with 1965 values, the total value of provincial material labor increased almost tenfold in 1981 but the amount of business done in grain and edible oil only doubled. Moreover, grain enterprises recruited new staff and workers every year and the growth of their operating capacities surpassed the increases in the amount of business done. As a result, there was a surplus in operating capacities and a drop in the utilization rate. In this situation, it was impossible to make up deficits and increase profits by merely cutting expenses. Efforts should be made to expand businesses, increase the utilization rate of equipment and devise new means to increase income. While striving to fulfill the plan for grain and edible oil processing, the processing enterprises must extensively carry out the business of processing materials for clients and orient themselves to society by processing raw materials and oil-bearing crops for rural commune members and processing rice, flour and oil-bearing crops for urban residents. Besides carrying out well the work of storing grain and edible oil to prevent them from decay and loss, the storage enterprises should grow farm crops and raise domestic animals and poultry by adopting means appropriate to local conditions and render supplementary services of various forms. According to a rough estimate by the Benxi municipal grain bureau, if these activities are properly carried out, each rural grain depot can earn for the state an additional income of 10,000 yuan. These activities, if carried out throughout the province, will bring an additional income of 5 to 6 million yuan.

BRIEFS

JILIN BUSINESS MEETING -- The Jilin Provincial CCP Committee and the provincial government recently decided to hold a business meeting on export goods with foreign firms in late June. The main tasks of the meeting are to promote sales of export goods produced in the province, to contact foreign customers, to establish and perfect marketing networks in foreign countries, to import advanced foreign technology and to hold business talks on coordination in production. According to the categories of export goods, nine business counters will be set up. Counters to deal with import business and foreign economic coordination will also be set up. [Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 5 May 82 SK]

LIAONING KMT PERSONNEL -- Shenyang municipality in Liaoning Province recently began making job arrangements for former Kuomintang party and government personnel whose ranks were at and below county and regiment levels. The first group to have jobs arranged consists of 193 persons who have been released and who are working at units to reform through education but are not considered formal workers. This work is being done in accordance with the decision of the 22d meeting of the Standing Committee of the Fifth CCP Central Committee. Those who have no political rights will be given political rights. [Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 21 May 82 SK]

NINGXIA RIBAO ON DEVELOPING DIVERSIFIED ECONOMY

HK141454 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 7 May 82 p 1

[Report: "Regional Work Conference on Rural Diversification and Commune and Brigade Enterprises Points Out, It Is Necessary To Regard the Development of Diversification and Commune and Brigade Enterprises as a Strategic Measure for Enriching the Rural Economy"]

[Text] The recently convened regional work conference on rural diversification and commune and brigade enterprises pointed out: It is necessary to regard the development of diversification and commune and brigade enterprises as a strategic measure for enriching the rural economy in our region. The units in all trades and professions should conscientiously support the communes and brigades in developing diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises.

The conference was held at Yinchuan from 21 to 25 April. Comrades Li Xuezhi, Xue Hongfu and Ma Sizhong gave important speeches on how to develop the diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises in the rural areas of our region. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, our region has made considerable progress in developing diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises along with the process of implementing the party's various rural policies. Last year the region drew half of its rural revenue from diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises. But as yet not all people understand the necessity and significance of developing rural diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises. This is why there is still quite a large quantity of resources to be utilized. This is also the reason why some areas have failed to consolidate their leading organs or to conduct unified planning to guide the development of the diversified undertakings. Moreover, they have failed to facilitate the production, purchasing and marketing of the products of these undertakings and enterprises. All the above-mentioned problems are detrimental to the development of the diversified economy and the commune and brigade enterprises. The conference pointed out that our region abounds in natural resources, which provides a bright prospect for and great potential to tap in developing diversified undertakings. We should focus the development of diversified undertakings on utilizing the mountains, grasslands and waters which constitute 85 percent of the total area of the region and which can be used in developing forestry, livestock breeding and fishery. We should also focus on developing mining, and exploiting the resources of wild animals and plants. We should firmly fix in people's minds the view of paying attention to the all-round development of agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline occupations and fishery. We should gradually chart out a new path of integrating agricultural, industrial and commercial undertakings under a unified management. As for the circulation of commodities, we should adopt the measures of opening up more channels and reducing its links. The commerical departments and the purchasing and marketing departments should provide, in a timely manner, information about the market for use by rural people and rural communes and brigades. They should do this intelligence work well in order to facilitate and give guidance to production. The relevant departments in this autonomous region should do a good job of running training schools and courses. The science and technical units at all levels should conscientiously give guidance to rural people in developing diversified undertakings and commune and brigade enterprises. The management of the commune and accounting departments, should continue to pay attention to overhauling and consolidating their enterprises and readjust the orientation of their products on the basis of successfully completing the overhauling and consolidating work. At the same time the commune and brigade enterprises should further perfect their economic responsibility system. In implementing the responsiblity system that assigns land in exchange for fixed levies, they should pay special attention to protecting the property of the commune and brigade enterprises and prevent their property from being dismantled and divided up. All the properties of the enterprises that are to be closed down must be inventoried and a list of the properties should be carefully made and put into safekeeping. These properties should be safely stored and carefully dealt with.

The conference stressed that in order to develop diversified undertakings, we should give full play to the initiative of both the collective and the commune members as individuals. We should continue to run well the collective enterprises and the diversified undertakings of the collective that are producing the products whose quality makes them competitive in the market. As the same time we should vigorously support the commune members in developing household sideline production and energetically encourage them to set up various kinds of professional households and key sideline production households.

NINGXIA RIBAO STRESSES POPULATION CONTROL

HK220320 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 13 May 82 p 3

[Article by Su Donghai [5685 2639 3189]: "Strictly and Effectively Control Ningxia's Population Growth"]

[Text] In view of the rise in our country's population growth, the CCP Central Committee and the State Council recently gave instructions on doing a better job of family-planning work. They emphatically pointed out: Two alternatives are confronting the Chinese people. First, efforts should be made to strictly and effectively control population growth so that the standard of living of the people of the whole country may be raised step by step and national construction may expand year after year. Second, if no efforts are made to exercise strict control and adopt effective measures, and population is allowed to grow by a large extent, then there is no real improvement in the people's living and in development of economic, cultural and defense undertakings. We must make a choice between the two. In Ningxia, population growth decreased from 3.39 percent in 1970 to 2.023 percent in 1980. However, this decrease was slow, and the population growth was much higher than the nationwide population growth of 1.2 percent during the same period. For the reason, all party members and all the masses in Ningxia must clearly understand the importance of this work, strengthen family-planning work and adopt more effective measures to control the population growth in the region.

At present, to contol population growth by implementing the policy that one couple bears only one child involves arduous work. The reasons are first, that the average age of the people in Ningxia is young. According to statistics in 1980, of the 3,737,000 people in Ningxia, only 178,000 were over 61 years old, accounting for 4.77 percent of the region's total population; 1,721,000 were laborers between 18 to 60 years of age, accounting for 46.07 percent of the population; 1,837,000 were under 17, accounting for 49.16 percent of the population. These statistics show that in Ningxia, the average age of the people is young, the proportion of laborers is small, the proportion of consumers is large and, in particular, the proportion of young people under 17 is large. This will result in great hardships in the future in providing childcare, education for teenagers and the arrangement of jobs for laborers. Moreover, because the average age is low, the proportion of people who will give birth to children in the next two decades will increase and, accordingly, the birth rate will increase. Second, the proportion of rural population is large in our region. In the rural areas which are backward economically and culturally, the feudal ideas of regarding men as superior to women and "more sons means greater happiness" prevail and impede population control. The slow agricultural development and the excessively fast rural population growth not only are incompatible with the development of the national economy but also are big obstacles to the arrangement of jobs for rural laborers, the increase of productivity of rural labor and the modernization of agriculture.

In particular, after the agricultural production responsiblity system was adopted, family-planning work in many communes and production teams in our region has been abandoned and many of the former measures are not entirely suitable to the new conditions. As a result, population growth has risen very quickly. According to preliminary statistics, the population growth in 1981 far surpassed that in 1980. Forthis reason, we must shift the focus of family-planning work to the countryside and vigorously and meticulously carry out propaganda, education and ideological work among peasants. Third, those who were born during the 1950's and 1960's, when there was a high birth rate, are now of the marriageable age. Our region has seen a high birth rate twice since the founding of the PRC. The first time was in the period from 1954 to 1958, during which the population increased by more than 300,000 and the birth rate was above 3.5 percent. The second rise occurred in the period from 1963 to 1975, during which our region's population increased by 1,328,000, the average annual increase was 110,000 and the average annual birth rate was about 4 percent. At present, all those born during the period of the first rise are now of the marriageable age, and those born during the 1960's are nearing marriageable age. This will invariably result in another rise in birth rate and bring new difficulties to population control.

According to statistics, there were 99,000 births in the region in 1979, and 41 percent of these were in families with three or more children; in 1980, more than 42,600 couples had only 1 child and only 3,250 of these couples or 7.6 percent of them applied for only-child certificates. This shows that family-planning work in our region is lagging behind and the masses do not consciously carry out family planning. These several special characteristics have determined the protractedness and arduousness of family-planning work in our region. In short, family planning is geared to the urgent need for a planned, proportionate development of the socialist economy and is a deep going revolution to change habits and customs. Each party member, cadre and member of the masses must show concern for a pay close attention to this work, understand its importance and start with himself right now to control the population growth in our region.

NINGXIA RIBAO ON SUPPORTING PRODUCTION TEAMS

HK191340 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 10 May 82 p 3

["Weekly Chat" column by Bai Kai [2672 7030]: "We Must Enthusiastically Help Production Team Cadres Do Their Work Well]

[Text] The discussion on "how to be good production team leaders" launched not long ago has captured the attention of a number of readers in the rural areas. Many basic-level cadres enthusiastically took part in the discussion. Newspapers also reported the deeds of several production team leaders who have done their work well and have enjoyed the love and esteem of the masses. Judging from the reactions of the masses, we know that production team leaders still play an important role and the broad masses of commune members still need production team cadres who can take good care of them. To amplify the responsibility system and develop the collective economy, commune members need the organizational work and guidance provided by production team cadres. Now the problem is: How should leaders of commune and production brigades respect the aspirations of the masses to enthusiastically support and help production team cadres do their work well in light of the different conditions of the production teams.

At present, leading bodies of a number of production teams are indeed in a state of paralysis or semiparalysis. Some production team cadres wrongly thought that since production is now carried out on a household basis, they would have nothing to do in the production teams, and that it was more important for them to shift their responsibility to their individual farm plots. As a result, although they remained production team leaders in name, they did nothing in that capacity. The fact that communes and production brigades relaxed thier leadership was another reason for the paralysis of the leading bodies of production teams. This situation has shown that after the great changes in production meass, cadres of production teams, communes and production brigades are faced with a problem of accomodating themselves to the new conditions and situations in their ideological understanding and work methods. The "summary of minutes of the national meeting on rural work" promulgated by the CCP Central Committee explicitly states that we should do a good job in building the leading bodies of production teams so that production teams will be able to perform economic and political functions. Cadres of communes and production brigades have also realized from their personal experiences in implementing the responsibility system that leading bodies of production teams should not be abrogated. Instead they should be strengthened. Cadres of production teams can develop their talents to the full rather than having nothing to do. Therefore, realizing the role of production team cadres and effectively establishing the leading bodies of production teams one after another is a matter of primary importance which communes and production brigades should grasp.

After the improvement of the leading bodies of production teams, communes and production brigades must remember that they should also understand and inspect the work of production team cadres and expeditiously help them solve new probelms in their work. For example, some production team cadres are accustomed to giving orders and demanding uniformity in everything and are not good at doing careful work for each individual household. Some of them lack experience in handling the relations between production based on households and unified management and know nothing about the central task for improving the responsibility system. Although some production team cadres are supported by most commune members, under the influence of the leftist line,they offended some commune members when they were doing their work. The knots should be united by cadres at the higher levels. Some production team cadres encounter enormous difficulties in thier livelihoods and are affected by trouble at home when they are doing their work. At present, those communes which adopt a work method of assigning their cadres to help certain production teams should help production team cadres solve the practical problems mentioned above and regard this as their number one task. Only so by doing a good job in establishing leading bodies of production teams can production team cadres inspire themselves spiritually to grasp their work well, unite as one and fulfill their tasks of implementing the party's guiding principles, policies and various tasks one after another in their production teams and peasant households.

Production team cadres are very aware of the practical conditions. When cadres of commune and production brigades are helping them to do their work well, they may learn from each other's strong points to offset the weaknesses and learn many new things. If each and every commune and production brigade has a number of powerful leading bodies of production teams as its foundation, there will be high hopes for success in effectively doing the work of the whole commune and production brigade.

SHAANXI RIBAO ARTICLE ON MOBILIZING MASSES

HK181306 Xian SHAANXI RIBAO in Chinese 7 May 82 p 3

[Article by Song Zhengmin [1345 2973 3046] and Shi Xuewan [0670 1331 2429]: "Do Not Organize Mass Movements; Follow the Mass Line"]

[Text] In the course of dealing blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field, the central authorities explictly declared that no mass movements should be carried out, nor should a form of putting everyone to the test be taken, but the line of fully mobilizing the masses must be followed. This is a profound and correct summing up of experiences of our past struggles.

Marxists have invariably paid high tribute to mass movements and their positive attitude and maintained that it is impossible to overthrow the old world and build a new one without revolutionary movements involving millions of people. In the protracted revolutionary struggles, our party, by successfully launching and leading numerous workers' movements, peasants' movements, students' movements and various other mass movements, finally won the great victory of the Chinese revolution. Massive mobilization and organization of the people no doubt did play an important, historical part in the people's revolutionary struggles led by our party. Nevertheless, any forms or methods of struggle for ironing out social contradictions must be decided by the status of social classes and the historical tasks of struggle. These forms and methods must be appropriate to certain given social and historical conditions. Changes in the social class relationship and the tasks of revolution, of which some forms or methods were considered useful and effective, will inevitably become inappropriate and unsound and will be substituted by new and proper forms or methods. At present, the exploiting class has been eliminated. The main contradictions in society are no longer class contradictions, but rather the contradictions of developing socially productive forces and ceaselessly striving to meet the economic and cultural needs of the people. Therefore, the major tasks awaiting our party and the masses of people are not to wage class struggle, but to build up socialist material and spiritual civilization. Under the circumstances, it can be said that the mass movement as a form of historic movement has ended its historical mission for the most part. Owing to the existence of ideological influences of the exploiting class and the infiltration of international capitalism, class struggle undoubtedly will find expression among the people and some problems of universal law and accepted practices are bound to emerge in the party and society. However, these are different from class struggle itself. It does not represent a direct and antagonistic struggle between one class and the other and it is still a question of internal contradiction among the people. Therefore, we must continuously regulate various kinds of contradictions among the people by means of correct policies and methods. This has become a key subject in our political life.

At present, serious criminal activities in the economic field are important examples of class struggle under new historical conditions. But this type of class struggle differs greatly from the one we usually refer to. As a matter of fact, it is only a remnant class struggle which exists to a certain extent and degree. If we are clear about the nature of this problem and we handle it with correct policies and in a proper way, we believe that the problem can be resolved by exploiting the state power of the people's democratic dictatorship and seeking certain legal procedures and judicial process, and not by launching a large-scale mass movement. In the current struggle against economic crimes, it is not necessary to launch a mass movement. But this does not mean that it is not necessary to rely on the masses and follow the mass line. The mass line is the fundamental line for our party organization work and general work and is our magic weapon for defeating the enemy and accomplishing all tasks. In the economic field, some lawbreakers are deceptive and usually commit crimes under cover. Sometimes they work together to shield each other and cause distractions in an attempt to get away with committing crimes. Nevertheless, these criminals always commit crimes in a certain place or scope. The leading organs sometimes may be puzzled and are not aware that a crime was committed, but the masses of people are sharp-sighted enough to discern the minute details of their crimes. Therefore, in the course of dealing blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field, if we still adopt the method as we did before, such as the so-called "mass exposure and reporting of offenses and mass criticism and repudiation," we will, in fact, have everything to lose and nothing to gain. By so doing, it often makes everyone oversuspicious and arouses imaginary fears, confusion and disorder. At the same time, this gives the bad elements an opportunity to take revenge, falsely incriminate and frame others and spread rumors to malign others. Consequently, the real criminals can fish in troubled waters and then steal away. In the past, we were apt to launch mass movements at every turn for solving problems in the ideological, cultural, political and economic fields. This is the very reason why some of our comrades now have a misunderstanding of the mass line. It seems to them that following the mass line is launching the mass movement; otherwise, problems cannot be solved. This is a complete misunderstanding.

The demarcation line between the mass line and the mass movement is in fact very clear. The two subjects are completely different. In ironing out social contradictions, deciding whether to launch mass movements or not is a matter of deciding which method or form should be adopted. However, following or not following the mass line is a matter of deciding how to handle the relation between the party and the masses and how to exercise the party's leadership over the masses. There is no necessary causality between the two. Actually, the mass movement is unlikely to be understood as the mass line. For instance, the so-called "taking root and establishing ties among the masses" which was advocated in the "four cleanups movement," as well as the "great democracy" in the Cultural Revolution, were all incompatible with the mass line of our party. All this not only damaged our party's leadership, but also went against the will of the broad masses of people. A bad consequence inevitably arose from it. This is why people like to mock this type of mass movement which was usually launched under wrong guidance as a movement for manipulating the masses.

We clearly must be aware that over the past few years the masses of people have made comments and expressed deep concern over our party work style and the social mood. In particular, they cannot tolerate various criminal activities in the economic field. It is quite natural that the people say we now see hope for our country and nation from the determination and policies made by the central authorities on dealing blows at criminal economic activities. Besides, the party members and people have filled themselves with great encouragement. This is a major trend which cannot be neglected. But we must say that the party work style and the social mood have not yet improved essentially. Thus a number of people still have misgivings and something on their mind. For instance, they are uncertain whether the problem can be thoroughly solved and whether some criminals have "bigwigs" to protect them. If they do, solving the problem might invite trouble or revenge. In addition, the complicacy of the struggle also makes some comrades feel diffident, sluggish and passive in their work. Under these circumstances, it is more necessary to bring into full play the powerful role of the mass line by integrating our party leaders with the masses and combining general calls with specific guidance. It is also necessary to do more thoroughgoing and painstaking work. On the one hand, we must publicize with great fanfare the details of the party policies in order to arm the masses with them. On the other hand, we must know well how to use some typical criminal cases to heighten vigilance of the masses over the gravity and harmfulness of the criminal activities in the economic field and to enhance their consciousness in combating corrupt practices and crimes. It is more important that we should adopt some concrete measures for making investigations, protecting activists and disintegrating and demoralizing these criminals so that they will give themselves up and confess their crimes in order to be treated with leniency. Carrying out the mass line is an actual process of strengthening leadership, mobilizing the masses in a well-planned and organized way and implementing policies, and is also a process of educating the masses and pulling all forces together. In this struggle we must be vigorous and resolute, not indecisive; any passiveness must be overcome.

SHAANXI RIBAO DISCUSSES EMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

HK170913 Xian SHAANXI RIBAO in Chinese 7 May 82 p 3

["Study Questions and Answers" column: "Are Awaiting Employment and Unemployment the Same Thing?"]

[Text] Theoretically speaking, under the socialist system, the means of production are under the ownership of the whole people. The people are the masters of the means of production and every laborer has the right to use the means of production in engaging in production. Socialist society, like every other society, must go through a process of development. Socialism in our country is still at a preliminary stage of development. The very low level of production combined with excessive population growth, serious economic damage caused by 10 years of internal chaos and mistakes in our own work have meant that there are a number of people who are awaiting work. There is a fundamental difference, however, between awaiting work under a socialist system and unemployment under a capitalist system. During the course of capitalist development in western nations, large groups of peasants flowed into the cities to escape rural bankruptcy and formed a large army of unemployed workers. The anarchic state of capitalist production also leads to periodic crises of overproduction, and many enterprises are forced to close down, leaving large numbers of workers unemployed. Furthermore, in the hope of increasing their profits, the bourgeoisie adopts new production techniques and equipment, leaving even more workers unemployed. The phenomenon of awaiting work which has occurred in our country, however, is due chiefly to the imbalance between population growth and the growth of the national economy. The natural rate of population gorwth far exceeds the speed of economic development. During the past 30 years, our national economy has been seriously damaged on two separate occasions. In 1958 the great leap forward led to a decline in both industrial and agricultural production; the Cultural Revolution then brought the national economy to the brink of collapse. In addition to this, the leftist errors in our guiding policy led to an undue emphasis on reforming the relations of production in accordance with the principle of "large in size and collective in nature". This severely limited the role of smaller collective units and completely eliminated the individual economy. The irrational nature of the economic structure led to a serious imbalance between light and heavy industries and stunted the growth of the commercial and service sectors of the economy. Problems in our labor policy and the system of labor management have also had a great impact on employment. For example, during the Cultural Revolution a large number of educated youth were sent down to the countryside while large numbers of workers from rural areas were absorbed into towns and cities. The return to the cities of people sent to the countryside has increased the pressure on employment opportunities. These various reasons, however, involve problems of policy and work rather than any basic problem with the system. For these reasons, awaiting employment in our country and unemployment abroad are two very different matters.

In the long-term, the solution of the problem of employment rests in increasing the rate of economic growth, At present, however, we are carrying out a policy of readjustment of the national economy and the speed of economic development is not rapid. The annual growth rate stands around 4 or possibly 5 percent. Such conditions are not conducive to a quick solution of the employment problem. This period of readjustment, however, also has some favorable factors and helps to resolve problems such as the irrational structure of enterprises, the disproportionately large role of heavy industry in the national economy, the disproportionately small role of light industry and the even smaller role of commercial and service enterprises. Since both the structure and level of employment are determined by the structure of enterprises, the readjustment of the structure of these enterprises should lead to a corresponding readjustment of the structure of employment. By increasing the proportion of light and textile industries in the economy, and by greatly developing labor intensive enterprises and commercial and service enterprises, it should be possible to raise the level of employment. While such enterprises need little investment, consume small quantities of raw materials and energy resources, they do absorb a large number of workers. In heavy industry, the employment of a single able-bodied person requires an investment of 12,000 yuan; in light industry, however, an investment of only 6,000 yuan is needed; and in commercial and service enterprises, run by labor service companies, the investment needed can be less than 1,000 yuan.

For these reasons it is possible, even during a period of economic readjustment, to raise the level of employment. We could, for example, increase the number of commercial sales outlets. In the past, there existed 12 such sales outlets-- employing around 50 workers and staff -- for every 1000 people. If we were to restore the number of sales outlets to this previous level by 1985, this would mean increasing the number of outlets from 550,000 to 2.2 million and the number of staff and workers from 4.74 million to 7.5 million. This alone would solve the problem of employment for a good number of people. A steady improvement in the rate of economic growth will lead to a steady improvement of the overall situation and will help solve the question of employment.

BRIEFS

NINGXIA TV BROADCASTING -- Yinchuan, 24 May (XINHUA) -- TV broadcasting has developed rapidly in Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region. a 10-story TV broadcasting center has been basically completed in Yinchuan. New equipment is being installed. So far, there are 5 big or medium-sized and 20 small TV relay stations in Ningxia. The sales of TV sets in the autonomous region in the 3 years between 1979 to 1982 increased 9 times over the total sales in the 8 years before 1978. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0104 GMT 24 May 82 OW]

QINGHAI WHEAT CROPS -- Xining, 21 May (XINHUA) -- Qinghai Province is actively promoting the use of improved varieties of wheat and high-yield farming technology in wheat production. This year, the province planted 190,000 mu of improved varieties of spring wehat, which accounts for 10 percent of Qinghai's total wheat area. Spring wheat is Qinghai's main grain crop. About half the province's grain crops area is devoted to wheat. In the early 1950s, per unit yield of wheat was only a little more than 100 jin. It has now been raised to 370 jin. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0154 GMT 21 May 82 OW]

QINGHAI FOREIGN TRADE -- Xining, 22 May (XINHUA) -- Foreign trade departments in Qinghai Province have been making full use of the rich local resources to develop and increase exports. The province's export volume has been rising at an annual rate of 19.9 percent since 1979. Qinghai, with its vast area and rich natural resources, has great potential for developing foreign trade. It has 500 million mu of grassland, 20 million livestock and 14 million wild animals. In addition, mineral deposits, such as asbestos, silica and potassium chloride, top the rest of the country. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0134 GMT 22 May 82 OW]

MEDIA COMMENTS ON U.S.-TAIWAN RELATIONS

LIEN HO PAO Editorial

OW241255 Taipei LIEN HO PAO in Chinese 18 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Essential Requirement for Strengthening the 'Both To Gain Staying Together' Relationship Between China and America"]

[Text] President Chiang Ching-kuo had a meeting with responsible government, ruling party and military personnel at the presidential office on 15 May. After listening to relevant reports, he gave a three-point instruction. The third point stressed that "it is necessary to further strengthen the longstanding 'both to gain staying together' relationship between China and the United States." This instruction is very important. To be sure, because of the effects of President Reagan's "three letters," Sino-American relations now face a critical moment. But, whatever the developments and shocks, it is absolutely necessary to act positively to strengthen the "both to gain staying together" relationship between the two countries. In recent years the CCP and its fellow travelers have tried in every possible way to sow discord, alienate and undermine relations between China and America. We must not become emotional in reacting to U.S. appeasement of the CCP, but must act with calm determination to strengthen the "both to gain staying together" relationship between the two countries, for this is the only way to effectively crush the CCP's united front scheme and maintain and consolidate Sino-American relations.

However, the "both to gain staying together" relationship between China and America also has an essential requirement, which is to safeguard the basis for "staying together" and not allow this basis to be undermined or damaged by any tricks of the CCP.

This basis is the Taiwan Relations Act. The Taiwan Relations Act is now the only legal basis for relations between China and America. Although the relations are unofficial, they are the basis for future elevation of Sino-American relations. The meaning of this is two-fold: If Sino-American relations based on the Taiwan Relations Act should retrogress, China and America will lose the very basis on which their "staying together" depends. On the other hand, for future improvement of Sino-American relations, the Taiwan Relations Act will serve as a springboard.

Although the Taiwan Relations Act now actually maintains the relations between China and America, and it still effectively resists erosion by the CCP's united front offensive, there is no denying that it is now in a "hibernating" or "frozen" state. The number of "offices" our country can set up in the United States' as provided for by the act has in fact become an unsettled issue. In particular, provisions concerning military sales to us have now become sacrificial offerings in U.S. negotiations with the CCP, as President Reagan's "three letters" have unnecessarily tied them to the CCP's peace and united front offensive.

It is even more important to point out that now the CCP is asking the United States to abrogate or revise the Taiwan Relations Act in the grounds that the act is in conflict with the so-called "communique on establishment of diplomatic relations" and that international treaty obligations are of higher importance then provisions of domestic laws. This, perhaps, is no cause for anxiety at present. But if the Taiwan Relations Act is allowed to be so vunerable to CCP attacks, the consequences from prolonged erosion are very worrisome.

Therefore, to strengthen the "both to gain staying together" relationship between China and America, the most fundamental and important work at present is to safeguard and consolidate the Taiwan Relations Act, and the most positively significant way to achieve this end is to fight for military sales to our country.

We must not wait for the Reagan administration to carry out the provisions of the Taiwan Relations Act on military sales on its own initiative, still less allow the question of military sales to become bargaining chips in U.S. negotiations with the CCP.

Now the United States has almost promised the CCP that military sales will be suspended during negotiations, and the CCP's scheme is to force the United States to set a time limit on military sales to us. Both developments violate and undermine the Taiwan Relations Act. Therefore, U.S. fulfillment of the provisions on military sales to us is necessary to safeguard and consolidate the Taiwan Relations Act, and the essential requirement for strengthening the "both to gain staying together" relationship between the two countries.

To strengthen the "both to gain staying together" relationship between China and America, we cannot take a passive, unquestioning attitude and rely on the United States to voluntarily show its "good will." In other words, this "together" relationship should be fought for, on the positive side, and negotiated on the negative side. Now that something to our disadvantage has occurred in President Reagan's "three letters," we must start fighting and negotiating with the United States on the basis of the provisions of the Taiwan Relations Act and the substantive conditions of Sino-American relations on the one hand, striving to make Americans in and out of government understand that it is in the interests of both China and America to stay together so that they will make concerted efforts to strengthen this relationship and deal blows at the CCP's united front scheme, and on the other hand, speaking forcefully through all possible channels to make representations to the United States to put an end to the current tendency toward appeasement and compromise in dealing with the CCP.

We must point out that as Sino-American relations are based on the interests of both, it follows that we certainly will not cause any damage to the present state of Sino-American relations by making representations according to reason and law. International diplomacy, after all, is the maintenance of balanced gives and takes in the course of constant negotiations. In making representations to the U.S. Government, our purpose is to urge the United States through constant negotiations to see clearly that it is in the interests of both sides to stay together. We must, in particular, defend the Republic of China's sovereignty over both Taiwan and the mainland in these negotiations. In the Taiwan Relations Act, the relations between the United States and the Republic of China, though not formal or official, are substantive. The act does not interfere in the issue of sovereignty over Taiwan, as it merely affirms the recognition by the Chinese people on both sides of the Taiwan Strait that Taiwan is a part of China. Yet unfortunately, President Reagan's "three letters" recognized the CCP alone as "China," and this is a violation of the Taiwan Relations Act. We must make strong representations to correct this mistake of the U.S. Government.

In short, further strengthening the "both to gain staying together" relationship between China and America is a very important task. But to achieve this important goal, we must fight and negotiate, safeguard and consolidate the Taiwan Relations Act, and, on this basis, strengthen and promote relations between the two countries.

Radio Commentary

OW250545 Taipei International Service in English 0100 GMT 25 May 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] The Chinese Communists have spoken of a crisis in relations with the United States. Is there also an approaching crisis in relations between the Republic of China and the United States? Friends of Chinese freedom and democracy hope not.

There seems, in fact, no reason for a crisis if the United States lives up to the Taiwan Relations Act passed by the Congress and signed by President Jimmy Carter. This legislative act provides that the United States would supply defensive weapons to the Republic of China and take action to prevent communist aggression against the people of Taiwan. No time limit is set on these commitments, nor does the act restrict defensive weapons to parts for those that already exist.

The position of the Republic of China has been clearly set forth in five points by Foreign Minister Chu Fu-sung. The foreign minister said: First, the United States should carry out all arms schedules and commitments; second, the United States has no authority to alter the Republic of China's status or sovereignty; third, the United States should immediately brief the Republic of China on its position and Vice President Bush's trip to Peking [as heard]; fourth, the United States should adhere to its friendship with the Republic of China and not make major concessions to the Chinese Communists' and fifth, the United States should not support Peking's malicious reunification and peace overtures to the Republic of China.

Another aspect of the possible crisis was a statement of James Sung, director general of the Government Information Office, that U.S. policy is jeopardizing the future of the 18 million people of Taiwan. Dr Sung was speaking in Chicago. He said the United States had made a major concession to the Chinese Communists in agreeing to confer with Peking about arms sales for the defense of the Republic of China. The Chinese Communists were made a party to negotiations about weapons promised to the Republic of China under the Taiwan Relations Act. Taipei was not consulted, despite the commitment of the Taiwan Relations Act.

What did the United States get out of it? As Sung put it, nothing more than a little of anti-Soviet rhetoric. Recalling that the United States expressed some favorable support for last year's Red Chinese reunification proposal with Taiwan, Sung said that if the United States had agreed that Red China could do as it wished about Taiwan, that would betray the Republic of China and destroy the principle for which American have always stood.

Returning from Peking, Vice President Bush said the main stumbling block between the United States and Red China was the proposal to sell military parts to the Republic of China. Mr. Bush may have been misquoted, but this is not the point at all. The stumbling block is the Taiwan Relations Act, which requires the United States to well defensive weapons to the Republic of China. Weapons require parts, of course, and their supply is implied in the act. The parts without weapons are useless. So how can the Republic of China's right to defend its freedom and democracy, which the United States has pledged to support, be watered down or eliminated in Taiwan disarmament talks with the Chinese Communists?

The vice president admitted the U.S. obligation, but then said it would be resolved. The administration, he asserted, is prepared to uphold the law, but also prepares to negotiate and discuss and try to find a way around the problem.

How do you get around the law except by breaking it? There has been speculation that the United States would provide no more important new weapons and gradually reduce the number of spare parts over several years. After that, there will be no new weapons and no parts for old ones either.

What then would happen to the Taiwan Relations Act? It would not be repealed; Congress would not stand for that. But it would gradually be allowed to become inoperative. So it was that Jimmy Carter got rid of relations with the Republic of China and embraced the Chinese Communists; he did not say anything to anyone. He just proceeded on his own. With no weapons, how could the Republic of China be expected to defend itself against the Chinese Communists? Vice President Bush has not said.

The Republic of China is waiting for Ronald Reagan, long a good friend, to make his position clear. If there is to be further division of the Republic of China by the United States, there must be a crisis and a showdown. The Republic of China has a right and obligation to defend and preserve itself.

MING PAO ON DANGER OF 'PEACEFUL EVOLUTION'

HK250607 Hong Kong MING PAO in Chinese 25 May 82 p 3

[Special dispatch from Beijing: "CCP Central Committee Worries About Peaceful Evolution"]

[Text] After the promulgation of the "Decision on Severely Punishing Criminals Doing Serious Economic Sabotage," a deadline for reprieve was set. Before 1 May, all those people who surrendered themselves, returned misappropriated funds and reported others' crimes were to be treated with leniency and were not to be held criminally responsible. The offer was tempting. Many gave themselves up. But all those serious economic crimes cover a wide scope and involve many people. "Despite all the ballyhoo, no one has responded to the call." The anticorruption struggle conducted with great fanfare seemed to have been ineffective. Now there has been a change in the approach. The scope of attack has been narrowed. The anticorruption struggle is first being launched within the party. Those party-member cadres and those assuming liaison duties in particular must study documents, raise their awareness and conduct a self-examination. The situation gives every indication of being one in which "everyone must pass a test." This is a rectification campaign among party members.

The reporter learned that in document No 17 issued last month, the CCP Central Committee stressed the danger of "peaceful evolution." Under new historical conditions, an anti-corruption struggle must be waged. Every party-member cadre was called upon to study document No 17 of the CCP Central Committee and relevant works by Lenin and Mao Zedong. On the basis of heightened awareness, they must conduct a self-review. It was learned that relevant party member-cadres in Hong Kong and Macao would be recalled in separate groups to the country to attend study sessions. As things now stand, some party members, cadres and even high-ranking leadership cadres who assume great responsibilities have become involved in smuggling, bribery, deception, theft of state and collective property and other serious criminal activities. In the political and ideological areas, there is the bourgeois trend toward liberalization. The CCP Central Committee holds that if left alone and allowed to develop, such a phenomenon would have inconceivable consequences. Therefore, the danger of "peaceful evolution" can never be taken lightly or laughed off. But under existing conditions, the danger of this "peaceful revolution" is only a possibility. If every party member remains sober-minded and faces up to such a possibility, consciously and energetically launching an anticorruption struggle and maintaining the spirit of "remaining uncorrupted by wealth, uncompromised in the grip of poverty and unyielding in the face of pressure," the "sugar-coated bullet" can find no target of attack and the possibility of "peaceful evolution" cannot be translated into reality.

It was learned that document No 17 of the CCP Central Committee stressed that the line and general and specific policies introduced since the 3rd Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, including the open-door policy and the domestic policy of enlivening the economy, must still be firmly and correctly implemented and can never be changed in any way.

GUANGZHOU MAYOR CITED ON PRICE PROBLEM

HK240951 Hong Kong TA KUNG PAO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 3

[Feature by Tian Ming [3944 2494]: "Liang Lingguang Talks on Guangzhou Price Problem"]

[Text] The prices are going up in Guangzhou. This is a problem that has attracted people's attention in recent years. It is said that quite a number of northern cadres are reluctant to go on business trips to Guangzhou, for after 1 or 2 days' stay here, they usually find the expenses are far higher than expected. Even visitors from Hong Kong have said that the prices in Guangzhou "are almost the same as in Hong Kong."

Last Friday, Mayor Liang Lingguang delivered a report "On Guangzhou's Economic Situation and Problems" to cadres at the municipal level. When talking about the existing problems and difficulties, he first mentioned the price problem. He admitted that the prices have been going up in recent years, and Guangzhou, compared with other provinces and cities throughout the country, is the most seriously affected. According to statistics, over the last 3 years or so, Guangzhou's retail prices have risen by 8.3 percent, negotiated prices have risen by 78 percent and the prices in country fairs (free markets) have risen by 102.3 percent. If we compare the rates of increase in these three aspects with the average rate of increase in retail prices for the entire country, which was made public by the State Statistics Bureau at the end of last month, we can easily see that Guangzhou's price rise is really surprising. There are chiefly four reasons for the extraordinary rise in Guangzhou's prices.

First, the currency in circulation is excessive and the social purchasing power exceeds the supply of commodities. In the past, due to the long-standing "leftist" errors, the capital construction front was overextended and there was serious disproportion between accumulation and consumption, which resulted in an imbalance between revenue and expenditure in national finances. Over the past few years, although this situation has been improved step-by-step through readjustment, it is still very hard to make it entirely coordinated. Thus, due to the slow development of production, the supply of commodities is insufficient and the circulating currency has become excessive. As a result, there has been a rise in prices. There has also been the contentious question in economic circles in recent years of whether inflation exists in China. Some people hold that inflation does exist in China, but it is not exactly the same as that in the western world. In western countries, inflation is the result of overproduction, but in China, it occurs when production does not satisfy needs. So, this is also a question of achieving balance between production and needs. Anyway, how to control inflation remains a problem worthy of our attention and study.

Second, Guangzhou's situation is special. The social purchasing power in this city is higher than in other cities. Being an important port in international contacts and being near Hong Kong and Macao, there is a larger floating population in Guangzhou. It is said that the annual floating population in this city has reached 44 million man-days, of which 8 million are spent by people from abroad or from Hong Kong and Macao. On the average, there are 150,000 non-Guangzhou residents staying in Guangzhou every day. They all need to spend money. Moreover, there are more overseas remittances to this city. So this extra currency can only be withdrawn from circulation when more commodities are supplied. As a result of the present insufficient supply of commodities, the contradiction between supply and demand has become sharper.

Third, over the past few years, some state purchase and fixed-quota purchase tasks for some agricultural products have been improperly reduced.

Fourth, relevant departments are not rigorous in market and price management.

Of course, there are still other reasons, such as the great discrepancy between the prices of industrial products and those of agricultural products, the random giving of bonuses and so forth. This is really a rather complicated problem.

Liang Lingguang also admitted that the rise in commodity prices has greatly affected the livelihood of the city residents and the staff and workers. But he also explained that in recent years, as a result of more employment and better pay and a result of carrying out the bonus system and price allowance system, the incomes of most people have actually increased. According to statistics, in Guangzhou, the average income of each staff member and worker in 1981 rose by 43.24 percent over 1978. At the same time, the expenditure index rose by 22.8 percent. This shows that the income of the staff members and workers has actually been increased, and the standard of living has been improved.

Although this is a fact seen by all, the price problem still needs to be carefully studied, or studied by specialists, so that a solution can be worked out as soon as possible. Only in this way can the people's minds be set at rest.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 102 26 May 1982

CONTENTS

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

UN Agriculture Delegation Meets With Officials A 1
Meeting With Zhao Ziyang A 1
Meeting With Wan Li A 1
OPEC Decisions on Oil Price, Output Welcomed A 1
XINHUA Commentary A 1
RENMIN RIBAO Commentary [25 May] A 3

UNITED STATES

RENMIN RIBAO Hits TRIBUNE Article on Taiwan Issue [26 May] B 1
Ni Zhifu Meets With U.S. Trade Unionists B 2

SOVIET UNION

Changes in Soviet Party Leadership Noted C 1
CPSU Central Committee Plenum Views Food Program C 1
AFP: PRC Not Normalizing Relations With USSR Soon C 2

NORTHEAST ASIA

Qiao Xiaoguang at PRC-Japan Friendship Ceremony D 1
DPRK Cultural Delegation Arrives in Beijing D 1

EASTERN EUROPE

Yang Shangkun Meets Romanian Procurator General H 1
Pen Center Officials Fete Bulgarian Guests H 1
PRC Envoy Attends Prague Liberation Reception H 1

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

PRC, PDRY Sign Economic, Trade Agreement I 1
New PRC Envoy Presents Credentials in PDRY I 1
Friendship Delegation Concludes Gabon Visit I 1
Liberia's Doe Discusses Recent PRC Visit I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CONGREN RIBAO Assails 'Fairytales in Spring' [17 May] K 1
RENMIN RIBAO on Studying Mao's Literary Thinking [21 May] K 3
Social Sciences Academy Studies Mao Thought K 6
Value of Economic Responsibility System Stressed K 6
GUANGMING RIBAO on Planned Economy, Agriculture [15 May] K 8
Deng Yingchao Addresses Child Care Workers K 10
GUANGMING RIBAO on Public Ownership System [15 May] K 11
Leaders Attend Last Rites for Ma Yinchu K 15
GUANGMING RIBAO on Economic Restructuring Forum [16 May] K 16
Huang Hua Attends Diplomatic Film Reception K 17

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Fujian Propaganda Work Conference Concludes O 1
Second Jiangsu Urban Work Meeting Ends 14 May O 1
Shanghai Issues Regulation on Individual Economy O 2
Shanghai Develops Production Line for Textiles O 3

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong People's Congress Meeting Concludes P 1
Guangzhou PLA Takes Steps Against Bureaucracy P 1
Hubei Holds Provincial Meeting of Progressives P 1
Chen Pixian Speech P 1
Ending of Meeting P 3

SOUTHWEST REGION

Guiyang Conference on Improving Social Order Q 1
Guizhou Takes Measures To Aid Disaster Areas Q 1
Sichuan Meeting Calls for Fight Against Drought Q 1
Yin Fatang on Xizang Planned Parenthood Work Q 2
Briefs: Guizhou Cooperation Agreements Q 3

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

NORTH REGION

Nei Monggol's Zhou Hui on Use of Surplus Labor R 1
Zhou Hui Stresses Emulation in Livestock Work R 2
Nei Monggol Adopts Measures To Combat Snowstorm R 2
Briefs: Nei Monggol Coal Production R 2

NORTHEAST REGION

Heilongjiang's Yang Yichen Attends Courtesy Forum S 1
Jilin Seeks Solution of Public Security Problems S 1
Efforts To Overcome Listlessness Urged in Jilin S 2
Briefs: Heilongjiang Water Project S 3

NORTHWEST REGION

Gansu's Feng Jixin Attends Security Rally T 1
Ningxia Meeting Discusses Draft Constitution T 1
Wang Enmao Speaks at Xinjiang Awards Rally T 2
Xinjiang People's Congress Meeting Concludes T 3
Xinjiang's Wang Enmao at Militia Work Conference T 3
Xinjiang Rally Held on Nationality Policies T 4
Xinjiang Issues Circular on Nationality Policies T 4

TAIWAN

CHINA POST on Bush's TV Interview on PRC Visit [20 May] V 1
Taiwan First Quarter Foreign Trade Down V 2
[CHINA POST 11 May]
Briefs: Saudi Arabian Loan V 2

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

CHENG MING on Causes of Wang Rengzhou's Downfall [1 May] W 1

UN AGRICULTURE DELEGATION MEETS WITH OFFICIALS

Meeting With Zhao Ziyang

OW241620 Beijing XINHUA in English 1515 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 24 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang met with Edouard Saouma, director-general of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and his party at Zhongnanhai here this afternoon.

Zhao Ziyang said "China still needs to import some grain every year, but it is mainly to help adjust agricultural production, develop a diversified economy and improve the life of the people". "China will not buy grain on international markets in competition with other developing countries," he said.

The Chinese premier praised UNFAO for its work at promoting agricultural production in developing countries in the past years. He said he was satisfied with the cooperative relations between China and UNFAO. "I believe relations will surely become better and better," he said. He pledged the support of the Chinese Government to the work of UNFAO. "We hope UNFAO will increase cooperation and exchange in food and agricultural production among developing countries," the Chinese premier said.

Saouma said UNFAO is very concerned with the agricultural development of China, which has one-fourth of the world's population. He expressed his thanks to the Chinese Government for its consistent support of UNFAO. Present were Lin Hujia and He Kang, Chinese minister and vice-minister of agriculture, animal husbandry and fishery.

Earlier, State Councillor and Foreign Minister Huang Hua had a talk with Saouma on the international political and economic situation. Saouma arrived Sunday evening at the invitation of Lin Hujia. This morning, the two discussed establishment of an UNFAO representative office in China and further development of bilateral cooperation. This evening Lin Hujia hosted a banquet for Saouma.

Meeting With Wan Li

OW251314 Beijing XINHUA in English 1257 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations will set up its representative's office in Beijing in the near future. This decision was announced in an agreement signed between the government of the People's Republic of China and the UNFAO here this afternoon.

Chinese Vice-Premier Wan Li attended the signing ceremony at the Great Hall of the People. The agreement was signed by Lin Hujia, Chinese minister of agriculture, animal husbandry and fishery, and Dr. Edouard Saouma, director-general of the UNFAO.

After the ceremony, Wan Li had a cordial and friendly conversation with Dr. Saouma and his party. Dr. and Mrs. Saouma and their party will leave Beijing tomorrow for a visit to other parts of China.

OPEC DECISIONS ON OIL PRICE, OUTPUT WELCOMED

XINHUA Commentary

OW260032 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1438 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 23 May (XINHUA) -- XINHUA commentary: "The Vitality of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries" (excerpts).

The 14th OPEC ministerial level conference held in the Ecuadorean capital of Quito 20-21 May decided to maintain the basic crude price at U.S. $34 per barrel set by OPEC last October and continue to keep the organization's total daily crude output within the limit of 17.5 million barrels set in March this year. These two decisions show that the organization has essentially tided over the grimmest moment since its founding 21 years ago, and dashed the hopes of some Western countries for the collapse of the organization.

Because of the decrease in the Western world's demand for petroleum caused by widespread recession, plus the copious dumping of their previously stored crude on the market by Western petroleum companies, the price of oil had begun to drop on the international oil market since the beginning of last year. With an oil surplus amounting to an average of 4 million barrels and at times reaching a maximum of 7 million barrels daily on the international market, the situation in 1982 further worsened. Taking advantage of the continually dropping oil prices and exploiting the crisis faced by OPEC, the two superpowers -- the United States and the Soviet Union -- and the Western petroleum monopoly companies have taken action to fish in troubled waters. In March, the Western petroleum monopoly companies collectively boycotted the light crude of trouble-ridden Nigeria -- an African member of OPEC -- in a vain attempt to first breach Nigeria and then totally eliminate OPEC's basic crude price. On 10 March, the United States first announced the termination of the purchase of Libyan crude and then began buying high-quality light crude from Iran via a third country. Never one to miss an opportunity to take advantage of others' misfortunes, the Soviet Union, the world's biggest oil producer, dumped its crude on Western Europe's spot market for the purpose of grabbing foreign exchange while raising the price of crude being exported to Eastern European countries. Under these circumstances, the prices of OPEC crude dropped sharply, and a chaotic situation followed in which some OPEC members vied with one another to cut prices in order to sell their oil. Gloating over OPEC's misfortune, public opinion in some Western countries even advertised that "OPEC is doomed."

But facts have proved just the opposite. Members of OPEC have fought back in a spirit of unity and militancy against these attacks. To protect its basic oil price, in mid-March, the organization adopted, for the first time, an important measure to reduce oil output by concerted action. In April, some 13 member nations cut their daily output to below even the target set for reduction, and their total daily output was reduced to only 58 percent of the organization's usual total daily capacity. It is interesting to note that Saudi Arabia, which had always implemented a low price policy, and whose production accounts for 40 percent of the OPEC total, joined the other members this time and has stood in the fore to "protect prices by cutting production."

Faced with common difficulties, the OPEC member nations have united and helped one another. Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing Gulf states have decided to provide the trouble-ridden Nigeria with U.S. $1 billion in emergency aid. Despite its own serious difficulties caused by dropping oil prices, Venezuela has still assisted Ecuador -- another Latin American member of OPEC and the second target for collective boycott by the Western monopoly oil companies -- to refine and sell crude.

Mainly because of the effective measures taken by OPEC, crude prices on Western spot markets are now rapidly picking up and normalcy is beginning to return to the oil market.

Although OPEC has won the first round, the future is still beset with danger and difficulties. However, if its member nations take the interests of the whole into consideration and persist of unity and militancy, no difficulty is too hard to conquer.

RENMIN RIBAO Commentary

OW250734 Beijing XINHUA in English 0720 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- The PEOPLE'S DAILY in a commentary today hails OPEC's victory over the Western oil companies. Excerpts from the commentary follow:

The 64th meeting of the OPEC ministerial conference recently held in Quito decided to maintain the oil production ceiling at 17.5 million barrels a day and to keep the benchmark crude price at 34 dollars a barrel. This is a result of OPEC's fruitful struggle against the Western oil monopolies.

Since a glut of oil appeared in the world market which sent down the oil prices, consuming nations and oil monopolies in the West have substantially dumped their stocks on the market to pressure OPEC into lowering oil prices, thus confronting it with a grave challenge.

At the 63rd meeting of the OPEC ministerial conference in Vienna in March, oil ministers decided to cut back production and maintain the organization's price lines. However, the West monopolies attempted to push prices lower and break up OPEC. They suspended oil contracts as a means to force OPEC member states Nigeria and Ecuador to cut their prices, and maliciously spread the word that OPEC would collapse. Two months later, their hope was dashed to pieces. OPEC provided the two member states with financial aid to help them stand up against the pressure from the West. On the other hand, it readjusted its production ceiling and maintained its price line. Meanwhile, with the substantial reduction of their stocks, the oil monopolies made new purchases of oil. The market recovered with oil prices stabilized. OPEC has thus withstood a severe test.

The present OPEC struggle is a just struggle waged by raw material producing countries to defend raw material prices against world monoplies' plunder. Using oil as its weapon, OPEC has played a significant role in the struggle against the United States and Israel. It proves that as long as the Third World countries are firmly united and determined to defend their common legitimate rights and interests against the world monopolies, they will finally achieve their goal in varied degrees.

RENMIN RIBAO HITS TRIBUNE ARTICLE ON TAIWAN ISSUE

HK261104 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 26 May 82 p 6

[Article by Xi Linsheng [1598 2651 3932]: "Serious Distortion, Wrong Assessment"]

[Text] The Chicago TRIBUNE has recently published many editorials and articles on the Taiwan issue. On 15 May this newspaper again carried an article, entitled "Beijing Must Not Press Too Hard." This article appeared on the surface not hostile and even sympathetic in its tone, describing the U.S. attitude toward the current Sino-U.S. talks as "an utmost display of conciliation" and that of the Chinese side as "closing in on the United States." This is sheer deceptive talk and an attempt at confusing right and wrong and misleading public opinion.

According to what this article says, the U.S. arms sale to Taiwan is an obligation based on American law that must be fulfilled, and is a matter of course. On the other hand, China's opposition to the United States doing this by upholding its sacred sovereignty is a matter of "pressing too hard" and making things difficult for others and is "entirely meaningless and will not help the cause of reunification (of China)." This newspaper wants China to "quit stressing the Taiwan issue" and "put aside differences" between China and the United States "on the Taiwan issue and concentrate its energy on issues of greater interest." Otherwise, a split will appear in Sino-U.S. relations. In a threatening tone, the author of the article also says that China is concentrating energy on economic modernization and needs funds and technology from the West on a large scale. "If a crisis appears in its diplomatic relations with the United States, China has everything to lose and nothing to gain." If China downgrades Sino-U.S. relations and, at the same time, wants to expand its economic relations with the United States, it is making an "entirely wrong assessment."

The purpose of this article in the Chicago TRIBUNE is nothing other than preaching to China to give up its principle on the Taiwan issue. to submit to humiliation and let the United States violate its sovereignty and interfere in its internal affairs. Of course this is a mere daydream. If it is true that someone has made a completely wrong assessment of this issue, that person is none other than the author of this article.

The Chinese Government has repeatedly declared before the entire world that the U.S. arms sale to Taiwan is not ordinary weapons trade, but a problem of principle which it regards as a violation of China's sovereignty and interference in China's internal affairs. Taiwan is a part of China, there is only one China, and the PRC Government is the sole legitimate government of China. This is a principle which has been affirmed by the U.S. Government and included in the joint communique on establishing Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations. The Chinese Government resolutely demands the implementation of the spirit of the communique on establishing diplomatic relations between the two countries. It wants to safeguard the basic principle governing international relations and defend its own sovereignty and territorial integrity. Can this be regarded as an unreasonable request and as meaningless? It is the United States that has run counter to its commitment to China, violated China's sovereignty, interfered in China's internal affairs, ignored the repeated serious warnings from China, created new disputes over the arms sale to Taiwan, and thus forced the Chinese Government to make responses. Who has acutally pressed too hard? Is the answer to this question not clear enough?

The Chinese Government has always abided by the norms of international relations and has never encroached upon U.S. sovereignty or interfered in U.S. internal affairs. Similarly, the Chinese Government and people will never allow the United States or any other country to trample upon China's sovereignty and to interfere in China's internal affairs.

The writer of the article in the Chicago TRIBUNE should understand that in the past century and more, the Chinese people have made strenuous efforts and tremendous sacrifices to win their independence and sovereignty and defend the integrity and unity of Chinese territory. Since the founding of the new China, the Chinese Government has consistently adhered to its stand on the Taiwan issue, that is, it will defend the fruits which the Chinese people have won in the past century and more by fighting bravely and advancing wave upon wave. Now, some people want to regard Taiwan as an independent political entity and to separate it from the Chinese territory. How can we ignore this? For a long time, the Chinese Government has made unremitting efforts to reunify the motherland. On many occasions, it has put forth sensible proposals on the peaceful solution of the Taiwan issue. This is known to everyone. However, some Americans have supported the "two Chinas" and "one China and one Taiwan" schemes and have continuously sold weapons to Taiwan. This has greatly boosted the arrogance of the Taiwan authorities, making them stick to their obstinate attitude of erecting obstacles. This is an obvious fact. May we ask: When the U.S. Government does not respect China's sovereignty and has no intention of stopping its interference in China's internal affairs, how can there be a unified basis for a "relationship of greater interests" between China and the United States?

The present difficulties in Sino-U.S. relations have not been created by China. The Chinese Government has time and again expressed its willingness to continue to maintain and develop the relationship between China and the United States. But the quesiton is that some Americans have claimed to take China as a friendly state and to be willing to make friends with China, but they are actually thinking of something else. Frankly speaking, these people's guiding ideology is to go in for the "two Chinas" or "one China and one Taiwan" schemes and even to take Taiwan as "an unsinkable aircraft carrier". Their minds are still obsessed with the soul of John Foster Dulles' policy toward China. This is the real crux of the crisis in Sino-U.S. relations.

As to the effects of diplomatic relations on economic relations, this Chicago TRIBUNE article was, in substance, trying to say that China's four modernizations program needs U.S. help and that in order to seek favors bestowed by the United States, China has to yield to pressure from the United States. This is blackmail.

It is true that China is building the four modernizations. Because of the modernization program, we have implemented the open-door policy and are willing to have economic and technical cooperation with all other countries on the basis of equality and mutual benefit. However, our policy always rests on the basis of our own strength and we always primarily take the road of self-reliance. We have never cherished illusions about relying on foreign countries to realize the four modernizations. The ability of the 1 billion Chinese people to stand on their own feet in the world was not fostered primarily by relying on foreign technology and funds, but was fostered by relying on our own untiring hands. It goes without saying that international economic contacts mean that each supplies what the other needs. Such contacts never mean unilateral begging. Only hegemonists will regard international contacts as the lever for exerting pressure. If some people think that China will sacrifice its principles to get the help it needs from them, they have made a completely wrong assessment. To be frank, the Chinese people will not do it. The United States began enforcing a blockade against us in the 1950's, and later Khrushchev of the Soviet Union tried to choke us economically. They all wanted to force us to yield to their pressure. However, both of them failed to succeed in doing so. The world has entered the 1980's and China has achieved very great development and has developed its economic contacts with many countries in the world. Anyone who wants to revive the 1950's broken pipe dream at this time will eat his own bitter fruit in the end.

NU ZHIFU MEETS WITH U.S. TRADE UNIONISTS

OW251942 Beijing XINHUA in English 1650 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- Ni Zhifu, president of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, had a cordial talk with the American trade unionist delegation led by Louis Goldblatt here this afternoon. The delegation arrived May 23 at the invitation of the ACFTU and will visit cities in south China.

CHANGES IN SOVIET PARTY LEADERSHIP NOTED

OW251950 Beijing XINHUA in English 1523 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Moscow, May 24 (XINHUA) -- Yuriy Andropov, Politburo member of the Central Committe of the Soviet Communist Party and chairman of the Committee of State Security (KGB), was elected secretary of the Central Committee, while Vladimir Dolgikh, secretary of the Central Committee, was elected an alternate Politburo member, it was announced here today.

The election was held at today's plenary session of the party Central Committee. This is an important personnel change in the Soviet party leadership since the 26th party congress in March last year.

The 68-year-old Andropov was one of the secretaries of the Central Committee from 1962 to 1967 and became the KGB chief in 1967. He was elected alternate Politburo member in 1967 and became a full-fledged member in 1973.

The 58-year-old Dolgikh had been the party's first secretary of the Krasnoyarsk frontier territory and became a Central Committee secretary in charge of heavy industry in 1972.

CPSU CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM VIEWS FOOD PROGRAM

OW251226 Beijing XINHUA in English 1212 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Moscow, May 24 (XINHUA) -- The plenary meeting of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee today discussed the USSR's food program for the period ending in 1990 and the measures to implement it, and adopted resolutions in connection with this problem. According to a TASS report, a report by party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev at the meeting referred to the program.

The meeting was held under the circumstances in which the country was tormented by three serious crop failures in a row, huge imports of agricultural produce, a keen shortage of market supplies and people's discontent with the situation.

Brezhnev said at the meeting that the food program was aimed at getting a reliable guarantee of food supply within a shortest possible time. This is not only an economic task of primary importance, but also an urgent socio-political task, he said. He admitted, "The demand for meat and dairy products is not yet met. There is a shortage of vegetables and fruits. Disruption in trade in foodstuffs occurs in a number of regions." He attributes all these phenomena to the fact that demands for food exceeded supply, to the increase in the cash income of the people," to the "decrease of agricultural population" and to the "slow increase in labour efficiency of agriculture and the whole agro-industrial complex."

Brezhnev said that it is planned to increase in the 12th Five-Year-Plan period (1986-1990) the mean annual production of grain to over 250 million tons, meat -- to over 20 million tons, and milk -- to over 104 million tons. The agro-industrial complex will receive during this period about a third of the overall volume of capital investment in the entire national economy. The increase in agricultural labour efficiency lay in the intensive farming, he said.

Brezhnev said that "in future as well we have no intention at all of giving up" the imports of grain, meat and other agricultural produce. But he stressed the "need to reduce the import of foodstuffs from the capitalist countries," because certain states are striving to turn grain sales into an instrument of political pressure on the Soviet Union.

After talking about the series of important measures for implementing the food program, Brezhnev particularly stressed that "we shall maintain at a proper level the defence capacity of our country." That means enormous manpower, material and financial power would be used in the arms race.

The plenum approved six resolutions including the one on the improvement of farm management put forward by the Council of Ministers.

Observers here noted that the Soviet leadership had discussed this food program in recent years. However, judging from the implementation of the Soviet economic plans in the past, it is doubtful if this program can be realized.

AFP: PRC NOT NORMALIZING RELATIONS WITH USSR SOON

BK241243 Hong Kong AFP in English 1156 GMT 24 May 82

[Excerpt] Beijing, 24 May (AFP) -- China reaffirmed today that it does not see the possibility of normalizing relations with its communist rival the Soviet Union, at least not in the near future. A spokesman clearly indicated that Beijing was still cool to any such move when asked about last week's call by the Soviet Communist Party organ PRAVDA for negotiations to achieve "detente" between the two powers. The spokesman simply recalled Premier Zhao Ziyang's remarks to Japanese journalusts 10 days ago stressing China's opposition to "Moscow's expansionist and hegemonist policy."

The PRAVDA commentary was signed Igor Aleksandrov, a pseudonym for the Kremlin leadership, and said in effect that the time had come to resume the Sino-Soviet dialogue after two decades of frosty relations.

The Soviet party organ also said that the dispute between the two countries did little more than serve the interests of the "imperialists."

QIAO XIAOGUANG AT PRC-JAPAN FRIENDSHIP CEREMONY

OW201852 Beijing XINHUA in English 1843 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Nanning, May 20 (XINHUA) -- Friendship ties between China's Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region and Japan's Kumamoto Prefecture were formally established at a ceremony here today. Qin Yingji, chairman of the people's government of the region, and Sawa Da Issei, governor of the prefecture, signed a protocol to this effect.

Qin Yingji said at the ceremony: "The establishment of friendship ties between Guangxi and Kumamoto has opened broad prospects for friendly contacts and cooperation between the peoples of the region and the prefecture."

Issei said: "Now that diplomatic relations between Japan and China have been normalized, no one can stop the true friendship between the two countries. The Japanese and Chinese peoples should join hands and strive for the prosperity of the two countries and the friendship between the two peoples."

Qiao Xiaoguang, first secretary of the Guangxi Regional Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and chairman of the regional committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, was present at the ceremony.

After the ceremony, the two sides jointly planted a camphor tree -- a symbol of friendship -- in the people's park here. In the evening, the regional people's government gave a banquet for the Japanese guests. Issei and his party arrived here by special plane from Kumamoto yesterday.

The Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region has a population of 33 million of 12 nationalities. The Zhuangs account for 12 million. The other nationalities account for 12 million. The other nationalities are Han, Miao, Yao, Dong, Mulam, Maonan, Hui, Gin, Yi, Sui and Gelo.

DPRK CULTURAL DELEGATION ARRIVES IN BEIJING

OW251934 Beijing XINHUA in English 1604 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- A 10-member delegation from the General Federation of Literary and Art Unions of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea arrived today. The delegation is led by Cho Yong-chul, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the federation.

The guests were feted at a banquet this evening, hosted by the China federation of literary and art circles.

Zhou Yang, chairman of the Chinese federation, said the friendship between the people and literary and art workers of the two countries has a long history. The Chinese people have much to learn from the education, science and culture of the Korean nation, he said.

Cho Yong-chul said he was glad to visit China and to contribute to the friendship between the two peoples.

Present were Lin Mohan, vice-chairman of the Chinese federation and adviser to the ministry of culture, and Feng Mu, a federation official and vice-chairman of the Chinese Writers' Association. Chon Myong-su, ambassador of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in Beijing also attended. After leaving Beijing May 30, the guests will visit Xian, Shanghai, Hangzhou and Nanjing.

YANG SHANGKUN MEETS ROMANIAN PROCURATOR GENERAL

OW191708 Beijing XINHUA in English 1527 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 19 (XINHUA) -- Yang Shangkun, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, met here today with Nicolae Popovici, procurator general of Romania, and his party.

Yang Shangkun said: "The relations between China and Romania in all fields are good. We can make further exchanges in the judicial field." He briefed the guests on China's judicial system and the contents of the draft of the revised constitution. He said: "China's legal system is under restoration and is being strengthened. It remains to be perfected. Both China and Romania are socialist countries and Romania's judicial experience is worth our learning."

Popovici said: "Through this visit, we have witnessed the Chinese people's enthusiasm for building the four modernizations and have really felt the profound sentiments of the Chinese people for the Romanian people." He noted that the Chinese Communist Party and Government attach great importance to the judicial system and that Chinese colleagues in judicial circles are strengthening the socialist legal system.

Present at the meeting were Jiang Wen, deputy chief procurator of the Supreme People's Procuratorate, and Zou Yu, vice-minister of justice. Florea Dumitrescu, Romanian ambassador to China, was also present. During their visit to China, the Romanian guests have toured Hangzhou and Shanghai. They have briefed Chinese counterparts on the Romanian procuratorial system and exchanged with them their judicial experiences.

PEN CENTER OFFICIALS FETE BULGARIAN GUESTS

OW171543 Bejing XINHUA in English 1519 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- The China Pen Center this afternoon held a reception in honor of the visiting Bulgarian guests, Liljana Stefanova, president of the Pen Center and vice-minister of education of Bulgaria, and Nadja Kehlibareva, secretary of the Pen Center. Present at the reception were Vice-Presidents of the China Pen Center Ai Qing, Zhu Ziqi and Ye Junjian and noted Chinese writers and poets from the capital. Present on the occassion was also Ilia Tabakov, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Bulgarian Embassy in Beijing.

Peng Peiyun, vice-minister of education of China, met with the Bulgarian guests this morning. The Bulgarian guests arrived in Beijing on May 3 at the invitation of the Association for International Understanding of China and the China Pen Center. They have visited Zian, Nanjing, Shanghai and Hangzhou. They will leave for home tonight.

PRC ENVOY ATTENDS PRAGUE LIBERATION RECEPTION

OW101928 Beijing XINHUA in English 1515 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] Prague, May 10 (XINHUA) -- Czechoslovak President Gustav Husak gave a grand reception at the Prague palace yesterday evening to mark the 37th anniversary of the liberation of Czechoslovakia. Top party, government and military leaders as well as prominent figures of all circles and diplomatic envoys, including the Chinese ambassador, were present. Earlier, Czechoslovaks in the capital and other parts of the country marked this jubilant day with all kinds of activities. A mass get-together was held in the Julius Fucik Park of Culture yesterday, which was attended by the mayor and other leading members of the city.

PRC, PDRY SIGN ECONOMIC, TRADE AGREEMENT

OW241612 Beijing XINHUA in English 1603 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 24 (XINHUA) -- A protocol on economic, technical cooperation and trade between the Governments of the People's Republic of China and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen was signed here this afternoon by Zheng Tuobin, Chinese vice minister of foreign economic relations and trade, and Haydar Abu Bakr al-'Attas, minister of construction of Democratic Yemen.

NEW PRC ENVOY PRESENTS CREDENTIALS IN PDRY

OW210821 Beijing XINHUA in English 0157 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Aden, May 19 (XINHUA) -- Newly appointed Chinese Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary Tang Yong presented on Wednesday his credentials to 'Ali Nasir Muhammad, president of the Presidium of the Supreme People's Council of the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen. 'Ali Nasir Muhammad had a friendly conversation with Tang Yong.

FRIENDSHIP DELEGATION CONCLUDES GABON VISIT

OW190738 Beijing XINHUA in English 0732 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Libreville, May 18 (XINHUA) -- A friendship delegation of the Chinese Communist Party headed by Zhang Zhixiang, counsellor of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the CCP, left here for Rwanda Monday after a week's visit to Gabon. On Monday, Omar Bongo, Gabonese president and general secretary of the Democratic Party, received members of the delegation and had a cordial conversation with them. Omar Bongo expressed the hope that the existing friendship and cooperation between the two parties and two governments would develop. He asked the guests to convey his cordial greetings to Chinese leaders. The Chinese delegation arrived here on May 11. It had talks with a delegation of the Gabonese Democratic Party. It also visited local party organizations and industrial and agricultural enterprises.

LIBERIA'S DOE DISCUSSES RECENT PRC VISIT

OW171916 Beijing XINHUA in English 1909 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Monrovia, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Liberian head of state Samuel K. Doe today described his recent China visit as "most cordial and rewarding."

In a speech here this afternoon upon his return from visits to China and four other nations, Doe said: "We consider the invitation extended to us by the Chinese Government to visit one of the world's most powerful nations as a most salient manifestation of Chinese friendship towards us." He said his talks with Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping and Premier Zhao Ziyang were "most cordial and rewarding. We were impressed with the Chinese respect for discipline, law and order. These characteristics are perhaps the bed-rock of their civilization, development and progress," he noted. He said China "has certainly proven to be a friend of our country," and his visit has increased cooperation between the two countries.

CONGREN RIBAO ASSAILS 'FAIRYTALES IN SPRING'

HK260727 Beijing GONGREN RIBAO in Chinese 17 May 82 p 5

[Article by Xiao Ting [5135 3060]: "A Work That Pollutes People's Souls -- Commenting on 'Fairytales in Spring'"]

[Text] After reading the novel "Fairytales in Spring" (abbreviated to "Spring" below), which was carried in the No 1, 1982, issue of HUACHENG, I felt that what the author had given me was not a vision of the new spring of the motherland's history but a gloomy and depressing picture of life. The whole work openly propagates a philosophy of extreme individualism and a blind and narrow revenge mentality. These views stand in direct opposition to the lofty mission literature and art should have of building a socialist spiritual civilization.

I

Focusing on the entanglement between the female protagonist Yu Shan and He Jing, "Spring" sets out to reveal various aspects of urban life in China since the smashing of the "gang of four." In reading this work we notice that all the circumstances and characters surrounding Yu Shan are described in a uniformly bleak and gloomy manner. The relationships between the various people are all characterized by deception, backbiting and mutual exploitation. He Jing, worshipped by Yu Shan as a theoretician, is in reality no more than a hateful and cowardly hypocrite. We in no way deny the existence in real life of certain backward, negative and even repulsive phenomena and people. Moreover, authors should take it upon themselves to expose and criticize such phenomena. The problem is that is describing our society in such ghastly and gloomy terms that the main trends and all brightness are completely obscured, the author of "Spring" seriously deviates from the revolutionary realist principle of using model characters and both smears and distorts social reality.

It cannot be denied that through its description of the relationship between Yu Shan and He Jing, "Spring" reveals one aspect of the party-led movement for the emancipation of the mind, a movement which was of historic significance. At the same time it also offers a fairly full discussion of the question of the criteria for testing truth. The author, however, does no more than distort and characterize this solemn and important political and historical event. From the novel the reader gets no sense whatsoever of the important leadership role of the party in this movement for the emancipation of the mind; nor does one get any sense of either the historical necessity or the profound significance of this movement. The fact that the hypocrite He Jing is made a pioneer of this movement and a champion of efforts to reverse verdicts on grievances, trumped-up cases and miscarriages of justice is, without any doubt, a serious distortion of historical fact. It makes a mockery of the movement for the emancipation of the mind and clearly expresses the idealist historical outlook of the author. It can be said that the distortion of social reality and the many important events that have occurred since the smashing of the "gang of four", especially since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, reflects the author's erroneous ideological understanding. Similarly, through its description of the contact and relationship between Yu Shan, He Jing and other characters, "Spring" openly propagates an undisguised philosophy of egoism.

Love and family life form the main content of "Spring." Yu Shan declares herself a firm believer in the famous maxim that "marriage without love is immoral." Looking at her relationships with Er Bao, Shu Ming and He Jing, however, we can see that she enters into marriage and falls in "love" only out of concern for her residence registration, housing and her own reputation as an authority, and as soon as her aim has been achieved she loses all interest. What is so "moral" about this? In "Spring" the bewitching and moving term "love" is nothing more than a cover for Yu Shan's material and political deals. Yu Shan herself admits that her former relationships with Er Bao and Shu Ming were both motivated by material interest. However, she also insists that this proves that the warmth of her relationship with the 60-year-old He Jing stems from true love.

In reality, however, we can see quite clearly from the plot of the novel that the relationship between Yu Shan and He Jing is entirely calculated and based on mutual exploitation. He Jing is a truly despicable hypocrite, and Yu Shan is certainly not a naive believer in the notion of love being above everything.

When she realizes that He Jing may be able to help her establish a literary career, she praises, pursues and loves him. But as soon as He Jing decides, out of self-interest, not to agree to the publication of the novel "A Story of Today" and to hand their correspondence over to the judicial departments, she is suddently transformed into someone determined to destroy He Jing no matter what the cost. The course of their relationship is determined by naked self-interest. The conflict and discord between them are entirely the product of the struggle for position of two ambitious egoists. So while the author does her utmost to play up the "love" between the two of them, the end result can inspire no sense of aesthetic appreciation whatsoever. On the contrary, this work can only poison the reader's spirit.

II

Even more worthy of note is the fact that in the novel "Spring," the author promotes a barefaced philosophy of revenge. As was stated above, disgusting phenomena and people certainly still exist in real life and it is the unshirkable and important task of socialist literature to reveal and clean up such social garbage. However, only if we stand on the side of the proletariat and the masses of people and adopt the ideological system and moral precepts of communism will we be victorious in our struggle against all forms of old thinking, old understanding and old traditions. We must under no circumstances adopt the method of revenge used by individualists, anarchists and hoodlums. Nor must we allow our own personal feelings to drive us to take revenge against society as a whole. We can see from the novel that while Yu Shan may have suffered a degree of unjust treatment she is incapable of taking a correct stand and of using correct methods to struggle against the dark and negative side of life. Instead, she decides to "fight fire with fire" by taking reprisals and seeking revenge. Yu Shan herself admits that she continued to chase after He Jing inspite of the fact that both he and she already had families of their own. There was an important hidden reason for this: "The connection between someone of my background and an old revolutionary represents a challenge to the whole theory of family origins." We agree that "the theory of family origins" should be opposed and its wrongs redressed. However, the only way to redress such wrongs is to repleace erroneous policy of the past with the party's correct policy. Moreover, these efforts to correct past mistakes must always be in keeping with the happiness and progress of the people as a whole. Yu Shan's "challenge to the theory of family origins," however, involves an immoral relationship between a married man and a woman. The price of such an approach is the destruction of other people's happiness. Is it not also tragically demeaning and humiliating for herself? What is regrettable is that the author's unreserved enthusiasm for this course of action achieves nothing positive at all but only pollutes people's souls. We can also see that when the relationship between Yu Shan and He Jing developes to an indecent stage, Yu Shan openly admits that she is driven to such action not by love but "by a determination for revenge." Because the newspapers and radio report on her indiscreet conduct, she is desperate for revenge and vows to "be truly indiscreet about him." It is perfectly clear that even if Yu Shan is correct in asserting that the newspapers and radio are wrong she achieves nothing by adopting such a cynical and resigned attitude and course of action. This is because by following such a course of action she is merely proceeding further down the same mistaken path.

The mentality of reprisals and revenge has both existed and thrived under different historical conditions and among different classes. However, under no conditions will such blind revenge result in anything positive. With the birth and spread of Marxism, the proletariat developed from being a class in itself into a class for itself.

When this occurred, particularly after the working class had united with the broad masses of the people to become masters of socialist society, the mentality of reprisals and revanchism became increasingly damaging and reactionary forms of mistaken thinking. Although people with such views often use the excuse that they are opposing irrational phenomena in life, they invariably bring severe suffering to society as a whole, sometimes even going so far as to make society the very target of their attack. This certainly violates the basic interests of the broad masses of the people.

III

Not only is the ideological content of "Spring" extremely crude, but its methods of artistic expression also reveal a serious naturalistic tendency. While the author praises "truthful literature," she is mistaken, however, in her belief that "truth" amounts to no more than the exposure of shameful secrets and the enumeration of shady affairs. "Spring" is filled with lengthy descriptions of mean and vulgar desires which leave the reader feeling depressed and stifled. We in no way object to the description of petty and low or even despicable things. However, only when such phenomena have passed through the filter of the author's aesthetic sense can they be transformed into objects of artistic beauty that can play a role in the aesthetic education of the reader. We earnestly hope that authors will be able to seriously summarize their own creative activity and draw the necessary lessons and conclusions. It is also hoped that they will be able to act in accordance with Mao Zedong's directives on thinking in literature and art and escape from the narrow confines of the urban petite bourgeoisie. By throwing themselves into the people's struggle in the new age and ceaselessly improving their own standards of moral and ideological cultivation and their ability in artistic expression, they should be able to use their pens to truly describe the reality of the great motherland's spring.

Finally, the publication of "Spring" should make us alive to the important question of the social responsibility of editorial workers. Editorial workers should, through works of literature, educate the people in communist ideology and morality and in socialist spiritual civilization. They should not propagate any ideology which hurts either society or the people. As far as obviously and seriously mistaken works such as "Spring" are concerned, so long as editors show no bias there should be no serious problems. HUACHENG, however, insisted on publishing this story even though a year had passed since the appearance of the advance notice. This is the result of the commercialization of spiritual products. If there are any other reasons we are not aware of them. However, it is a fact that the publication of this novel had a bad influence on society. We hope that editorial and publishing departments will be able to draw the correct lessons from this so that our literary publishing may truly become a firm frontline in the struggle to promote socialist spiritual civilization.

RENMIN RIBAO ON STUDYING MAO'S LITERARY THINKING

HK251153 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 21 May 82 p 5

[Article by Feng Mu: "Make a Fresh Study of and Conduct Serious Research Into Mao Zedong's Thinking on Literature and Art"]

[Text] The "forum on Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought" [Mao Zedong Wen Yi Si Xiang 3029 3419 2639 2429 5669 1835 1927] sponsored by the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles and the Literature Institute under the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences has already begun. Attending the forum were nearly 100 theorists, critics and professional writers in the literary, art and academic circles of Beijing. The chief aim and theme of the forum is to study through joint discussion the question of how we are to adhere to and develop Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art [Mao Zedong tong zhi de wen yi si xiang 3029 3419 2639 0681 1807 4104 2429 5669 1835 1927]. This is a meeting to study anew, conscientiously research and profoundly discuss Mao Zedong literary and art thought as well as an academic forum.

Our forum opened only a few days before the 40th anniversary of Comrade Mao Zedong's "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art." The "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art" is a magnificent document of historic significance on Marxist literary and art theory and it constitutes an important part of Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art. This article systematically and pithily expounds the principles, theories and policies of the proletarian literary and art movement in China. It has educated and enlightened generation after generation of literary and art workers. It has provided spiritual weapons for hundreds and thousands of revolutionary literary and art fighters and taught them to go deep into the heart of the life of struggle and to associate with the new epoch of the masses. Thus, it has guided literature and art onto the broad avenue of serving the broad masses of the people. It is by no means an exaggeration if we say that the publication of the "Talks" and its widespread and profound influence on China's revolutionary literary and art movement has brought about a new upsurge of China's revolutionary literary and art movement that was initiated during the May 4th Movement and facilitated the development of the brand new features of China's literary and art creation, theory and practice. It has already been 40 years since the publication of the "Talks," which was the product of the theoretical and artistic thinking of the period of the war of resistance against Japan. Therefore, it is only natural that some of the specific arguments of the article could not have been free from the limitation of the specific historical conditions at the time when it was published. However, the series of scientific principles and basic theory that were summed up in this article from the practice of China's revolution and the practice of China's literature and art have not only played a significant and indispensable role in the past, but is now and will still be of great significance in giving guidance for a long time to come even though 40 years have passed since its publication. That is why continuing to make a comprehensive, profound and practical study of the "Talks" is now and will be in the future an important theme that cannot be neglected or dispensed with by the literary and art circles and the theoretical circles of our country.

We should also see that this forum of ours is being held after the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee approved the "resolution on certain question in the history of our party since the founding of the PRC." By so doing, the CCP Central Committee fulfilled the significant historic task of making a comprehensive and accurate evaluation of Comrade Mao Zedong's historical position and the value of the scientific principles of Mao Zedong Thought. This and many speeches and expositions that Comrade Deng Xiaoping, Comrade Hu Yaobang and other central leading comrades have made during the past few years on the literary and art work during the socialist period have provided us with powerful ideological weapons and guiding principles for further studying and understanding Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art. The task of this forum is make a fresh study, to research and to discuss Mao Zedong literary and art thought, which is an important part of Mao Zedong Thought. I agree with Comrade Hu Qiaomu that Mao Zedong literary and art thought is very rich in content. In order to fully understand it, we should not only study the large volume of expositions and articles that Comrade Mao Zedong published for many years in the past, but should also inquire into all the literary and art creation and activities that Comrade Mao Zedong carried out during his whole revolutionary career. In this sense, our work in this respect has not really begun as yet. We should regard this task as an important task in our work schedule. However, an important fact is that as a great Marxist, Comrade Mao Zedong, while leading the revolution in China, always paid close attention to and showed direct concern about literary and art problems. He wrote and published a large number of works to give guidance to the revolutionary literary and art work. These works, including the "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art," "On New Democracy," "Oppose Stereotyped Party Writing," "Talks With Music Workers" and "On the Correct Handling of Contradictions Among the People," summed up the practice of our country's revolutionary literary and art movement and the party's experience in leading literary and art work and made a great contribution to the development of the Marxist viewpoint on literature and art.

These works and Comrade Mao Zedong's other correct expositions on literary and art work have already formed an ideological system of principles, theories and policies related to revolutionary literary and art work. This system has combined Marxist theory with the literary and art practice of the Chinese revolution. We call it the system of Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought. For nearly half a century, this system has been promoting the progress and development of our country's proletarian literary and art movement.

Not long ago when we recalled and studied some of Comrade Mao Zedong's speeches and expositions during the period of the war of resistance against Japan, we clearly saw the following two facts: First the basic views of Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art were formed as far back as in the 1930's; and second, if we compare these speeches and expositions with what Comrade Mao Zedong wrote later, we can clearly see that his views on literary and art problems were constantly developing and being enriched along with the progress of history. Many of his important articles on literary and art problems are the crystalization of his and his comrades in arms' mental efforts to integrate the Marxist literary and art theory with the practice of China's literary and art workers. We must always adhere to the basic spirit and scientific principles of Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art. However, we should not repeat the errors caused by some aspects of it that are not scientific or clear enough owing to its historical limitations and other defects. When we study and conduct research into Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought, we should, furthermore, use the Marxist stand, viewpoints and methods to analyze and study the current new situation in light of our abundant historical experience and in light of the new historical conditions. Thus, we will be able to answer and solve the new problems we are currently faced with and further enrich and develop Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art. Some people are very wrong in wantonly trying to deny the scientific principles and basic theory of Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought and to deny its great significance to the development of our socialist literature and art on the grounds that there are a few unscientific arguments in Comrade Mao Zedong's expositions on literature and art. On the other hand, the attitude and viewpoint of those who, even now, cling to the view that we should do everything in strict accordance with every word that Mao said and that "everything Mao said is truth" are also against the basic principle of Mao Zedong Thought, because they deny the principle that like Marxism, Mao Zedong Thought should develop along with people's practice. Comrade Hu Qiaomu pointed out that we should "scientifically associate Comrade Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art with the Marxist thinking on literature and art." This is perfectly correct. A natural conclusion from this is that we should also integrate Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought with our current socialist literary and art work and creative practice. I think that only by so doing can we adhere to and develop the great Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought.

We hope that this forum will be a meeting with some academic standard and fine style of study. In order to achieve this aim, we should consciously adhere to the four basic principles and at the same time we should implement the "double-hundred policy" in an exemplary manner. If we fail to truly implement the principle of letting a hundred schools of thought contend and if we do not allow everybody to air their views freely, we will not be able to actually carry out the "three don'ts" [do not pick on people, do not put political labels on them and do not wield big sticks at them]. Then it will be impossible for us to hold this forum successfully. Therefore, I sincerely hope that all the comrades who are attending this forum will do the following things: First, we should have the courage and willpower to pursue and adhere to the truth. We should bravely confirm and adhere to correct ideas and we should also have the courage to criticize and overcome erroneous ideas. If we do not have such courage and willpower, it will be impossible for us to adhere to and develop Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought. Second, we should strive to manage to combine theory with practice. We should closely integrate Mao Zedong Literary and Art Thought with the practice of our literary and art work, including literary and art creative work and theoretical work. At the same time we should strive to combine our resolute revolutionary principles and willpower with the scientific attitude of seeking truth from facts. Third, we hope this meeting will become a meeting characterized by close solidarity as well as lively exchange of ideas. We hope that all the comrades who will speak at the forum will show the fine style of study and writing of seeking truth from facts and helping one another, which is one of our party's fine traditions.

SOCIAL SCIENCES ACADEMY STUDIES MAO THOUGHT

OW250403 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0036 GMT 25 May 82

[Report by XINHUA reporter Li Hongqi]

[Excerpts] Beijing, 25 May (XINHUA) -- Regarding the research and propagation of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and the building of socialist spiritual civilization as the main task, the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences has scored great achievements in scientific research since the convening of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. According to the latest statistics, 1,031 books and over 10,000 theses, translation articles and survey reports have been published by the institutes under the academy in the past 3 years.

Since its founding in 1977, the academy has rapidly expanded its scientific research organization and contingent of social scientists under the party Central Committee's kind attention. At present, the academy has 32 institutes staffed by some 2,800 researchers.

Thanks to the implementation of the party's policy toward the intellectuals in recent years, vast numbers of social scientists have become more and more enthusiastic in doing research work. Doing away with superstitions and daring to probe into questions, they have carried out extensive academic exchanges and worked diligently to complete a number of books with high academic value.

These books expound on on the superiority of the socialist system, uphold the four fundamental principles and discuss theoretical questions concerning the readjustment and reform of the national economy.

VALUE OF ECONOMIC RESPONSIBILITY SYSTEM STRESSED

OW231814 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1203 GMT 21 May 82

["Commentary: 'Do a Good Job in Perfecting the Economic Responsibility System'" -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Beijing, 21 May (XINHUA) -- Since the middle of 1981, 80 percent of state-operated and state-budgeted industrial enterprises have gradually implemented the economic responsibility system in various forms. They have implemented it on the basis of the experiment conducted by China's industrial department in 2 previous years on the added power of decision of enterprises. One year has elapsed. How should we treat and perfect this important reform of the economic management system? This is a question people are generally concerned with at present, as well as an important question concerning whether our industrial production can be steadily developed.

The CCP Central Committee and the State Council have repeatedly pointed out that the implementation of the economic responsibility system is correctly oriented and the achievement is remarkable. This correct inference has been proven by facts. The system is correctly oriented because it has made a preliminary improvement of the past situation of too much power concentration and rigid control in economic management and has given enterprises certain powers of decision and action in management. It has also begun to overcome the shortcoming of practicing equalitarianism and "sharing food from the same big pot" and has connected the results of production to the material interests of the enterprises, the staff and workers. This reform conforms to the guidelines of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. It has begun to show its great might in production. In the first several months of 1981, China's industrial production encountered great difficulties in the course of further economic readjustment. The passive situation did not improve until the implementation of the economic responsibility system. In the second half of 1981 the average monthly industrial output value increased by 8.8 percent and profits turned in to the state increased by 11.5 percent compared with the first half of the year.

Some problems have emerged in the course of implementing the economic responsibility system. We must attach great importance to and seriously deal with these problems. For example, some enterprises which implement the economic responsibility system have fostered tendencies for selfish departmentalism, decentralism and liberalization.

In production they disregard the state plan and the demand of the society and blindly pursue immediate, partial and local interests. Some enterprises calculate only the profit distribution rather than making efforts to improve economic results. They try every means possible to minimize the state's share of the profits for their own benefit, or even violate financial and economic discipline to seek illegal interests. We must solve such problems because they are very harmful.

Such problems are caused by our lack of practical expereince. To squarely face and solve these problems is to perfect the system of economic responsibility rather than negate it.

The implementation of the economic responsibility system is a profound reform, of which we still have not had a ready sample. Only in the course of implementing the economic responsibility system in accordance with the principles and policies of the party and the government can we explore ways to perfect it. It is particularly necessary for the leading organs to study new situations, solve new problems, summarize new experiences and strengthen their specific leadership. They should not be content with just issuing a general appeal. Today the XINHUA NEWS AGENCY reported on a forum held by the State Economic Commission on learning from and studying the experience of the Shoudu Iron and Steel Company. The forum is a good way.

The experience of the Shoudu Iron and Steel Company shows that the implementation of the economic responsibility system, like the implementation of other measures for economic reform, is designed to make the relations of production suit the development of productive forces and to improve economic results and increase public wealth. This is the criteria for evaluating the success or failure of an economic responsibility system. Therefore, an enterprise which implements the system of economic responsibility should not only calculate the profit distribution or only stress the earning of profits and the retention of a certain percentage of profits. It should follow the state plan and consider the demand of society to organize its production and set various advanced, reasonable, economic targets for output, quality, consumption, cost, profit and labor productivity. It should guarantee overall fulfillment of those targets at all levels including various workshops, sections and offices, teams and groups and individual staff members and workers.

It should first put its duty to the state and correctly handle the relationship among the interests of the state, the enterprise and those of staff members and workers. It should do a good job in paying according to work and strengthen its ideological and political work. At the same time, it should combine efforts to consolidate the enterprise with efforts to lay a groundwork for better enterprise management, formulate scientific targets for the responsibility system and exercise strict evaluation, rewards and punishment.

In order to perfect the economic responsibility system, it is necessary to strengthen the guidance of the state plan. However, this does not mean that regulation by the market is unnecessary. We should impose the necessary administrative intervention, but this does not replace economic measures. It is necessary to do ideological and political work well, but this does not mean that we no longer need material encouragement and pay according to work. In short, we should never repeat the lesson we learned in the past in economic management that ease of control leads to lively activity, lively activity leads to disorder and disorder prompts rigid control. Overall, we should understand and implement the party's principles and policies in the new circumstances and do a good job in perfecting the economic responsibility system.

GUANGMING RIBAO ON PLANNED ECONOMY, AGRICULTURE

HK241138 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 3

[Article by Zhang Chunsheng [1728 2504 3932]: "Agricultural Production Responsibility System and Planned Economy"]

[Text] The "draft of the revised Constitution of the People's Republic of China" points out: "The country practices the planned economy on the basis of the socialist system of public ownership. No organization or individual is allowed to use any means to upset social economic order and disrupt the state's economic plans." In implementing the responsibility system, agriculture must also adhere to the above principles without exception.

Our country has a population of 1 billion. There are 800 million peasants. The problem of agriculture has always been a major one in our socialist revolution and construction. In the actual economic life of our country, apart from the 800 million peasants' own needs in regard to food, clothing and articles for daily use, agricultural products and industrial products with the former as raw materials represent around 80 to 85 percent of the consumer goods for urban residents. Of the consumer goods on the market, agricultural products and industrial products with the former as raw materials account for around 70 to 75 percent. From this we can see that as long as agriculture is well developed, all else will transpire accordingly. More things will be available on the market. The people will be happy. The economic situation in our country will basically become stable. Agriculture is the foundation of the national economy. With agriculture developed, other industries can also move forward. Therefore, as far as the needs of production or needs in everyday life are concerned, we must adhere to the planned economy for agriculture and strengthen planned guidance. The peasants can also only carry out activities within the limits of national plans. Only in this way can we guarantee the stability and development of the economy.

At present, the various forms of the agricultural production responsibility system universally established in the vast rural areas of the country represent the production responsibility system of the socialist agricultural collective economy. This is only an improvement on the original production management method and represents a readjustment of the production relations. In no way can we regard it as a case of "distributing land for individual farming" and "returning land to original owners." With the implementation of the agricultural production responsibility system, the agricultural economy has become unusually active. Under these circumstances, it is especially necessary to strengthen planned guidance and to correctly handle the relationships between the state, the collective and the individual. Before the introduction of the agricultural production responsibility system in Anhui Province, the percentages of various social commodities provided by the countryside were very low. For example, grain accounted for only around 19 percent, and oil-bearing crops only about 30 percent. Last year, the percentage of commodity grain reached upwards of 25 percent and that of oil-bearing crops upwards of 80 percent. Most of the other agricultural and sideline products were also sold. After the prices for agricultural and sideline products were raised, four different prices appeared: the price for planned state purchases, the price for fixed purchase quotas, the price for purchases over and above a given quota and the negotiated (or fluctuating) price. There have thus appeared new contradictions between buying and selling. Should we put the main emphasis on planned cultivation of crops and take regulation by market mechanism as a supplementary factor, or should we allow the free cultivation of crops based on market prices? In this regard, we must insist on taking planned economy as the main factor and regulation by market mechanism as the supplementary one. Otherwise, problems would arise and we would take a detour.

Some people have interpreted "decisionmaking power" and "gearing measures to local conditions" as freedom for operation. This is wrong. To respect the production teams' decisionmaking power is to better arouse the enthusiasm of producers. To gear measures to local conditions is to better develop economic returns.

Experience shows that this policy decision by the party Central Committee is correct. In the future, we must continue to adhere to it. To ensure the overall realization of the projected targets of the state, we must not only respect the decisionmaking power of production teams and commune members, but also call for the centralized power of the state. We must not only take partial interests into consideration, allowing them to develop the strong points and avoid the weak ones, but also take the overall long-term interests of the state into account. Therefore, agricultural activities must be subordinated to state plans. Where there are contradictions between agricultural activities and state plans, the production teams and commune members must obey state plans. If they operate independently, engage in production blindly and cultivate crops freely, this would be harmful to the state and, in the final analysis, harmful to the peasants' own interests.

In subordinating agricultural production to state plans, the best way is to practice the contract system. Experience shows that this represents a link between state plans and agricultural production. For example, in introducing the responsibility system, over 20,000 production teams in Chu County, Anhui Province, starting from 1979, have universally signed production, supply and sales contracts. Be it a production quota fixed for a group or a household or a work quota for a household, a contract is signed at the level where responsibility is involved. With the development of the responsibility system in form, the contract has also shown continuous improvement in content. The contents of a contract chiefly cover the output (output value) of grain, oil, cotton, tobacco, hemp, tea, pigs, poultry, eggs and other agricultural and sideline products that the peasants contract for, sales commitments to the state, public accumulated funds to be surrendered to the higher levels, percentages to be deducted, and so forth. The relevant higher-level department, for its part, undertakes supplying industrial products and the means of production according to plans, such as chemical fertilizer, insecticides, rewards for sales exceeding a quota, and so forth. In the past 2 years or so, the various plans and targets for which the peasants of this area signed contracts with the state have been overfulfilled. The contract system helps stabilize and perfect the various forms of the responsibility system. It also represents an effective way of using economic means to strengthen agricultural production plans.

In introducing the planned economy in agriculture, we must also foster the idea of mass agriculture and properly handle the distribution of agricultural crops in a rational manner. Since the 3rd Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, necessary readjustments have been made in the composition of farm crops. The area of land sown to grain has been properly reduced. The area planted with economic crops has been enlarged. The superior features of different areas and of mountains and streams have begun to be brought into play. In the several years of readjustment, grain has always been given primary attention. The economic returns are satisfactory. Now the area sown to grain should be put on a stable basis and cannot be reduced. It has been decided to fix the area sown to grain in Anhui at 90 million mu -- a figure which cannot be reduced. Future attention will be concentrated on per-unit output in an effort to bring about a steady output increase. The area sown to cotton, tobacco leaves and rape will also be fixed. Big fluctuations in area will be prevented. We must direct our efforts toward per-unit output. As to those economic crops that do not compete with grain for land, we must make the fullest use of uncultivated mountains and hills and seek the fullest possible development.

In introducing the planned economy in agriculture, we must strengthen ideological and political work among peasants. We must educate them so that they can have a concept of the whole situation and cherish long-term objectives. If we only have immediate interests in mind, we cannot relaize the modernization of agriculture. We must educate peasants so that they will not spend lavishly and instead save money for reproduction and for modernization. They must also save for a rainy day and use bountiful harvests to offset any shortfall arising from a crop failure.

Necessary administrative interference is unavoidable. While chiefly adopting economic means, we must resort to administrative interference as a supplement for taking into consideration the interests of all fields.

This will help give better play to the beneficial role of economic means. It should also be pointed out that to perfect the responsibility system and the contract system, we must put our policy on a stable and continuous basis. We must avoid drawing up a new set of regulations every year.

DENG YINGCHAO ADDRESSES CHILD CARE WORKERS

OW260156 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1204 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] More than 6,000 child care workers in the capital have attended a report meeting this morning at the Great Hall of the People to mark the 1 June International Children's Day. Those who spoke at the meeting called on various circles in society to continue publicizing the significance of bringing up, educating and cultivating children, further give full play to the new socialist habit of cherishing the next generation and make fresh contributions to the vigorous growth of children.

The report meeting was presided over by Kang Keqing, chairman of the National Children's Work Coordinating Committee. Deng Yingchao, member of the Political Bureau of the CCP Central Committee, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and honorary president of All-China Women's Federation, attended the meeting and delivered a speech. First of all, she paid her deepest respect and extended her cordial greetings to all comrades who have worked hard and made contributions to the healthy growth of children.

Deng Yingchao said: When we gather here today, we cannot help remembering Comrade Soong Ching Ling, who devoted her whole life to the revolution and to the healthy growth of children. Let us keep her in mind and constantly learn from her. Deng Yingchao said: Since the party Central Committee called on the whole party and society to pay attention to and concern themselves with children's healthy growth early last year, the party committees at all levels and various circles have attached great importance to child care work, encouraged and supported child care workers and created a new atmosphere in doing work for children.

Deng Yingchao called for efforts to persistently, extensively and penetratingly publicize the necessity and significance for the whole party and society of paying attention to, and showing concern for, the healthy growth of children to deepen the understanding of the whole society and all families in work for children. She said: To do a good job in child care work is the beginning of the hundred years required to bear fruit in educating people and the starting point for vigorously developing the Chinese nation, promoting the two civilizations and bringing up the new generation. It also constitutes an important step in our great course of development in building socialism and working hard toward the goal of communism. We must attach importance to child care work as something of strategic significance. To do a good job in bringing up children is an arduous, extraordinary and glorious task. Those who have done well in child care work will be encouraged, supported, cited and awarded. Those who show negligence in work will be educated and criticized, and those who have committed serious offenses by harming and persecuting children will be duly punished by law.

Deng Yingchao hoped that child care workers are good at studying. She said: To carry out child care work well, it is necessary to broaden our knowledge. All child care workers must study child psychology, child physiology and child pedagogy as well as other vocational skills having Marxism-Leninism as the guiding thought, incessantly improve their professional competence, accumulate a wealth of knowledge and widen their field of vision. The whole party and society must respect, support and concern themselves with child care workers, so that they can carry out their work even better.

Deng Yingchao said: In educating children, the school, family and society must fulfill their own responsibilities and closely cooperate. She hoped that workers in nurseries and child care centers and teachers would actively and creatively make use of their wisdom and determination to do a good job in bringing up educating and cultivating children. She hoped that parents would understand the signficance of carrying out family education and scientific methods in educating children.

She hoped that various departments would take the initiative in showing concern for children, vigorously enriching their extracurricular activities and providing them with various places to carry out their activities and with nutrition, both material and moral. She hoped that all coordinating organs would help schools, society and families exchange information and gradually unify their thinking and action.

Deng Yingchao said: You are child care workers as well as propagandists for work on child care. Not only must you continually deepen your own practical understanding, but you must also publicize the significant, strategic meaning of child care work to society as a whole, and popularize correct thinking and methods in carrying out education. You have rich experience in your work. If you carry our propaganda work, what you say will be convincing. Deng Yingchao said: Beijing is the capital of our socialist motherland, with more than 100 auditoriums and theaters. However, there is not a single regular place for children, who account for 1/3 of the population, to see a play or opera. This is not right. She urged departments concerned to resolutely solve this problem. Luo Ying, director of the China children's art theater, said in her speech: All people love spring, because spring is the season in which all things on earth grow. Childhood is the spring of one's life, and children represent the spring of the motherland. When we perform for children, we feel that we bask in the sunlight and enchanting spring scene. We wholeheartedly cherish our cause to perform for children and are willing to dedicate our entire life to them.

Zhao Yan, an after-school activities counsellor at the Beiyingfang primary school, in Xicheng District of Beijing, described in her speech how she, a victim of poliomyelitis, became an outstanding after-school activities counsellor and a Young Pioneer. She said: To take care of and educate children is the responsibility and obligation of every member of society. All the people should take care of and cherish children. She expressed her determination to dedicate herself to serving children. She pledged to keep her spirit young and maintain childlike innoncence forever.

Song Zhiqing, a teacher at the Mianhuahutong child care center in Xicheng District, Beijing, said in her speech: Children's education plays a significant role in laying the foundation for training competent people. On the basis of her 30-odd years of experience, she pointed out: To do a good job in educating children, we must love them. The example of the teacher plays a significant role in helping children foster a fine character and morals. To maintain close ties with the parents is an important link in helping children foster a fine character and morals. She said: We must closely link education in child care centers with that of families and society. Only by doing so, will it be possible to insure the implementation of the party's education policy in all-round manner.

Also attending the report meeting were responsible persons of the departments concerned Zhu Muzhi, He Dongchang, Han Ying, Hua Nan, Qiu Chunfu, Luo Jun, Jiao Ruoyu, Gao Dengbang, Wang Lei, Lin Mohan, Guo Liwen, Ji Long, Gu Xiulian, Zhang Wensong, Wu Lan, Zhou Pengcheng, Lin Bomin, Bai Jiefu, Yan Wenjing, Wu Quanheng, Hu Dehua, Zhang Shuyi, Dong Nianli and Xu Guang. The report meeting was sponsored by the national children's work coordinating committee. The latest feature film by the Beijing children's film studio, entitled "Echoing Brother" was shown after the meeting.

GUANGMING RIBAO ON PUBLIC OWNERSHIP SYSTEM

HK250701 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 3

[Article by Fang Sheng [2455 3932] and Wang Ruisun [3769 3843 5549]: "Public Ownership of Means of Production Is the Basis of China's Socialist Economic System"]

[Text] The "draft of the revised constitution of the PRC" stipulates: "The basis of the socialist economic system of the PRC is socialist public ownership of the means of production, that is, ownership by the whole people, and collective ownership of the laboring masses.

The socialist economic system has abolished the system of exploitation of man by man; it applies the principle "from each according to his ability, to each according to his work." This stipulation has, from the angle of the economic system, made a clear distinction between a socialist society and all other societies of private ownership in history and shown clearly the economic roots for the superiority of the socialist system and the economic base upon which all the superstructure of the socialist society has been built.

Socialist public ownership is entirely different from the private system of ownership. In a society with private ownership, the means of production belong to individual persons. In that society, there are also means of production "owned by the whole society" in name but, in such a society, the exploiting class are always the rulers while the laborers are always the ruled, so that it is impossible for the laborers to become the owners of the "publicly owned" means of production.

In the present stage of China's socialist development, public ownership of the means of production takes two forms: ownership by the whole people, and collective ownership by the laboring masses. Under the conditions where the state of dictatorship of the proletariat (people's democratic dictatorship in our country) still exists, this state, in addition to the function of suppressing the sabotage activities of the hostile forces and elements that adopt a hostile attitude toward the socialist system, also assumes ownership of the means of production in the name of the whole society. Therefore, public ownership means state ownership by the dictatorship of the proletariat. This is a form of socialist public ownership. Another form is collective ownership by the laboring masses. This is a form of public ownership that is suited to the level of development of the productive forces and coexists with ownership by the whole people in a certain historical period. This collective ownership is different from the one set up under the conditions of capitalism by some leaders through a cooperative movement. Under the conditions where capitalist ownership holds a dominant position, the means of production owned collectively can only play their role as capital. This economy owned collectively by the laborers still has to compete with the capitalists and the salaries of staff and workers also has to be restricted by the capitalist labor market. Therefore, although the laborers' cooperatives in the capitalist society manifest the historical trend of the supersession of capitalism by socialism, it is only under the conditions where ownership by the whole people is in a dominant position and where they attach themselves to ownership by the whole people that they are socialist in character.

Socialist public ownership of the means of production is the basis of the socialist economic system and the principle "to each according to his work" is a component part of the socialist economic system. In the initial stage of communism, owing to the realization of public ownership of the means of production, the separation of laborers from the means of production has been put to an end to that laborers no longer suffer from exploitation. At the same time, owing to the fact that products have not been supplied in abundant quantities and that the people's consciousness has not been greatly raised, the relationship between an individual and the society can only be based on the principle "to each according to his work." Therefore, the principle "to each according to his work" is an important aspect by which socialist public ownership of the means of production is achieved economically. The other aspects of the socialist economic system are also the realization of public ownership in different aspects.

If private ownership is the breeding ground of all crimes in society when it becomes shackles that fetter the development of productive forces, then socialist public ownership of the means of production has formed a striking contrast with it by becoming the source of happiness for the broad masses of people and by displaying its superiority with each passing day, for it has opened up a broad area for the development of productive forces. In this respect, we can get proof from the various aspects of the economic life of socialist society.

As regards the basic feature of socialist production, the integration of laborers as a whole with the means of production owned by the laborers as a whole is a direct one. The integration of an individual laborer with the means of production owned by the laborers as a whole is no longer hindered by the private ownership of the means of production. Therefore, unemployment is no longer inevitable for the laborers in the socialist system. In a society with private ownership, production is aimed at promoting the interests of private owners. Under the socialist system, however, the laborers become the masters of society. Therefore, socialist production can only be aimed at meeting the daily growing needs of the laborers. In a society with private ownership, not only is the society divided into the exploiters and the exploited but the entire society is made up of the mutually separated private owners. Therefore, although the national economy may, in a certain sense, develop in a planned way, it can never have a unified will or achieve an all-round development in a planned way. Under the socialist system, as a result of the elimination of private ownership and class antagonism, the guiding and management bodies representing the interests of the whole society become the organizers of the economic life of the socialist society so that the entire socialist economy can be conducted in a planned way.

As regards the basic feature of socialist distribution, social ownership of the means of production determines that laborers under the socialist system are no longer exploited. A part of labor products by the laborers are consumed by the laborers themselves and the other part is supplied to the society. This part is, in the final analysis, used for the benefit of the laborers. The principle "to each according to his work" is a basic principle of socialist distribution, but it is not the only principle. Under the socialist system, the society ensures the material benefits of the disabled and the old who have lost their ability to work and who are not supported by their families or the children who are not brought up by their families.

As regards the basic feature of socialist exchange, socialist exchange is different from that under the conditions of simple commodity production and capitalist commodity production. The socialist exchange and the production os socialist value are subordinated to the production of the use value aimed at meeting the needs of the laborers. Therefore, the various production units under the socialist system should make a profit, but they should not seek profit exclusively; they should not only take their own interests into account but should also take the interests of the whole society as its final objective and subordinate their own interests to those of the whole society. Under the socialist system, the society, through planning, various policies and systems, ensures the unification of use value and value and ensures the interests of the various units and the whole society.

As regards the basic feature of socialist consumption, the consumption level of a country is chiefly determined directly by the production level of that country but it is also affected by distribution under the socialist system. For example, under the conditions where production levels are the same, socialist distribution enables the laborers to have a higher consumption level than they do under the distribution system of private ownership. Under the socialist system, the society scientifically guides the consumption of the society and makes the pattern of consumption conform to the interests of the people.

The basic features of the economic life of a socialist society enumerated above reflect the nature of the socialist economic system which takes public ownership of the means of production as its basis. It can thus be seen that the socialist system that has emerged in the world so far is indeed a social system that can truly bring a happy life to the people. Any doubts or vacillations toward the socialist system are groundless.

However, we should also recognize that, in the economic life of China's socialist society, there are also some phenomena that do not constitute the nature of socialism.

For example, in the field of production, some people who have the ability to work cannot get jobs for a time; sometimes production is not aimed at meeting the needs of the laborers; in the development of the national economy, there are also the phenomena of disproportion. In the field of distribution, there is also waste caused by overstaffed organizations and excessive numbers of personnel not engaged in production, as well as the phenomena that some government cadres encroach upon the fruits of labor of the laborers; in the field of exchange, a few units and individuals make use of the market to seek profit exclusively and disrupt state planning. In the field of consumption, there are also the pehnomena of extravagance and waste. We can still cite quite a few similar examples. How should we treat these phenomena? None of these things stem from the socialist eocnomic system itself; neither are they are inevitable phenomena of socialist economic life. Therefore, they can be gradually overcome through the improvement of our work.

Naturally, we should also recognize that these phenomena do not constitute the nature of the socialist economic system, but in order to eliminate them, we should spend time and should be provided with the necessary conditions. Some of them cannot be eliminated all at once and they will emerge again under new conditions. What is important is that we should not be afraid of difficulties, still less lose confidence in socialism by confusing the essence with the appearance. We should not only recognize the elements that constitute the nature of the socialist economic system which hold a dominant position in the economic life of the socialist society, but also recognize that some phenomena that do not constitute the nature of the socialist economic system are inevitable in a certain stage of development in socialist society. We should learn to develop the socialist economy and engage in socialist construction according to the basic features of the economic life of socialist society. As regards the elements that do not constitute the nature of socialism, it is necessary to wage resolute struggle against them, or adopt the policy of utilization, restriction and transformation toward them or eliminate them gradually through the accumulation of experience and the improvement of work as the case may be.

As has been stated above, since public ownership of themeans of production is the basis of the socialist economic system, it is necessary to safeguard, consolidate and develop socialist public ownership of the means of production in order to bring into full play the superiority of the socialist economic system. The "draft of the revised constitution of the PRC" stipulates in explicit terms: "Socialist public property is sacred and inviolable." The state property and resources are the material basis for carrying out the socialist modernization drive. They should be protected by the state law, and disruption of the socialist economy and public interests by any people by any means is prohibited. It is a crime to disrupt socialist construction and to encroach upon the property owned by the whole people or owned collectively by the laboring masses. Such crimes should be punished according to law. At present, cracking down on the criminal activities in the economic field is a struggle to safeguard the socialist systm of public ownership. It has a bearing on the prosperity or decline of our party and state. We should take it seriously and should by no means regard it as unimportant.

In order to consolidate and develop socialist public ownership, it is necessary, fundamentally speaking, to engage in vigorous socialist economic construction. Being suited to socialized mass production, socialist public ownership has greatly promoted the development of the social productive forces. The development of the productive forces also consoldiates and develops socialist public ownership. Therefore, it is necessary for every laborer or cadre to study and master the knowledge related to socialist public ownership, the socialist economic system and the economic life of socialist society, to study and master the economics of productive forces, the branches of the economy such as industry, agriculture, commerce and finance, as well as other useful economic and scientific knowledge, and to engage in socialist economic construction in order to further consolidate and develop socialist public ownership.

LEADERS ATTEND LAST RITES FOR MA YINCHU

OW231131 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1520 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 22 May (XINHUA) -- The remains of Comrade Ma Yinchu were cremated this afternoon at Babaoshan, Beijing. The funeral group for Comrade Ma Yinchu, composed of Comrades Liu Lantao, Wu Xinyu, Ping Jiesan, Jiang Nanxiang and Zhang Longxiang, told the XINHUA reporter that in accordance with Comrade Ma Yinchu's last wish and his family's request, Comrade Ma Yinchu's funeral was to be simple in adherence to principle and that no memorial meeting would be held.

Party and state leaders Chen Yun, Peng Zhen and Deng Yingchao and Comrades Li Weihan and Hu Ziang today offered their condolences to members of Comrade Ma Yinchu's family.

This afternoon a ceremony was held at the Beijing hospital to pay last respects to the remains of Comrade Ma Yinchu. Present to pay their last respects were: party and state leaders Ulanhu, Peng Chong, Xi Zhongxun, Hu Qiaomu, Yao Yilin, Xu Deheng, Yang Shangkun, Banqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyancan, Zhu Xuefan and Bo Yibo; Vice Chairmen of the CPPCC National Committee Liu Lantao, Kang Keqing, Ji Fang, Hu Yuzhi, Wang Kunlun, Cheng Zihua, Burhan Shahidi, Zhou Peiyuan, Qian Changzhao and Dong Qiwu; members and deputy secretaries general of the NPC Standing Committee; Standing Committee members; members and deputy secretaries general of the CPPCC National Committee currently in Beijing; responsible persons of departments concerned Yang Jingren, He Dongchang, Bu Ming and Zhang Longxiang; and Comrade Ma Yinchu's family members and friends -- more than 400 people in all.

Comrade Ma Yinchu was an old friend of the Chinese Communist Party. In the mid-1950's he put forward a "new population theory" focusing on birth control and improving population quality and a new economic theory of overall balance and proportionate development. He held that our population "grew too fast," "adversely affecting accumulation and industrialization" and "was an extremely heavy burden." He advocated "family planning" and "late marriage." He held that to strike an overall balance in the national economy, we must not onesidedly stress heavy industry but must actively develop light industry and agriculture at the same time. He called for importing advanced technology and equipment from foreign countries and making full use of the law of value and so forth. With absolute sincerity, he pointed out the errors at that time and offered salutary advice, but he was treated very unfairly then. Due to the plotting and incitement by Kang Sheng and Chen Boda, Comrade Ma Yinchu became the target of "criticisms"; what was correct was described as wrong and academic questions were treated as political problems. He was labeled and charged as a "representative of the bourgeoisie," "China's Malthus," "antiparty and antisocialism," and so on and so forth. For 20 long years after that he lived without attracting public attention. But Comrade Ma Yinchu remained concerned about affairs of the party and the state. In the 1960's he wrote to central leading comrades and frankly expressed his views on such questions as studying Mao Zedong Thought, preventing the personality cult and so forth.

Since the 3d plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee, under the direct attention of the party Central Committee, the problem of Comrade Ma Yinchu has been completely redressed. It has been affirmed that his new population theory and economic theory of overall balance are all correct.

When he was again named honorary president of Beijing University, he said with a broad smile: Under the leadership of the party, Beijing Unviersity, which has a glorious tradition, should from now on make contributions to the four modernizations.

GUANGMING RIBAO ON ECONOMIC RESTRUCTURING FORUM

HK220830 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 16 May 82 p 1

[Report by reporter Fang Gongwen [2455 1872 2429]: "State Commission for Restructuring the Economic System and State Council's Economic Research Center Decide to Organize Discussion on Theoretical Questions on Restructuring Economic Management System"]

[Text] To formulate overall plans for restructuring our country's economic system and promote the smooth progress of this work, it is necessary to make further theoretical preparations. To do so, the State Commission for Restructuring the Economic System and State Council Economic Research Center have decided to launch discussions on questions of theory in restructuring the economic system, and a mobilization meeting was held on the morning of 4 May. More than 80 representatives from various economic research units, colleges and universities in the capital, and other representatives from propaganda and press departments attended the meeting.

The meeting was presided over by Zhou Taihe, deputy director of the State Commission for Restructuring the Economic System. He said: In his speech delivered at the Fourth Plenary Session of the Fifth NPC, Premier Zhao Ziyang talked about the question of restructuring the economic system, saying: "Our present task is to sum up past experiences in restructuring the economic system and gradually implement them on the basis of thorough investigation and study and repeated scientific contention and evidence." The scientific contention and evidence mentioned here refer to very important theoretical contention and evidence. In other words, we should be clear about the theoretical contention and evidence for restructuring. Therefore, conscientiously organizing discussions on theoretical questions in restructuring the economic system is a precondition for formulating well overall plans for the restructuring economic system. At present, cadres and masses have different understandings of some theoretical questions. Extensive and thoroughgoing understanding of cadres at all levels and in making joint efforts to restructure our economic system.

Xue Muqiao, adviser to the State Commission for Restructuring the Economic System and responsible person of the State Council Economic Research Center, delivered a speech at the meeting entitled "On the Discussion of Theoretical Question in Restructuring the Economic Management System." Reviewing discussions on theoretical questions in restructuring the economic management system held over the past 3 years, he pointed out: The main orientation of theoretical discussions in restructuring the economic system in recent years is correct. The achievements outweigh everything else, and a breakthrough has been effected in economic theory. For example, after studying the the production of socialist commodities and law of value, we have corrected the lopsided views that the means of production are not commodities and that law of value does not play the role of regulating production, and so forth. Without such achievements in our theoretical study, it is difficult to imagine how it would have possible for us to carry out experiments in restructuring the economic system in recent years. At the same time, we should keep a clear head. While making appraisals of our achievements, we should realize the existing problems. In recent years, more or less lopsided views occurred in a number of our articles. For instance, while attaching importance to the study of the commodity character of the socialist economy and the role of the law of value, we have failed to pay sufficient attention to upholding the planned economy. A small number of comrades have even put forth some erroneous views. We should seek truth from facts and make efforts to correct lopsided and improper views so that we will constantly enhance theoretical understanding and gradually make progress.

Xue Muqiao pointed out: To ensure that the restructuring of our economic management system will not go astray, it is imperative that we do our theoretical research work well in the future. It is necessary to call together people in the economic field and economists throughout the country to carry out more extensive discussions over the past 3 years to raise these discussions to a higher theoretical level. The discussions this time should be healthy and comradely discussions. We should uphold the spirit of emancipating the minds, the principle of letting a hundred schools of thought contend, the scientific attitude of seeking truth from facts and the style of being eager to study.

Xue Muqiao added in his speech: At present, there are many theoretical questions on restructuring the economic system which should be studied and discussed. The two most important questions concern, first, the relationship between planned economy and markets, including the relationship between commodity economy and planned economy, and the relationship between regulation by planning mechanism and market mechanism and the relationship between market, market economy and regulation by market mechanism, and second, the relationship between the parts and the whole, that is, the relations between dissemination and concentration of power.

Yu Guangyuan, an executive member of the State Council's Economic Research Center and vice president of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, also made a speech at the meeting. He pointed out: Sticking to the socialist system in restructuring the economic system means sticking to the public ownership of the socialist means of production and the practice of making plans. The aim of restructuring the economic system is to develop production and enhance labor productivity so as to fully use manpower resources, land resources and economic resources, stabilize economic growth and raise the people's standard of living. He stressed: We should study the historical experiences of foreign countries and our own in restructuring economic systems. We should also pay attention to the study of the history of socialist economy, the history of the economic system and the history of the restructuring of the economic system.

The meeting made arrangements for ways of carrying out the discussions. In light of the progress of the discussions, the State Commission for Restructuring the Economic System and the State Council's Economic Research Center will arrange exchanges of opinions in various forms, so that the discussions will continuously progress in depth.

HUANG HUA ATTENDS DIPLOMATIC FILM RECEPTION

OW211718 Beijing XINHUA in English 1537 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 21 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Culture jointly gave a film reception here this evening for heads of diplomatic missions to China, embassy officials and their wives. The wide-screen color feature film "Shaolin Temple" was shown.

Chinese State Councillor and Foreign Minister Huang Hua and leading members of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Culture were present. Also among the guests were representatives of international organizations and foreign correspondents in Beijing.

FUJIAN PROPAGANDA WORK CONFERENCE CONCLUDES

OW231500 Fuzhou Fujian Provincial Service in Mandarin 1120 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpts] The provincial propaganda work conference, which ended on 22 May, pointed out that great achievements were made in the first decorum and courtesy month in the province. At present, it is necessary to consolidate the achievements, advance from victory to victory, carry on the "five stresses and four beauties" activities in a sustained and thorough way and make these activities a regular and institutionalized practice.

The propaganda work conference, which lasted 5 days, was jointly held by the propaganda department of the provincial party committee and the general office of the provincial people's congress standing committee. The main items on the agenda to the conference were: to study and arrange propaganda work for organizing the people throughout the province to discuss the draft revised constitution; to transmit and implement the guidelines of the national summation meeting on the all-people decorum and courtesy month activities; to sum up the achievements and experiences in the province's first decorum and courtesy month; and to study and arrange for developing in depth the "five stresses and four beauties" activities. At the same time, the meeting also drew up plans on propaganda work with regard to the current economic situation and the census.

Cheng Xu, secretary of the provincial party committee, spoke at the meeting. Cai Li, standing committee member of the provincial party committee and vice chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee, transmitted instructions of the party Central Committee and the provincial party committee on disseminating the draft revised constitution for discussion by all the people.

The meeting emphasized that at present the leadership at all levels must continue to increase understanding, prevent and overcome the tendency to relax, pay attention to both material and cultural developments and carry on the "five stresses and four beauties" activities in a sustained and thorough way.

The meeting pointed out that at present the public health, transport and cultural facilities in cities far from meet the requirements of the four modernizations and the people's daily needs. Governments at all levels should draw up plans and allocate financial and material resources from local sources to step up construction of these basic facilities in order to consolidate the achievements made in putting an end to dirtiness and disorder and improving service, which is presently poor.

SECOND JIANGSU URBAN WORK MEETING ENDS 14 MAY

OW161036 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 15 May 82

[Excerpts] The second Jiangsu provincial urban work meeting, sponsored by the provincial CCP committee, lasted 9 days and concluded on 14 May in Changzhou. Comrade Wang Bingshi, standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee and provincial vice governor, presided over the closing session. Comrade Han Peixin, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, delivered a speech before the close of the session. (Liu Hegeng), standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee and provincial vice governor, was among the comrades attending the session.

Comrade Han Peixin began his speech by emphasizing the need to promote both material and spiritual civilization in urban work. He said: To achieve socialist modernization with the realization of communism as our ultimate goal, we should not only attain a high level of material civilization, but also a high level of spiritual civilization. If we are rich materially but poor and empty spiritually, our work of socialist modernization may go astray.

He said: In promoting an area's spiritual civilizatiom the work done in the urban district plays a very important and leading part. Success in promoting spiritual civilization in urban districts will have an exemplifying and stimulating effect on the whole society. Our province has numerous cities and towns -- a characteristic which deserves our great attention in promoting material and spiritual civilizations. In other words, in promoting our province's socialist spiritual civilization, we should first do a successful job in promoting spiritual civilization in our cities and towns.

He further pointed out: Promotion of spiritual civilization is a long-term task. As the effects caused by the 10 years of internal disorder have not been completely eradicated, we should pay particular attention to the work on ideology and morality. Among the broad masses of people, it is imperative to conduct an extensive education in social ethics, in the moral code to be followed by people of all professions and in the moral practice with regard to marriage and relations between family members. Energetic efforts should be made to promoting the moral practice of paying attention to overall interests and principles; respecting, uniting with and helping each other; being just and sincere; and serving the people and being responsible to them.

In addition, Comrade Han Peixin's speech elaborated on the necessity to gradually bring about a balanced development of economic work and other social construction projects in cities and towns, and on the question of the harmonious development of the urban and rural economies, with the cities as economic centers. He stressed: In our guiding ideology for urban construction, we should maintain a correct relationship between economic construction work and other urban construction projects. This means that while making serious efforts to promote production, we should have an overall plan for the development of various social undertakings in cities and towns as well. Based on the principle that, first, the people must have sufficient food and, second, socialist construction must be carried out, we should gradually improve people's livelihood by developing production and, at the same time, make overall planning and proper arrangements by taking all relevant factors into consideration for the proportionate and harmonious development of all undertakings in cities and towns, including economic, social, scientific and technological, cultural and educational projects.

Comrade Han Peixin's speech also touched on construction work in small cities and towns. He said: In view of the actual situation in Jiangsu, we should formulate a plan for the step-by-step construction of the existing small cities and towns rather than arbitrarily developing many new ones. Still less should we arbitrarily expand the scopes of small cities and towns by encouraging the immigration of people from rural areas. Moreover, the construction work in small cities and towns should be based on the actual situation. In this work we should neither mechanically copy the construction of big cities nor use a uniform method for all small cities and towns. What we should do is base the work on the principle of facilitating production and providing amenities for the masses and strive to serve the needs of the town people and the purpose of building a new socialist countryside.

SHANGHAI ISSUES REGULATION ON INDIVIDUAL ECONOMY

OW241200 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpts] The Shanghai Municipal People's Government recently approved and transmitted a regulation submitted by the municipal bureau of industry and commerce as a supplement to the document "Some Questions on Giving Support to Municipal and Township Individual Economies." The municipal people's government also asked the city's district and county people's governments to actively support individual economies set up by laborers in the city and its townships.

The supplementary regulation abolishes the restriction that limits an individual economy to only one trade and permits an individual economy to run two or three additional trades that are closely related to the original trade.

The supplementary regulation says that if an individual economy is beyond the capacity of one person to handle, no more than two helpers may be hired. If an individual economy has a special skill, no more than five apprentices may be accepted, or the economy may form a partnership with other individual economies. However, a partnership of individual economies may not hire helpers or accept apprentices.

The document also stipulates that people running individual economies are equal in both social and political status with staff and workers of enterprises run by the state or collective. Advanced persons of individual economies may be accepted by the party and the CYL as members if they meet the requirements of party and CYL membership.

SHANGHAI DEVELOPS PRODUCTION LINE FOR TEXTILES

OW191251 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1414 GMT 18 May 82

[Exceprts] Shanghai, 18 May -- The Shanghai municipal textile industry bureau and the Shanghai petrochemical general plant are jointly organizing "one dragon" [yi tiao long 0001 2742 7893; meaning "complete"] production lines up to the end product to develop new chemical fibers. They expect to successfully trial-produce polyester, polyvinyl alcohol and acrylic fibers of special style and unique characteristics before the National Day this year. Adopting this "one dragon" production line method to develop new products is an effective measure to catch up with and surpass world standards. It was developed by the Shanghai municipal economic committee to take advantage of the technical capabilities of Shanghai's textile industry, of the readily available raw materials and of the new equipment of the Shanghai petrochemical general plant. A total of 20 major categories of new chemical fibers will be manufactured in the initial stage. The Shanghai petrochemical general piant's polyester, polyvinyl alcohol and acrylic fibers subplants have organized 20 "dragons" with over 30 of Shanghai's textile, printing and dyeing and textile research units. Each "dragon" has firmly set its target, specified its responsibility, determined the progress schedule for new product development and mapped out the concrete measures for achieving its goal.

In 1980, the Shanghai municipal textile bureau and the Shanghai petrochemical general plant organized several production lines with a view to expanding the utility of acrylic fibers. Good results were achieved in developing new products and increasing economic results. The 20 "dragons' organized this year under the leadership of the Shanghai municipal economic committee are based on the 1980 experience.

Editor's note: Shanghai's adoption of the "one dragon" method to develop new products is of great significance not only to the chemical fiber trade, but to the whole industry, in developing new products. An important task at present for the industrial front, in particular the consumer goods industry, is to thoroughly replace the outdated production mode and improve product quality so that new generations of products will be created, more new materials and processes put to use and more new products made available. This goal can hardly be achieved if we try to accomplish everything within a "small and comprehensive" or a "big and comprehensive" plant. Shanghai's method provides people with an inspiration: By adopting the "one dragon" method in developing new products, and by adequately taking care of the intersts of all parties concerned, breaking down the barriers among departments. closely coordinating with one another in all matters from production to scientific research, from raw materials to processing and from dragon head to dragon tail, benefiting one another and fully cooperating with one another, and marshaling the strength of all parties concerned for one common goal, we will promote tapping of our immense potential and quickly achieve more results. In developing new generations of products of higher grade, if workers, cadres and technical personnel everywhere follow Shanghai's example of going all out and following the slogan "I must have something that others don't, I must have more than others, I must have better products if others have more and I must shift to something else if others' products are better," then our industrial front will have a bright future. (end editor's note)

GUANGDONG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS MEETING CONCLUDES

HK230256 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 22 May 82

[Summary] The 17th Session of the Guangdong Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee concluded on 22 May. The 22 May session discussed the main items of work for the committee in 1982. These items are: under the unified leadership and arrangement of the provincial CCP committee, to use the weapon of law to strengthen supervision of the law and ensure the smooth progress of the struggle against serious economic crimes; to discuss and reach decisions on major issues in the province, such as those involving politics, economics, culture and education, science and technology and Overseas Chinese affairs; to work closely with the provincial government and the departments concerned to formulate local laws; to organize the study of the draft of the revised constitution; to prepare for the next people's congress; and to strive to improve the quality of work of the standing committee.

GUANGZHOU PLA TAKE STEPS AGAINST BUREAUCRACY

HK240423 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Leading organs of the Guangzhou PLA units have adopted effective measures to reduce the number of bulletins, brief reports and meetings and to restructure the administration with a view to combating bureaucracy and improving work efficiency. The measures were taken because the Guangzhou PLA units suffered from too many circulars and cables, meetings, bulletins, brief reports and urgent messages, and an excessive number of leading offices.

Checking and putting a stop to the trend of the "five excessives" is an important step towards improving the work style and efficiency of leadership. In the first half of May, leaders of the Guangzhou PLA units, therefore, held a meeting and adopted decisive measures to cope with the "five excessives." The measures are: 1) The number of bulletins and brief reports published will be reduced from 38 to 14. 2) Some commissions, leading groups and administrative offices will be abolished. The number of commissions and leading groups will be reduced from 32 to 15, while the number of administrative offices will be reduced from 14 to 7. 3) Meetings and cadres' training will be reduced. The 108 meetings which were scheduled to be held this year will be cut by 37. The leading cadres' training courses at regimental level will be limited to five this year. 4) The quantity of circulars and cables will be reduced, but their ability will be raised.

HUBEI HOLDS PROVINCIAL MEETING OF PROGRESSIVES

Chen Pixian Speech

HK180346 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 16 May 82

[Excerpts] This afternoon, provincial CCP committee First Secretary Chen Pixian spoke at the provincial meeting of the representatives of activists and advanced units in "five stresses and four beauties" activities, and the title of his speech was "Penetratingly and Persistently Carry Out the 'Five Stresses and Four Beauties' Activities and Strive for a New Victory in the Building of Two Civilizations." [begin recording] Comrades: This is the provincial meeting of the representatives of activists and advanced units in "five stresses and four beauties" which has lasted for 5 days. We have all agreed that this meeting has gone very well. The holding of this meeting has shown that the "five stresses and four beauties" activities have been universally carried out throughout the province and gratifying results have been achieved. [end recording]

Comrade Chen Pixian's speech laid stress on three problems: The first problem concerned the situation of the "five stresses and four beauties" activities which have been carried out throughout the province over the past year or more. Comrade Chen Pixian said: Over the past year or more, under the leadership and the support of CCP committees and governments at all levels, the masses and cadres have taken an active part in these activities. The main result is that we have vigorously initiated communist morality and customs so that people's mental attitude and the relations among people have undergone a new change.

Comrade Chen Pixian said: Over the past year or more, our province has carried out the "five stresses and four beauties" activities, changed customs and habits and transformed society. We have achieved very good results, and must fully affirm this. However, we must not overestimate it. We must also see that these results are only initial; there are still many problems, and our tasks are still very arduous. From the high strategic plane of building two civilizations, we must further and profoundly understand the great significance of carrying out the "five stresses and four beauties" activities. We must deepen our understanding, eliminate and prevent the atmosphere of laxity, strengthen leadership and penetratingly and persistently carry out these activities to the end.

The second problem which Comrade Chen Pixian mentioned was that the key link of the "five stresses and four beauties" activities which are penetratingly carried out is to persistently use communist ideology and communist morality to educate people and to train a new generation which has ideals, morality and culture and abides by discipline. Comrade Chen Pixian said: We must use communist ideology and morality to set a strict demand on Communist party members and CYL members. Moreover, we must use communist ideology and morality to educate people, particularly young people and juveniles. We must make all people throughout the country, male and female, old and young, party members and nonmembers, become people who have ideals, morality and culture and abide by discipline. The "five stresses and four beauties" activities must be penetratingly and persistently carried out with stress on this fundamental objective.

After Comrade Chen Pixian explained communist ideological and moral education in detail, he talked about the third problem: The whole party should go into action, leaders should take command and the "five stresses and four beauties" activities should be penetratingly and persistently carried out to the end. Comrade Chen Pixian said: The forum which the central authroties held on the all-people decorum and courtesy month activities seriously summed up experiences and made arrangements for continuously, penetratingly and persistently carrying out the "five stresses and four beauties" activities. We must seriously study and implement them:

First, CCP committees must attach importance to them and the whole party must go into action. Leaders at all levels must firmly establish the guiding principle of grasping two civilizations simultaneously. Second, the CYL must regard doing a good job of education for young people and juveniles as its essential task. Education departments must vigorously strengthen ideological and political work for students and seriously do well in teaching political subjects. Trade unions, peasant associations, women's federations and other relevant departments must regard doing a good job of youth and juvenile work as their own important duty and seriously grasp it well. At present, we must further grasp well education in fervently cherishing our motherland, the party and the socialist system among young people and juveniles so as to make them gradually establish the correct outlook on life and world outlook.

Third, we must continue to step up control over filth, disorder and discourtesy. In exercising control over filth, we must consolidate our past achievements and continue to clean up places which have not yet been cleaned. We must further improve the appearance of busy streets, tourist spots and all public places. At present, we must pay special attention to grasping hygiene in catering and service trades. In exercising control over disorder, we must continue to conduct education in the legal system, strike resolute blows at criminal activities and teach the masses to abide by traffic regulations, uphold social order and become civilized city visitors, civilized spectators and civilized tourists. In exercising control over discourtesy, we must continue to firmly grasp straightening out the service attitude.

Fourth, we must link the "five stresses and four beauties" activities with our daily production, work and life, and formulate specific regulations and systems.

In connection with the readjustment of enterprises, industrial, communications, financial and trade systems, we must implement the national regulations for staff and workers and method of rewards and penalties for staff and workers of enterprises, formulate civilized regulations and strive to create civilized factories, civilized workshops and civilized shifts, groups and shops. In connection with the implementation of the students' regulations, schools must carry out the activities of creating civilized school grounds and civilized classes. All enterprises, units and streets must formulate decorum and courtesy pacts and systems. In connection with the carrying out of the "advanced production teams, model households and five-good commune members" activities, rural areas must formulate village codes and fold conventions, constantly eliminate old customs, establish new customs and do well in building civilized villages. All quarters must pay attention to grasping well the activities of planned parenthood, "five-good families" and civilized households and communes.

Fifth, we must encourage healthy trends, check unhealthy ones, vigorously publicize and commend good people and good events and criticize and strike blows at unhealthy trends. Leaders at all levels must take a clear-cut stand, encourage healthy trends, support the progressives and help the masses to correctly understand the advanced ideology and exemplary actions of advanced figures. They must promptly sum up and popularize advanced experiences and carry out the activities of learning from and catching up with the progressives. In the "five stresses and four beauties" activities, newspapers, journals, broadcasts, TV, literary and art works and other instruments of propaganda must vigorously publicize new people, new events and new customs which reflect communist ideology and morality. In the whole society, we must create an excellent atmosphere of feeling honorable to become progressives and actively learning from progressives. Leaders at all levels must further eliminate the state of laxity and weakness and justly and forcefully deal with this state.

At present, we are waging the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field. In connection with this struggle, we must teach the cadres and the masses to spontaneously resist the corruption and influence of capitalist ideology and the bourgeois mode of life. We must persist in the socialist orientation and uphold the honor of our country and the dignity of our nation. We must continue to resist and eliminate reactionary, pornographic, decadent cassettes and videotapes and pornographic book stalls. We must continue to oppose feudal supersitition, gambling, arranged marriages, mercenary marriages in disguise and unhealthy trends.

Sixth, we must show concern for the masses' livelihood and solve their practical problems. One of the important aspects in showing concern for the masses' livelihood is to show concern for their cultural life. Governments at all levels, factories, mines, enterprises and rural communes and brigades must do their best to use some money to establish facilities, including clubs, libraries, cultural centers and cultural rooms, and to buy some articles for use in cultural and sports activities.

In conclusion, Comrade Chen Pixian said: Comrades, over the past year or more, we have achieved very good results in our work. However, the tasks confronting us are still very arduous. We must shun arrogance and impetuosity, make sustained and redoubled efforts and penetratingly and persistently carry out the "five stresses and four beauties" activities to the end. We must do even better in building socialist material and spiritual civilization in our province and make even greater contributions toward our socialist motherland.

Ending of Meeting

HK180322 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 17 May 82

[Station recorded report: "Great Successes in Building Spiritual Civilization"]

[Excerpts] The Hubei provincial congress of activists and advanced units in promoting the "five stresses and four beauties" activities lasted 6 days and came to a successful close this afternoon. Amid joyful music, Chen Pixian, Zhang Caiqian, Yan Zheng, Huang Zhizhen and other leading comrades awarded certificates of merit to the participating activists and representatives of advanced units.

GUIYANG CONFERENCE ON IMPROVING SOCIAL ORDER

HK250641 Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] According to a GUIZHOU RIBAO report, at yesterday evening's conference by telephone on improving social order, the Guizhou Provincial CCP Committee called for laying stress on dealing blows at robbery, and making it a key task in the current drive to straighten out social order. In coping with robbery cases, departments concerned must rely on the masses and clear the cases up in good time. Those robbery gang leaders and prime culprits must be punished seriously and promptly according to the law. For other members of robbery rings and ordinary thieves, some may be given suspended sentences depending on the circumstances of each case; while most may have to be detained for reduction through labor, or be released on bail after detention, with their units standing surety for them and undertaking supervision, in order to attain the goal of education, helping and remolding. On the other hand, prompt and strong actions must be taken against rapists according to the law. The participants in the conference by telephone included the responsible people of various departments, offices, committees and political and legal organs at the provincial level; the CCP committee secretaries in charge of political and legal work and the responsible people of the political and legal departments at prefectural, autonomous prefectural and municipal levels; and the responsible people of the provincial military district, the Guiyang railway substation and other units. Comrade Wu Shi, deputy secretary of the provincial CCP committee, delivered a speech at the conference.

GUIZHOU TAKES MEASURES TO AID DISASTER AREAS

HK250938 Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] From mid-April to mid-May, 29 counties, municipalities and prefectures in Bijie Prefecture, Anshun Prefecture, Qianxinan Autonomous Prefecture, Liupanshui municipality and Guiyang municipality suffered from various relatively serious natural disasters ranging from hailstorms to floods and windstorms; as a result, the livelihood and production in these areas were disturbed. Under the leadership of the provincial people's government, the provincial supply and marketing cooperative sent officers to the disaster areas to analyze the situation. They decided to take the following three measures to assist the masses in resuming and developing production:

1. An additional 7,000 tons of chemical fertilizer must be allocated to these areas to combat the disasters. The agricultural departments concerned must be assisted in distributing chemical fertilizer to communes and production brigades level by level according to the principle of "more fertilizer for units which suffer from more serious disasters." Administration must be strengthened so as to ensure that the fertilizer is strictly and promptly transported and distributed to disaster areas.

2. The industrial and communications departments at different levels are commanded to strengthen the procurement of waste and used materials so as to increase the income of the masses in the disaster areas and allow them to help themselves.

3. In the light of information collected in meticulous investigations, the supply and marketing departments at various levels must take active measures to ensure that the affected areas receive a priority supply of those materials needed such as agricultural tools, agricultural chemicals, farm animals, construction materials and necessary industrial products, so as to help the masses in the disaster areas to quickly resume production.

SICHUAN MEETING CALLS FOR FIGHT AGAINST DROUGHT

HK260211 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 26 May 82

[Summary] According to SICHUAN RIBAO, the provincial CCP committee and people's government held an urgent conference by telephone on fighting drought on 25 May.

The meeting demanded that the province firmly grasp the idea of fighting natural disasters in order to reap a bumper harvest. Certain areas currently suffering serious drought must urgently mobilize to fight drought and work hard to fulfill the transplanting plans. East Sichuan must also prepare as early as possible to fight a late summer drought. Anti-flood measures must also be taken. Yang Rudai, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, presided at the meeting, and deputy secretary (Yang Xizhong) made a speech. Yang Wanxuan, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, and Liu Haiquan, vice governor, also took part. The conference pointed out: "Sichuan has reaped a good spring harvest. The current outstanding problem is that there has been little rain in the province since early May. Particularly noteworthy is the fact that the Min River flow has gradually declined since 20 May and has reached a 40-year low. The (Yuqi) River flow has also fallen greatly. Hence water in these areas is in very short supply." The meeting demanded that the province fight drought on the one hand while carrying out antiflood precautions on the other. East Sichuan must make ample preparations for fighting a late summer drought. Leading cadres must go to the frontline to launch the masses to fight drought, fulfill the sowing plans and protect the young crops.

YIN FATANG ON XIZANG PLANNED PARENTHOOD WORK

HK250631 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 23 May 82

[Summary] According to XIZANG RIBAO, a regional forum on planned parenthood work was held in Lhasa recently. It studied relevant central documents and directives, discussed and revised the draft of the regional provisional rules and regulations on planned parenthood and made preparations for carrying out this work among the cadres and masses throughout the region. The participants held that the present population growth in this region is not in accord with the development of the national economy. Therefore, it is necessary to do a good job of birth control in the light of the specific conditions in this region and in accordance with the instructions of the central authorities on advocating planned parenthood in national minority areas and being lenient in setting requirements.

Yin Fatang, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, attended and spoke at the forum. He said: "We have scored some achievements over the past 2 years in planned parenthood work. Over 70 percent of the cadres, staff and workers of the Han nationality who are of child-bearing age have decided to bear only one child, and most of the cadres and staff of the Zang nationality have voluntarily carried out planned parenthood as the Han comrades have done and advocated late marriage and delaying child-bearing. The broad masses of cadres and masses in our region have followed the examples of the cadres and staff in the regional organs and voluntarily carried out planned parenthood. Of about 600,000 women who are of child-bearing age, more than 18,000 have had sterilization operations, and over 7,000 others have adopted other birth control measures." Yin Fatang said: "Planned parenthood will soon be carried out in our region for cadres, staff and workers of the Zang nationality as well as the broad masses of people to control the growth and raise the quality of the population. This is of great importance to the construction of a new Xizang and the construction of the four modernizations in our country, as well as to generations of our descendants." Yin Fatang said in conclusion: "CCP committees at various levels must attach great importance to the propaganda and education in planned parenthood work, strengthen investigation and study, work out policies and regulations and form a work group to be responsible for this work. They must do a good job of organizing technical forces and medical supplies for planned parenthood work as well as popularizing planned parenthood through the conducting of experiments, so that the work can develop healthily in our region."

BRIEFS

GUIZHOU COOPERATION AGREEMENTS -- Guizhou Province has signed some economic and technical cooperation agreements with its fraternal provinces and municipalities, and has made decisions on cooperation items. Since March this year, Guizhou Province has organized work teams to visit other areas and has signed economic and technical cooperation agreements with Hebei, Tianjin, Beijing, Jiangsu, Zhejiang and other provinces and municipalities. Simultaneously, Guangxi, Fujian, Anhui and other provinces and autonomous regions have also sent responsible comrades to Guizhou and signed economic and technical cooperation agreements with Guizhou Province. [Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 14 May 82 HK]

NEI MONGGOL'S ZHOU HUI ON USE OF SURPLUS LABOR

SK210538 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] According to our sources, Zhou Hui, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, pointed out recently on an inspection tour of rural areas: In order to divert surplus labor force in a timely manner to production and construction after establishment of responsibility systems in rural areas, we should first of all make an issue of utilizing farmlands, deserts, wastelands and idle lands and, at the same time, vigorously develop a diversified economy.

He said: Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the rural areas of our region have generally established various forms of responsibility systems deeply welcomed by the masses of peasants, such as assigning production quotas to households, greatly arousing peasants' enthusiasm for production and doubling the efficiency of labor. Since a large amount of supplementary labor has been brought into play, two-thirds of the region's labor is cultivating existing farmlands and developing household sideline production and one-third is lying idle. Whether or not this part of the surplus labor force can be appropriately utilized is a question of great importance in developing rural economy, promoting the four modernizations and retaining stability and unity. Therefore, how to solve the problem of a surplus labor force in rural areas has become an urgent major issue of the region's rural areas.

Wherever he went, Comrade Zhou Hui always gathered cadres and commune members to discuss and work out measures to solve properly this problem.

On the basis of comprehensive investigations and discussions, Comrade Zhou Hui emphasized: There are many ways to utilize the surplus labor force of rural areas. We should organize the surplus labor force in a timely manner to march toward the depth and width of production and add to the wealth of our society. At present and for some time to come, we should concentrate on existing farmlands, deserts, wastelands and idle wilderness. On the one hand, we should take advantage of our local conditions to carry out farmland capital construction, strengthen intensive and meticulous farming, continuously raise the scientific farming level and increase per-mu yield and output value. Since peasants' enthusiasm has been aroused, leading them to concentrate their energies on lands provides great prospects and is very promising. On the other hand, we should, in light of local conditions, plant trees and grass in deserts, waste hilly areas and idle lands and strive to develop a diversified economy which is even more important. Among the 1.8 billion mu of the region's total acreage, except for existing farmlands and some relatively good grasslands, there are large areas of deserts, waste hilly areas and idle lands which have not been utilized. Vigorous planting of trees and grass while engaging in intensive and meticulous farming can not only gradually achieve a new ecological balance and create good natural conditions for plantation businesses but also lay the foundation for developing aquatic breeding businesses, farm, forest and livestock products processing industry and other businesses. By so doing, we will have more and more ways to utilize the surplus labor force in rural areas.

Comrade Zhou Hui contended: To divert the surplus labor force to the orientation of marching toward the depth and width of production, we should give peasants practical interests which can be seen and touched.

He said: Our region has many good examples which we should widely publicize and introduce, because they are most convincing. Peasants will follow experiences of the examples. At the same time, we should conduct ideological and political education among peasants, urging them to adopt a correct attitude toward the relations between the immediate and long-term interests and not to consider only questions of immediate interests.

ZHOU HUI STRESSES EMULATION IN LIVESTOCK WORK

SK210539 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpt] According to our sources, CCP committees and government organs at all levels in our region have conscientiously summed up advanced experiences and fostered models of advanced units in leading agricultural and livestock production, took a clear-cut stand in commending and publicizing the experiences of the models, used their experiences to guide and promote work in all units and quickly restored and developed agricultural and livestock production throughout the region.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, the regional CCP committee and people's government have attached great importance to the role of model advanced units. In order to find a way to solve once and for all the problem of eating from a public canteen in agricultural and livestock production, the region's party and government leading comrades, including Zhou Hui, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, have gone to dozens of communes in a dozen counties and banners to carry out investigations on every street and at every household. They found and summed up the experiences gained by the (Zhongtan) commune of Togtoh County in implementing production responsibility systems. This commune has thoroughly eliminated the phenomenon of eating from a public canteen by shaking off the yoke of leftist ideas and implementing responsibility systems of food grain plots and assigning production quotas to households. Therefore it has substantially aroused peasants enthusiasm for production. The experiences of the (Zhongtan) commune have aroused strong reactions in rural and livestock breeding areas throughout the region. All localities have generally established various feasible responsibility systems in accordance with actual conditions, effectively accelerating the restoration and development of the agricultural and livestock production throughout the region.

NEI MONGGOL ADOPTS MEASURES TO COMBAT SNOWSTORM

SK220525 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 21 May

[Text] The pastoral areas in Hulun Buir League were hit by an exceptionally serious snowstorm on 14-16 May. The regional people's government and the league executive office and the disaster-stricken livestock raising banner governments are organizing masses of various nationalities in the disaster-ridden areas to combat the disaster. A nearly 10-grade gale hit the grassland of Hulun Buir League for 2 days and nights, resulting in a serious disaster and great damage in the western grasslands. The central part of the league experiened first rainstorms and then snowstorms measuring about 1 chi thick in some areas. About two-thirds of the communes and brigades in the pastoral areas throughout the league suffered losses in varying degrees in their animal husbandry production.

Over 71 communes and 180 production teams in the league were listed as serious disaster-stricken areas. More than 80,000 head of livestock were killed. Traffic and communications were severed.

Hulun Buir League is now exerting all-out efforts to combat the disaster and send relief to the people.

BRIEFS

NEI MONGGOL COAL PRODUCTION -- In April, colieries whose products are distributed under the unified state plan in Nei Monggol Region produced 1.32 million tons of raw coal, an increase of over 14 percent over the corresponding 1981 period. [Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 12 May 82 SK]

HEILONGJIANG'S YANG YICHEN ATTENDS COURTESY FORUM

SK240225 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 23 May 82

[Excerpt] According to our sources, ways to thoroughly and persistently carry out the five stresses and four beauties campaign and to enable all people to become new socialists who have ideals, morality and culture and abide by disciplines is one of the major items on the agenda of the provincial forum on summing up the all-people decorum and courtesy month campaign which concluded recently.

The provincial forum on summing up the all-people decorum and courtesy month campaign was sponsored by the propaganda department of the provincial CCP committee and the provincial CYL committee in Harbin from 13 to 21 May. During the forum, Yang Yichen, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee, and Chen Junsheng, Li Jianbai and Zhao Dezun, secretaries of the provincial CCP committee, received the participants.

Comrade Yang Yichen delivered an important speech on the four basic guarantees for adhering to the socialist road and achieving the four modernizations. Li Jianbai, secretary of the provincial CCP committee, summed up the results of the forum. Chen Yuanzhi, standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee and director of the propaganda department of the provincial CCP committee, relayed recent opinions of central leading comrades on building spiritual civilization and other tasks of the party.

JILIN SEEKS SOLUTION OF PUBLIC SECURITY PROBLEMS

SK260410 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 25 May 82

[Station commentary: "Resolutely Deal Blows at Criminal Activities and Strive To Achieve an Obvious Turn for the Better in Public Security"]

[Text] The Changchun and Jilin municipal intermediate people's courts recently held open trials to punish as severely and quickly as possible a number of major criminals according to law. The people in the two municipalities applaud the results of the trials.

The trials used the law as a weapon to execute a number of criminals who have committed flagrant crimes. Some hooligans, ruffians, rapists and robbers who have not caused any fatalities but have incurred the greatest popular indignation and caused very bad political consequences and serious damages to society were also sentenced to death. The broad masses of the people say the judgment is correct; the criminals deserve to be executed and the people are immensely satisfied.

Since the beginning of this year, our province's public security situation has somewhat improved under the leadership of party committees at all levels as a result of concerted efforts of all departments including political and judicial departments. However, we must note that our public security problems are serious, social order it not stable, the development of public security work is not even, major criminal cases occur every day and delinquency is a big problem. Party committees and political and judicial departments at all levels should by no means remain unrealistically optimistic and overestimate the situation in public security. This would weaken our fighting will and slacken our determination.

In order to strive to achieve an obvious turn for the better this year, we must resolutely implement the principle of punishing as severely and quickly as possible and relentlessly attack and stop criminals' sabotage activities. Political and judicial departments are an instrument of the dictatorship of the people's democracy and organs which enact the law. Therefore, they should stand on the side of the country and the people, proceed from the basic points of protecting the people, socialist systems and the four modernizations and master the weapon of the law to strike surely, accurately and relentlessly at murderers, arsonists, criminals guilty of causing explosions, robbers, rapists and other criminals who have caused serious damage to social order and refused to mend their ways despite repeated education and are swollen with arrogance.

Criminal ring leaders and abettors must be resolutely attacked in accordance with the principle of punishing as severely and quickly as possible. Those who should be arrested must be arrested. Those who should be tried must be tried. Those who should be executed must be executed. We must not be softhearted.

Of course, when we implement the principle of punishing as severely and quickly as possible, we should pay attention to the party's consistent principle of attacking the minority and winning over, splitting up, disintegrating and reforming the majority of criminals. We should implement the policy of combining punishment with leniency, conduct specific analysis and deal with each case on its merits.

When we concentrate on punishing criminal activities as severely and quickly as possible in accordance with the law, we must at the same time conscientiously implement the principle of handling cases in a comprehensive way. We should closely integrate efforts to attack crimes with crime prevention measures to solve problems temporarily with efforts to solve problems permanently. Under the leadership of party committees, organize the forces of all fields and adopt ideological, political, economic, administrative and legal measures to handle cases in a comprehensive way.

At present, we should concentrate on youth education and strive to make obvious progress in a relatively short period. To strive to achieve an obvious turn for the better in public security, we should mobilize and rely on the masses and implement the principle of combining professional organs with the mass line. Political and judicial organs should serve as a powerful support for the masses, firmly aiding the masses in struggling against the violation of the law and crimes and protecting the masses' enthusiasm in the struggle. Party members, CYL members and state cadres should stand on the forefront of the struggle against criminals and stand bravely when facing criminal activities to play the role of vanguards and models in protecting public security.

The people throughout the province must go into action to actively struggle against criminals, be brave to expose criminals' crimes and build up the momentum of struggle to severely attack active criminal activities. People who have violated the law and committed crimes should stop doing so immediately, voluntarily surrender to the police, confess their crimes and strive for leniency. If they refuse to come to their senses and defy the law, they will soon receive severe punishment in accord with state law.

EFFORTS TO OVERCOME LISTLESSNESS URGED IN JILIN

SK250432 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 24 May 82

[Station commentary: "Keep Abreast of New Situation and Strengthen Political and Ideological Work in Industrial and Mining Enterprises"]

[Text] Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, our province has scored great achievements in ideological and political work on the industrial and communications front. We have done a great deal of work particularly in the field of promoting a shift in the party's work focus, implementing the eight-character principle, conducting enterprise consolidation and establishing economic responsibility systems. Facts have proved that whenever we genuinely enhance ideological and political work, the people's enthusiasm goes up and production increases. Otherwise, all work is affected and hindered. This is an extremely important experience we have gained in the four modernizations. The ideological and political work in industrial and mining enterprises is facing a new situation.

In the past few years, our party adopted the policy of opening up our country to the outside world and revitalizing our domestic economy, resulting in a lively situation in our country's economy. The policy is absolutely correct. However, we should notice that since we have increased contacts with capitalist countries, the influence of bourgeois ideas and living style becomes inevitable. The corrosive influence of capitalism and the socialist struggle against such influences are unavoidable.

The major expressions of the class struggle under the new situation are serious violations of law and criminal activities in the field of economy and the pollution of capitalist spiritual garbage in the field of ideology and culture. The new situation sets forth new tasks and makes higher demands on our ideological and political work.

Have the ideological and political work in industrial and mining enterprises met the needs of the new situation? No. The major problem is the phenomenon of listlessness. Our leadership over the ideological and political work in enterprises is weak, and our support and propagands on advanced and correct ideas is insufficient. We are afraid to handle and correct erroneous thoughts, words and deeds and unhealthy practices and fail to adopt effective measures to oppose them.

Therefore, CCP committees and propaganda departments of all industrial and mining enterprises should enhance their understanding of the significance of the ideological and political work under the new situation, genuinely eliminate the phenomenon of listlessness, adopt a more clear-cut stand in conducting the ideological and political work and make it even stronger and more effective to meet the needs of the new situation.

The provincial industrial work conference which was held recently noted that we must do a good job in enterprise consolidation, improve economic results and strive to promote our province's industrial production. We must conscientiously implement and publicize the spirit of the provincial industrial work conference, mobilize the broad masses of staff and workers to exert themselves to work diligently and strive to promote our province's industrial production.

BRIEFS

HEILONGJIANG WATER PROJECT -- A water project to divert Nenjiang River water is under construction in the southern part of Heilongjiang Province. Located on the left bank of the Nenjiang River, the large-scale storage project extends across Zhaoyuan and Dorbod Mongolian autonomous counties and Daqing municipality. The project is mainly to divert Nenjiang River water to a reservior to help the two counties and one municipality restore ecological balance, and put an end once and for all to the three disasters protracted drought, sand, storms and the salinization of soil. Construction on the project began in 1977 and is now 80 percent complete. After the key projects for diverting the water were completed, the reservoir was partially put into operation. Now the reservoir stores 163 million cubic meters of water. [Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 14 May 82 SK]

GANSU'S FENG JIXIN ATTENDS PUBLIC SECURITY RALLY

SK200614 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 19 May 82

[Excerpts] According to our reporter, the third provincial rally of representatives of advanced collectives and workers on the public security front sponsored by the provincial people's govenrment concluded at the auditorium of the provincial people's government on the afternoon of 18 May. Feng Jixin, first secretary of the provincial CCP committee; Wang Bingxiang, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor of the province; and Sun Runhua and [words indistinct], vice chairmen of the standing committee of the provincial people's congress, attended the rally and had a group photo taken with the advanced workers. In his report, Wang Bingxiang read out the decision of the provincial people's government on commending and rewarding the advanced collectives and workers on the public security front.

The rally also approved the written proposal to public security cadres, people's policemen and the people in charge of maintaining public security work throughout the province. The written proposal notes: To thoroughly improve public order, strengthen and consolidate the people's democratic dictatorship and defend the building of the socialist spiritual and material civilization is a high mission given to us by the times. To complete this mission, the rally put forward the following five proposals to all people on the province's public security defending front:

1. Firmly and unswervingly implement the lines, principles and policies formulated since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee.

2. Promptly launch an extensive and profound campaign of learning from and catching up with the advanced.

3. Endeavor to gain professional proficiency to become public security defenders who are both Red and expert.

4. Concentrate efforts on improving social order.

5. Institute various forms of safety responsibility systems, formulate regulations and improve safety prevention measures to better serve the masses.

NINGXIA MEETING DISCUSSES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

OW241325 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0805 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Yinchuan, 23 May (XINHUA) -- In discussing the revised draft constitution of the PRC, personages from various circles and of various nationalities attending the 13th session of the Standing Committee of the 4th Ningxia Hui Autonomous Regional People's Congress pointed out that the portion in the revised draft constitution dealing with regional autonomy of minority nationalities fully reflects the relations of equality, unity and mutual assistance among the various nationalities under China's socialist system.

Members of the standing committee and deputies of various nationalities attending the meeting studied the revised draft constitution sentence by sentence and carried out discussion in real earnest. They maintained that the articles in the revised draft constitution dealing with regional autonomy of minority nationalities, when compared with those contained in the three previous constitutions drawn up since the founding of the republic, stand out by virtue of three prominent features: further expansion of nationality autonomy, increased economic, cultural and other support from the state to national minority regions and special emphasis on the need of training national minority cadres and various kinds of experts and technicians from among national minorities. Together, these three prominent features give the national minority peoples more power to fully exercise their right to be masters of their own affairs.

Some comrades remarked: These articles more fully embody the characteristics of regional autonomy of minority nationalities, are more in line with the interests of national minority peoples and are a vivid reflection of the unity of all nationalities. Some other comrades added: The revised draft constitution sums up the historical experience and lessons since the founding of the republic, and is thus more concerned about the regional autonomy of minority nationalities. The revised draft constitution is fully in keeping with the conditions in our country, conforms to the wishes of the people and is bound to win the warm support of the minority nationalities.

Personages from various circles and of various minority nationalities said: The discussions of the revised draft constitution have further raised their consciousness in upholding the four basic principles, enhanced their enthusiasm in participating in the management of state affairs and strengthened their determination to do a good job in the regional autonomy of minority nationalities and to continuously consolidate and promote the great unity of the people of all nationalities in China.

WANG ENMAO SPEAKS AT XINJIANG AWARDS RALLY

HK210611 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 20 May 82

[Summary] "The autonomous regional trade union federation held a rally this morning to cite advanced groups and advanced individuals that have emerged in building socialist spiritual civilization. Autonomous region party and government responsible persons Wang Enmao, Zhang Shigong, Tomur Dawamat, Huang Luobin, Li Jiayu and Bai Chengming attended the rally." After nine units, including the all-China Federation of Trade Unions, proposed launching the "five stresses and four beautifuls" campaign in March last year and especially during the all-people decorum and courtesy month activities held in March this year, workers on the industrial and communications, capital construction, finance and trade, cultural, educational, sanitation and other fronts of the autonomous region enthusiastically responded to the appeal of the party Central Committee and the State Council. With a high sense of being masters of their own affairs and with great revolutionary fervor, they have on one hand devoted themselves to building socialist material civilization and, on the other, worked on socialist spiritual civilization construction. They have especially taken the strengthening of national unity as an important part of the effort to build socialist spiritual civilization and have made outstanding contributions. On various fronts, there have emerged a large number of advanced groups and advance individuals. At today's meeting, 119 advanced groups and 201 advanced individuals were cited. In a festive atmosphere, the responsible persons of the party and government organs of the autonomous region personally awarded to them citations, certificates of honor and prizes.

First Secretary of the autonomous regional CCP committee Wang Enmao gave a speech at the rally. He first offered warm greetings to the representatives of advanced groups and advanced individuals. He said that the working class is the leading class of our country. "Members of the working class must strive to be models who are capable of influencing others, conscious of moral principles, cultured and attentive to discipline, be models who love the motherland, love the people, love labor, love science and love socialism, be models who show patriotism, a sense of the collective, the spirit of internationalism and the spirit of communism, and be models in the 'five stresses and four beautifuls' activities."

He stressed that "Xinjiang is a multinational region. We must take the serious implementation of the party's nationalities policy and the strengthening of national unity as a primary task in building socialist spiritual civilization. Everyone must cherish the idea of national unity. Everyone must understand the nationalities policy. Everyone must pay attention to national unity. Everyone must contribute to national unity. The working class must be a model to everyone."

Wang Enmao hoped that after this awards rally, more advanced groups and advanced individuals in building socialist spiritual civilization will emerge in the region and give full play tothe leading and exemplary role of the working class, thus enabling greater achievements to be scored in building socialist material civilization and spiritual civilization in the autonomous region.

Before the rally, Comrade Wang Enmao and other leaders of the party and government organs of the autonomous region personally received representatives of advanced groups and advanced invididuals who made outstanding contributions in strengthening national unity. A total of 800 representatives from Urumqi and from prefectures, countries and municipalities in the region attended the rally.

XINJIANG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS MEETING CONCLUDES

HK230314 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 3 May 82

[Summary] The 15th meeting of the Xinjiang Regional People's Congress Standing Committee concluded in Urumqi on 22 May. The members seriously studied the draft of the revised constitution, examined and discussed regional Vice Chairman Liu Zimo's report on the 1981 final accounts and the 1982 budget, and also heard and discussed a report on forestry protection and development. The meeting adopted a resolution calling on the region to seriously study the draft of the revised constitution.

Committee Vice Chairman Wang Zhenwen presided at the 22 May session. Also present were Vice Chairman Yang Yiqing, Mushayefu, Lu Xuebin, Yu Zhanlin, Amantuer Tuerxin Akabula, Maihesude Tieyibofu, Wang Heting, and Liu Sicong.

XINJIANG'S WANT ENMAO AT MILITIA WORK CONFERENCE

HK240831 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 23 May 82

[Summary] The Xinjiang conference on militia work which was regional CCP Committee, the regional people's government and the CCP committee of the Urumqi PLA units, and had lasted 9 days, concluded in Urumqi muncipality yesterday. The conference conveyed and studied the relevant documents of the State Council and the military commission of the CCP Central Committee and listened to the reports and experiences and some prefectures, autonomous prefectures, municipalities and military subdistricts concerning militia work. The conference commended a large number of advanced units in the management of militia arms and equipment and awarded them citations.

The conference held that over the past few years, the region had developed militia work relatively greatly. The conference demanded: "CCP committees at all levels throughout the region must further strengthen leadership over militia work and ensure the implementation of [words indistinct]. It is necessary to conduct education in patriotism and revolutionary heroism for militiamen of all nationalities, to conduct education in opposing corruption by bourgeois ideology and to conduct education in implementing the party's policy on nationalities and strengthening national unity. This is necessary to make all militiamen establish a proletarian world outlook, spontaneously implement the party's policy on nationalities, constantly strengthen national unity and strive to develop the region's political situation of stability and unity." The conference also demanded that CCP committees at all levels throughout the region quickly establish various militia work systems, put them on a sound basis and do militia work well so that militiamen will make even greater contributins toward consolidating the economic construction at the border areas and toward the building of spiritual civilization.

Leading comrades of the party and the government of the region and the Urumqi PLA units, including Wang Enmao, Xiao Quanfu, Tan Youlin, Tomur Dawamat and Tian Zhong, attended the conference.

XINJIANG RALLY HELD ON NATIONALITY POLICIES

HK150310 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] The regional CCP committee held a rally of leading cadres of the regional organs on the morning of 14 May to mobilize and call on the party committees at all levels to seriously implement the regional CCP committee's circular on carrying out education throughout Xinjiang in implementing the party's nationality policies and strengthening the unity of nationalities, and get a good grasp of this education, so as to contribute to developing the excellent situation of stability and unity in the region and promote the development of all work.

Leading comrades of the regional CCP committee Wang Enmao, Ismail Amat, Qi Guo, Li Jiayu and Janabil attended the rally. Wang Enmao, Ismail Amat and Qi Guo made speeches.

Comrade Wang Enmao called on the various regional organs to act as models in implementing the regional CCP committee's circular and in carrying out the party's nationality policies and strengthening the unity of nationalities. He said: This education must be conducted more extensively, deeply and effectively than ever before. We should create powerful public opinion, to ensure that everyone will know and understand the importance of the nationality policies and the unity of nationalities. We should form a good atmosphere in which everyone is thinking about the unity of nationalities, everyone understands the nationality policies, everyone stresses the unity of nationalities, and everyone does good things for strengthening that unity. In this way a new situation will emerge in the unity of nationalities in the region.

Ismail Amat reviewed the work and achievements of Xinjiang in implementing the nationality policies and strengthening the unity of nationalities in recent years. He said: The task facing us now is to further consolidate and develop the region's excellent situation of stability and unity on the basis of the achievements already gained, and do still better in work concerning the unity of nationalities and in all other tasks.

Comrade Qi Guo said in his speech: We must pay attention to three points in carrying out this education: 1) the leading cadres at all levels must attach importance to this work; 2) the focus in this education is on organizing the cadres to study; 3) party committees at all levels must seriously review the implementation of the party's nationality policies in their areas and units. They must properly solve a number of practical problems.

Over 600 persons attended the rally, including responsible comrades of the regional CCP committee, people's congress standing committee, people's government and CPPCC, and responsible persons of the regional organs, popular organizations, institutes of higher education, large factories, mines and other enterprises, the Xinjiang production and construction corps, and Urumqi municipality.

XINJIANG ISSUES CIRCULAR ON NATIONALITY POLICIES

HK150248 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] The regional CCP committee issued a circular on 6 May on carrying out education throughout Xinjiang in implementing the party's nationality policies and strengthening the unity of nationalities. The circular demanded that, beginning in mid-May, the region spend 1 or 2 months in carrying out concentrated education in nationality policies and unity. This education must be carried out in an all-round way among the party members, cadres and masses of all nationalities. It is particularly necessary to teach the leading party cadres of all nationalities to take the lead in implementing the party's nationality policies and preserving in unity of nationalities.

The circular demanded: It is necessary to organize the cadres of all nationalities to study Marxist theory on nationalities and the party's nationality policies. Through study, the cadres of all nationalities should basically understand in ideology and theory the fundamental Marxist viewpoints on nationality and the nationality issue, drew a clear distinction between Marxist and bourgeois views on nationalities, overcome and avoid the two erroneous trends of great nationalism and local nationalism, and fundamentally strengthen the spontaneity of the cadres of all nationalities in carrying out the party's nationality policies and preserving the unity of nationalities. Through study, all Han comrades should firmly establish the notions of working in Xinjiang for a long time and wholeheartedly serving the people of all nationalities in the region. The cadres of all nationalities should firmly establish the notion of the inseparability of the nationalities, and further strengthen the unity between Han and minority-nationality cadres and among minority-nationality cadres. We must truly treat each other as equals, [words indistinct] trust, respect, support, learn from and make allowances for each other. We should not say or do anything that does not benefit the unity of nationalities.

The circular demanded: it is necessary to do a good job in propaganda and education for the masses. The rural and urban areas must carry out propaganda and education in the nationality policies and the unity of nationalities. It is necessary to focus on the towns, and conduct education for factory, mine and enterprise workers, peasants and herdsmen, urban residents, and students. It is particularly important to do a good job in educating youths and juveniles.

The circular pointed out: we must integrate education in nationality policies with a review of the implementation of these policies and with solving practical problems. On the basis of studying documents and enhancing understanding, the party committees at all levels must review the implementation of nationality policies in their own area and unit. By carrying out this study and review, all areas and departments should formulate specific measures for implementing the party's nationality policies and strengthening the unity of nationalities.

The circular pointed out: all areas, systems and units should, on the basis of reviewing the implementation of nationality policies, convene rallies in the second half of the year to command good people and deeds in strengthening the unity of nationalities, establish progressive collectives and model figures in this respect and sum up good experiences. At the same time they should conduct criticism and education to deal with words and deeds that do not benefit the unity of nationalities. We must deal resolute blows at bad people who seriously sabotage this unity. In this way we can establish throughout the region a powerful social public opinion and mood that regards preserving nationality unity is honorable and respectable and endangering it as shameful and to be condemned.

The circular pointed out: vigorously developing the region's economic and cultural construction is a long-term fundamental task for achieving common development and prosperity for all nationalities, gradually eliminating political inequalities that have come down from history, implementing the party's nationality policies, strengthening the unity of nationalities and solving the nationality issue in Xinjiang. The party committees at all levels must shift their work focus to socialist modernization, and implement the complete set of correct principles and policies on economic construction laid down by the central authorities.

The circular stressed: The party committees at all levels must strengthen specific leadership over the education in implementing the party's nationality policy and strengthening the unity of nationalities.

CHINA POST ON BUSH'S TV INTERVIEW ON PRC VISIT

OW241029 Taipei CHINA POST in English 20 May 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Vice President George Bush's TV Interview"]

[Text] U.S. Vice President George Bush's TV interview over ABC's "Good Morning America" program revealed that his recent visit to the Chinese mainland left many problems unsetted. It confirmed our suspicion expressed on May 11 that his visit to the Chinese mainland was a failure. He revealed that the disagreement over the sale of arms to the Republic of China was "quite serious." He said that "I think there has been some misunderstanding on their side as to our intentions." The main stumbling block Bush acknowledged is the administration's proposal to sell military spare parts to the ROC. He said that Red China opposes such sales and has been wary of Reagan's policy since the campaign, when he stressed the need to maintain close ties to the ROC.

Once again, it confirmed our belief that the failure of Bush's mission was due to the fact that he should not have discussed with the Peiping regime the arms sales to the Republic of China. To do so is like negotiating with a tiger for its skin. For the defensive arms for the Republic of China are mainly to be used against Chinese Communist aggression. Naturally, the Peiping regime would object strongly against sales to the ROC of such arms. Its ultimate objective is to get the United States to cancel all arms sale proposals to the Republic of China so that the ROC would be rendered defenseless and subject to Peiping's conquest.

But Peiping's objection to the arms sales, it must be pointed out, remains to be a side issue. The real issue raised by Peiping for the United States to accept and agree upon is the sovereignty of Taiwan. In this respect, the Chinese Communists have tried to lure President Ronald Reagan into its trap of selling the people of the ROC down the river by agreeing with it that Taiwan belongs to the Chinese mainland, not the mainland under the ROC, but the ROC under the Peiping regime.

The United States must not make such a mistake of "acknowledging" or "recognizing" such a proposition. While President Reagan has already made a mistake in his letters to the Chinese Communist leaders in which he repeated the assertion contained in the Shanghai communique, he will still have a chance of correcting his mistakes by telling the Peiping regime that the sovereignty of Taiwan was settled when the island was returned to the Republic of China in accordance with the Cairo conference declaration of November, 1943, which was reaffirmed by the Potsdam declaration of July, 1945. The issue was, therefore, settled beyond question, and no further negotiation on that subject is needed. The United States, being a principal architect of both conferences, is entitled to insist on their observance.
If the United States could take that position, it would be justified in the eyes of history and international law. The Peiping regime cannot possibly advance any argument against such a position. Therefore, the issue of the sovereignty of Taiwan should not be a subject of discussion or even negotiation.

We hope that the Reagan administration will realize the importance of this issue and remove it from the agenda of any of its conferences with Peiping. Any deviation from this course will compromise the vital interests of the Republic of China and its 18 million people on Taiwan.

Bush also stated that the United States is prepared to uphold the law with respect to the Taiwan Relations Act. It should do so without further delay. It has already delayed more than 15 months in announcing the sales of spare parts to the Republic of China and should proceed with the sales of other items needed for the ROC's defense. It should allow the ROC to increase the CCNAA's [Coordination Council for North American Affairs] branch offices in the United States without further delay.

It is time for the U.S. congressional leaders to hold hearings on the implementation of the Taiwan Relations Act and to find out what has exactly transpired in Peiping during Bush's visit. The United States must not follow the foreign policy of the Nixon and Carter administrations if it hopes to assert its leadership in international affairs. So far, the Reagan foreign policy has not been a grand success in the eyes of free peoples of many nations. Its China policy is dominated by pro-Peiping mentality and its undue concern over pleasure and displeasure.

Such a policy is unworthy of the United States and violates President Reagan's principles and philosophy extolled by him in the campaign. It is time for Reagan to reassert his leadership in formulating his foreign policy.

TAIWAN FIRST QUARTER FOREIGN TRADE DOWN

OW170617 Taipei CHINA POST in English 11 May 82 p 10

[Text] Foreign trade value in the first quarter this year registered a negative growth compared with same period last year, said V.C. Siew, director general of the Board of Foreign Trade, adding that the situation will continue to get worse, and will not improve in the near future. It is feared that it will be hard to achieve this year's foreign trade target. He said that the total trade value in the first quarter this year was U.S. $9.75 billion, a decline of 5 percent compared with same period last year. Export value was U.S. $5.11 billion, a gain of 4.8 percent from same period of previous year. Import value amounted to U.S. $4.64 billion, a drop of 13.9 percent from same period the year before. It thus showed a surplus of U.S. $470 million.

Exports

Due to worldwide economic recession, the growth rate of major exports was low in general. For instance, the export value of textile products in the first quarter of this year was U.S. $980 million, an increase of 5.2 percent from the same period last year. Electric machinery equipment exports came to U.S. $930 million, up 2.7 percent compared with the same period of previous year. In geographical categories, the U.S. accounted for U.S. $1.94 billion, a rise of 23.5 percent from the same period last year, followed by Japan, with U.S. $600 million, a gain of 13.8 percent. The Middle East accounted for U.S. $2.8 billion, up 20.4 percent. Australasia accounted for U.S. $170 million, up 11.9 percent. Europe, however, accounted for only U.S. $650 million, a decline of 12.3 percent, due to Europe's economic downturn and high devaluation rate there.

Imports

The main reason for reduced imports during the first quarter of this year was atrributed to drastic cuts of equipment imports, which dropped to U.S. $1.11 billion, down 22.5 percent compared with same period last year. It indicated low investment desire shown by local traders before signs of worldwide economic recovery appear. It could be vividly seen from trade with Japan. In the first quarter this year, total import value by this country from Japan amounted to U.S. $1.21 billion, a decline of 17.3 percent from the same period last year. In the quarter, imports of farm and industrial raw materials was U.S. $3.23 billion, down 11.5 percent. This import decrease was attributed to the stabilization of oil prices, and a production cut by some industries, which reduced demand for industrial raw materials and intermediate products by many industries.

V.C. Siew said that trade statistics for April have not yet been concluded at present. But according to him, the are not encouraging, especially for imports. The declining rate of imports, he said, is going to be deeper, and no sign of an improvement is in sight.

BRIEFS

SAUDI ARABIAN LOAN -- Taipei, 18 May (CNA) -- The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia will provide a low-interest loan of U.S. dollars 50 million to the Republic of China for the development of a telecommunications system, Deputy Communications Minister Chen Shu-hsi said Monday. Communications Minister Lien Chan had expressed the Chinese Government's appreciations to Dr. Alwai Kayyal, minister of posts, telegraph and telecommunications of Saudi Arabia, who arrived here Monday for a visit. Deputy Minister Chen said that in fiscal 1982 the budget for the telecommunications reconstruction is still short of NT dollars 15.2 billion (U.S. dollars 400 million), of which NT dollars 5,500 million (U.S. dollars 144.8 million) will have to be borrowed from abroad. [Text] [Taipei CNA in English 0237 GMT 18 May 82 OW]

CHENG MING ON CAUSES OF WANG RENZHONG'S DOWNFALL

HK050626 Hong Kong CHENG MING in Chinese 1 May 82 pp 16-17

[Article by Hai Feng [3189 7364]: "Inside Story of CCP Propaganda Chief's Resignation"]

[Text] The CCP Propaganda Department has finally changed its chief. The reason why we use the word "finally" here is because there have been many rumors about a personnel change in the CCP Propaganda Department in the last 12 months.

This is not a minor event. In 1980, the propaganda chief was Hu Yaobang, who is now the CCP chairman. In the same year, the CCP Central Committee convened its fifth plenary session, at which Hu Yaobang was elected general secretary of the CCP, and Wang Renzhong, who was simultaneously elected secretary of the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee, replaced Hu Yaobang as chief of the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee.

Why, then, did Wang Renzhong resign his post now? Why has Deng Liqun been selected to replace him? Is the former propaganda chief, who has been working as a high-ranking official for several decades, (his former high-ranking posts included first secretary of the Wuhan Municipal CCP Committee, first secretary of the Hubei Provincial CCP Committee, first secretary of the Shaanxi Provincial CCP Committee, vice premier, chairman of the State Agricultural Commission and so on) no longer capable, or has he committed mistakes in handling certain problems?

In Beijing, most intellectuals are concerned about the change of the CCP propaganda chief, in particular the literary and art circles, who are extremely sensitive and have paid special attention to the development of the matter, as their work is closely related to the Propaganda Department.

The Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee and the Event of "Unrequited Love"

Last year, when the CCP criticized "Unrequited Love" for the first time, people began to learn about some of the problems within the CCP Propaganda Department. A few friends in the literary and art circles in Beijing told me something about these problems. Though it may sound like a work of fiction, I do not think it is an imaginative "story."

"Sun and Man" was at that time shown to limited audiences. Having seen this film, some high-ranking officers of the PLA were very angry. They thought that this film had attacked socialism and debased Mao Zedong's image. Some of them even wrote a letter to the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee, critizing the film "Sun and Man," which was based on "Unrequited Love." After receiving this letter, the CCP Propaganda Department immediately sent it on to Deng Xiaoping. But neither Deng Xiaoping nor Hu Yaobang had seen the film at that time. In order to find out the truth so as to make a statement of their position, they watched the film "Sun and Man" at Zhongnanhai. According to my friends, "It is said that Deng Xiaoping could not wait for the film to end and he went off in a huff. Before he left, he just said this film had given up everything, even patriotism." Later, Deng Xiaoping made the following remark in the letter sent by those high-ranking military officers: Criticism against the film "Sun and Man" must be launched throughout the country. Soon after that, the responsible people of the Propaganda Department asked Deng Xiaoping for instruction: How can we organize a mass criticism, since this film was not released for public showing? So, as we heard, Deng Xiaoping crossed out his remark in the original letter. When relating this, my friends laughed. "This is quite unusual. It seemed funny; but we should not put the blame on Deng Xiaoping."

The Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee tried not to let the incident develop any further, and hoped to end it there.

The reason was, the Propaganda Department had been well informed on the shooting of the film "Sun and Man," and they neither objected to the project before the filming nor raised any question after it was completed. Therefore, they really hoped to gloss over the matter quickly so that their sore spot would not be touched.

The Misgivings of Deng Xiaoping and Hu Yaobang

Unexpectedly, some people of JIEFANGJUN BAO insisted on criticizing this film. Although Deng Xiaoping crossed out his remark on waging criticism against "Sun and Man," they invented another way to carry out the criticism. Instead of criticizing the film "Sun and Man," they criticized the film script "Unrequited Love," since the latter had been published and the public could buy and read it. In fact, there are certain differences between "Unrequited Love" and "Sun and Man." However, as those people of JIEFANGJUN BAO, together with Huang Gang of SHIDAI DE BAOGAO [REPORT OF THE TIMES], persisted in launching a mass criticism, they finally went all out without the slightest hesitation -- they criticized "Sun and Man" under the pretext of criticizing "Unrequited Love." So the commentator's article appeared in JIEFANGJU BAO, followed by the article by Huang Gang in SHIDAI DE BAOGAO. It is hard to say whether they meant to attack the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee or not, apart from attacking Bai Hua. But the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee was really embarrassed and found itself faced with a rather awkward situation. RENMIN RIBAO did not reprint any of these great articles, and the Propaganda Department just refused to say yea nor nay on the matter. This more or less showed the attitude of certain people in the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee.

The articles in JIEFANGJUN BAO and SHIDAI DE BAOGAO gave rise to a very strong response. Intellectuals, the literary and art circles, students and youths in Beijing, one after another, showed sympathy with Bai Hua and discontent with JIEFANGJUN BAO and SHIDAI DE BAOGAO, complaining that the attitude embodied in those critiques was rude and their viewpoints were questionable. They thought that the big stick which would crush the freedom of creation was showing itself once again. For a while, everyone was talking about the matter and popular feeling ran high. This really embarrassed Deng Xiaoping and Hu Yaobang.

The Contradiction Between Wang Renzhong and Zhou Yang

My friends in literary and art circles said there was some relation between the stand of Wang Renzhong in dealing with the criticism of Bai Hua when the former was chief of the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee and his later discharge from the post. My friends also talked about another matter -- the contradiction between the chief, Wang Renzhong, and the deputy chief, Zhou Yang. This was of special significance in the discharging of Wang Renzhong from his post.

It happened like this: After the Bai Hua incident, Zhou Yang's attitude toward "Unrequited Love" was relatively moderate. Actually, there were some differences between his point of view and that of the leading people of the CCP Central Committee and those contributing commentators of JIEFANGJUN BAO. Both the Propaganda Department and Zhou Yang were responsible to a certain extent for the Bai Hua incident. A forum on the ideological front work was held after the sixth plenary session. At the forum, Deng Xiaoping criticized some weak and lax organs, including the Propaganda Department where Zhou Yang was one of the responsible people. At that time, Zhou Yang was sick and a patient in a hospital. He was rather old, so he decided to resign. Wang Renzhong and another deputy chief of the Propaganda Department had wanted to get rid of Zhou Yang for a long time. Then came the chance, and they proposed to the latter the post of consultant for the Propaganda Department. Zhou Yang is a very good friend of Hu Yaobang. So, when Hu Yaobang learned of this arrangement, he told Wang Renzhong to see him, and asked him why he had not let him, chairman of the CCP Central Committee, know in good time about the new appointment of Zhou Yang as consultant of the Propaganda Department. Wang Renzhong just could not explain. Then, the news that Zhou Yang was determined to resign his position was spread. This was an extremely embarrassing problem for Wang Renzhong. To cope with this, he asked Zhou Yang not to resign, and continue to work as deputy chief instead of consultant. Therefore, in that period, XINHUA NEWS AGENCY dispatched a few reports of Zhou Yang's participation in literary and art activities. According to these reports, one of Zhou Yang's titles was deputy chief of the Propaganda Department of the CCP Central Committee. But the relations between Wang Renzhong and Zhou Yang were somehow becoming worse and worse.

My friends of the literary and art circles said such a serious difference and contradiction were enough to lead to a change in the leading group in the department. Under such a background came the news of Wang Rengzhong's resignation.

Wang Renzhong Severely Scolded Those Elements Who Ran Democratic Publications

Wang Renzhong published his article "Unify Thinking and Conscientiously Rectify Party Work Style" in HONGQI of 1 March. At the beginning of this article, he severely scolded those elements who ran democratic publications. He said: "A few people, who are in the minority, think that our party has changed its nature and is hopeless; therefore, the party should be overthrown and a new political power should rise to replace the present one. In other words, they advocate enforcing the two-party system like the United States -- two parties rule in turn; one is in office while the other is out of office. This is the theory of the remaining forces of the "gang of four," including people such as Jiang Qing, Zhang Chunqiao and so on who are in prison. It is the heads of those illegal organizations and publications who respond to them in the society. All these people's theories and activities are counter-revolutionary theories and activities. Therefore, we must expose them and strike blows at them." On the other hand, Wang Renzhong commended the forum on the ideological front work and praised his own work results. He wrote: "I have originally underestimated the function of the forum on the ideological front work, realizing that many people failed to solve their ideological problems. Now, I find that the function of the forum is much greater than anticipated. Everyone has seen that our publications, broadcasts, television, films and so on have been making progress. I have talked with some comrades of the literary and art circles. All of them have new plans. They have a real determination to go deep into the actual life so as to create better works." The meaning of this article by Wang Renzhong deserves reflection. Anyway, he probably never expected that he would resign his position in the Propaganda Department soon after this article was published.

Wang Renzhong and Deng Liqun Have Two Common Denominators

Perhaps some people may suspect that Wang Renzhong is not Deng Xiaoping's man, but think that Deng Liqun, the new chief of the Propaganda Department, director of the Strategic Studies Office of the Secretariat of the CCP Central Committee and vice chairman of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, is in fact Deng Xiaoping's man. Then what is the truth?

Wang Renzhong and Deng Liqun have two common denominators: First, both of them are Deng Xiaoping's men; second, they have similar ideologies and viewpoints. In the last few years, Deng Liqun, in the role of a theorist, wrote a series of articles on politics, economics, culture and academic studies, and scolded some people in the party who do not support the "four basic principles." Can this new officer in charge of propaganda work open a new course for the CCP's propaganda by maintaining ties with intellectuals?

FBIS DAILY REPORT

China

CONTENTS

Vol I No 103 27 May 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

RENMIN RIBAO Acclaims Recent OPEC Meeting [25 May] A 1

UNITED STATES

Haig Pledge on U.S. Mideast Peace Efforts Cited B 1
Geng Biao Meets Former U.S. Official in Beijing B 1

SOVIET UNION

Narrowing of East-West Technology Gap Viewed C 1

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

Hoang Van Hoan Article on Sino-SRV Relations E 1
Thailand Reiterates Rejection of SRV Proposal E 15
Zhao Ziyang Meets Hong Kong Industrialsts E 15
Xu Yinsheng Meets Indonesian Justice Minister E 15
Briefs: Hong Kong Shipping Service E 15

SOUTH ASIA

Zhao Ziyang Meets With Pakistani Army General F 1
Bangladesh's Ershad Receives PRC Journalists F 1
Border Trade Between Xizang, Bhutan Flourishes F 1

WESTERN EUROPE

Portuguese Army Chief of Staff Concludes Visit G 1
Hong Kong Paper on Egidio Visit G 1
[SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST 26 May]
Departure of Delegation G 1

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Huang Hua Meets Outgoing Egyptian Ambassador I 1
Ji Pengfei Meets With Congo Amity Delegation I 1
Ji Pengfei Meets Tanzanian Party Delegation I 1
Red Cross Delegation Ends Visit to Morocco I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Inaugural Meeting of State Economic Commission K 1
Zhang Jingfu Explains Role K 2
State Council Discusses Enterprise Consolidation K 2
State Council Views Financial Inspections K 3
Regulations for Planned Power Generation, Supply K 4
Commentator Views Agricultural Machinery Output K 6
[RENMIN RIBAO 22 May]

Commentator Views Rural Social Investigation K 7
[RENMIN RIBAO 22 May]
Public Security Circular on Fire Prevention K 8
CAAC Conducts Safety Month After Plane Crash K 9
CCP Military Commission Commends PLA Units K 9
Broadcast Recounts PLA Scientific Achievements K 10
BAN YUE TAN on Test Flight of Yun-7 Aircraft K 10
[No 9, 10 May]
Yang Dezhi Addresses PLA General Staff Meeting K 12
Yang Dezhi Sponsors Party Lecture for PLA Cadres K 13
Buddhist Association Views Religious Freedom K 14
Bo Yibo Writes on National Confidence, Dignity K 14
[ZHONGGUO QINGNIAN BAO 15 May]
HONGQI on Expectations for Newly Appointed Cadres K 16
[No 9, 1 May]
HONGQI on Revolutionary Reform of Organization K 20
[No 9, 1 May]

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

East China Broadcast Work Meeting Ends in Anhui O 1
Fujian CPPCC Discusses Draft Constitution O 1
[FUJIAN RIBAO 17 May]
Xiang Nan Attends Exhibition in Fuzhou 25 May O 2
Jiangxi Military District on Agricultural Policy O 2
Zhejiang's Tie Ying Attends Memorial Service O 3
[ZHEJIANG RIBAO 13 May]
Briefs: Shanghai Metal Industry O 3

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong's Ren Zhongyi on Special Economic Zone P 1
NANFANG RIBAO Emphasizes Economic Construction [19 May] P 1
Lin Hujia Visits Hunan Marten-Breeding Farm P 3
Shuai Hengqi Visits Native County in Hunan P 4
National Study Society Meeting Opens in Changsha P 4
Hunan Secondary Education Enrollment To Decrease P 4

SOUTHWEST REGION

Guizhou Conference Discusses Militia Work Q 1
Xizang Discusses Improvements in Situation Q 1
Yin Fatang Addresses Xizang Intellectuals Forum Q 2
Briefs: Yunnan Flood Control Q 2

NORTH REGION

Nei Monggol Cracks Armed Criminal Case R 1
Tianjin Aquatic Products Bureau Reorganized [RIBAO] R 2
Tianjin RIBAO Comment [19 May] R 4
Tianjin Encourages Working Class To Advance [RIBAO] R 5
Briefs: Nei Monggol Grassland Conference R 6

NORTHEAST REGION

Heilongjiang Obstacles in Criminal Cases Viewed [HEILONGJIANG RIBAO 17 May] S 1
Heilongjiang Urges Improved Economic Results S 2

NORTHWEST REGION

Ningxia Takes Steps To Ban 'Harmful' Tapes [NINGXIA RIBAO 15 May] T 1
NINGXIA RIBAO Commentator [15 May] T 2
NINGXIA RIBAO on Recruiting New Party Members [14 May] T 3
Shaanxi Marks Anniversary of Mao's Yanan Talks T 5
Xinjiang Forum Held on Mao's Literary Thought T 6

PRC MEDIA ON TAIWAN AFFAIRS

PRC, Taiwan Pentathletes Compete in Tokyo Meet U 1

TAIWAN

Saudi Arabia Joint Venture 'Running Smoothly' [CHINA POST 12 May] V 1
Saudi Posts, Telegraph Minister Arrives on Visit V 1
Honduran Congress Delegation Arrives for Visit V 1

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

WEN WEI PO Stresses Stepping Up Soviet Studies [27 May] W 1
HSIN WAN PAO on Falklands Conflict, Superpowers [25 May] W 2
PRC Steps Up Coal Exploitation in Southwest [WEN WEI PO 24 May] W 3

RENMIN RIBAO ACCLAIMS RECENT OPEC MEETING

HK261131 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 25 May 82 p 7

[Short commentary: "New Achievement in Solidarity and Militancy of the Developing Countries"]

[Text] The 64th meeting of the OPEC ministerial conference recently decided to maintain the oil production ceiling at 17.5 million barrels a day and to keep the benchmark crude price at $34 a barrel. This is a result of OPEC's fruitful struggle against the Western oil monopolies.

Since a glut of oil appeared in the world market which sent down the oil prices, some Western countries and oil monopolies have substantially dumped their stocks on the market to pressure OPEC into lowering oil prices.

This even more seriously aggravated the situation. OPEC was confronted with a grave challenge. At the 63d meeting of the OPEC ministerial conference in March, oil ministers decided to cut back production and maintain the organization's price lines. However, the Western oil monopolies further intensified their sabotage activities and attempted to push prices even lower. They chose Nigeria and Ecuador, which were suffering from fairly grave economic difficulties as the point to make a breakthrough and suspended oil contracts with them as a means to force them to cut their prices in order to achieve the goal of breaking up OPEC. For a time, in the West, it was publicly and maliciously foretold that OPEC was going to collapse. But only 2 months later, their expectations were hopelessly dashed to pieces. OPEC provided Nigeria and Ecuador with financial aid to help them stand up against the pressure from the West. On the other hand, it continued to readjust its production ceiling in accordance with the conditions of the market and vigorously strived to maintain its price line. Meanwhile, with the substantial reduction of their stocks, the oil monopolies made new purchases of oil. All this has brought about a change in the relations between supply and demand in the world oil market. As a result, oil prices have stabilized and oil business is becoming more lively. OPEC has thus withstood severe test and achieved initial victory in stabilizing oil prices.

The present OPEC struggle is a just struggle waged by raw material producing countries to jointly defend raw material prices against world monopolies' plunder. Using oil as its weapon, OPEC has played a significant role in the struggle against the United States and Israel. Recently, it has persisted in its struggle and despite unfavorable conditions has maintained its invincible position. This proves that as long as the Third World countries are firmly united and determined to defend their common legitimate rights and interests against the world monopolies, they will finally achieve their goal in varied degrees.

OPEC is the most powerful organization of the raw-material-producing countries of the Third World. The large number of raw-material-producing countries that have united together with other developing countries have been playing an increasingly vigorous role in strengthening the cooperation between developing countries and promoting the North-South dialogue. Not long ago at the recently concluded Law of the Sea Conference and the conference of the International Tin Council. The developing countries united and cooperated with one another and showed their strength in safeguarding their rights and interests and opposing the obstinate stand of the superpowers. Though the struggle to establish a new economic order in the world is a prolonged cause and there are quite a few difficulties and obstacles ahead of us, we should never underestimate the strength, significance and role of the unity and fighting spirit of the developing countries.

HAIG PLEDGE ON U.S. MIDEAST PEACE EFFORTS CITED

OW270830 Beijing XINHUA in English 0815 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Washington, May 26 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig today pledged to intensify U.S. efforts to move forward the "peace process under the Camp David framework."

Addressing the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations this evening, Haig asserted that the Camp David process "remains the only practical route toward a more comprehensive Middle East peace between Israel and all of its neighbors, including Jordan and Syria."

Believing that the Palestinian autonomy talks should proceed, Haig said: "We should also realize that autonomy is only one stage of a process; it is an opportunity, not a conclusion." The talks on Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank and Gaza which began some 30 months ago between Egypt and Israel have become stalemated following Israel's unilateral annexation of east Jerusalem.

"Autonomy is transitional, not the final word," he said, adding: Crucial, unresolved issues such as the ultimate status of Jerusalem "must be negotiated." He said: "Unilateral actions by any parties that attempt to prejudge or bias the final outcome of the process serve only to raise suspicions and aggravate relationships."

He insisted that the United States will not recognize or negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization "until it accepts United Nations Resolutions 242 and 338 and recognizes Israel's right to live in peace."

On the Iran-Iraq war, Haig said that the war has brought the region "into great danger." "It may lead to unforeseen and far-reaching changes in the regional balance of power, offering the Soviet Union an opportunity to enlarge its influence in the process," he noted. Haig said the United States "supports constructive efforts to bring about an end to the fighting and the withdrawal of forces behind international borders under conditions that will preserve the sovereignty and territorial integrity of both Iran and Iraq." He indicated that the United States will play a more active role with other concerned members of the international community as efforts are intensified to end this war.

GENG BIAO MEETS FORMER U.S. OFFICIAL IN BEIJING

OW130808 Beijing XINHUA in English 0758 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 13 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Geng Biao met here this morning with a delegation of the United Nations Association of the United States of America led by Brent Scowcroft, former assistant to the president for national security affairs. In a friendly atmosphere, they exchanged views on international issues of common interest. Xu Xin, deputy director of the Beijing Institute for International Strategic Studies, was present at the meeting. The delegation arrived here yesterday for a friendly visit to China at the invitation of the Chinese institute.

NARROWING OF EAST WEST TECHNOLOGY GAP VIEWED

OW261235 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 25 May 82

[Roundup report from the "International Current Events" program: "Western Technology Has Armed the Soviet Union"]

[Excerpts] Not long ago a U.S. fisherman found an object while fishing in the sea along the coast of North Carolina, an American state on the East Coast. It was a device the Soviets put in the ocean to collect intelligence on U.S. naval activities. At the center of the device was a sophisticated microcircuit board that was not made in the United States, Europe or Japan, but was a Soviet copy of an American circuit board. This was a great shock to the U.S. Defense Department. Officials in the U.S. Pentagon are making strenuous efforts to investigate this matter to find out how the advanced technology was obtained by the Soviet Union. However, the seriousness of the problem lies not only in the skills of the Soviet KGB's international agents, but also in the fact that in recent years the Soviet Union has used the "detente" signboard to relax the vigilance of the West and to make numerous advanced Western technologies flow into the Soviet Union through formal trade channels. These technologies have beefed up the Soviet military industry, thereby assisting in the Soviet large-scale arms expansion and war preparations and adding to its ambition to dominate the world.

Facts over the past few years have proven that East-West trade has narrowed the gap between the Soviet and U.S. strategic military technology. For example, the gap in MIRV's has been narrowed, while the Soviet Union has increased its ability to launch long-range missiles and improved its military transportation capability. The technologies the Soviet Union has acquired from the West cover a wide range. In the main, they can be summed up in four categories:

1. The Soviet Union has used Western technology to improve its nuclear missiles. Accuracy is the first and foremost factor for successful application of nuclear missiles in war. In the past the Soviet technology in this respect was 10 years behind the United States. Today, with the aid of U.S. technology, the quality of Soviet missiles has caught up with those made by the United States. This has disturbed the so-called balance of nuclear forces between the two countries.

2. The Soviet Union has used Western electronic computers and digital control technology to develop its military industry. Investigation has revealed that over 80 percent of the Soviet second- and third-generation computer technology was imported from the West.

3. The Soviet Union has used Western technology to develop military aircraft industry. The Soviet Union previously lagged behind the Western countries in engine and light alloy technology. To change this situation, it has made every effort to buy advanced engine control systems from the West. In the past, the United States enjoyed a leading position in aeronautical strategy. Now the two countries are evenly matched.

4. The Soviet Union has used Western technology to develop its military transportation capability. Today, most of the Soviet military vehicles were built with technology imported through trade channels.

In recent years Western strategists and government officials have realized more and more clearly that providing the Soviet Union with advanced technology is tantamount to selling it the hangman's noose -- an act which will assist the Soviet Union in conquering them. However, other people hold that this will not only keep Western industry thriving and reduce the jobless rate in the West, but will also add to the reliance of the Soviets on the West. As a matter of fact, this viewpoint represents the interests of some of the Western monopoly bourgeoisie. They are bent on doing business with the Soviet Union to gain huge profits. It is this viewpoint that has hampered the Western countries from joining together to carry out a consistent policy to restrict the transfer of advanced technology to the Soviet Union, thus enabling it to continue to take advantage of the situation.

HOANG VAN HOAN ARTICLE ON SINO-SRV RELATIONS

HK210531 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 19 May 82 pp 5, 6

[Article by Hoang Van Hoan: "The Restoration and Development of Vietnamese-Chinese Friendship Is the Historical Task of the Vietnamese People at Present" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] Editor's note: This article is based on a speech Comrade Hoang Van Hoan delivered to a cadres' training class for overseas Vietnamese in Kunming toward the end of 1981 and is now published to commemorate the 92d anniversary of Chairman [Zhu Xi 0031 1598] Ho Chi Minh's birth. [end editor's note]

Vietnam is undergoing a fierce struggle which involves the people's destiny and the motherland's future. On one side of this struggle is the Le Duan clique, the members of which are devoid of gratitude, seek power and wealth by betraying their country and act as lackeys of the international anti-China reactionary forces. On the other side are all the Vietnamese people who are striving for Vietnam's peace, unification, independence, democracy and prosperity, who are determined to safeguard Chairman Ho's line, and who advocate the restoration and development of the Vietnamese-Chinese friendship.

In order to make clear the emergence, development and prospects of this struggle, let us recall the Vietnamese-Chinese relations from the past up to the present and recall how the Le Duan clique maliciously and foolishly sabotaged these relations. Let us determine what actions we should take to restore and develop these friendly relations.

I. The Vietnamese-Chinese Relations From the Past to the Present

For a thousand years, Vietnam and China were neighboring states with close political, economic, cultural and social ties. Le Duan and his like are now acting as lackeys of the international anti-China reactionary forces. They have concocted the lie that China is attempting to annex Vietnam and put forth various "historical evidence" to support their lie. They spread this lie on the radio, through the press and at hundreds of internal meetings and talks with foreign countries. They think that people will naturally believe them if they keep on lying hundreds of times. Therefore, let us have a look at the whole history of the Vietnamese-Chinese relations from the past to the present.

The history of Vietnamese-Chinese relations can be divided into two main stages -- the period before the founding of the CCP and the period after the founding of the CCP.

The Stage Before the Founding of the CCP

The Vietnamese-Chinese relations before the founding of the CCP (excluding the period after Vietnam became a French colony in 1884) were those between two feudal countries. Some Chinese feudal monarchs invaded Vietnam and some Vietnamese kings put up resistance. Some noted leaders among the latter were Le Hoan, Tran Hung Dao, Le Loi and Nguyen Hue. They all succeeded in repulsing assaults launched by Chinese feudal monarchs. However, after their repulsions, they all managed to create peaceful conditions and to establish harmonious relations with China so that the people might live and work in contentment and the country might maintain independence.

I have to add that the Le, Ly, Tran, Le and Nguyen dynasties all wished to be on good terms with China but on the other hand, they bullied and attacked Chiem Thanh and Chan Lap and finally annexed a part of them. Evidently, under the feudal system, both China and Vietnam made concessions and yielded to foreign powers while they themselves bullied weaker states. Internally, they oppressed and enslaved the people. Therefore, the Chinese monarchs' invasions of Vietnam and similarly the feudal Vietnamese monarchs' invasions of Chiem Thanh and Chan Lap were products of feudalism. The people of the two countries were not responsible for these acts.

In the article "Dialectical and Historical Materialism," Stalin said, "If historical science is to be a real science, it can no longer reduce the history of social development to the actions of kings and generals, to the actions of 'conquerors' and 'subjugators' of states, but must above all devote itself to the history of the producers of material value, the history of the laboring masses, the history of people." According to this understanding, we can see that the Vietnamese and Chinese people were on friendly terms for generations. It is particularly worth noting the economic and cultural exchanges between the two countries.

In the economic field, farming skills, mulberry planting, silkworm breeding, paper making, porcelain production, construction skills, medical knowledge, copper smelting and iron smelting were all introduced from China to Vietnam. In return, Vietnamese Chiem Thanh rich, sweet potatoes, lichees and longans were introduced to China. In the cultural field, Vietnam has also been greatly influenced by Chinese culture. To be specific, a large percentage of the Vietnamese vocabulary was derived from Chinese. Besides, Chinese was used in writing by our ancestors for nearly 2,000 years. At present, some 10,000 books in Chinese are still kept in libraries in Vietnam, especially historical books about the period from Hong Pang down to the time of the Nguyen Dynasty when Vietnam became a French colony. Without these historical books, we would not have been able to know how our ancestors lived. This proves the close ties between the peoples of the two countries. Anyone who respects facts must admit this.

It is necessary to explain another point. In the Vietnamese people's struggle against the Chinese monarchs' aggression, the Vietnamese were always directly or indirectly supported by the Chinese people. All the peasant uprisings and domestic struggles during the Han, Tang, Song, Yuan, Ming and Qing dynasties in China were significant support. Only if we are clear about this can we explain why the kings of the Dinh, Le, Ly, Tran, Le and Nguyen were able to set up regimes in the south and administered their territories without interference from the Chinese kings (before French rule).

Le Duan is a self-styled Marxist but he does not mention the role played by the people when he talks about history. He has asked others to write several hundred articles and scores of plays on the theme of Vietnamese resistance against China's aggression. However, he has never mentioned the sufferings of the Chinese people under feudal rule. Nor has he mentioned the support given by the Chinese people to the Vietnamese people in their resistance against aggression. Is this due to his ignorance about history or has he harbored ulterior motives of inciting hatred between the two peoples by propagating a large quantity of distorted historical data? I think both reasons exist. The writers of these articles and plays have not written according to historical facts but according to Le Duan's needs in attacking China. On the other hand, Le Duan himself is greatly delighted by these articles and plays and regards them as treasures. He knows nothing about the actual facts so he simply claps his hands to show his approval.

In this way, the Vietnamese-Chinese relations before the founding of the CCP have been distorted by the Le Duan clique.

The Stage After the Founding of the CCP

The Vietnamese-Chinese relations after the founding of the CCP were extremely fine and pure relations built on the basis of revolution and internationalism.

In the early 1920's, when Chairman Ho carried out revolutionary activities in France, he had already come into contact with Comrades Zhou Enlai, Li Fuchun and other members of the CCP.

In 1924, when Dr Sun Yat-sen advocated the policy of uniting with Russia, uniting with the Communist Party and giving support to the workers and peasants, Chairman Ho returned from Moscow to Guangzhou. With the help of the CCP, he mobilized young people in Vietnam to come to China. In Guangzhou, he ran a training class and set up the Association of Young Revolutionary Comrades. Then he sent cadres back to work in Vietnam and set off a revolutionary upsurge unprecedented in Vietnamese history.

In 1930, when the Vietnamese party was set up and in the years when this party was persecuted (1931-34), Vietnamese revolutionaries such as Comrades Le Hong Phong, Ha Huy Tap, Minh Khai, Phung Chi Kien and others took temporary refuge in China and they all obtained help from the CCP and the Chinese people.

In 1938, during the Chinese war of resistance against Japan, Chairman Ho again came to China. With the help of the CCP organizations in Kunming, Wuhan, Hengyang, Guiyang and Guilin and after listening to the views of the CCP Central Committee, Chairman Ho ran a training class in Nanguang, Guangxi Province. Later, he sent cadres back to Vietnam from China and set up a base area in north Vietnam. At that time, we still had no experience in guerrilla war or in building an army. We had no experience in setting up a united front and the people's political power. Chairman Ho applied Marxist principles and China's concrete experience to the reality of the Vietnamese revolution and won the victory of the August revolution. Not long after the victory of the August revolution, French troops again invaded Vietnam and we again used these experiences to resist France.

In 1949, the People's Republic of China was set up. China became our country's extensive and firm rear. China sent excellent experts and provided necessary arms to help us in organizing several major campaigns. In these campaigns, much of the effective strength of the French troops was wiped out. In particular, the victory of the Dien Bien Phu campaign compelled the French Government to sign the Geneva agreements which recognized the independent sovereign rights and territorial integrity of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. We must say that without China's assistance, we could not have scored such tremendous victories in the war of resistance against France.

After France was defeated, China continued to assist Vietnam in her resistance against the United States. When we were short of food, China provided us with food; and when we were short of arms, China provided us with arms. The quantity of China's aid to us was ever-increasing. One remarkable thing was that during the 11 years from 1954 to 1965, only China provided us with military aid. Only in 1965, as a result of Vietnam's request and criticism of international public opinion, did the Soviet Union start providing us with military aid -- mainly arms and war materials which China was not yet able to produce or not yet able to produce in large quantities. The total value of aid provided by China from 1950 to 1978 amounted to $20 billion, including arms, ammunition and military supplies which were enough to equip some 2 million troops of the navy, army, air force and militia, some 300 million meters of cloth and some 30,000 motor vehicles. China also helped Vietnam to build several hundred kilometers of railways and suppled Vietnam with all the rails, locomotives and carriages. As soon as China had built the Daqing oil field and became self-sufficient in oil, she supplied Vietnam with nearly 2 million tons of oil together with over 3,000 kilometers of oil pipes so that Vietnam was able to lay an oil supply line leading to the southern part of Vietnam. In particular, at a time when China needed foreign currency for construction, she provided Vietnam with several hundred million dollars for Vietnam's emergency use. At our request, China also sent out some 300,000 people (among them some 4,000 people died or wounded while fulfilling their duties) to help with our construction in the rear and built over a thousand kilometers of highways to be used as supply lines to the front, thus ensuring unimpeded transportation. All China's military aid was given gratuitously and with no political strings attached. This was because China considered that Vietnam and China were as close and lips and teeth and if the lips were gone, the teeth would be cold. She considered that Vietnam's resistance against France and the United States was not just for the sake of Vietnam alone but was also helpful to China's revolution.

Obviously, in the stage after the founding of the CCP, the relations between Vietnam and China were just as Chairman Ho said in his article written in commemoration of the 40th anniversary of the CCP: "Boundless kindness, close ties, deep affection, the spirit of friendship is everlasting."

II. How Has the Le Duan Clique Damaged the Friendship Between Vietnam and China?

Now I am going to expose Le Duan's activities against China. If we only have a general idea that Le Duan opposes China, we will not be able to completely see his vices and follies. He has always clung to his anti-Chinese views, but he has adopted different tactics in different periods.

When he first came to north Vietnam in 1957, he busily went everywhere and pretended to try to understand the situation and to be willing to learn from others. But in fact he went about to lure those who were like him. For a time he steathily spread the arguments of the anti-Chinese elements to the people who were intimate with him, although in public he still praised China. What he steathily said was the exact repitition of anti-Chinese arguments that he had heard in Moscow from Wang Ming.

Wheb Chairman Ho Chi Minh's health began to deteriorate in 1965, Le Duan deceived Chairman Ho and speeded up his efforts to win over a larger number of people against China. When Chairman Ho died in 1969, Le Duan and his clique publicly propagated their anti-Chinese views to almost all the party.

After the Paris agreement was signed and all the U.S. Armed Forces were withdrawn from south Vietnam, Le Duan began to speed up his purification of the Sino-Vietnamese border areas and forbid the people on both sides of the border to have contacts across the border. He forced the minority nationality villages along the border to move a few kilometers away from the border, dismissed the cadres whom he thought were on friendly terms with China and persecuted those who were of Chinese descent and those who had relatives in China. However, before the liberation of Saigon (in April 1975), he did not dare to carry out his anti-Chinese activities too openly because he still had to depend on China's tremendous aid in order to resist the United States. But when the United States was completely defeated, he thought that there was no longer any need for China's aid and began to openly oppose China. He publicly alleged that all Chinese living in Vietnam were China's fifth column, though he knew full well that these Chinese had struggled shoulder to shoulder with the Vietnamese in Vietnam's construction and in the wards of resistance against France and against the United States. He also knew very well that many Chinese had been imprisoned along with Vietnamese revolutionaries for taking part in their revolutionary struggle. Now Le Duan and his clique regard all Chinese as enemies and has launched a wave of cruel persecution and disappropriation against the Chinese.

The following is what he has done against the Chinese in Vietnam.

Plundering the Property of the Chinese by Means of the Implementation of the So-Called Policy of "Transforming Industry and Commerce"

The policy of transforming industry and commerce is a revolutionary policy, by which we restrict the industrial and commercial capitalists' exploitation of the workers and their monopoly over the national economy. After the French Army retreated from Vietnam in 1954, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam took over Hanoi and achieved tremendously good results by implementing this policy. But when Le Duan and his clique put forth this policy after taking over Saigon, it was aimed at deceiving the people. In public they alleged that they were only attacking the comprador bourgeoisie among the Chinese, but in reality, they expanded the scope of attack so excessively that all the good and honest people who supported themselves by their own labor and even those who had achieved merits in the Vietnamese revolution were implicated.

According to Vietnamese law, the state organs have no power to search people's houses. But, they invented the excuse of compiling administrative inventories of people's property and suddenly sent people to search the residences of the Chinese. They forced the heads of the Chinese households to register all the property of their households and those who were in charge of compiling the inventories were empowered to take away any of the registered property at will when they left. The property that had not been taken away had to be handed over to Le Duan's administrative organizations and be handled by them at will. During the so-called period of "transforming industry and commerce," Le Duan used this means to plunder the property of all the Chinese in Saigon and other cities in south Vietnam.

Forcing the Chinese To Move to the New Economic Zones

The establishment of the new economic zones was an indispensable policy. It was aimed at transferring manpower from the areas that were too densely populated to the areas that lack manpower in order to exploit the country's resources. If the state had shown proper concern for and had helped those who moved to the new economic zones, this policy would certainly have had a very favorable economic, political and social effect. However, the degenerate ruling regime of Le Duan and his clique regarded the new economic zones as areas that were established to punish people, especially the Chinese. Thus transfer to the new economic zones became one of the ways to persecute and plunder the Chinese.

The Chinese who were transferred to the new economic zones had to give away all their immovable property and were allowed to bring only hand luggage with them. But when they reached the new economic zones, they found that the zones were so desolate and uninhabited that they could find no people to help them out. As a result, they had to go back to where they originally lived. But they could not recover their houses or goods, nor could they recover their residence register so as to be allocated their food coupons. They had to live in the open under bridges or in the streets and were often driven about and scolded. Since they could not find any way out, some of them had no alternative but to go back to the new economic zones to meet their death slowly amid cold, hunger, suffering and disease.

Driving Hundreds of Thousands of Chinese Out of Vietnam

Le Duan adopted two methods to drive the Chinese away from Vietnam. The first method was driving them directly into China and the second was driving them to drift about on the sea. The number of those driven to the three border provinces of Guangdong, Guangxi and Yunnan is more than 250,000 and that does not include the thousands of people of Vietnamese descent who risked their lives to flee to China for refuge.

Quite a few of the Chinese who were driven out to sea died due to shipwreck and the survivors wandered to Southeast Asian countries and Western countries. Their number was estimated to be about 100,000.

Both those driven into China and those driven out to sea suffered the same fate. All their gold, silver and property was plundered by the Le Duan clique on the alleged grounds that "when you (the Chinese) came to Vietnam, you were empty-handed, therefore you have to leave Vietnam with empty hands."

However, China did not retaliate against the persecution and plunder of the Chinese by the Vietnamese authorities; on the contrary, it has continued to treat the overseas Vietnamese in China kindly. This made the Le Duan clique think that China was weak and easy to bully. It persecuted the Chinese even more wantonly and began to carry out armed provocation on the borders. In 1978, they issued an anti-Chinese resolution in the name of the party Central Committee.

The resolution said that China was the direct enemy and the No 1 enemy of the Vietnamese people, that the reactionary clique of Mao's followers in Beijing must be overthrown, that the progressive forces in China must be helped to seize state power, that Mao Zedong Thought must be criticized in all fields and that some people must be sent to Southeast Asian countries to rouse these countries to oppose China.

In order to achieve this arrogant and foolish goal of opposing China, they have no alternatives but to rely on the world anti-Chinese reactionary force, which is, to be more specific, the Soviet Union, that has deployed a million troops on the northern border of China and is waiting for an opportunity to invade China. In November 1978, they signed a "Vietnam-Soviet friendship and cooperation treaty" with the Soviet Union, which was in fact a treaty of military alliance. In the treaty, there is the following clause: "When either of the parties of the treaty is attacked or under the threat of an attack, the two parties of the treaty should immediately exchange views in order to eliminate this threat and in order to adopt proper and effective measures to safeguard the peace and security of the two countries." As soon as the treaty was signed in December 1978, Le Duan sent 200,000 troops to occupy Kampuchea and at the same time further intensified their persecution of the Chinese and their armed provocation on the Sino-Vietnamese border. Thus he started another anti-Chinese wave.

III. China's Response to Le Duan's Provocation

China is a powerful country in the world and it has whole-heartedly helped the Vietnamese people in resisting France and the United States till final victory. But since the Le Duan clique has been so ungrateful and has carried out armed provocation in such a wanton manner, naturally, China was forced to react. The following was what China has done step by step in response.

Revoking its aid and withdrawing its specialists.

Closing down its consulate in Vietnam and stopping all the activities of the Association of Overseas Vietnamese in China.

Using its armed forces to launch a counterattack against the Le Duan clique.

Any patriotic Vietnamese will feel grieved when he hears the above-mentioned things. Therefore, it is only natural that they misunderstood these things when they heard the distorted propaganda of the Le Duan clique. However, it is precisely because they are Vietnamese patriots that they are even more obliged to really understand the truth, distinguish right from wrong and judge things objectively. Only by so doing can they avoid committing mistakes and find ways to correctly handle problems. Seen from its root causes, the truth of China's response to the Le Duan clique was as follows:

CONCERNING THE REVOLUTION OF AID AND THE WITHDRAWAL OF SPECIALISTS: As soon as the Le Duan clique had driven 30,000 Chinese back to China, China showed great concern. Ten days later the number of Chinese who were driven into China increased to 50,000. China declared that the cancellation of 21 projects was a warning, but some 10 days later the number of Chinese driven away from Vietnam rose to 100,000, and China had to cancel 51 more projects. However, the number of Chinese driven away from Vietnam continued to grow and the ways in which they were driven away became increasingly cruel, thus China had no alternative but to cancel all aid and withdraw all its specialists.

The Le Duan clique knew very well that China would certainly stop its aid since they had treated it so viciously. But on the other hand, they thought that since by so doing they had served the international anti-Chinese force, this force would certainly not only indemnify their losses caused by China's stoppage of aid, but would give them even more aid. How could they have expected that this anti-Chinese force's true scheme was to instigate Le Duan to severely step up his anti-Chinese activities until he broke up with China and thus make things irretrievable. Then Le Duan had to increasingly rely on this force and would be more easy to manipulate as a pawn. Obviously, since China canceled all its aid, Le Duan has had to beg for anything he wants from this force. He has even had no scruples about selling the rights and interests of his motherland and people and accepting any harsh and sinister terms in exchange for any bit of aid.

ON THE CLOSURE OF CONSULATES AND SUSPENSION OF OVERSEAS VIETNAMESE ASSOCIATION'S ACTIVITIES, we all know that there is a principle called "reciprocity" in diplomatic relations. Reciprocity means reciprocal treatment. How country A behaves toward country B will also be the way country B behaves toward country A. Formerly, during the periods of the war of resistance against France and the war of resistance against U.S. aggression, although there were only about 2,000 Vietnamese in China, China still allowed Vietnam to set up consulates in Kunming, Nanning and Guangzhou. As for the Chinese in Vietnam, there were several hundred thousand in the north alone, but China nevertheless agreed to let Vietnam administer them and did not set up any consulate. After the liberation of the south, (April 1975) China made a request to open a consulate in Saigon, which had a population of several hundred thousand Chinese, but the Le Duan clique would not agree to this. They said that there are only Vietnamese people of Chinese descent in Vietnam and the question of Overseas Chinese did not exist. According to the wording, they meant that there was no need for China to set up a consulate. At the same time, they stepped up the exploitation of Chinese property and the persecution of the Chinese, and no one, regardless of whether they were bourgeoisie, petite bourgeoisie, working people or laboring masses, was spared. Faced with this kind of situation, China announced the closure of the Vietnamese consulates in China and the suspension of the Overseas Vietnamese Association's activities. This was in accord with the principle of "reciprocity" in international diplomatic relations and an unavoidable action. In spite of this, China still provided all kinds of facilities to the personnel of the Vietnamese consulates and allowed them to buy sewing machines, bicycles and other essentials to take home with them. The property of the consulates were left entirely at Vietnam's disposal without Chinese interference. Although overseas Vietnamese are no longer allowed to hold meetings, their rights and interests are still protected and they can still look after and manage their association. The Chinese party and government still give the same kind of good treatment to the overseas Vietnamese as before. Although this has caused indignation among some of the people who accuse the Vietnamese of being ungrateful, they are only individual cases and the Chinese party and government are already trying to correct this. The above facts are conditions which every overseas Vietnamese is able to see.

ON CHINA'S DISPATCH OF TROOPS TO COUNTERATTACK THE LE DUAN CLIQUE, as Vietnamese, we honestly do not wish anyone to touch our territory, and therefore we were all very frightened, worried and pained when China sent troops into Vietnam. For once the conflict started, we would have to mobilize thousands of people, slaughter each other and the losses would be difficult to imagine. However, the responsibility for this incident lay not with the Chinese side but with Le Duan's side. Since making their anti-China decision in 1978, the Le Duan clique had wantonly fired at and shelled civilians on the Chinese side. At the beginning, China still advocated solving the matter through negotiations and persuasions and did not counterattack. However, with the harassment by the Le Duan clique becoming more and more violent on the one hand and the Chinese people complaining about the weak attitude of the government on the other, China in the end had no alternative but to counterattack. However, when sending troops into Vietnam, China immediately declared that this was to be a counterattack in self-defense, limited in both space and time, and that it would not take a single inch of soil from Vietnam. Even when the Le Duan clique was gloatingly waiting for the Soviet Army to launch a sneak attack on China from the north and there was no sign of it appearing, China had already withdrawn its troops from Vietnam as announced.

According to the propaganda of the Le Duan clique, the Chinese troops had carried out wanton destruction and massacre in Vietnam. What were the actual facts? The actual facts were that before the arrival of the Chinese troops, the Le Duan clique had already killed many people in the process of purifying the border area. After the Chinese troops withdrew from Vietnam, the Le Duan clique killed even more people. The reason for that was, apart from the people who were persecuted and could not escape to China, the people who remained in the border area were given discriminatory treatment, forced into concentration camps and subjected to all manner of suffering and humiliation. When the Chinese troops arrived, these people -- who were Vietnamese, not Chinese -- thought that they had been saved. They therefore took spontaneous action and looted back their property from the people whom they believed to have persecuted them and burnt their houses. Some very good cadres were also involved. When the Chinese troops arrived, the Le Duan clique ordered a mass evacuation. However, some of the people could not evacuate because of special circumstances and some refused to evacuate because they were convinced the Chinese troops would not harm them. When the Chinese troops arrived, they gave food and medicine to needy and the sick. This greatly infuriated the Le Duan clique, so after the Chinese troops withdrew, they accused these people of being pro-China and massacred them. For example, more than 200 people were killed in Hoanglian Son and more than 400 people were killed in Cao Bang and Lang Son. Entire families were killed regardless of sex or age. Regarding such wanton slaughter, some localities could only send urgent telegrams to Hanoi calling on the Central Committee to have people conduct an investigation. Some localities even directly requested Pham Van Dong and Vo Nguyen Giap to go and see for themselves the tragic killing of people.

For the sake of covering up the above crimes, the Le Duan clique created some false evidence to deceive the public. They collected the corpses, including the corpses of the women and children they killed and arranged for photographs and films to be taken of them. They also arranged for foreign correspondents to see them and openly accused the Chinese troops of killing them.

I was still in Hanoi in February 1979. I met some of the cadres and people who escaped from the border area and talked with them. Some told me that the existing border question was a nationality question and not a question of Chinese aggression. Since coming to China, I have also talked with some of the refugees and understand the situation more clearly. The robbery, sabotage and killing at the border were caused by the reactionary policy of the Le Duan clique and not by the Chinese troops.

The facts were the Chinese troops had only attacked military objectives and strategic strongholds and had not killed the people. This was what the Vietnamese refugees who escaped to China told reporters and friends.

IV. Restoration and Development of Sino-Vietnamese Relations Is the Historical Task of People Throughout the Country

As mentioned above, opposing China is not an emotional mistake but a strategic mistake. It is not only currently causing suffering for the people and plunging the people into an abyss of misery, but it will also create disasters for the generations to come, and there is no telling when this will end.

For two neighboring countries linked by common mountains and rivers which have been through decades of trials and tribulations as well as thick and thin together, we must try to live in harmony and not try to depend on the help of a country which is thousands of li away. To put it correctly, becoming the lackey of this country, creating disturbances and engaging in generations of contention is indeed a presumptuous and stupid act. It is the task of people throughout the country to criticize this. They must do everything possible to prevent this national calamity and they must regard it as the historical task of the Vietnamese people today.

First, we must see clearly Le Duan's anti-China nature:

Opposing China is opposed to the line of Chairman Ho Chi Minh

Everybody knows that the political activities of Chairman Ho's entire life were closely related to the Chinese Communist Party and the Chinese people. By means of historical study and 50 years of revolutionary practice, Chairman Ho said: "In the course of several thousand years of history, there has been a fraternal relationship between the Vietnamese nation and the Chinese nation. In the future, this relationship will be closer still. It will promote the freedom and happiness of the two nations and safeguard world democracy and lasting peace." ("Selected Works of Ho Chi Minh," 1960 edition, p 319)

"Vietnam and China are two fraternal countries as closely related as the lips and the teeth. Our two countries have fought shoulder-to-shoulder in the past as well as at present for national independence and socialism." (1 October 1959, congratulatory telegram on China's National Day)

On discussing the influence of the Chinese revolution on the Vietnamese revolution, Chairman Ho said: "The influence of the Russian October Revolution and the principles of Marxism-Leninism have mostly been transmitted to Vietnam by way of China." ("Selected Works of Ho Chi Minh," 1960 edition, p 235)

"Because of such factors as geography, history, economy and culture, the Chinese revolution exerted a powerful influence on the Vietnamese revolution. The Vietnamese revolution must learn and has already learned many of the experiences of the Chinese revolution,... based on the experience of the Chinese revolution and Mao Zedong Thought, we have achieved many victories. This is what the revolutionaries of Vietnam must always bear in mind and be grateful for." ("Selected Works of Ho Chi Minh," 1960 edition, p 154)

Regarding Chinese aid to Vietnam, Chairman Ho in all his congratulatory telegrams on China's national day in 1958, 1959 and 1960, and in his congratulatory telegram on the occasion of the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese Communist Party (1 July 1961) had used the word "selfless" in expressing his praise. (selfless means not working for one's own interests) This word was never used in his congratulatory telegrams to any other country or party. The word "selfless" had also been used in the congratulatory telegram sent by the national front for the liberation of south Vietnam in 1965 on the occasion of China's national day.

Chairman Ho had used this poem "The ties of friendship between China and Vietnam are intimate, comradely as well as fraternal," to sum up and express the relations between the two parties and peoples. This is known by all the people in Vietnam.

What I must mention in particular is the period between 1965 and 1969. Chairman Ho's health had seriously deteriorated and he went to China for treatment. When he was in Hanoi, he was also treated by a Chinese doctor. Even though the Le Duan clique asked him on numerous occasions to go to another "fraternal country" for treatment, he always refused.

From Chairman Ho's words and deeds, we can clearly see the betrayal of the advocations and line of Chairman Ho by the Le Duan clique.

Opposing China Is Ungratefulness

A genuine revolutionary must always give priority to the interests of the revolution and the interests of the people and the motherland.

The Vietnamese people had made indomitable sacrifices in nearly a century of struggle against French imperialism. However, it was not until the correct line put forward by Chairman Ho that the masses in their millions became mobilized, pledged their lives to resist enslavement and won the sympathy and support of the justice-loving people of the world, including the French and American people. However, it should be pointed out that the help given by the Chinese people and the Chinese Communist Party to the Vietnamese people in their struggle against French and American imperialism was the greatest, the most timely and the most effective. This was particularly the case after the founding of the People's Republic of China in 1949. Without this great, timely and effective help, it would have been impossible for the Vietnamese people to score such tremendous triumphs in the war of resistance against the French and the war of resistance against U.S. aggression. Even Le Duan admits this himself and has also repeated this on many occasions.

However, the Le Duan clique, in order to stir up an anti-China tide, has actually distorted history, heaped the crimes of the feudal system, 1,000 years ago, on the Chinese Communist Party and the Chinese people and concocted the lie that China is attempting to annex Vietnam. This is not only ungratefulness to China, but is also ungratefulness to the revolution, to the motherland and to the Vietnamese people.

Opposing China Will Lead to the Bankruptcy of the Vietnamese Economy

The economy of Vietnam is very backward in the first place and it has been very seriously damaged after 30 years of war. However, with the help of China and other fraternal countries, it could still withstand the test of war. Although the life of the people was still difficult, they nevertheless managed to get along and also made contributions in the war.

However, after winning the war, the Le Duan clique carried out the orders of a foreign country, attacked and occupied Kampuchea and mobilized the whole people against China. Because of this, China has withdrawn all aid, including nearly 100 projects under construction. The United States, Japan, England and France, as well as other West European countries which tried to win over Vietnam, also planned to supply it with aid, but on seeing Vietnam's invasion of Kampuchea, these plans have also been canceled. This has dealt the Vietnamese economy a head-on blow from which it will never recover. Not only this, but the Le Duan clique had also committed all its manpower and resources to the invasion of Laos and Kampuchea and preparations for a war with China. Some of the fraternal countries further away cannot supply much help because of their own limited resources. As for the biggest, strongest and most affluent fraternal country, because of overexpansion and overcommitment, it could only supply military aid to those who would serve as mercenaries, and economically, it could only provide a bit of niggardly help. The beautiful promises made before have now been gradually withdrawn. Some of Vietnam's recent requests have either been tactfully turned down or openly refused. Therefore, there is no hope for the Vietnamese economy. The Vietnamese people are in a state of unprecedented poverty and fatigue.

Relying on Another Country To Oppose China Will Lead to National Subjugation

Since the Le Duan clique had to oppose China but lacked the strength to do so, they could only rely on a country which seeks world domination. When Vietnam was still friendly with China, this country had already used every means to sow discord and constantly threw out bait. The moment the Le Duan clique took the bait, they became hooked. This country also played Le Duan up as a "hero" and adopted the posture of treating him as an equal. However, should Le Duan refuse to obey instructions, it will immediately yank the string and bring him to unconditional submission groveling with pain. At present, there are foreign agents in state organs at various levels from the Central Committee to the various localities. Therefore, in economy, politics, military affairs and diplomacy, it must follow the directions of the other country and cannot act independently. In the past, when there was news that Camranh Bay would soon be used by a foreign country, Le Duan immediately declared that this was impossible. Now, not only the Camranh Bay, but also all major ports, important airfields, rivers and seas are being freely used by that foreign country. Vietnam has already lost part of its territorial sovereignty. If it persists on the course of opposing China, the whole of Vietnam will become a foreign military base, raw material supply base and processing base.

There Will Never Be Peace or Stability if Anti-Chinese Activities Are Carried On

The Le Duan clique has fabricated the lie that China intends to invade and annex Vietnam. But the reality is that in the past, China assisted Vietnam in resisting France and the United States and in striving for national liberation and that even now China still hopes that Vietnam will become a peaceful, independent and friendly country that is mutually beneficial for China. However, the Le Duan clique has clung with a vengeance to opposing China and boasted that it is resolved to defeat China. Let us soberly consider how many years and how many generations will pass before Le Duan will be able to defeat China. Let us recall what has happened in the past. Since the Le Duan clique began to wantonly stir up anti-Chinese feelings, China has remained immune as ever, though some houses and vehicles have been destroyed and some people and livestock have been killed and wounded on its border. It has remained stable and unified and is continuously striving to realize its four modernizations and to effectiv improve the living standard of its people. As for Vietnam, the wars it is waging in Laos and Kampuchea and the burden of deploying about 100,000 troops on the Sino-Vietnamese border in order to pose as vigorously making preparations for fighting China have only brought misery and death to itself. Countless families in Vietnam have thus been broken up, and throughout the country there has been such terror and hardship that people cannot enjoy their food or sleep peacefully. When, may I ask, will there be peace in Vietnam and when will the Vietnamese people be able to enjoy a peaceful life if Le Duan and his clique persistently cling to opposing China?

In short, opposing China will bring all sorts of harm and no benefits to Vietnam.

In order to restore and develop the friendship between Vietnam and China, we should do the following practical work:

Opposing the Malpractice of Vilifying China by Distorting History

History is the record of what has objectively taken place. However, in order to vilify China, the Le Duan clique instigated some opportunists to publish some distorted materials in order to whip up national hatred against China.

For example, for the period of more than 1,000 years from Ngo Quyen's resistance against the southern Han Dynasty to the time after the dynasties of Dinh, Le, Ly, Tran, Le and Nguyen, there were only 20 years of war between Vietnam and China. Every time when the war was over, the Vietnamese emperors and kings adopted conciliatory policies to pursue the development of peaceful relations with China. But the Le Duan clique has only emphatically given accounts of the wars and avoided mentioning anything about the peaceful relations between Vietnam and China.

For 30 years or so, the Chinese people fought shoulder to shoulder with the Vietnamese people in their struggles against French and U.S. aggression until final victory. However, the Le Duan clique issued a white paper, standing facts on their heads. It says that China is attempting to swallow up Vietnam and is sabotaging the Vietnamese revolution in collaboration with the United States. In this regard, I wrote an article entitled "The Facts of the Militant Friendship Between China and Vietnam Brook No Distortion" to give concrete refutations, but I will not repeat the details here.

China's contributions to the Vietnamese revolution were highly evaluated by Chairman Ho Chi Minh. This is also stated in the 1960 edition of the "Selected Works of Ho Chi Minh" published in Hanoi. However, in the second edition published in 1980, Le Duan instructed that almost all articles and passages concerning China's contributions be deleted.

The distortion of history is an important part of Le Duan's anti-Chinese policy. We must maintain vigilance and carry out struggles against the Le Duan clique. In particular, all those who know the facts of history must adopt various means to expose the changeable, hypocritical and deceitful policy of the Le Duan clique.

Oppose Mobilizing Manpower and Material Resources To Oppose China

After the anti-Chinese resolution was adopted in 1978, the Le Duan clique compelled the National Assembly Standing Committee to promulgate a general order for mobilizing the manpower and material resources of the whole country so that they could randomly press-gang people into the army or into doing forced labor and randomly collect, purchase or take over anything from anyone for use on the battle fronts in Laos and Kampuchea as well as in the Sino-Vietnamese border areas and on the so-called "anti-Chinese defense line." As a result of uninterrupted mobilizations, the manpower and material resources in Vietnam have been exhausted. Almost all young people in cities and the countryside, including those who are only 16 or 17, have been press-ganged into the army, and all people throughout the country, except those who are old and weak, have been mobilized to build fortifications. All organs and localities have to send people to the border areas to take up duties, and organic units have been established in every so-called tree farm or agricultural farm along the Sino-Vietnamese borders. At present, there is an atmosphere of stuffiness in Vietnam under the control of the army, especially under the control of the public security personnel and special agents of the Le Duan clique.

We must adopt all feasible measures to smash the anti-Chinese plan, which is actively being carried out by the Le Duan clique, including the general order to mobilize manpower and material resources. This is a very important task and everyone must do his bit for it.

Oppose Making Provocations on the Sino-Vietnamese Border

The Sino-Vietnamese border was a friendly border in the past. The people on both sides had frequent and close contacts with each other. This was especially so after China was liberated in 1949 due to their struggle against the common enemies. Druing festivals, they would visit each other and exchange greetings. They also held rural fairs on both sides to exchange goods. For the convenience of the people on both sides in contacting each other, the Chinese side built several bridges on the border rivers. At the same time, some provinces along the border became friendly provinces and the Chinese side also helped Vietnam build many local projects. In those years when the U.S. planes bombed the northern part of Vietnam, the Vietnamese villagers in the border areas often took refuge on the Chinese side, and Vietnamese planes also took cover in China.

However, since the whole of South Vietnam was liberated (1975), the Le Duan clique has tried every means to create tension on the Sino-Vietnamese border. Under the pretext of "clearing up the border," they forced tens of thousands of people to move from the places where they had lived for generations to other places which could be more easily controlled. They also compelled the villagers in the border areas to dig trenches, plant sharp-pointed bamboo sticks and lay mines along the border. In some places they even intruded into China's territory. They compelled the people in the plains areas to take up duties on the border and form military units which are under direct command of the army. They carry out provocations against China every day by firing at ordinary people who are working in the fields and farm animals and bombarding houses. Recently, as they were heavily beaten on the Kampuchean battlefields. They had to throw in more troops.

This made them become more isolated in the world. In order to divert people's attention both at home and abroad, they feel it more necessary to create tension on the Sino-Vietnamese border.

We must be clearly aware of this and adopt every possible means to stop the criminal acts of the Le Duan clique.

Oppose Persecuting and Plundering the Chinese and Vietnamese of Chinese Descent

There are more than 1 million Chinese and Vietnamese of Chinese descent in Vietnam. As early as a thousand years ago in the Han and Tang Dynasties, some Chinese went to live in Vietnam. Their descendants have now become completely Vietnamese and do not have any of the characteristics of the Chinese. Some Chinese went to Vietnam in the last years of the Song Dynasty since they would not submit themselves to the rule of the Yuan. They fought together with the Vietnamese people against the Mongolians. Some Chinese went to Vietnam in the last years of the Ming Dynasty since they would not submit themselves to the Qing rulers. They settled down in Vietnam and established villages there, which were called "Ming towns." More than 300 years have passed and they, too, have become completely Vietnamese. There are still some Chinese who have gone to settle in Vietnam due to political or economic reasons. They are living together with the Vietnamese and some have even married Vietnamese, but they continue to use the Chinese language and keep to their customs and habits. They continue to regard China as their motherland. They are Chinese or Overseas Chinese. Except for a few of them who are bourgeoisie making a living from commercial business or from exploitation and money lending, most of these Chinese are laboring people who are taking part in the construction of Vietnam. Many of them regard Vietnam as their second motherland. They joined the Vietnamese party and army and rendered outstanding service in the wars against France and the United States. Generally speaking, either Chinese or Vietnamese of Chinese descent are friendly and live in harmony with the Vietnamese people.

In order to show their loyalty to the reactionary anti-Chinese forces in the world, the Le Duan clique has done its utmost to cruelly plunder and persecute the Chinese.

In the south, tens of thousands of Chinese, who had enough money, had no other choice but to hand in their gold and dollars and flee by ship, letting their destiny be decided by the wind and waves on the sea.

In the north, hundreds of thousands of Chinese were forced to leave the cities. All subdistricts, units, organs and schools are allowed to adopt the so-called appropriate measures to carry out this decision. As a result, the Chinese were forced to leave the cities or settle down in the new economic regions. Some of them are forced to leave Vietnam through bribery.

It is not only an ungrateful act but also very stupid to plunder and persecute Chinese in this way. It resulted in disturbing the tranquillity of society and stirring up hatred between nationalities, and its influence cannot be eliminated in a few years or in a few generations.

Being Vietnamese patriots, we must resolutely oppose these counterrevolutionary acts of the Le Duan clique.

Oppose Making Vietnam an Anti-Chinese Base for Foreign Countries

In their anti-Chinese activities, the Le Duan clique are not relying on their own strength but mainly on a foreign country. They have preached again and again that this foreign country possesses some weapons which are so terrible that with a single bullet, the whole regiment or battalion of soldiers can be killed. If it is fired at an island, all the people on the whole island will be killed. However, no such things have even happened in Kampuchea or on the Sino-Vietnamese border.

But it was reported by foreign news agencies that chemical toxicants have been used in the Kampuchean battlefields and some Lao districts inhabited by the Mao people. The water sources and air in these districts were polluted and many people poisoned. In some Vietnamese provinces contiguous to the Sino-Vietnamese border, many fortifications have been built, which are fitted out with foreign equipment and will be used by the foreign country to fight against China. Vietnam's major airfields and seaports have been freely used by the foreign country to threaten neighboring countries, especially to threaten China. What will be the result of making Vietnam a base of a foreign country for fighting against other countries? I am sure that everyone is fully aware of it. When hostilities break out, these bases will inevitably become the targets of attacks. This means that Vietnam will become the target of attacks and be destroyed. It will not be able to escape retaliation.

However, the immediate result of making a country a base of another to fight against other countries is the violation of its territorial integrity and sovereignty. It is quite possible that the spearhead of these military bases is directed at this country itself.

We must resolutely oppose the Le Duan clique in making Vietnam a military base of a foreign country for opposing other countries, especially for opposing China.

Oppose Sending Vietnamese To Attack Laos, Kampuchea and China

After more than 30 years of war, we finally defeated the French and U.S. aggressors and realized the unification of the country. Originally, we should have followed Chairman Ho Chi Minh's instructions and made good use of the peace time to recuperate the nation, heal the wounds of war and build our country. However, more than 6 years have passed since we won victory and, as a result of the policy of aggression and war pursued by the Le Duan clique, our compatriots are still compelled to fight and die in the battlefields of Laos and Kampuchea and on the so-called anti-Chinese defense line. At present, there are about 1 million troops in Vietnam. If various paramilitary forces are included, there are about 2 million. Yet, they are recruiting new soldiers every day, even women and children of 16 or 17 cannot be spared. The whole country is still in a state of war. This is an abnormal phenomenon and disaster the Le Duan clique has brought on our motherland. The Vietnamese people are a patriotic people. When Vietnam was invaded by the French and U.S. aggressors, they would rather die than surrender. They mobilized all the compatriots to fight the enemies and all our manpower and material resources to support the front. Thus, they won victory. Now the Le Duan clique are sending our compatriots to the battlefields to kill our comrades-in-arms who fought together with us in the same trench. What the Le Duan clique is doing, such as making enemies of friends and sending our compatriots to attack them, are actually violent acts of madmen and counterrevolutionary acts.

We must firmly oppose the press-ganging of soldiers and call upon husbands and children to leave various battlefields and return to their homes for study, work and production. As for those missing, we must ask for the notification of death, the return of the body and the payment of compensation. We must mobilize the sons and younger brothers in the army to ask for demobilization and not to fight against people of neighboring countries, stir up a tide against war and calling for peace, force the military adventurist scheme of the Le Duan clique into complete bankruptcy and bring about the total collapse of the invasion army of the Le Duan clique.

Under the guidance of the correct line of Chairman Ho and the massive support of China, the heroic people of Vietnam triumphed over French and American imperialism and achieved the liberation and unification of the motherland. Today, it is evern more necessary for them to oppose the traitorous Le Duan clique, restore and develop Sino-Vietnamese friendship, strive for a peaceful environment and build a really unified, independent and democratic Vietnam just as Chairman Ho hoped. This is the historical task of the Vietnamese people at present. Compatriots, advance! We are sure to triumph!

THAILAND REITERATES REJECTION OF SRV PROPOSAL

OW250812 Beijing XINHUA in English 0802 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Bangkok, May 25 (XINHUA) -- Thailand has reiterated its rejection of Vietnam's proposal for a "partial withdrawal" of its troops from Kampuchea. The Thai stance was expounded yesterday by Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila in an exclusive interview with the NATION REVIEW carried by the paper today.

The foreign minister said, "We are not a party to the Kampuchean conflict. And how many troops would be pulled out in Vietnam's proposed partial withdrawal? Then, they (Vietnamese) also want a demilitarized zone straddling Thailand and Kampuchea. That simply means bringing war into our territory. We just can't accept it."

Referring to the proposed formation of a coalition government of the three major Kampuchean resistance forces, he disclosed some "new developments" had taken place recently, but he refused to elaborate.

Sitthi said he was confident that Democratic Kampuchea, despite the obstacles in the formation of a coalition government, would manage to maintain the U.N. seat in the upcoming General Assembly of the United Nations.

ZHAO ZIYANG MEETS HONG KONG INDUSTRIALISTS

OW251246 Beijing XINHUA in English 1239 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- Premier Zhao Ziyang met here today with T.K. Ann, chairman of the Winsor Industrial Corporation Ltd., and H.C. Tang, president of the Federation of Hong Kong Industries.

XU YINSHENG MEETS INDONESIAN JUSTICE MINISTER

OW240341 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1136 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Jakarta, 22 May (XINHUA) -- A Chinese table tennis delegation, with Li Furong as its leader and Zheng Minzhi as its deputy leader, arrived in the Indonesian capital of Jakarta on the evening of 21 May to participate in the upcoming sixth Asian table tennis championship to be held from 24 May to 3 June.

Xu Yinsheng, vice president of the International Table Tennis Federation, and Song Zhong, honorary secretary general of the Asian Table Tennis Union, arrived in Jakarta on the same plane. They were greeted at the airport by Willy Warokka, secretary general of the All-Indonesia Table Tennis Association.

Xu Yinsheng met with Ali said, Indonesian Minister of Justice and chairman of the All-Indonesia Table Tennis Association, on the afternoon of 22 May. During the meeting, Ali said told Xu Yinsheng: We wish to promote friendship through sports exchanges. We hope to further promote this kind of beneficial exchange between our two countries. Xu Yinsheng expressed thanks for the friendly reception given by the All-Indonesia Table Tennis Association.

BRIEFS

HONG KONG SHIPPING SERVICE -- Guangzhou, 11 May (XINHUA) -- A passenger shipping service between Jiangmen municipality in Guangdong and Hong Kong was inaugurated on 11 May. The two cities are 96 nautical miles apart and it will take 4 hours for a single trip either from Hong Kong or from Jiangmen. Two passenger ships with air conditioning facilities on board will serve this route. They daily leave Hong Kong at 0815 and 0830 and depart from Jiangmen for the return trip at 1400 and 1430 on the same day. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1630 GMT 11 May 82 OW]

ZHAO ZIYANG MEETS WITH PAKISTANI ARMY GENERAL

OW261720 Beijing XINHUA in English 1500 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 26 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang met with General Sawar Khan, deputy chief of the army staff of Pakistan, here this afternoon. Premier Zhao said: "China and Pakistan are good neighbors. The relations between our two countries are marked by mutual trust, mutual support and mutual understanding. The Chinese Government and people will work to promote this relationship." He said Sino-Pakistan friendship will not be affected by international problems. "The Chinese Government," he said, "will, as always, support Pakistan in its maintenance of independence and state sovereignty."

Sawar Khan said: "During our visit, we have felt the Pakistan-China friendship growing. Pakistan receives consistent support from China." He conveyed the best regards from President Mohammad Ziaul Haq to Premier Zhao Ziyang. Premier Zhao asked Sawar Khan to convey the same to President Zia.

Present were Liu Huaqing, deputy chief of the General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, and M. Afzal Qadir, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Pakistan Embassy in Beijing. The guests arrived Tuesday after visiting Nanjing, Shanghai and Hangzhou. They will leave tomorrow for home.

BANGLADESH'S ERSHAD RECEIVES PRC JOURNALISTS

OW201802 Beijing XINHUA in English 1642 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Dacca, May 20 (XINHUA) -- Bangladesh Chief Martial Law Administrator Lt. General Hussain Mohammad Ershad said here today that the relations between Bangladesh and China were excellent in all aspects. While receiving a visiting Chinese journalists delegation, he expressed the conviction that the friendship and cooperation between the two countries would be further strengthened in the future. H.M. Ershad briefed the Chinese journalists on the initial results achieved by the present government in streamlining administration, maintaining law and order and promoting industrial and agricultural production. He said the policies which had been adopted so far were acceptable to the Bangladesh people. He disclosed that new government measures would be taken in education and other fields. Chinese Ambassador to Bangladesh Liu Shuqing was present on the occasion. The delegation arrived here on May 14 after visiting Pakistan and India.

BORDER TRADE BETWEEN XIZANG, BHUTAN FLOURISHES

OW241230 Beijing XINHUA in English 1216 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Lhasa, May 24 (XINHUA) -- The total volume of small trading transactions between Yatung (Chomo) County in Tibet and Bhutan, a small country neighboring China on the southwest reached 220,000 yuan (RMB) in 1981. This is an all-time record since the democratic reform of 1959, aimed at ending serfdom in the Tibet Autonomous Region. Yatung County, bordering on Bhutan, is a customary barter trade center between Tibetans and people of Bhutan for a long time. However, during the ten-year internal disorder in China, such trading was disrupted. Following important directives from central authorities in 1980 on the work in Tibet, Yatung-Bhutan barter trade has revived gradually and flourished. The Yatung County People's Government reopened five tax-free barter points in an effort to promote trade on the borders. Since 1980, accommodations were provided in the border towns of Pagri, Xia Yadong (Chomomai) and Xarsingmazhen in Yatung to receive foreign border people who came in for barter. In 1981 more than 2,700 people in 800 groups from Bhutan came to Yatung to barter rice, flour, red tea, woolen fabrics and bambooware for dairy products, woolen mats, Tibetan garments and other daily necessities. This helped thrive economy and enhance friendship between the peoples on the borders.

PORTUGUESE ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF CONCLUDES VISIT

Hong Kong Paper on Egidio Visit

HK260326 Hong Kong SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in English 26 May 82 p 11

[By Donald Cheung]

[Excerpt] China's arms industry is developing rapidly and more military equipment is being produced internally for its own use. This was disclosed yesterday by Portugal's army chief of staff, General Melo Egidio, when he arrived in Macau via the border gate -- at the end of this 10-day official visit in China. Gen Egidio and his wife, accompanied by a four-member delegation, were greeted by top military officials in Macau, led by the governor, Rear Admiral Vasco de Almeida e Costa, and leading community leaders.

The former governor of Macau said he was "very impressed" by China's Armed Forces and military installations during his visit to air force establishments, a naval base in Qinghai, a school of infantry and a military academy. Gen Egidio said he had particularly high regard for the discipline of the Chinese army, although he said the military equipment is "a bit old." But he was quick to add that there is a great desire among Chinese military chiefs to equip the country with new armaments. He said Chinas's arms industry is developing rapidly and "a great part of the weapons I saw in China are self-made."

Gen Egidio disclosed that his visit had not concluded any agreements with China because "that was not the original plan. What was planned was an increase of co-operation between the Portuguese and Chinese armies because it is very important to exchange experience," he explained. Asked if Portugal can export military know-how to China, he said: "Portugal is an old country of the European continent and we have a great experience in military organization and strategy, and we are in close alliance with NATO. This alliance with NATO was clearly understood by China and I think that in some aspects, Portugal can give its experience to China." But he stressed that Portugal needs reciprocal collaboration from China. He said Chinese officials have expressed "willingness" to enhance closer links with NATO countries, Western Europe and the United States. "We have also exchanged opinions on general world affairs," he added. He said his official visit to China is more than just establishing closer ties between the armed forces, but also that of the people of the two nations. "That's very obvious in my talks with the prime minister and the army chief of staff," he said. Gen Egidio has had talks with China's prime minister, Mr Zhao Zhiyang; army Chief of Staff General Yang Dezhi; and other top Chinese military officials during his official visit, the first one since he was named the top man of Portugal's army early last year. He last visited China in March 1980 as the governor of Macau, during which he met China's strongman, Deng Xiaoping.

Departure of Delegation

OW261116 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1650 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Guangzhou, 25 May (XINHUA) -- Gen Melo Egidio, chief of General Staff of the Portuguese Armed Forces, Mrs Egidio and his party left Zhongshan County, Guangdong Province, this afternoon for home via Aomen [Macao] after winding up their official visit to China.

Zhang Bingyu, deputy director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau under the Ministry of National Defense; representatives of the Guangzhou PLA units; and responsible persons of Zhongshan County saw the Portuguese guests off at Zhuhai municipality's Gongbei. General Egidio told them that he would never forget his visit to China during his life, and that his visit has strengthened friendship between the armed forces and people of Portugal and China. The Portuguese guests arrived in Zhongshan County yesterday from Guilin via Guangzhou. During their stay in Guangzhou, Wu Kehua, commander of the Guangzhou PLA units, gave a luncheon in their honor. Guangdong Vice Governor Liang Weilin was also present. The Portuguese guests visited this morning Dr Sun Yat-sen's former residence at Cuiheng village, Zhongshan County, and toured Zhuhai municipality, where they were warmly received by local responsible persons.

HUANG HUA MEETS OUTGOING EGYPTIAN AMBASSADOR

OW221942 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1549 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 22 May (XINHUA) -- Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, met and had a cordial conversation this afternoon in the Yangyuan Room at Diaoyutai with 'Izz al-'Arab Amin Ibrahim, ambassador to China of the Arab Republic of Egypt, who is soon to leave for home at the end of his term of office.

JI PENGFEI MEETS WITH CONGO AMITY DELEGATION

OW241632 Beijing XINHUA in English 1502 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 24 (XINHUA) -- Chinese State Councillor Ji Pengfei met here this afternoon with a delegation from the Congolese Association for Friendship Among Peoples led by its president, Vital Balla. They discussed promotion of friendship and cooperation between the two peoples. Luo Shigao, vice-president of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries, was also present. The delegation arrived May 13 at the invitation of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries. The following day, the Congolese guests attended a banquet hosted by Wang Bingnan, president of the association.

JI PENGFEI MEETS TANZANIAN PARTY DELEGATION

OW211758 Beijing XINHUA in English 1544 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 21 (XINHUA) -- Chinese State Councillor Ji Pengfei met with a delegation of the Revolutionary Party of Tanzania here this evening. Four members on the delegation, including its head, M.A. Makalo, are members of the National Executive Committee of the party. Ji Pengfei had a cordial conversation with all members of the delegation and hosted a dinner for them. Present on the occasion were Qiao Shi and Li Shuzheng, head and deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party; He Gongkai, Chinese ambassador to Tanzania; and Job M. Lusinde, Tanzanian ambassador to China. The Tanzanian delegation arrived yesterday for a visit to China at the invitation of the Chinese Communist Party. The Tanzanian guests will study the development of China's economy, agriculture in particular, and exchange experiences with China on how to strengthen party leadership.

RED CROSS DELEGATION ENDS VISIT TO MOROCCO

OW231640 Beijing XINHUA in English 1540 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Rabat, May 23 (XINHUAO -- A delegation of the Chinese Red Cross Society led by its vice-president Yang Chun, left here for home today after a week-long visit to Morocco. During its stay here, the Chinese delegation held a working meeting with the Moroccan Red Crescent delegation. The two sides exchanged experience and expressed the desire to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations. Princess Lalla Malika, president of the Moroccan Red Crescent, met the Chinese guests at her residence yesterday. The secretaries-general of the Moroccan Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Public Health also met the Chinese delegation. The Chinese ambassador here gave a reception yesterday evening in honor of the delegation.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF STATE ECONOMIC COMMISSION

OW270241 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1447 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 26 May (XINHUA) -- Zhang Jingfu, state councillor and minister in charge of the State Economic Commission, today said: The new economic commission must pay attention to investigation and study, increase work efficiency and strive to fulfill the task entrusted it by the party Central Committee and the State Council.

At an inaugural meeting of the new economic commission today, Zhang Jingfu said: The leading comrades of the party Central Committee want the new economic commission to grasp more first-hand material and heed the opinions of more people from all departments on some major issues while carrying out its tasks. The leading comrades of the State Council emphasize that economic work departments must regard the increase in economic results as the starting point and continually increase work efficiency. They also point out: The personnel of the new economic commission should be capable and well-informed, solve problems promptly and work very efficiently. Zhang Jingfu said these directives should become the criteria for the new economic commission's work. However, to meet these criteria, we need good work style and appropriate work methods. Restructuring organs alone is not enough.

Zhang Jingfu said that because the new economic commission was only recently reorganized, some questions still remain to be settled. We also lack experience. However, we cannot wait. We must learn while summing up experience. We must reorganize the commission and work as we go along. The commission should, first of all, focus on doing routine work well. It must not hold things up. At the same time, the commission should conduct planned investigation and study, with specific goals and under specified leadership, in the light of the policies put forward by the party Central Committee and the State Council during a given period. It should tackle a few major problems of an overall nature and strategic importance, such as keeping to the policy of planned economy playing the dominant role with market regulation as a supplementary means, increasing economic results, raising industrial and agricultural standards as a whole, restructuring enterprises and improving the economic responsibility system. These problems should be tackled individually. It is necessary to achieve some specific results.

Zhang Jingfu said the new economic commission will, under the leadership of the State Council, help organize all departments and all areas to implement their yearly economic plans, coordinate their efforts and supervise and check on their work. It should develop the enthusiasm of various departments and localities. It must not run things all by itself without consulting others. In addition, the commission should never shift responsibility onto others when it faces problems it should solve itself. The commission should take the initiative in offering good service. When handling official business, we must work collectively more often and eliminate redtape as much as possible.

Zhang Jingfu emphatically pointed out that the new economic commission must link the present with the long-range task. It must have foresight, consider the continuity of its task and successfully link the battle plan with the strategic goal, so that arrangements for the coming 3 years are taken into consideration. If the commission fails to do this, it will lose its orientation, go blind and have difficulty in readjustment when problems arise.

Zhang Jinfu also said: While handling official business, the new economic commission must have a goal, plans, measures, steps and specified responsible personnel. If we want to do our work practically and achieve results, we must not be busy holding meetings all day long, drafting documents and doing routine office work. We must go deep among the masses for investigation and study and be good at learning from the comrades in the forefront, from various localities and from reality.

Zhang Jingfu also called for strengthening construction within the economic commission, striving to create an exhiliarating atmosphere and new work style and achieving new results.

Zhang Jingfu Explains Role

OW270453 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1511 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 26 May (XINHUA) -- The newly organized State Economic Commission held an inaugural meeting this morning. Zhang Jingfu, State councillor and concurrently minister in charge of the State Economic Commission, spoke at the meeting. He said the new economic commission must, under the leadership of the State Council, play an organizing, harmonizing, supervisory and examining role and strive to achieve results in the "four modernizations" drive. The newly organized State Economic Commission is composed of 23 functional organs including departments, sections, offices and bureaus. The commission is composed of 32 members, including the minister in charge and vice ministers, reduced from a complement of 39. In addition, of these, 7 members are comrades under 55 years of age.

Zhang Jingfu relayed the instructions of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council. He said the new economic commission had five tasks:

1. To implement the party's line, principles and policies concerning economic work, to conduct investigation and study on important economic problems, to sum up and exchange experience, to reflect conditions to the State Council in a timely manner and to put forward suggestions.

2. To participate in drawing up annual national economic plans and in supervising and checking their implementation by various departments and areas and to solve, in a coordinated manner, important matters in economic and technical activities of the current year involving agriculture, industry, capital construction, communications and transport, finance and domestic and foreign trade departments.

3. To organize and implement reform of the state economic system in the current year.

4. To organize and coordinate comparatively short-term scientific and technological projects currently serving national economic construction, to participate in and examine imported technology, to administer the importation of equipment, to make overall planning and coordination of design and construction forces, to organize and draw up comprehensive economic rules and to carry out the work selectively related to the conservation of energy, readjustment and reorganization of the machine building industry, enterprise management, quality control, popularization of new techniques and cadre education.

5. To supervise and examine the implementation of related decisions on economic work of the central financial and economic leading groups and the regular meeting of the State Council by various departments and areas and to undertake matters assigned by the party Central Committee and the State Council.

In his speech, Zhang Jingfu also touched on the current work focus of the new economic commission and the question about how to carry out future work.

Vice Minister Yuan Baohua of the State Economic Commission presided over the inaugural meeting. Also present were Vice Ministers of the State Economic Commission Lu Dong, Wang Lei, Li Ruishan, Peng Min; government personnel and representatives of units and assigned units directly under the State Economic Commission.

STATE COUNCIL DISCUSSES ENTERPRISE CONSOLIDATION

OW211149 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1304 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 20 May (XINHUA) -- Speaking at yesterday's State Council meeting to exchange experience in consolidating industrial and communications enterprises, a responsible person of the State Economic Commission said: At present, industrial and communications departments should carry out the all-round consolidation of the first batch of key enterprises seriously and in a down-to-earth manner.

The responsible person discussed the following six points on how to successfully carry out this task:

1. Strengthen leadership in the ideological sphere. We must first understand the guiding principle for enterprise consolidation and know the reason why it must be carried out.

2. Enterprise consolidation should proceed from reality. We must grasp the enterprises' principal contradictions and decide how to begin the consolidation work.

3. In accordance with their specific conditions, all departments should, gradually and through the all-round consolidation of enterprises, set up a leadership structure which is both democratic and centralized, build a contingent of workers and staff members who are both politically and professionally efficient, and establish a scientific and modern management system. Specific standards and requirements should also be drawn up for the building of enterprises which are good in six respects: take into consideration the interests of the state, the collective and the individual, turn out high-quality products, are good in economic results, labor discipline, modern methods of production and in political work.

4. In the course of consolidating enterprises, we must strengthen enterprise management, improve basic work in all spheres and gradually set up a scientific management system.

5. All enterprises and departments should sum up their own experiences in the course of learning from the advanced experiences of the Shoudu Iron and Steel Company and other advanced units.

6. In the course of consolidating the first batch of enterprises, it is necessary to sum up the experience gained in a specific unit and rapidly popularize it throughout the entire area.

According to information disclosed by the State Economic Commission, by mid-May 20 of China's 23 industrial and communications departments had dispatched investigation teams to sum of experiences at various enterprises. Many of the teams were led by ministers or vice ministers. Upon arrival, the investigation teams immediately conducted meticulous investigations and study in the various sections and workshops of the enterprises in order to assist them in beginning their consolidation work.

STATE COUNCIL VIEWS FINANCIAL INSPECTIONS

OW222106 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0250 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 21 May (XINHUA) -- The State Council recently approved and transmitted a report by the Ministry of Finance on unfolding financial inspections of enterprises and issued a circular requiring the various localities and departments to strengthen their leadership and do a good job in the financial inspections of enterprises. The circular also instructed that financial and economic discipline violations that have been verified should be dealt with strictly.

The circular says: Unfolding financial inspections of enterprises is an important measure in reforming enterprises, enforcing financial and economic discipline, safeguarding the state's revenue, raising the enterprises' economic results and ensuring the healthy development of economic reform. Furthermore, unfolding financial inspections of enterprises is also of great significance in promoting party styles, enforcing party discipline, preventing the corrosive influence of capitalist ideas and bourgeois liberalism and combating criminal activities in the economic field.

The circular points out: Although the current inspections have achieved great results, progress has been very uneven. The circular demands that responsible departments and finance departments send personnel to conduct inspections in enterprises which have failed to conduct their own inspections. Problems related to the violation of financial discipline should be strictly handled in accordance with the "stipulations issued by the Ministry of Finance for handling financial problems discovered during the financial inspection."

The circular asks the various localities and departments to integrate the task of exposing problems with the task of reforming enterprises, summarize experience and lessons, strengthen their supervision and plug loopholes, thereby consolidating the inspection results.

The report of the Ministry of Finance says: Thanks to the attention and support given by leaders at all levels and departments concerned, the nationwide financial inspection of enterprises has achieved great results since it was launched last December. The inspection has promoted an extensive education program in abiding by the law and observing discipline and has strengthened the cadres' concept of the overall situation and their ideas about laws and discipline. It has aided the struggle to combat economic criminal activities by uncovering a multitude of problems involving financial and economic discipline violations. It has led to the discovery of clues to a number of important cases and exposed problems existing in enterprise management, thus paving the way for further enterprise reforms. According to statistics, the total amount of funds involved in the cases violating financial and economic discipline uncovered by the various localities and departments thus far has reached some 3.5 billion yuan, 1.6 billion of which can be recovered. The state treasury has already recovered 1.1 billion yuan.

The report has put forward a six-point proposal for doing a good job in financial inspections:

1. Further raise the understanding of enterprise financial inspections. Leading comrades of the various localities and departments must pay close attention to integrating financial inspection with enterprise reform from beginning to the end.

2. Do a good job in financial inspection rechecks.

3. Do a good job in financial inspections of enterprises under the central organs.

4. Handle problems that have been discovered with severity. Turn in to the state the full amount of revenue belonging to the state, and resolutely correct problems that should be corrected. Pay attention to protecting financial and accounting personnel and people who expose problems. Strictly forbid retaliation.

5. Integrate enterprise reform with strengthening financial and accounting work. Regard enforcing financial and economic discipline, perfecting financial and accounting systems and strengthening financial and accounting agencies as an important task in enterprise reform.

6. Strengthen financial supervision and establish and perfect laws and regulations governing the finances of enterprises.

REGULATIONS FOR PLANNED POWER GENERATION, SUPPLY

OW270041 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1200 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The State Council recently approved and distributed provisional control regulations, submitted by the Ministry of Water Conservancy and Power, for the planned use of electricity at fixed volumes respectively for each province, municipality and autonomous region, calling on all provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions and all ministries and commissions under the State Council to seriously implement the regulations in connection with actual local conditions.

There are nine articles in the provisional regulations:

1. Generate and allot electricity in accordance with the state plan. Electric power departments should generate and supply electricity in a safe, stable and balanced manner, in accordance with the power generation plan approved by the state. Any undue use of equipment, excessive use of fuels or overgeneration of hydroelectricity is strictly prohibited. An interprovincial power grid should decide on the volume of power to be consumed by, and the load allowed to, each province, municipality and autonomous region it covers, in accordance with fixed proportions.

2. Every province, municipality and autonomous region should practice planned use of electricity and be responsible for limiting its power consumption to the fixed volume. The economic commission of a province, municipality or autonomous region shall be in charge of the work of allotting electricity within its respective province, municipality or autonomous region. Economic commissions of the provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions covered by the same interprovincial power grid should see that electricity is used in a comprehensive and proportioned way, within the targeted volumes set in the power grid's seasonal and monthly power distribution plans. All localities and enterprises at various levels should practice the method of maintaining a monthly or daily account of the volume of power consumed. If the consumption is in excess of the fixed volume, the excess volume should be deducted accordingly. The method of forced deduction, by way of restricting or halting the supply of electricity, should be used against any locality or enterprise whose power consumption has gone beyond the limit and which has refused to accept a deduction in its power supply.

3. The principle for electricity allotment: When making electricity allotments, all provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions must first see to it that power supply for the production of products assigned by the state is assured.

4. Limit the production and export of products that require high energy consumption. Beginning this year, the three large power grids -- northeast China, east China and (Jing-Jin-Tang) [presumably Beijing-Tianjin-Tanggu] networks -- will restrict their power supply for the production of commodity-type calcium carbide, ferroalloys, steel ingots produced by electric furnaces, electrolytic aluminum, pig iron and yellow phosphorus. The annual volumes of electricity to be used for the production of the aforementioned products are to be determined on the basic of the state plan for the output of these products. No additional output, outside that called for in the state plan, should be planned at any level by local governments and local departments in charge of the enterprises.

5. Practice the method of supplying electricity to selected consumers. Electricity supply should first meet the needs of the production of products of high quality, low in energy consumption and cost and which have a ready market. It is necessary to control and even stop systematically the production of those products which are high in energy consumption and poor in quality, cause big deficits and do not sell well. Within the areas covered by the three large power grids, no electric furnaces should be used in smelting ordinary carbon steel ingots. Starting from the second quarter of 1982, resolute steps should be taken to close down and stop power supply to small oil refineries, calcium carbide furnaces, iron smelting furnaces, ferroalloy furnaces and (?ordinary) coke ovens.

6. Production of high energy consumption products should be shifted to other localities. Beginning this year, the production of some of the six products -- ferroalloy, commodity type calcium carbide, electrolytic aluminum, steel ingots produced by electric furnaces, pig iron and yellow phosphorus -- should be gradually shifted to localities in Shaanxi, Gansu, Qinghai, Shanxi, Henan, Hubei, Sichuan and Guizhou, where relatively more plentiful sources of electricity, in the form of hydroelectricity, are available.

7. Strengthen discipline in electricity distribution control within a power grid. To ensure safety in power generation and economic and reasonable operation, a power grid must practice centralized distribution control. It is strictly prohibited from operating either at a lower or a higher tension cycle. All provincial, municipal and autonomous regional people's governments must vigorously support the power grids in generating and supplying power in accordance with the state plan and in practicing centralized distribution control.

8. Adjust the price of electricity. Electricity at a discount rate may be offered in the areas covered by the power grids of Shaanxi, Gansu, Qinghai, Hubei, Hunan, Yunnan, Guizhou and Sichuan during periods of plentiful water supply for the production of ferro-alloys, electrolytic aluminum, steel alloys produced by electric furnaces, commodity-type calcium carbide, pig iron and yellow phosphorus so as to encourage the shift of production of these products to these localities.

9. Some of the enterprises should carry out production on a seasonal basis.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS AGRICULTURAL MACHINERY OUTPUT

HK260859 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 22 May 82 p 3

[Commentator's article: "Output of Agricultural Machinery Must Be Determined According to Needs"]

[Text] Agricultural machinery departments have spent 3 years or so making an inventory of warehouses and have achieved comparatively great results in this respect. The machinery departments as a whole have a lot to do in checking up on their warehouses. As long as they grasp the work firmly, they will also achieve success.

The practice of agricultural machinery departments in making an inventory of their warehouses has shown that the basic reason for the overstocking of products was that, over a long period in the past, some leading departments and production units paid more attention to production than to sales and consumer use in particular. Some units which had a large stock of goods kept on manufacturing their goods as usual and higher departments continued to provide them with production tasks. When production units made reports to the higher authorities, they took delight in reporting on the overfulfillment of production tasks and the amount of output, output value, profits and so forth. However, nobody paid attention to the needs of the society, actual use, marketability and the situation of overstocking of products.

Output must be determined according to the needs of society. With regard to the economic returns of the society, the practice of paying attention to production alone without caring for sales and consumer use should be regarded as a waste rather than beneficial to production. Therefore, the achievements in production output, output value and profits should not be assessed from the angle of an enterprise alone, because products which are not up to standard are useless, the output value of products kept in stock in warehouses is false, and commercial losses as well as profits gained from bank advances will make our country suffer losses. The practice of seeking output volume, output value and profits alone without caring for quality and usefulness will eventually inflict losses on our country and harm out people. The fact that when agricultural machinery departments were making an inventory of their warehouses they had to discard some products as useless, was a profound lesson.

An important experience of agricultural machinery departments in making inventories of their warehouses is that they paid attention to preventing new overstocking of products. When they are making arrangements for production plans, they now first consider the present stock and stress that output must be determined according to needs. With regard to unmarketable and low-quality products, production departments resolutely refuse to make arrangements for further production and sales departments firmly refuse to order or keep them in stock. Agricultural machinery departments now also advise and encourage production units and sales departments to be bold in resiting the erroneous acts of the higher authorities of forcing them to produce and purchase. We should say that what they are doing is the crux for preventing new overstocking. This is a very important experience.

While carrying out production, we should pay attention to usefulness and keep it in mind. This should be the basic starting point of each and every production unit. We hope that on the basis of summing up their experiences and lessons, agricultural machinery departments will take a new step in production and do their best to use the least financial and material resources and labor force possible, to produce more marketable agricultural machinery products to meet the needs of the society. We also hope that the entire engineering industry will also take this road to make a new breakthrough in production.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS RURAL SOCIAL INVESTIGATION

HK270255 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 22 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Ode to the 'Hundred-Village Investigation'"]

[Text] In recent years, spurred by the example of the leading comrades of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council, the traditional work style of laying stress on investigation and study has been further revived and promoted. This is very gratifying.

In order to have a profound understanding of the current situation and problems in the rural areas in the course of transforming the relations of production and the modes of operation, the former State Agricultural Commission organized 155 university students who had come from the countryside to conduct social investigations in their native places during the winter vacation. These students furnished 157 reports with facts and analysis. The "Hundred-Village Investigation" has informed us of the following: In recent years, agricultural production has really developed and the livelihood of the peasants has really improved; at the same time, there are at present also quite a few problems in the rural areas which need to be solved. In order to preserve and continue to develop the fine situation in the rural areas, it is necessary to do our jobs conscientiously and to solve the outstanding problems. This is like writing an article. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, we have implemented the various rural economic policies, instituted the agricultural production responsibility system, readjusted the internal structure of agriculture and so on. We have written a good first article in the field of agricultural transformation and the people are satisfied. The question now is how to write the next article. Evidently, in order to write the next article well, it is important to continue to do a good job of the rural investigation and study.

Our party has consistently attached great importance to investigation and study. As far back as in 1941, the CCP Central Committee made a decision on investigation and study. After the rectification movement in Yanan, conducting investigation and study gradually became a general practice within the party. As a component part of the theory of cognition, investigation and study was raised to the plane of world outlook and methodology and extensively popularized among the cadres. This was a great pioneering work of our party. It was a pity that, for a long time after the late 1950's, this down-to-earth work style was gradually neglected. After the agricultural cooperative movement was basically completed, we began to be careless, having achieved such tremendous victories. Hasty decisions were made on quite a few problems without conducting serious investigations, without careful consideration and without a clear understanding of the situation. This resulted in serious faults. Facts have proved that whenever we uphold the principle of seeking truth from facts and pay attention to investigation and study, we are capable of making correct analyses of the situation and formulating principles and policies that better conform to the objective situation and the interests of the broad masses of people; conversely, idealism is generated which gives rise to deviations in policies and causes incalculable losses to the work.

As a science, investigation and study must be conducted with a strict scientific approach and scientific methods. The most important point in this is respect for objective reality. In summing up the implementation of a fixed policy or in providing the basis for the formulation of new principles, policies and plans, it is imperative to base ourselves on conclusive evidence. It is especially important to grasp firsthand data as much and as correctly as possible and analyze them on this basis. We should not be satisfied with indirect data that has changed hands several times. The value of the "Hundred-Village Investigation" lies in the investigation conducted face-to-face among the peasants after visiting them in their homes and villages. The investigation reports written on this basis are therefore better in quality.

Some comrades also conducted investigation and study in the past but, in their investigation, they did not proceed from the objective facts but from the wishes of a certain leader. They reported whatever the leader wanted to hear. They collected the data that conformed to this requirement and discarded that data that did not conform to this requirement. They sometimes proceeded from the various "relationships." Although they conducted investigation and study, they did not dare to speak the truth for fear of adversely affecting the various "relationships." As a result, they only reported the good news and not the bad. For a considerably long time in the past, investigation and study was often obstructed by outside public opinion and political climate with the result that quite a lot of investigations deviated from the scientific track of Marxism-Leninism. For example, during the later period of the cooperativization movement and during the people's commune movement as well as the decade of turmoil, the transformation of the rural system exceeded the limits of the objective conditions. However, owing to the influence of the theory that the relations of production decide everything and the theory of the omnipotence of subjective initiative, people were still required to continuously collect data to prove the existence of the so-called "right deviation" in the party. Obviously, this kind of idealist "investigation and study" was like working behind closed doors or even worse.

There is only one purpose in conducting investigation; that is, the solution of problems. There may be complicated circumstances in how we achieve this aim. We can conduct some on-the-spot investigations and studies and solve the problems then and there. Sometimes, we have to conduct repeated investigations and studies in order to collect data and to study it thoroughly. In this case, we cannot expect instant results. As regards some complicated problems which are related to the overall situation and which have been formed over a long time, in particular, it is all the more necessary to listen to suggestions and views from various quarters and grasp ample data and examples. Sometimes, a thorough investigation has been conducted on a certain matter, but some relevant problems related to this matter have not been provided with the necessary conditions for their solution. Then it is necessary to store, for the time being, the data related to this matter. The matter can only be solved after the various problems have been investigated thoroughly and they have been provided with the necessary conditions for their solution. That is to say, a lot of things and the course of development of these things are very complicated. Therefore, we should be all-round, careful and systematic in our investigations and studies, and sometimes we must conduct long-term and repeated investigations. We should not make hasty decisions. We have suffered great losses in the past as a result of incomplete and unsystematic investigations and studies. We should learn a lesson from this.

A number of young and spirited university students have brought a breath of fresh air to the work of investigation and study by going right to the frontline in the rural areas to carry out investigation. This is a good way of doing things. We expect to see more young comrades, who are resolved to devoting themselves to building a socialist new countryside, plunging themselves into this significant undertaking.

PUBLIC SECURITY CIRCULAR ON FIRE PREVENTION

OW261434 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1210 GMT 26 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 26 May (XINHUA) -- In a recent circular the Ministry of Public Security urges all localities to do good fire-prevention work so as to guard against the occurrence of big fires.

The circular points out: This year has seen a marked increase in big fire accidents. During the period from January to mid-May, there were 20 big fires, each causing a loss of more than 300,000 yuan. The total loss due to these fires approximated 18 million yuan. Compared with the corresponding period of last year, the number of such fires doubled, and losses went up by 62 percent.

The circular points out: Most of these big fires occurred in key units under the fire-prevention program. The leading cadres of some factories and enterprises do not pay attention to safety in production, resulting in many problems. Some factories and enterprises even risk danger to carry out production work. Some public security organs are not doing well in supervising fire-prevention work.

To check the growing trend of the occurrence of big fires and to bring about a remarkable improvement in public security, the emergency circular of the Ministry of Public Security stresses: Principal leading comrades of public security departments and bureaus in all localities should take up fire-prevention work personally. They should analyze the problem of fire accidents in their localities and organize the departments concerned to conduct an overall fire-prevention and safety inspection or spot inspections of this nature in key units under the fire-prevention program. As for the big fires which occurred recently, they should seriously look into the causes of such fires, sum up experience and draw lessons. In the case of fires resulting from negligence of duty on the part of public security organs, it is necessary to investigate whose responsibility it is.

In addition, the circular points out: In the current struggle to strike at the severe criminal offenses in the economic sphere, it is imperative to maintain high vigilance against the criminal elements' sabotage by means of arson. Once such a case is discovered, we should go all out to crack the case and deal a prompt blow at the criminal element concerned.

CAAC CONDUCTS SAFETY MONTH AFTER PLANE CRASH

OW270854 Beijing XINHUA in English 0809 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 27 (XINHUA) -- The General Administration of Civil Aviation of China (C.A.A.C.) has conducted comprehensive activities during the "safety month" of May in response to a call by the State Council and as a result of a recent plane crash in China, reports today's PEOPLE'S DAILY.

The paper says that in spite of a plane crash near Guilin in late April that resulted in a loss of 112 lives, the Guilin aviation station recorded 88 flights between April 27 and May 5, which transported 6,661 passengers. The number of the passengers who reached Guilin by C.A.A.C. flights during this period was 6,543, the paper reports.

The paper notes that the freight tonnage for the C.A.A.C in the first ten days of May was up 27 percent and the number of passengers rose by 11 percent as compared with the same 1981 period.

Since the beginning of this month, aviation administrations under C.A.A.C. have checked with additional concern technical matters related to flying safety, ground control, maintenance work, ground facilities and safety measures, it says.

The pilots of the First Flying Corps of the Beijing Aviation Administration have undergone check flights and been given technical proficiency tests. Workers in the airplane repairs plant under the Shanghai Aviation Administration conducted a comprehensive survey of all aviation apparatuses and control system equipment, the paper says.

CCP MILITARY COMMISSION COMMENDS PLA UNITS

OW220926 Beijing Domestic Service in Mamdarin 2230 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] According to a JIEFANGJUN BAO report, the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee recently issued a circular commending a number of PLA units and troops for taking part in operations to deal with the aftermath of the air crash of passenger plane No 266.

Commanders and fighters of the Guilin military subdistrict, a PLA unit stationed in Guilin, a subdivision of the Guangzhou PLA units' logistics department, and the Guilin Army School participated in the operation to deal with problems arising from the air crash. They surmounted numerous difficulties and successfully fulfilled the task.

The circular praised cadres and fighters of these units for demonstrating a high sense of responsibility to the party, the country and the people and developing the spirit of revolutionary heroism defying hardships and sanguinary sacrifice. They are worthy of being called soldiers of the people.

The circular called on commanders and fighters throughout the army to learn from them, promote activities of cultivating advanced companies and advanced individuals in advancing the spiritual aspect of modernization, and make new contributions to the task of modernizing a regular and revolutionary army.

BROADCAST RECOUNTS PLA SCIENTIFIC ACHIEVEMENTS

OW250101 Beijing Domestic Service in Mardarin 1200 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Now, we broadcast the following news briefs about the PLA's achievements in science and technology:

The public health section under the PLA General Logistics Department held a meeting not long ago to evaluate the multi-purpose telemetering system of aeronautical physiology made by a certain air force research institute of aviation medicine. This instrument will show a pilot's EKG, heart beat, EEG, pulse, brain waves during acceleration and their changes, even when the airplane is 100 kilometers away, flying at an altitude of 10,000 meters. Specialists, professors and personnel concerned unanimously held: Being the first of its kind in China, it plays a dominant role in the field of technology. It is of great value.

The department of radiology of the No 13 PLA field hospital succeeded in making a barium sulfate nephelometer. A careful examination by the department of science and technology concerned and the use of such an instrument in clinical practice by 71 medical units in 13 provinces and municipalities over the past 3 years, shows that it is of great value in observing minor pathological changes, particularly in detecting esophagus cancer. It is as effective as similar instruments produced abroad. Recently it has won the technical and scientific award third class issued by the PLA General Logistics Department.

[Huang Zhengzhong], an instructor of a certain PLA army school has produced a new innovation. He has succeeded in making a new rangefinder for 60 mm mortars. This innovation is of great practical value. It will be popularized throughout the army. Before the innovation, it was rather complicated to calculate the firing range of the 60 mm mortar. Now, with the new rangefinder, firing a 60 mm mortar will be as simple as firing a rifle. With its help accuracy is greatly improved, and the rate of hits reaches 92 percent.

BAN YUE TAN ON TEST FLIGHT ON YUN-7 AIRCRAFT

HK250923 Beijing BAN YUE TAN in Chinese No 9, 10 May 82 pp 18-19

[Article by Chen Ming [7115 6900]: "A China-Made Passenger Aircraft Spreads Its Wings in the Blue Sky"]

[Text] In early April the capital was a sunlit and enchanting scene of spring. One early morning I boarded a southbound car from the city proper and went to Beijing's Nanyuan airport, which was surrounded by green trees.

A passenger aircraft of a beautiful shape was parked on the runway at the airport. Along the 23.7-meter silvery white fuselage were two deep blue stripes. The design of the five-star red flag at the tail of the aircraft look especially striking in the birght sunlight. There were two turboprop engines under the 20-odd-meter wings. This was the medium and short range Yun-7 passenger aircraft, the first which China has made by itself.

At 0945 the test flight started and our aircraft soared into the cloudless blue sky. Seven minutes later it reached an altitude of 3,000 meters. There were over 40 passengers sitting on the soft and comfortable seats. Looking down from the windows, we could see a vast expanse of gree farmland and luxuriant forests and row after row of new buildings. At this moment a girl behind me said excitedly: "I am traveling by plane for the first time and by a plane manufactured by our country. This is really exciting."

The aircraft flew over Daxin and Guan Counties. Fifty-two-year-old crew director Cai Huannan, who was among the first crewmen trained in new China, told me: "The aircraft is now flying at a speed of 410 kilometers per hour. It is functioning normally and the various technological specifications come up to the international requirements for similar civilian aircraft."

After a 100-kilometer flight, Yun-7 turned back. Lowering its landing geat at a height of 1,000 meters, it dived in the direction of the runway: 300 meters, 200 meters, 50 meters, 10 meters...and landed on the airport runway smoothly and steadily.

The Yun-7 passenger aircraft was successfully produced on a trial basis under the solicitude of the central authorities and with the support of the various localities. It was produced by scientific research personnel by developing the spirit of doing pioneering work through hard struggle and by overcoming various difficulties with a strict scientific approach. Up to now, the aircraft has flown over 1,600 hours and made over 3,600 landings and take-offs. From Harbin in the north to Guangzhou in the south and from Urumqi in the western border area to Shanghai bordering on the East China Sea, the aircraft has flown to every civil aviation airport in the 28 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions throughout the country with the exception of Xizang and Taiwan.

After crossing the vase aircraft parking area, we entered the airport lounge. An engineer who had taken part in designing the Yun-7 aircraft said to me: The number of standard seats in the passenger cabin of the Yun-7 aircraft is 48. The number of economy seats can be increased to 52. If necessary, it can also be refitted into a military aircraft, a natural resources prospecting aircraft, or other aircraft for special purposes. The cruising speed of the Yun-7 can be as high as 478 kilometers. It has another strong point: It only needs a short runway and can take off from a dirt runway. The medium and short range Yun-7 passenger aircraft will be employed on domestic air routes and will gradually replace existing obsolete aircraft.

On 16 April Vice Premiers Geng Biao and Zhang Aiping received all the test personnel to extend their congratulations to the designers, manufacturers and test personnel on their achievements. Vice Premier Geng Biao said: "I support you wholeheartedly. China's aviation undertaking should develop and advance." Vice Premier Zhang Aiping said: "The successful production of this aircraft marks a step forward in China's aviation industry. It is of great significance to the development of China's aviation undertaking and the four modernizations program."

At the airport we met an old man who had come to see the test flight. He said with feeling: "Before liberation our country could not make even a bicycle. Now, a passenger aircraft made by us has soared into the sky. It is really wonderful." This was indeed an encouraging achievement. We are sure that, following the flight of the medium and short-range Yun-7 aircrafts, giant passenger aircraft under production will also be successful. A few years hence, a large number of China-made passenger aircraft will fly in the vast sky of the motherland and the rest of the world.

YANG DEZHI ADDRESSES PLA GENERAL STAFF MEETING

OW231305 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1512 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 22 May (XINHUA) -- Building the spiritual aspect of socialist civilization is a long-term, grand strategic task, said Comrade Yang Dezhi today at a meeting held by organs of the PLA General Staff Department to exchange experience in promoting socialist spiritual civilization. He pointed out that to do a still better job in advancing the spiritual aspect of socialist civilization, it is necessary for the army to properly handle the following relationships:

1. The relationship between material civilization and spiritual civilization.

Material civilization is the foundation of spiritual civilization, which in turn is a guarantee for the former. The two depend on each other for their existence and help each other advance. The party Central Committee has pointed out the need to grasp both of them at the same time. As far as the army is concerned, this means that it should simultaneously promote its modernization and revolution.

2. The relationshio between destruction and construction.

Having ideals, morality, knowledge and physical strength, stressing soldiers' appearance and bearing, courtesy and discipline, and fearing neither hardships nor sacrifice -- these should be the general requirements for promoting spiritual civilization in the army. The central content of advancing the army's spiritual civilization is that we should have ideals, morality and discipline while arming the minds of all commanders and fighters with Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought and fostering a revolutionary outlook on life. We are promoting the spiritual aspect of socialist civilization in the wake of the 10-year period of internal disorder and under the historical conditions in which the influence of capitalism still exists. Thus, in the course of advancing the spiritual aspect of socialist civilization, we must strive not only to acquire socialist and communist ideology but also to eliminate capitalist ideology and the remnants of feudalistic ideas. Only if we are aware of the need of this process of both destruction and construction can we do a good job in promoting spiritual civilization.

3. The relationship between participating in public welfare activities and doing one's own job well.

Getting involved in public welfare activities is our army's glorious political task. This must be positively affirmed. Serving the people, however, basically requires us to do our own job well. Not only should we turn the revolutionary zeal of the commanders and fighters generated in the course of advancing spiritual civilization into enthusiastically taking part in public welfare activities, but we should also turn this zeal into mastering vocational work and skills, studying science and culture, performing duties, serving the people with courtesy and carrying out preparations against war. Only if the work of promoting spiritual civilization is closely integrated with performing our own job can this work be carried out with powerful vitality and sustained and in-depth effort, and can it help promote the task of building our army into a modern, regular and revolutionary army.

4. The relationship between work in an area and work at a key point.

Things always develop unevenly; some things develop fast, some lag behind and others are in between. The responsibility of leaders is to discover and foster typical cases and to use the experience gained from typical cases at key points to promote work in all areas. This way of doing things has always been effective in almost every area of endeavor. The fact that some units have done a relatively better job in promoting spiritual civilization cannot be separated from the fact that they have grasped typical cases. Leading organizations and leading cadres at all levels should spend more time in grassroots units to conduct investigation and study. They should work hard to foster exemplary typical cases and further promote the process of building a spiritual civilization by using the method of spurring work in all areas through drawing upon experience gained at key points.

5. The relationship between leading cadres teaching others by their own examples and their teaching others by their own precepts.

Teaching others by precept is important, but teaching others by example is more important. The fact that the "first all-people decorum and courtesy month" was a great success cannot be separated from the fact that the central leading comrades took the lead in this campaign. PLA leading cadres at all levels should themselves set examples in activities aimed at promoting spiritual civilization. They should be the first ones to do something whenever they ask others to do it. They should refrain from doing whatever they ask others not to do. Only thus can they lead the masses in promoting spiritual civilization.

At the meeting more than 100 representatives of advanced units and individuals in promoting spiritual civilization exchanged their experience. The meeting elected 9 pace setters among advanced units and 11 pace setters among advanced individuals.

YANG DEZHI SPONSORS PARTY LECTURE FOR PLA CADRES

OW211359 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1428 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 20 May (XINHUA) -- A responsible person of the PLA General Staff Department party committee today gave a lecture to office cadres at and above the division level and who are party members. He called on them to further strengthen the tempering of party spirit under the new circumstances, adhere to the principle of party spirit, firmly adopt an overall point of view, set a good example in all fields and undergo new tests.

This lecture was sponsored by Yang Dezhi, first secretary of the PLA General Staff Department party committee. Zhang Zhen, deputy secretary of the party committee, was the principal lecturer.

In connection with the actual situation in the PLA General Staff Department, Zhang Zhen elucidated the importance of strengthening the tempering of party spirit and self-cultivation in the new historical period. He said: Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, all party organs of the PLA General Staff Department have resolutely implemented the party's line, principle and policy, restructured the party's organization, strengthened party members' ideological and political education and heightened party members' political consciousness. However, a few party members have paid no attention to the tempering of party spirit. Their party spirit is not strong. After describing the party members' weak party spirit in all its manifestations, Zhang Zhen said: To thoroughly eliminate the grave consequences and influence left by the 10 years of internal disorder, guard against the inroads of capitalist ideas and enable party leaders and party members to meet the demands in the new situation in ideology and work style, it is necessary to do a lot of painstaking work. It is a very important task for each communist to strengthen the tempering of party spirit.

Zhang Zhen said: Party spirit is the concentrated expression of the class nature of the proletariat. We are living in a new historical period, facing a new situation and shouldering a new task. Our party spirit will undergo a new test. The party spirit of each party member, particularly one who is a cadre at or above the division level, will directly determine the important question of whether the party's line, principle and policy can be implemented or not, and whether the task can be fulfilled or not. Each party member must continuously strengthen the remolding of his world outlook, so that his party spirit can become stronger and stronger to meet the demands in the development of revolution.

Zhang Zhen laid emphasis on a few questions which we should pay attention to while strengthening party spirit at present:

1. It is necessary to unflinchingly carry out the party Central Committee's strategic policy decision. While carrying out our task, we must not hesitate, compromise or give up halfway no matter how difficult it is.

2. It is necessary to observe and handle a question in the light of the overall situation.

3. It is necessary to subordinate unconditionally one's personal interests to those of the party and bring a communist's vanguard and model role into full play.

BUDDHIST ASSOCIATION VIEWS RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

OW221144 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1522 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 21 May (XINHUA) -- The second (enlarged) meeting of the fourth standing council of the Buddhist Association of China was held in Beijing 14-21 May. The meeting mainly studied and discussed the work of the Buddhist Association of China. It stressed that it would conscientiously implement the policy of the party and the state on freedom in religious beliefs, strengthen education among Buddhists in patriotism and observation of the law and in socialism, bring into play all positive factors and serve the socialist modernization program.

During the meeting, Qiao Liansheng, director of the Bureau of Religious Affairs of the State Council, transmitted the guidelines of relevant important documents of the CCP Central Committee and conducted a study of two important documents formulated by the State Council and the Bureau of Religious Affairs of the State Council for implementing policies on religions. Jiang Ping, deputy director of the United Front Work Department of the CCP Central Committee, made a speech on religious policies at the meeting. Through the studies and discussions, the participants felt that they received a profound education, gained a deeper understanding of the policy of the party and state on freedom in religious beliefs and strengthened their confidence in assisting the government to successfully implement this important policy. The meeting listened to a "report on the work of the Buddhist Association of China in the past year and more and arrangements for work before the end of this year" by Zhao Puchu, president of the Buddhist Association of China. Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain, honorary president of the Buddhist Association of China, made a speech at the meeting.

The meeting also studied a number of specific questions concerning implementation of religious policies and put forward many useful opinions.

BO YIBO WRITES ON NATIONAL CONFIDENCE, DIGNITY

HK220856 Beijing ZHONGGUO QINGNIAN BAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 1

[Article by Bo Yibo [5631 0001 3134]: "We Must Strengthen Our National Confidence and Dignity"]

[Text] The popularizing of the "five stresses and four beauties" is not to be taken lightly by any means, for it is a necessary safeguard for ensuring the smooth progress towards the four moderniaations. From the point of view of the four modernizations, we should integrate the "five stresses and the four beauties" with the popularization of self-reliance. In order to be self-reliant, it is necessary to strengthen national confidence and national dignity. The presence or absence of this affects the success or failure of our cause. During the war of resistance, Chairman Mao advocated the strengthening of our national confidence and national dignity and this enabled us to defeat Japanese imperialism. Now that we are engaged in socialist constructions, we similarly need to have national confidence and dignity. Once we have these, we eill be able to build a strong modern country.

In order to believe in ourselves, we must first understand ourselves. Recently, I met the president of the Japanese Electronics Industry Company Limited. He wanted to cooperate with our Ministry of Electronic Industry to organize a software training center. This would involve the selection of students from China for training as software personnel. I asked him why he wanted to train people from China.

He said that China has a long civilization and that the Chinese have strong reasoning power, thus making them suitable for the study of software, and that they are stronger than people in certain other industrialized countries. However, some of our people are sometimes prone to despise themselves and to lack faith in their strength and wisdom. We have no reason whatsoever to feel inferior and we must advocate the restoration of national confidence and national dignity. Civility and courtesy go hand in hand with confidence and we must integrate confidence with economic construction and integrate the building of a spiritual civilization with the building of a material civilization.

We must treat as a matter of great importance the cultivation of national confidence and dignity as characterized by self-reliance, for it represents the national spirit of socialist China.

When I was young, I read the speeches Dr Sun Yat-sen gave on the three people's principles and I remember them clearly to this day. In a speech he gave on nationalism, he said that, in the past, we were lacking in national spirit and civilization. This meant we lacked even the most trivial of things, let alone the most important ones. He spoke about some things he had heard aboard a foreign ship. A Chinese farted in a rather indiscreet fashion. A foreigner stared at him. He shook his trousers and mumbled that everyone farts, that when there is wind, it must be broken and that this must be done loudly. Another concerned spitting. A Chinese once spat on a carpet. The captain, a foreigner, saw this and pulled out his handkerchief to wipe up the phlegm. Dr Sun Yat-sen was at pains to denounce this type of conduct, saying that they lacked national dignity and that it was necessary to consider national ethics. In our present advocation of the "five stresses and four beauties," we must treat this as a spirit of civility which befits the Chinese nation and integrate it with socialist construction. The building of a material civilization goes hand in hand with the building of a spiritual civilization. Material civilization should include spiritual civilization. Spiritual civilization must promote material civilization.

I have visited a number of U.S. and Japanese factories and have noticed that the production environment there is clean and that they strive for civility in production. This has had the effect of speeding up production. Recently, I came across some information about a discussion between a lecturer at a U.S. university and the chairman of the board of a Japanese company on what U.S. enterprises can learn from Japan. The U.S. lecturer said that the Japanese pay much attention to environmental protection and noise control. Why? This is because Japan is a densely populated country. Japan runs its enterprises more efficiently than the United States does. This is not unattributable to the ability of management to know the competence of their employees and the fact that they tend to select for managerial positions those who "are devoted to their work and are sociable." The subordinates will thus be good at obeying orders and summing up opinions from various quarters. This is the enterprising spirit and mass view that we have been speaking about. In the factories of the Japanese electrical company Matsushita they hang placards with the characters of "man, dream and unity." Man" means ability, that is, the human element. "Dream" means ideals, that is, creativity. "Unity" means to unite people. We are a socialist country and are infinitely superior. We are perfectly able to and, what is more, we must integrate the building of a spiritual civilization with the building of a material civilization. The building of a material civilization can provide the material base for the building of a spiritual civilization. Conversely, the building of a spiritual civilization can speed up the building of a material civilization. In the past, our country had for a long time been a feudal society and material production had not been developed. However, our forefathers nevertheless managed to create a glorious Chinese culture. Are we today not even more capable of creating highly socialist spiritual civilization? Finally, I would like to quote a couple of Chairman Mao's phrases: So long as we make a habit of everything and arouse public opinion, everything can be easily solved. These words were annotated by Chairman Mao in my study summation.

HONGQI ON EXPECTATIONS FOR NEWLY PROMOTED CADRES

HK121504 Beijing HONGQI in Chinese No 9, 1 May 82 pp 9-12

[Commentator's article: "Expectations of the People and the Party -- a Talk With Newly Promoted Comrades"]

[Text] At present, a number of middle-aged and young people who combine ability with political integrity and are in the prime of life have taken up their leadership posts. In 2 or 3 years, there will be more such fine cadres promoted in large numbers to leadership posts. They are taking up important leadership work in party and state organs at all levels. The historical mission of carrying forward and promoting our cause will gradually fall on the shoulders of the masses of middle-aged and young cadres.

The task of the current era is to carry on and develop the glorious cause pioneered by proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation and build our country into a modern, highly democratic and highly civilized powerful socialist country. Can the newly promoted comrades assume their own leadership duties and dare to shoulder the heavy burdens of their new posts and accomplish something great? Can they, like the comrades of former years, unite closely with the people in accomplishing the historical mission with which we are charged by the era? Can they refuse to be influenced by others' flatteries, refrain from serving private ends, adhere to the proletarian principle of party spirit and become reliable successors to the proletarian revolutionary cause? This is really a severe test for newly promoted comrades. We trust that newly promoted comrades can stand such a test.

Since the downfall of the "gang of four" and especially since the 3rd Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, our party, after hard work, has completed the process of turning chaos into order where guiding ideology is concerned. It has restored the Marxist ideological, political and organizational lines and formulated a series of general and specific policies geared to the national conditions of our country. A correct direction of advance is thus provided for us. After positive education and education by negative examples, our people have raised their socialist awareness. They show concern over the future of the state and support for the party's policy. They are filled with great ambitions concerning the socialist cause. This has provided us with a solid foundation for the proper handling of our work. Our older comrades still committed to first line work or already withdrawn to the second line are giving the newly promoted comrades the benefit of their experience, "passing on skills, lending a helping hand and setting examples." This has again provided our work with strong support. Therefore, the comrades newly promoted to leadership posts must, on the one hand, see the arduous nature of the historic mission on their shoulders. On the other, they must have full confidence and consciously and bravely take up this arduous and glorious historical mission.

Like the revolutionaries of the older generation, the newly promoted comrades must first of all cherish the pioneering spirit of being selfless and fearless. In their new posts, they must start with fervent revolutionary enthusiasm, a selfless spirit of dedication and a work style of being realistic and leading a simple life. Now, we have a large amount of work to do and many problems to solve. If we are afraid of difficulties and are fearful and indecisive in action, our enthusiasm and initiative cannot be brought into full play. This will make it impossible for us to accomplish something great. Of course, on the other hand, we must not act recklessly, ignore reality and seek immediate success. By so doing, we will also come to grief. The correct approach is to combine revolutionary spirit with a down-to-earth spirit of working hard. We must adhere to the party's four basic principles. In line with the party's correct guiding ideology, and after careful investigation and study, we must think out ideas and work out ways and means -- ingeniously and unhesitatingly translating the party's line and general and specific policies into action in every task we supervise.

Newly promoted comrades face the problem of how to create a new situation. Our party's history tells us that whether a new situation can be created at a turning point in history has a great bearing on the development of the revolutionary cause. To create a new situation, we must, like the proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation, uphold firmly and unswervingly strategic ideas. We must have the strategic foresight to view the situation as whole and show indomitable revolutionary will. That is, we must display the spirit of daring to act and to hold ourselves responsibile. Furthermore, in observing and handling any problem in work, we must act with the whole and not the partial situation in mind. We must have long-term plans. We must keep the main goal in sight and keep busy with daily tasks. We must wage a two-line struggle. We must meet the demands of tremendous changes and great developments and strive to create a new method of work. We must use the major principle reflecting the nature of things to guide various minor principles. Only by so doing, can we avoid being held spellbound by partial, incidental and superficial phenomena (including certain false ones). And only in this way can we remain clearheaded, can we combine political firmness with scientific foresight, and can we gain new leadership experience and create a new situation in work.

Newly promoted comrades all face the same problem: they must quickly grasp all there is to know about a new job and get used to new leadership work. Changes in work environments and conditions should also be accompanied by appropriate changes in the standpoint from which we view a problem and even changes in work methods. Some comrades are well acquainted with the conditions of a given bureau. But if they act as leadership cadres, their knowledge and their accumulated experience will surely prove inadequate. They must have leadership experience covering a wider field. This task that requires us to make investigations and studies in order to have a better and an overall idea of the conditions of a given department and a given area. Of course, to acquaint ourselves with conditions, we can scan documents, study data and listen to reports. But the most important thing is to get involved with reality and with the masses to make investigations and studies. "We must constantly ascertain social conditions and make investigations and studies." ["Selected Readings From the Works of Mao Zedong," type-A edition, p 25) Only in this way can we have firsthand data at our fingertips and really have the right and the initiative to speak. Comrade Mao Zedong included the kind of people who refrained from making investigations and studies but lost themselves in thinking. He held that a small number of people who confined themselves to their rooms "figuring out ways and means" and "thinking out ideas" would surely come up with wrong methods and wrong ideas. Our party has traditionally attached importance to investigation and study and has said that this is of primary importance to leaders. The leading comrades of our party Central Committee have played an exemplary role in this respect. Despite the heavy pressure of work, they constantly take time out to get close to the masses to make investigations and studies. Newly promoted comrades are generally in the prime of life and should constantly go deep among the masses to get acquainted with conditions and do a good job of making investigations and studies.

An important aspect of leadership work is to unite cadres, make proper use of cadres and build the contingent of cadres well. Only by so doing can everyone speak the same language, can there be friendly relations and mutual support and understanding between comrades, can we really achieve the aim of working toward the same goal, and can we arouse the enthusiasm of the entire rank of cadres to bring about stability and unity and do various tasks well. In using cadres, we must act according to the principle of party spirit, insist on playing fair and square and using people on their sheer merits. We must make a point of uniting these people who oppose us and who oppose those who have erred. So long as those comrades who have erred admit their mistakes and correct themselves in practice, we should refrain from discriminating against them. Concerning old comrades who have retired, we must respect them, humbly learn from them and take the initiative to listen to their opinions. This is an important prequisite for the proper handling of the unity of cadres.

Regarding the contradictions and cases of disunity that have arisen among cadres for historical reasons, we cannot listen to the story of only one side and must do more work aimed at solving misunderstandings. The aim is to arouse them to get united in the process of advance. In our new posts, we are likely to encounter people who do not take the overall interests of the state into consideration, people who show no cooperation or support for our work, and even individuals who make things difficult for us, ridicule us and try to strike at and get rid of us. In the face of all these conditions, we must keep cool and take a correct approach. It is wrong to resign ourselves to a state of anxiety or allow ourselves to become depressed. We must not give up doing ideological and political work with unity in mind, nor must be use the wrong methods to cope with what is wrong. This will only end in our isolation. In the period of the Three Kingdoms, Old General Cheng Pu did not reconcile himself to the promotion of Zhou Yu as governor and often threw his weight around, making things difficult for others. But Zhou Yu did not repay in kind. Instead he used correct methods to make Cheng Pu wake up. Later, the two became the best of friends. They played an important role in consolidating the regime of Eastern Wu. Ancients could act like this. We Communist Party members should go one step further. Newly promoted comrades must devote themselves to serving the public heart and soul, pay close attention to the building of the ranks of cadres and strive to distinguish between right and wrong, between what deserves punishment or praise, and between rewards and penalties. If we can unite the great majority of comrades, we can direct the overwhelming majority of cadres' thoughts and talent toward work.

As far as the leadership post is concerned, there is the problem of keeping in close touch with the masses. The mass line is our party's fundamental line. Keeping in close touch with the masses is a mark that distinguishes our Communist Party from other political parties. The only source of our knowledge is the practice of the masses of people and their collective wisdom and collective experience. Newly promoted comrades cannot throw their weight around and put on airs, drifting apart from the masses just because they have been promoted and become "officials." Moreover, we must note that given a promotion and a change in our duties, some people are not likely to behave and talk as freely as they did to use before. Therefore, a newly appointed leader must consciously overcome these obstacles and show more initiative in getting close to the cadres and people at lower levels, talking more with them, supporting their supervision. If we do not do so, we are unlikely to hear of differing views. It is all the more difficult for us to hear of any criticism from the masses of the defects and mistakes in our work. We are thus liable to blindly believe that everything we have done is right. This is highly dangerous.

After we assume new leadership duties, people will ingratiate themselves with us in this way or that. Flattery is a vulgar practice of the exploiting class and also "a sugar-coated bullet." We must remain clearheaded and refuse to be moved. Flattering remarks are of course not to be taken seriously, still less should an exaggeration that boosts one's ego be accepted. The reasons for this are given. In the "Record of the Warring States" is a story about Zou Ji's ridiculing ruler Qi's acceptance of an admonition. Zou Ji's wife, his concubine and his guests all praised him as being more handsome than Duke Xu. Actually, he was just no match for Duke Xi in looks. He pondered over it throughout the night. It dawned on him that "my wife says that I am handsome because she is biased toward me. My concubine says that I am handsome because she is afraid of me. My guests say that I am handsome because they have something to ask of me." All those people that respond to flatteries will surely be deceived. As time goes on, they will make the mistake of drifting apart from the masses. In the world, this situation is unknown: given a promotion, a person's ability and his level automatically rise. Therefore, we must always make a one-divides-into-two analysis of ourselves, so that we can always maintain the style of being humble and modest and free from arrogance and rashness.

We must always remain the respectful pupils of the masses of people and cadres. In the revolutionary ranks, there are many heroic figures, model workers and leading cadres who originally distinguished themselves by their outstanding achievements. But yielding to "flatteries," they have waxed arrogant. They remain at the same level without making any progress and end up drifting apart from the masses. Some have even consigned themselves to oblivion. Mr Lu Xun once mentioned the serious harm of flattery. He said that flattery can have the effect of ruining the career of someone of consequence and making it impossible for him to stage a comback for many years. This should particularly arouse the vigilance of those comrades newly assigned to leadership posts. In no way should they give the flatterer an opportunity to get his way.

Now, there prevails on the social scene an unhealthy practice of "asking favors." Some of our cadres command no respect among the people. What they say goes unheeded. This is often because in handling major and minor issues concerning their own interests and their own relatives, they compromise themselves in all cases of "asking favors" and fail to uphold the party's principles. Some comrades think nothing of these so-called trifles. These trifles seem like nothing and seem forgivable in light of the large amount of work they have contributed. Therefore, they assume the wrong attitude of excusing and giving themselves encouragement. They do not know that these "trifles" reflect how firm an individual is in upholding his concept of public and private interests and the principle of party spirit. If in times of peace these trivial matters in private life cannot be properly taken care of, how can we unhesitatingly sacrifice ourselves in wartime or at a time when we are called on to risk death? Today, stopping the practice of "asking favors" is no minor problem. It is a problem concerning the reputation of the party and its purity which must be protected. Many serious economic crimes show that some leading cadres' involvement, their lapse into mistakes and even their degeneration began as matters of compromising out of personal consideration. Wholehearted devotion to duty in serving the people is our party's basic aim. Every cadre of our party has only the obligation of wholeheartedly and assiduously serving the people, and never the right to abuse authority to serve the interests of any individual or small group. What Comrade Zhou Enlai said on many occasions about cadres standing the five tests (the ideological test, the political test, the test of personal considerations, the social test and the test of life) is really significant. His glorious and great life -- as exemplified by his cautious and conscientious approach, his devotion to the public without any thought for self, his adherence to principle without being swayed by personal considerations and his defiance of death -- is in itself a shining example for us to follow. Comrades newly promoted to leadership posts cannot avoid experiencing various incidents of "asking favors." In our approach to such matters, we must emulate Comrade Zhou Enlai and resolutely uphold the party's principles. We must display the militant spirit of Communist Party members, uphold what is right and resist what is wrong.

To do a good job of leadership work in the historical conditions of today, we must have scientific and cultural knowledge and technical knowledge. We must cherish the spirit of doggedly, perseveringly and fearlessly doing research. Now there is serious waste by the state. There are so many loopholes in the management system. Actual work is marked by lack of a scientific basis and originality. All this has to do with our inadequate scientific and cultural knowledge and our inadequate knowledge of scientific management. We must of course learn how to build projects in the course of construction. We must also squeeze time out to study and research the subjects that we need to know about in our own fields. As far as comrades with some fundamental knowledge are concerned, they also must not remain satisfied. They must keep taking time out to study and to do research. In the new historical period, leaders must be politically advanced and professionally trained. This is an important requirement for the proper handling of our work. Using the pressure of work as an excuse to relax our efforts in acquiring technical knowledge is also a manifestation of lack of enthusiasm and fear of difficulties. This must be resolutely corrected.

In any leadership post, a newly promoted comrade must take up the duty of seriously studying Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought. Such a study effort must be combined with the cultivation of ideological awareness in a serious effort to transform the world outlook. Only in this way can we grasp revolutionary theory as a weapon. Only in this way can we raise the ability to distinguish between right and wrong and to correctly solve various problems encountered in the process of revolution and construction, and can we avoid going astray in the face of complicated phenomena and maintain the communist purity of Communist Party members. Also only in this way can we become sober-minded, resolute Marxists. As far as a leader is concerned, he has little future if not armed with theory. A well-known remark from Comrade Zhou Enlai: "We must live to learn and to transform ourselves," must be cherished as our motto.

The people and the party committee have vested a weighty mission in the new generation and have great expectations for them. We proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation and numerous revolutionary veterans have made our contributions in the glorious history of founding the new China. Newly promoted comrades should use their own revolutionary experience and fervently keep working toward creating the glorious history of building a modern and powerful socialist country. Several decades hence, when our descendants speak of this era of ours, they will, just as we do with the proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation and many old comrades today, say: They are the pride of the party and a generation of worthy proletarian revolutionary fighters.

HONGQI ON REVOLUTIONARY REFORM OF ORGANIZATION

HK240747 Beijing HONGQI in Chinese No 9, 1 May 82 p 49

[Article by Liu Zijiu [0491 1311 0036]: "Voluntarily Ascend Liangshan Mountain"]

[Text] The saying "voluntarily ascend Liangshan Mountain" was derived from the idiom "being driven to ascend Liangshan Mountain." In today's political vocabulary, "being driven to ascend Liangshan Mountain" means the people are forced to rise and wage revolution. As it is known, in history, due to the cruel oppression and exploitation by slave owners, slaves are driven to wage revolutions; for the same reason, peasants are driven to wage revolution against landlords and the proletariat is driven to wage revolution against the bourgeoisie. National revolutions throughout the world are all forced by the aggression, oppression and exploitation of alien nations. The idiom "being driven to ascend Liangshan Mountain" is a highly general summary of all class revolutions and national revolutions in modern of ancient times, in China or elsewhere.

At present, we are devoting great efforts to reforming our organization; this is also a revolution. But this revolution is not forced by a class enemy, nor by a national enemy. It is waged by ourselves, of our own accord, under the party central authorities' mobilization and leadership. So, we say that this revolution can be described as "voluntarily ascending Liangshan Mountain." However, this revolution is not directed at people but at the system. A revolution of the system will certainly lead to the promotion of self-education and self-revolution in the aspects of ideology, organization, politics and work style.

Why should we wage such a revolution? That is because some unhealthy phenomena, such as duplicate and overstaffed leading organs, unclear division of duties and responsiblity and being divorced from the masses and reality, have been formed in the long period of a peaceful environment. This has severely blocked the growth of productive force and social progress and has reached such an intolerable degree that reform must be carried out by means of revolution. In order to give an impetus to the development of productive force and social progress, our party central authorities have made up their minds to carry this revolution through to the end. This is a very necessary and very timely decision.

Reforming our organization is a revolution in the realm of the superstructure. That is designed to solve the problem that a part of our superstructure is not suited to the economic foundation and is impeding production from developing. The superstructure should, in essence, serve the economic foundation on which it is built, and ultimately, it should serve the development of production. If a part of the superstructure begins to lose its function of serving the economic foundation and the development of production, then this superstructure faces the danger of losing its right to exist. If this contradiction is not solved promptly, it will cause a series of frictions and troubles inside society, thus resulting in enormous waste, and even stagnation and retrogression. In history, no other social system or ruling class has been able to overcome this contradiction which often develops into an incurable disease and perishes together with those social systems and ruling classes. Only the socialist system and the proletariat and the Communist Party can solve this problem conscientiously and promptly. That means that they can, on their own initiative, adjust those unsuitable links in the relations between productive force and production relations and between the economic foundation and the superstructure, so as to continuously perfect the system and improve leadership. That is where the superiority of the socialist system lies and where the revolutionary, scientific and advanced nature of the leadership of the proletariat and the Communist Party lies. To sum up this matter, it can be called a kind of self-revolution or "voluntarily ascending Liangshan Mountain" as I have mentioned above.

This self-revolution of "voluntarily ascending Liangshan Mountain" is exactly a problem of correct handling of contradictions among the people. Its essence is correctly handling the relations between individual interests and overall interests and between immediate interests and long-term interests. While contradictions occur between individuals, current interests and overall, long-term interests, the former should spontaneously obey the latter -- that is the sole correct way to handle this contradiction among the people, in particular, a ruling party should act in this way in the period of peaceful construction. Are there not quite a lot of people who have suffered setbacks because they cannot properly handle this contradiction? Of course, it is not only a question of individual fate, but a question concerning the country and the party's fate. Therefore, we regard this revolution -- the reform of the organization -- as a test for the broad masses of cadres, and we believe that they are able to stand up to this test and successfully carry out this revolution.

EAST CHINA BROADCAST WORK MEETING ENDS IN ANHUI

OW241405 Hangzhou Zhejiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The second broadcast work meeting held by radio stations of the six provinces and one municipality in eastern China concluded recently in Taiping County, Anhui Province. The main subject discussed at the meeting was news broadcasts. The participants said: Radio stations are major news and propaganda units. Releasing news and making news broadcasts is a major part of broadcasting and propaganda work. Our country has now entered the period of work toward the four modernizations, and both the state and the people are confronted with many new situations and questions. It is the duty of workers of radio stations to promptly and accurately apprise the people of the principles and policies established by the party and the new persons, new deeds, new experiences and new information that have incessantly emerged from various trades and professions so as to spur on the development of our socialist construction. In particular, since the people's broadcasting stations are mouthpieces of the party, their announcers, who speak to audiences of millions of people, must have a high-level sense of revolutionary responsibility.

The meeting further pointed out: Reflecting the spirit of the times is a major characteristic of the field of broadcasting. News broadcasts in particular should manifest the spirit of our times and the mental attitude of the people of the 1980's. The meeting also made a preliminary study of the question of setting up work regulations for announcers.

Attending the meeting were broadcast workers from radio stations of the six provinces and one municipality in eastern China, namely, Fujian, Jiangxi, Jiangsu, Zhejiang, Shandong and Anhui Provinces and Shanghai Municipality. The Hefei and Wuhu people's broadcasting stations and the Jiujiang prefectural broadcasting station also sent representatives to the meeting. (Xia Qing), a nationally renowned announcer and deputy chief of the broadcasting section of the Central People's Broadcasting Station, was invited to the meeting to give guidance and to make a speech on the subject of news broadcasts.

FUJIAN CPPCC DISCUSSES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

OW260104 Fuzhou FUJIAN RIBAO in Chinese 17 May 82 p 1

[Text] The Fujian Provincial CPPCC Committee held a standing committee meeting in Fuzhou 10-14 May. The meeting discussed the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China.

Yuan Gai, vice chairman of the provincial CPPCC committee, presided over and addressed the meeting. He elaborated on the significance of discussion of the draft of the revised constitution by all the people. He called on the standing committee members to freely express their views and properly conduct discussions on the draft of the revised constitution by the people of the province.

The standing committee members who attended the meeting were in high spirits. They eagerly took the floor one after another. Fu Bocui, provincial CPPCC committee standing committee member and chairman of the provincial KMT revolutionary committee, said that the draft of the revised constitution has summed up China's experience in socialist revolution and construction over the past 30 years and more. It has formulated the nation's fundamental system and tasks and has given expression to the wishes, tasks and interests of the people of all nationalities. We must earnestly take part in discussions and actively present our views for revision to further perfect the draft of the revised constitution, he stressed. Chen Xizhong, vice chairman of the provincial CPPCC committee and concurrently chairman of the Fujian chapter of the China Democratic National Construction Association and chairman of the provincial federation of industry and commerce, also said: The draft of the revised consitution has been published for discussion by the people throughout the country. The opinions of the people will help to further improve it. After deliberation and adoption by the NPC Congress, the draft of the revised constitution will become China's fundamental law in the new historical period. This fully shows that China is now in the heyday of strengthening its socialist legal system.

Ni Songmao, vice chairman of the provincial CPPCC committee and vice chairman of the provincial scientific and technical association, said that the draft of the revised constitution represents new development and improvement over the 1954 Constitution. The draft of the revised constitution stipulates that all are equal under the law. This calls for educating the people and cadres on the legal system, fostering respect for law and safeguarding the dignity and authority of the constitution.

Chen Qihui, vice chairman of the Fujian chapter of the China Zhi Gong Society, said that the preamble to the draft of the revised constitution briefly summarizes modern Chinese history, affirms the contribution of the CCP and enables us to realize that socialism in China was hard-won. The draft of the revised constitution is very good teaching material for educating the younger generation on socialism and patriotism, he added.

Guo Ruiren and Zheng Danfu, vice chairmen of the provincial CPPCC committee; Bao Wangmin, vice chairman of the Fujian chapter of the China Democratic League; Li Hanyang, vice chairman of the Fujian chapter of the Chinese Peasants and Workers Democratic Party; and Lin Lumin, professor of Fuzhou University, who has returned from Taiwan, also spoke at the meeting. They unanimously held that publication of the draft of the revised constitution for discussion by people throughout the country is a great event in the political life of the Chinese people, through which the people could study socialist democracy and the socialist legal system and could educate themselves on fundamental state law. The standing committee members also presented opinions for revision of certain articles in the constitution.

The standing committee members maintained that the various CPPCC committees in the province must attach great importance to organizing discussions on the draft of the revised constitution. The people of various circles must be organized, under the leadership of the CCP, for democratic discussions in order to make contributions to revising and formulating the fundamental state law.

XIANG NAN ATTENDS EXHIBITION IN FUZHOU 25 MAY

OW261044 Fuzhou Fujian Provincial Service in Mandarin 1120 GMT 25 May 82

[Excerpt] The provincial exhibition of daily necessities for children opened at the 1 May exhibition hall in Fuzhou this morning. Leading comrades of the party, government and army of Fujian Province and Fuzhou municipality attended the opening ceremony, including Xiang Nan, Ma Xingyuan, Wu Hongxiang, Cheng Xu, Guo Chao, (He Ruoren), Wang Zhi, He Minxue, Ren Manjun, Wang Yan, Zheng Danfu, (Zhang Jianzhong) and (Yang Bu).

JIANGXI MILITARY DISTRICT ON AGRICULTURAL POLICY

OW211417 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Recently, the political department of the provincial military district issued a circular calling on all military subdistricts, garrison districts and county and municipal people's armed forces departments to actively support the local people's work in perfecting the agricultural production responsibility system under the unified leadership of the local party committees.

The first thing mentioned in the circular is that party committees and political organs at all levels in this military district should organize the cadres and fighters to earnestly study and understand the relevant documents issued by the CCP Central Committee and fully and accurately grasp their essence. They should fully understand the fact that the rural policy formulated and implemented following the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee is absolutely correct, and that the establishment and development of the agricultural production responsibility system reflects the strong desire of the hundreds of millions of peasants to develop socialist agriculture according to the actual conditions of China's rural areas.

In our province the agricultural production responsibility system has been established and developed in a normal and healthy way, and it has already produced conspicuous results. In this connection, the circular emphatically points out: We should see the main trend and essential aspect of the current situation in rural areas, enhance our spirits, pay attention to our problems, do away with any passive attitude and any complaint and contribute to the consolidation and development of the excellent rural situation by taking concrete action to support the local people in perfecting the agricultural production responsibility system.

In addition, the circular of the political department of the provincial military district sets forth the following demands: All units should take it as one of their political tasks to support the work of perfecting the agricultural production responsibility system in their localities. They should coordinate with the local people in perfecting this system. Under the unified leadership of the local party committees, they should assign some of their men to join the local work teams and go deep into rural areas to help cadres and the masses there correctly understand and thoroughly implement the party's principles and policies. They should also assist communes, production brigades and teams in consolidating the leading bodies, in instituting and improving the system of cadres' personal responsibilities, in executing last year's production contracts and signing new ones for this year, in promoting the present production work and in making plans for diversifying the economy.

ZHEJIANG'S TIE YING ATTENDS MEMORIAL SERVICE

OW210909 Hangzhou ZHEJIANG RIBAO in Chinese 13 May 82 p 1

[Excerpts] Comrade Wang Boping, standing committee member of the Zhejiang Provincial CCP Committee and vice governor of Zhejiang, failing to respond to medical treatment, passed away in Hangzhou at 1455 on 4 May 1982. He was 66. A memorial service for Wang Boping was held in Hangzhou on the afternoon of 12 May.

Wreaths were sent by Comrade Wang's friends, including Yao Yilin, Tan Zhenlin, Zhang Jingfu, Jiang Hua, Lin Hujia, Chen Guodong, Tan Qilong, Huo Shilian, Chen Weida, Zhang Wenbi and Chen Bing.

Attending the memorial service were responsible comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's congress standing committee, the provincial people's government and the provincial CPPCC committee, including Tie Ying, Li Fengping, Chen Zuolin, Wang Fang, Jiang Baodi, Wang Yaoting, Zhai Xiwu, Li Kechang, Zhang Zhaowan, Shang Jingcai, Liu Zizheng, Yu Jiyi, Xing Zitao, Tang Yuanbing, Wu Zhichuan, Mou Haixiu, Zhu Zhiguang and Wang Jiwu, as well as representatives from provincial-level departments and mass organizations and Wang Boping's friends, totaling more than 400.

Comrade Li Fengping, secretary of the Zhejiang Provincial CCP Committee and governor of Zhejiang, presided over the memorial service. Chen Zuolin, secretary of the Zhejiang Provincial CCP Committee and vice governor of Zhejiang, delivered the memorial speech.

During his illness, Tie Ying, Li Fengping, Chen Zuolin, Wang Fang, Zhang Jingtang, Xue Ju, Cui Jian and other comrades of the provincial CCP committee and government visited Wang Boping at the hospital.

BRIEFS

SHANGHAI METAL INDUSTRY -- The Shanghai metallurgical industry department has earnestly learned from the experience of the Capital Iron and Steel Company in instituting the economic responsibility system at all levels in order to raise economic results. Although the department's steel output in the January-April period of this year was reduced by 7.6 percent as compared with the same period last year, its total industrial output value increased 5.2 percent. Profits turned over by the department to the state rose 20.2 percent in the same period. Because several workshops under the department have to suspend production for the purpose of renovation, steel output in 1982 is expected to drop by 600,000 dun. [Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 1130 GMT 17 May 82 OW]

GUANGDONG'S REN ZHONGYI ON SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE

OW270123 Shanghai City Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] According to SHIJIE JINGJI DAOBAO [WORLD ECONOMIC GUIDE] while receiving a reporter from the paper on 20 May, Ren Zhongyi, first secretary of the Guangdong provincial party committee, and Liu Tianfu, governor of Guangdong, commented on several questions concerning the proper administration of the economic zone.

They stressed that, while striking at serious crimes in the economic sphere, the policy of enlivening the economy and the open-door policy must continue to be upheld in the special economic zone. They said that ideological readiness is important and administration within the zone must be further improved.

Ren Zhongyi and Liu Tianfu pointed out: While we should not be xenophobic -- which is wrong -- we must guard against contamination from external capitalist ideas. Certain new problems have arisen with the open-door policy. Although Guangdong is in an advantageous location, it is susceptible to contamination from outside influence. Blind worship of anything foreign is wrong, and contamination from outside influence must be consciously guarded against. We will continue to introduce foreign countries' advanced technology to our country, but we will not do so indiscriminately. By contamination from outside influence, we refer to those ideas which can really contaminate our minds. We must make specific analysis, increase our experience, learn lessons and unify our thinking.

NANFANG RIBAO EMPHASIZES ECONOMIC CONSTRUCTION

HK250804 Guangdong NANFANG RIBAO in Chinese 19 May 82 pp 1, 3

[Commentator's article: "Get a Good Grasp of Economic Construction, the Central Task"]

[Text] Since the struggle against serious crimes in the economic field is now being profoundly carried out in all localities of our province, some big and important cases are being seriously dealt with. This struggle relates to the rise and fall of our party and state. We must carry it out vigorously and resolutely and fight to the final victory. This is certain to all. At the same time, we must properly handle the relationship between the struggle and economic construction. We must step up our economic construction through the struggle and ensure that the provincial economic tasks for 1982 are fulfilled.

The 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee solemnly declared: "The focus of our party's work and the attention of all people in the country must be switched over to the socialist modernization drive." This strategic decision of great historical significance was reiterated at its sixth plenary session, emphasizing that our party work should by no means deviate again from the focus on economic construction. In the recent "Decision on Dealing Blows at Serious Crimes in the Economic Field," the CCP Central Committee and the State Council clearly pointed out: "Launching this struggle is aimed at clearing away obstacles to the progress of industrial and agricultural production, ensuring smooth development in all areas of work and quickening the pace of modernization." We must understand well this strategic ideology repeated time and again by the central authorities and handle well the relationship between the struggle against serious economic crimes and economic construction. We must strengthen our efforts in organizing and leading economic construction and adhere to the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy, and we must overcome all difficulties by any means to boost 1982 economic construction.

The key to economic construction lies in promoting industrial and agricultural production. Only when industrial and agricultural production have been developed will it be possible to complete the national financial plan, make commerce flourish, gradually meet the needs of improving people's standard of living and provide necessary facilities for raising the people's cultural level. Therefore, all trades and professions should work for the development of industrial and agricultural production. All nonproductive departments on the economic front, such as finance, banking, commerce and tax revenue, should in particular arrange all their work well to meet the needs of industrial and agricultural production one way or another.

Agriculture is all-important and is the basis for economic construction. Feeding people depends on farm production. The size of harvests has a great bearing on the whole situation. As we know, farm production must take place in the appropriate season, as any delay will often lead to great losses. That is why we should attach great importance to agriculture and should not treat it lightly.

This year, fighting disasters and striving for bumper harvests must be particularly stressed. According to the meteorological forecasts, there will be fairly heavy rainfall in 1982. We must, therefore, be prepared to combat serious disaster and even any kinds of calamities. We must do so in advance so that we will be able to resist any possible natural disasters once they occur.

At present, it is most urgent to do a good job of the relief work in the recently flood-stricken areas such as Qingyuan, Yinqde, Yangshan and Huaiji. We must unstintingly help the people in these affected areas and also call on them to carry out self-salvation by rehabilitating production. Immediate measures must be taken to solve the problems of the people's livelihood and medical care in these areas so that they will be able to rebuild their homes and resume production as quickly as possible. At the same time, we must publicize and commend with great fanfare all good deeds and good people who emerged in the struggle against the flood and in the relief work. Those who are derelict in their duties and were a bad influence in the relief work must be sternly dealt with. It is necessary to organize a powerful group to be specially responsible for the relief work and rehabilitation of production in the afflicted areas so as to ensure fulfillment of all tasks. Leading organs of localities should take great care of the masses and make proper and special arrangements for helping all communes and brigades and their members who are undergoing difficulties.

Under the current new situation, we must develop farm production in line with the practical conditions in our province and in accordance with the spirit of the "minutes of the national rural work conference" transmitted by the central authorities.
The present situation in our province tells us that we must continue to maintain stable policies, perfect the production responsibility system and consolidate and strengthen grassroots organizations in the rural areas. These are the most important measures for gaining a good grasp of the rural work in the near future. Now, special attention must be paid to consolidating and strengthening grassroots organizations in the rural areas. Only when the leading role of grassroots organizations has been restored and strengthened will it be possible to further stabilize and implement policies and to improve the production responsibility system as much as possible.

In carrying out the work of improving the production responsibility system, we must also earnestly do well in planned parenthood work and the planned use of farmland. Rigorous enforcement must be applied to these two fields of work. Population growth must be tightly controlled, unlawful seizure of farmland is absolutely impermissible, and, in particular use of farmland for building of houses should be strictly limited. We must treasure and use every inch of farmland and give full play to its role. We must vigorously develop diversified undertakings. But we should not look only at the small pieces of farmland before us for this purpose; we should have an eye on the hillsides, lakes and seas. Enterprises of communes and brigades can exert more efforts in processing of sideline products by making use of local raw materials. This will put them on solid ground and help to promote economic results. Under the guidance of the party's policies, we must carry out overall development in industry, agriculture and sideline production so as to help peasants to become affluent as soon as possible.

In industrial production, we should spare no efforts in raising the managerial and technological level of enterprises. If we emphasize the promotion of economic results, we must attempt to raise managerial and technological levels. All comrades on the industrial front must be clear about this. The key to raising the managerial level lies in perfecting the economic responsibility system by assigning power, responsibility and profits to each enterprise and each individual. But this will involve a question of how to pay bonuses in a reasonable way. Our policy on this question is: Any action of paying excessive bonuses must be stopped, and the principle of distribution according to work and more pay for more labor must be resolutely carried out.

In the course of improving the economic responsibility system, we must not only strengthen political and ideological education, but we must also handle the bonus problem correctly. We must make all workers and staff know that their individual benefits are closely connected with the economic results of their enterprise, and we must enhance their sense of responsibility of being the masters. Thus all workers and staff will willingly and gladly find solutions to raising the managerial level from every aspect.

Enhancing the technological level is an urgent task in all industrial enterprises in our province. As we know, our country pursues a policy of protecting advanced industrial products. Any products with advanced technology, high quality and lower costs will surely be salable on the domestic market, and could probably enter the world market, and will yield more economic results. If we say that industrial development in recent years depended mainly on flexible policies, then it must now depend on technology. At the same time, we must also seriously sum up experiences in restructuring enterprises. In a word, policies must be kept stable and technology must be more advanced. A number of enterprises in our province have, with their advanced technology, made great headway in their production and have made new contributions to the country. Their experiences are of great significance in the real situation.

In order to upgrade the technical level of enterprises, leaders of all industrial departments at provincial, prefectural and county levels must take the work as a matter of prime importance. They should work out practical plans and put them into practice, and the sooner the better. We must take great care of the local technical personnel so as to arouse their enthusiasm and bring their role into full play. We may dispatch our technical personnel to Shanghai, Tianjin and other provinces to learn from them, and we may also invite technical personnel of other provinces, prefectures and countries to our province for exchanging experiences. Moreover, we may import key technology with foreign exchange. We must progressively make new successes and breakthroughs in production and technology.

The industrial and agricultural production situation in our province is good and favorable. But there are also difficulties; some localities are even beset with heavy difficulties. However, we must bestir ourselves to wait out these difficulties by making full use of the favorable conditions. We must fearlessly go upstream to find a new way out. We must learn from the masses and experts in seeking solutions and unifying understanding to advance in the face of difficulties. We are certain that all obstacles will be swept away from the path of economic construction as the struggle against serious economic crimes is deepened. All advantages in economic construction will be brought into full play, and all difficulties will be overcome one by one. With common efforts, our province will surely accomplish all 1982 tasks in economic construction.

LIN HUJIA VISITS HUNAN MARTEN-BREEDING FARM

HK261444 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] The (Jiangjiabao) educated youth marten-breeding farm in Shimen County has succeeded in breeding martens, which are indigenous to the northern part of the country, in the southern part of the country. This marten-breeding farm is a subordinate farm of the Shimen County cold storage plant, which arranges for the settlement of educated youths. It uses the internal organs and leftover bits and pieces of draft cattle and goats from the cold storage plant as animal feed for the martens. Youths of the marten-breeding farm dare to think and act. Over the past 2 years or more, they have bred 393 martens and exported 570 marten skins.

On 17 May Minister of Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fishery Lin Hujia took great interest in visiting the pneumatic feeding room of the marten-breeding farm and earnestly receiving the young animal keepers working on the farm. After asking in detail about the processing and the feeding situation, Minister Lin sincerely praised the young people for providing new experiences in breeding martens and encouraged them to regard the farm as their home, run the marten-breeding farm even better and earn more foreign exchange for the state.

SHUAI MENGQI VISITS NATIVE COUNTY IN HUNAN

HK270727 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] According to HUNAN RIBAO, 86-year-old Comrade Shuai Mengqi, standing member of the Central Discipline Inspection Commission and adviser to the Central Committee's Organization Department, recently paid a special visit to his native Hanshou County to guide the work of collecting party history materials. He listened to a work report delivered by a responsible comrade of the county CCP committee, and also recalled past struggles with old party members, peasant association members, Red Guards and others, and solved in a truth-seeking way many problems encountered in the work of collecting party history materials. He also presented the county office for collecting party history materials with valuable revolutionary relics, including material on the history of Hanshou written by himself, photographs, and press and publication material, which he had kept for a long time. He was accompanied to Hanshou by Comrade Liu Ying, a member of the Central Discipline Inspection Commission.

NATIONAL STUDY SOCIETY MEETING OPENS IN CHANGSHA

HK241227 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] The opening ceremony of the 1982 annual meeting of the National Mao Zedong Literature and Art Thought Study Society was held in Changsha yesterday. This is a grand meeting on the study of Mao Zedong literature and art thought since the founding of the country. Some 200 representatives from literature and art theory circles, academic circles and institutes of higher education throughout the country are attending the meeting. Responsible comrades of some nationwide theory study organizations, HONGQI, press and publication units and the federations of literary and art circles, the literary and art associations and academic publications of some provinces and municipalities have been invited to attend the meeting.

Zhao Chuqi, secretary of the Hunan Provincial CCP Committee and (Liu Zheng), standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee, attended the opening ceremony.(Wang Liaoyun), vice president of the National Mao Zedong Literature and Art Thought Society, delivered the opening speech. (Liu Zheng), standing committee member of the provincial CCP committee, spoke.

The annual meeting has received some 130 academic theses from all quarters. During the meeting, under the general subject of Comrade Mao Zedong's contributions to Marxist-Leninist literature and art theory, the important issues of the connection between Mao Zedong literature and art thought and the Marxist scientific system and of how to persist in and develop Mao Zedong literature and art thought in the new period will be penetratingly studied and discussed.

HUNAN SECONDARY EDUCATION ENROLLMENT TO DECREASE

HK200301 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 2310 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] On 16 May a responsible person of the provincial student enrollment office told reporters: Although the number of students to be enrolled this year throughout the country will be slightly increased, with the exception of graduates of junior middle schools to be enrolled by technical middle schools, the number of graduates of senior middle schools in our province to be recruited by universities, colleges and technical schools will be less than last year. Therefore, about 85 percent of the candidates in our province will not be recruited this year. He called on leaders at all levels to do as they did in the past and attach importance to political and ideological work for candidates so that they will make two kinds of preparations with one Red heart.

GUIZHOU CONFERENCE DISCUSSES MILITIA WORK

HK210243 Guiyang Guizhou Provincial Service in Mandarin 2315 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Guizhou Military District recently held a district militia work conference, which demanded that the people's armed forces departments at all levels seriously study and implement the relevant instructions of the Central Committee and the provincial authorities and further promote militia work. On the basis of studying the spirit of central instructions on militia work in recent years, the conference held serious discussions on the question of how to further improve militia work. It demanded that the cadres of the people's armed forces departments at all levels seriously study the instructions of the central and provincial authorities on militia work and deeply understand and earnestly implement them. It is necessary to persistently put politics in command, grasp political and ideological education for the militia, and organize the militia and young people to launch a drive to build spiritual civilization, so that they will play a backbone and leading role in building the two civilizations. At the same time, it is necessary to take steps to promote the building of the armed forces departments themselves, overcome laxness and weakness in ideology and leadership, and strengthen the armed forces cadres' sense of the revolutionary cause and sense of responsibility. They should improve their work style, go deep into the grassroots level, seriously sovle current problems in militia building, and put militia work on a sound basis organizationally, politically and militarily.

XIZANG DISCUSSES IMPROVEMENTS IN SITUATION

HK250327 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 0000 GMT 25 May 82

[Excerpts] Xizang has seriously implemented the Central Committee's instructions on work in the region over the past 2 years. The political situation is stable, production has developed and the masses' living standards have gradually improved. Ten great changes have occurred. They are as follows:

1. The regional CCP committee has basically completed the task of bringing order out of chaos in guiding ideology for nationalities work and changed the previous method of simply copying what the interior of China did. As a result of readjustments, the various principles and policies are now better suited to the characteristics of Xizang. All work has gradually embarked on the correct track.

2. The policy of autonomy for nationality regions has been implemented. The people's congresses at all levels have done relatively well in formulating their own regulations. The regional people's congress standing committee has strengthened legislative work and drawn up a whole series of local rules and regulations suited to Xizang realities.

3. The work of redressing miscarriages of justice and carrying out policies regarding people has been basically completed. Work has been found or arranged for some 600 patriotic figures.

4. Large numbers of minority-nationality cadres have been cultivated and promoted. A cadre force composed mainly of Tibetans has initially been formed. Over half the leading cadres at the autonomous region level are Tibetans. All the principal responsible party and government persons in the five prefectures and Lhasa municipality are Tibetans. Tibetans also account for 80 and 100 percent of the country CCP committee first secretaries and county heads respectively.

5. The region has formulated an agriculture and animal husbandry development principle stressing adapting work to local conditions.

6. The region has achieved bumper crops in agriculture and animal husbandry 2 years in succession. The agricultural and animal husbandry areas present a scene of happiness and prosperity. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 0104 GMT on 23 May, in a similar report on developments in Xizang, adds the following: "Per-capita income has increased from 127 yuan in 1979 to 200 yuan at present."]

7. The region has vigorously developed the processing of agricultural and sideline products and nationalists handicrafts. [the XINHUA Domestic Service version adds: "The region's handicrafts output value in 1981 increased 1.2 times compared with 1979, thus setting a record.]

8. Tibetan language and script and habits and customs have been respected. Secondary and primary schools have gradually revived and strengthened the teaching of the Tibetan language. Documents issued by government at and above county level are printed in Tibetan. The nationality festivals have been revived.

9. The policy of freedom of religious belief has been seriously implemented. A number of major lamaseries and temples have been restored and opened to the masses. All normal religious activity is protected and respected. [The XINHUA Domestic Service version reads: "The policy on freedom of religious belief has been conscientiously implemented. The masses enjoy freedom to believe or not believe in religion and to propagate atheism."]

10. Relations between nationalities have been improved. The unity of nationalities has been strengthened. Relations between party and masses and between Han and minority nationalities have been notably improved. [the XINHUA Domestic Service version reads: "...Relations between the party and the masses and between the cadres and the masses have also noticeably improved."]

YIN FATANG ADDRESSES XIZANG INTELLECTUALS FORUM

OW261412 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2230 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Speaking at an intellectuals forum sponsored by the Xiyang Regional CCP Committee on 24 May, Yin Fatang, first secretary of the regional CCP committee, dwelt on the achievements of the region in implementing the intellectual policy since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. He said: Now Xizang has some 10,000 technicians of the Zang and Han nationalities in various specialized fields. They have contributed to building a united, prosperous and civilized new Xizang. Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, more than 5,900 technicians in various specialized fields have been given senior or medium-level technical titles in Xizang. In the meantime, wages have been adjusted for intellectuals working on the public health, education and athletic fronts, while more than 2,400 cadres have been trained to do the work in various specialized fields. On the basis of their actual performance, over 1,000 intellectuals have been admitted to the party, and some 500 promoted to leadership posts at various levels in the region.

Comrade Yin Fatang emphatically pointed out: The main task now for the party committees at all levels in Xizang Autonomous Region is to make continued efforts to correct the bias against intellectuals, show concern for them politically, foster the thinking of respecting them, trust them in carrying out the work and take good care of their livelihood so that they will love Xizang and be determined to work for a long time for the construction of this region. In addition, all-out efforts should be made to train backbone technicians of the Zang and other minority nationalities and encourage them to work hard in building a united, prosperous and civilized new Xizang.

BRIEFS

YUNNAN FLOOD CONTROL CIRCULAR -- The Yunnan provincial antidrought and antiflood command recently issued a circular on flood control. The circular urged the masses in the province to make the following preparations: 1) Antiflood and water conservancy departments at all levels in all places should carry out inspection of all antiflood devices. 2) The warning system should be strengthened. 3) The relationship between taking precautions against flood and water storage should be handled correctly. It is necessary to pay attention to storing water while making preparations against flood. [Kunming Yunnan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 24 May 82 HK]

NEI MONGGOL CRACKS ARMED CRIMINAL CASE

SK250200 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] According to our reporters and XINHUA reporters, by making concerted efforts and waging an arduous struggle in overcoming all kinds of obstructions, the Nei Monggol Autonomous Regional Public Security Bureau, the Hohhot Municipal Public Security Bureau and the public security section under the Hohhot Municipal Railway Bureau have cracked an exceptionally serious criminal case in which the hooligan ring committed robberies and mass rapes and seriously imperiled the safety of the people's lives and property of various nationalities. Except for 1 of the prime culprits who is still at large, 3 other culprits and over 20 accomplices were arrested. Firearms and sodium cyanide were confiscated. Thus, their criminal plot to do harm to public security cadres and policemen in order to kindle chaos throughout Hohhot municipality and take the people as their enemies has failed. The people of various nationalities clap and shout "bravo" about the achievement scored by public security personnel in doing away with the hidden danger and the people's pests.

This is a large criminal ring of the "five poisons" [wu du]. Most members of the ring are recidivists. On the evening of 14 October 1981, four prime culprits, including (Ao Zhiqin), (Zhong Yamin) and (Ya Dacheng) entered the (?signal plant) under the Hohhot Railway Bureau and broke into the firearms depot of the plant's armed guard office, from which they stole four automatic rifles, 1 semiautomatic rifle, 1 submachine gun, 558 bullets and 500 grams of sodium cyanide. Following the robbery, they got pledges that anyone who divulged the secret would be punished by having his entire family killed. These desperadoes even schemed to put poison in waterpipes in the boiler room of the Hohhot Public Security Bureau to kill public security personnel and policemen who were searching for them and to launch an armed attack to the buildings of the Hohhot Public Security Bureau and the regional and municipal CCP committees to take hostages of principal responsible persons of the regional and municipal CCP committees. They raved that they were fed up with life anyway, and that they would turn the municipality upside down rather than die in vain. If they failed, they would swallow poison together to kill themselves. Fortunately, their criminal plots have fallen through due to an early crackdown against the ring.

According to the current investigation of the case, since 1981 the criminal ring has fled here and there to 15 cities in 9 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions throughout the country and committed over 100 criminal cases, of which there are over 10 cases of robbing cash and articles worth 90,000 yuan. In September 1981, the ring stole over 4,600 yuan on one occasion from the safe of the Nei Monggol regional highway construction department and committed over 20 cases of mass rape. They also robbed and harmed innocent people and disturbed public order.

In cracking the serious criminal case, public security personnel have encountered obstacles from social circles since it involves children of leading cadres. While arresting a prime culprit, his parents not only refused to help arrest their son but also accused public security personnel of a frameup. As soon as the son of a leading cadre was identified as being involved in the case, his parent openly criticized personnel in charge of the case for putting a profession viewpoint above everything else.

However, leading personnel of the public security organs at all levels have taken a clear-cut stand in dealing with the case. They contend that the reason why criminals have rum amok is that they have powerful supporters. Legal organs should act according to the law and get rid of pests impartially for the people's safety. As long as evidence is proved correct, all criminals, no matter whose children are involved, should be punished according to law. Responsible comrades of the regional and Hohhot municipal CCP committees have firmly supported the work done by the personnel in charge of the case. With the resolute support of their leadership, personnel in charge of the case have also overcome all obstacles and have brought all criminals involved in the case to trial.

TIANJIN AQUATIC PRODUCTS BUREAU REORGANIZED

HK270631 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] According to Tianjin RIBAO, the Tianjin Municipal CCP Committee and Government have made decision on the problem of serious impurity of the municipal Aquatic Products Bureau's leadership group, and have reorganized this group. Yang Yeng, former secretary of the party group and director of the bureau, who openly counteracted the line of the third plenary session, has been placed on probation within the party for 2 years and removed from his post of bureau director; Liu Zengxiang has been placed on probation within the party for 2 years and removed from his post of deputy bureau director; Ma Chengzhi has been dismissed from all his posts inside the party and also from his deputy bureau director post; and Zhou Yunhong has been expelled from the party and removed from his post of deputy director. (Jiang Huaming) has been appointed party group secretary and acting bureau director; (Kiu Jin) and (Zhou Juchuan) have been appointed deputy secretaries of the party group and deputy bureau directors; and (Lu Zhengchun), (Liu Yongxu) and (Yin Yueshun) have been appointed members of the party group and deputy bureau directors.

The cadres and masses of the Aquatic Products Bureau have expressed resolute support for the decision of the municipal CCP Committee and government and have also shown satisfaction with the new leadership group.

In the second half of 1978, the municipal CCP committee discovered that fish production in the Aquatic Products Bureau was continually declining and that the masses had great objections to the leadership group. Comrade Chen Weida instructed the departments concerned to organize forces to investigate and solve the problems in the bureau. In 1979 the former finance and trade political department of the municipal CCP committee carried out an investigation to find out the situation in accordance with the municipal CCP committee's instructions, but was unable to get to the heart of the problems. In 1980 the leading comrades of the municipal CCP committee issued verbal and written instructions on numerous occasions and tackled the work of solving the bureau's problems. A joint investigation group, consisting mainly of the former finance and trade political department, together with the municipal CCP committee's organization department, was set up in April to carry out a second investigation. The group submitted its report to the municipal CCP committee in July. This report, too, was unable to reflect the true situation.

In March 1981, Comrade Chen Weida assigned Comrade Liu Ya, director of the municipal CCP committee's finance and trade political department, to be responsible for organizing a special team to carry out a third investigation. The main problems in the bureau were revealed after several months of repeated investigation. The facts showed that the leadership group of the municipal aquatic products group was in the hands of rebels and was a model in opposing the line of the third plenary session. The main problems in this bureau's leadership group were that factions were formed, certain relatively good cadres were dealt blows and excluded, and people who rose to power through rebelling were appointed to important posts.

Yang Heng, secretary of the party group and bureau director, was an old cadre who joined in work in 1940. As soon as the Cultural Revolution started, he engaged in rebelling and actively took part in persecuting old cadres.

Ma Chengzhi, deputy secretary of the party group and deputy bureau director, was formerly party general branch secretary of the grain warehouse of Tianjin west railroad station. During the Cultural Revolution he was promoted by relying on rebel chieftains.

Zhou Yunhong, member of the party group and deputy bureau director, rose to power through rebelling, was shock-recruited into the party and usurped leadership power. He was originally a boat worker. During the initial phase of the Cultural Revolution he organized a rebel force to stop production, make revolution and criticize and struggle against old cadres.

Liu Zengxiang, member of the party group, deputy bureau director and concurrently secretary of the party committee of the fishing company, was formerly deputy manager of that company. He was dissatisfied over his criticism during the "four cleanups" drive for insisting on dissolving the fishing-boat team and advocating the absurb theory that "buying fish is better than catching them, and having the central government allocate fish is better than buying them."

The serious problem was that, after the third plenary session, Yang Heng and the others persisted in their errors and went on organizing factions instead of correcting their errors and learning their lesson. They counteracted the line of the third plenary session. There are two main business offices in the Aquatic Products Bureau, one for marine operations and the other for freshwater work. Both of these offices were headed by people who had joined the party and rose to power through rebelling. While assigning factionalist chieftains to important posts, Yang Heng and company vigorously squeezed out those who were not with them. They transferred many cadres to other posts. The masses had a lot to say about this. Some said: "The central authorities have clearly stipulated that people of the three categories are not allowed to join the leadership groups. Why does the Aquatic Products Bureau refuse to carry out this order?"

After taking power, Yang Heng and company got rid of a lot of fishing equipment, thus seriously weakening fish production capacity. In the past few years they got rid of a large number of boats by transferring them elsewhere, lending them to others and so on in order to disband the fleet. They thus seriously sabotaged Tianjin's fishing business.

The municipal CCP committee and government held: Serious economic losses have been suffered because the Aquatic Products Bureau is organizationally gravely impure and counteracts the central line. This grave affair has given us profound lessons.

1. The central authorities' instruction on resolutely purging people of the three categories from the leadership groups at all levels is completely correct. The Aquatic Products Bureau incident has also fully proven that if people of the three categories hold power, the remnants of the gang of four will inevitably stage a comeback, which will have serious consequences for economic construction. We must learn a lesson from this affair, enhance our vigilance regarding this type of issue, and further grasp the rectification of leadership groups at all levels.

2. This affair has taught us that in carrying out the building and rectification of the leadership groups at all levels it is first necessary to grasp the building and rectification of the organization departments. The party committees at all levels must strengthen leadership over the organization departments. The organization departments at all levels must remain pure, and resolutely implement the line of the third plenary session. They must have a firm organizational concept, be loyal to the party and act for the public interest without any selfishness. In cadre policy, they must uphold the principle of appointing people to posts on their merits. In work style, they must be penetrating and meticulous and seek truth from facts. They must certainly not pursue bureaucratism and act irresponsibly. They must seriously study the central instructions issued since the third plenary session and resolutely implement their spirit.

3. The moment problems of grave impurity are found in the leadership groups, it is necessary to act rapidly to solve them in accordance with party policy, on the basis of getting a clear idea of the situation.

Tianjin RIBAO Comment

HK270713 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 18 May 82

[Report on 19 May Tianjin RIBAO editorial: "We Must Attach Great Importance to the Building of the Leadership Groups"]

[Text] The editorial says: The decision of the Tianjin Municipal CCP Committee and Government to reorganize the leadership group of the municipal Aquatic Products Bureau and take disciplinary action against certain former responsible persons of this bureau is a major affair in party life in Tianjin. This correct decision expresses the will of the party members and cadres. That there should still be a leadership group like that of the Aquatic Products Bureau today, more than 5 years after the smashing of the gang of four, is something that should cause us deep thought.

The editorial points out: The facts of the grave impurity of the Aquatic Products Bureau's leadership group tell us that the question of building the leadership groups is an issue that cannot be neglected for an instant. The central authorities have repeatedly stressed in recent years that it is essential to attach great importance to the building and rectification of the leadership groups. Comrade Hu Yaobang has pointed out: There are three reasons for the fact that the party's current combat-effectiveness is not strong enough, and these are impurity in ideology, work style, and organization. Since there are impurities, it is essential to carry out rectification and strengthen building. The question of what kind of person to promote and what kind of leadership group to organize is related to whether the party's Marxist line can endure, whether the building of the four modernizations can proceed smoothly and whether the socialist cause can prosper and develop.

The editorial points out: Upholding the principle of possessing both ability and political integrity has always been the party's basic starting point in the promotion of cadres. In promoting cadres, we must first look at their political performance and at whether they are politically reliable. This means examining the cadres' performance during the Great Cultural Revolution, and especially since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th Central Committee. The Central Committee has repeatedly stated that absolutely no one of those persons who rose to power by following Lin Biao, Jiang Qing and company and rebelling, those people whose thinking is gravely factionalist, and elements who took part in beating, smashing and looting can be promoted. Such persons already entrenched in leadership posts, such as certain people in the leadership group of the Aquatic Products Bureau, must be resolutely purged. If we fail to enhance vigilance and allow the people of three categories to entrench themselves in leadership groups, to play afresh at double-dealing, to go in for exchange of experience, and to conceal each other, then such people, be they only a few in number, could cause an inestimable root of evil for us. We must draw the proper lessons from the serious affair of the Aquatic Products Bureau. We must follow party policy and take decisive action to deal in a truth-seeking way with units that have still not grasped the rectification and building of the leadership groups and that are still seriously impure in organization. We must certainly not take this matter lightly. Great harm will be done to our cause if we act with any softness or slackness in this matter.

It is also necessary to carry our rectification on the basis of education and enhancement in cases of impurity of work style and ideology. In some cases we must also take the necessary action, so as to tangible improve the party's combat-effectiveness.

The editorial says: In carrying out rectification and building of the leadership groups, we must first pay attention to political integrity, and at the same time pay attention to ability, in promoting a cadre of any grade. If a cadre does not have political integrity, he cannot loyally serve the people or benefit the people's cause even though he may have some ability. If a cadre without ability is promoted with reluctance, even though he may not have political integrity, he cannot shoulder heavy responsibilities because he might make big mistakes. We must retain a number of experienced old cadres in the leadership groups at all levels. However, we must lay particular stress on promoting large numbers of middle-aged and young cadres. This is the requirement of the prosperity and development of our cause. The party organization at all levels must seriously tackle this task well, seizing the day, and promote group after group of outstanding middle-aged and young cadres who have both political integrity and ability and are in the prime of life.

Of course, we must uphold the principle of seeking truth from facts while promoting large numbers of middle-aged and young cadres, and avoid treating all cases in the same way regardless of the circumstances. We must accurately select talented people and do well in assigning cadres in the course of rectifying and building the leadership groups, so that the leadership groups at all levels can genuinely reach the central demands of being revolutionized, lowering the average age, being more knowledgeable and professional, increase their combat-effectiveness, and better lead the masses to build material and spiritual civilization.

The editorial points out in conclusion: In doing a good job of rectifying and building the leadership groups at all levels, we must further rectify and build well the departments responsible for organizational and cadre work. People with weak party spirit who are not fit to examine and take charge of cadres must be resolutely transferred elsewhere. This is extremely essential for correctly examining and promoting cadres, ensuring the political, work style and organizational purity of the leadership groups at all levels, and ensuring the smooth implementation of the party's line, principles and policies.

TIANJIN ENCOURAGES WORKING CLASS TO ADVANCE

HK140813 Tianjin City Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 4 May 82

[Excerpts of Tianjin RIBAO commentator's article: "Enhance Awareness, Sharpen Ability and Advance in the Forefront" -- date of publication not given]

[Excerpts] The article says: While Comrade Hu Yaobang was holding a forum with model workers of Tianjin Municipality, he said: The central authorities hope that the working class of Tianjin will greatly heighten its revolutionary militancy and become one of the groups, among the working class throughout the country, which advance in the forefront. Our Tianjin municipal working class must live up to the expectations of the party, fulfill the duties of the times, heighten its militancy, brace itself, strive to join the force of those groups of the working class throughout the country which advance in the fore-front and make even greater contributions toward the four modernizations.

The Tianjin RIBAO commentator's article further says: The CCP Central Committee hopes that the working class throughout the country will struggle hard, train itself into an advanced force which has an ideal, a sense of organization and discipline, a spirit of being the master of one's own affairs and a spirit of devotion and which is very willing to study hard modernized scientific and technological knowledge. It will also train itself into a big,dauntless labor force which works with stamina and diligence, is unrelenting, can overcome all difficulties and can constantly push the four modernizations forward. To join in the force which advances in the forefront, we must work hard in this aspect. We are now far from meeting this requirement.

The article says: We must see our results, both good and bad. We must see both our strong and weak points. To complete the glorious historical mission, the Tianjin working class must work hard in many aspects. At present, there are two aspects which are more outstanding: first, enhancing awareness; and second, sharpening ability. The Tianjin municipal working class enhanced awareness long ago. Over the past 30-odd years, under party leadership, it has displayed very great socialist awareness and has had a large number of advanced elements. However, some workers still lack the sense of being the master of the country. In ideology, morality and discipline, they have shown a passive and backward attitude. We must take a serious view of these different degrees of awareness. Young workers who have taken part in work in recent years do not understand the history of the development of the Tianjin working calss and the historical mission of the working class. Helping them enchance socialist awareness and become the working class of a younger generation which has an ideal, morality and discipline is important work. We must help some people, particularly some young workers, to strengthen their ability to resist the corruption of capitalist decadent ideology and behavior, vigorously encourage healthy trends and check unhealthy ones so that the Tianjin workers force can unite as one, struggle hard and march triumphantly in the course of learning from, catching up with and surpassing the progressives.

Lack of scientific, technological and cultural knowledge is a practical problem existing in our socialist modernization. Raising the levels of scientific, technological and cultural knowledge is an important subject for the working class as the main force of the four modernizations. Many comrades have worked hard in this aspect and achieved gratifying results. However, many comrades have not understood the importance and urgency of sharpening ability to achieve the four modernizations and endeavoring to acquire more scientific, technological and cultural knowledge. Some people even have the idea of abandoning themselves to the backward state of their work and livelihood. To embark on socialist modernization, our working class is required to have not only a high degree of awareness but also required to have culture, science and technology.

In conclusion, the Tianjin RIBAO commentator's article says: In the course of socialist modernization, striving to heighten one's own cultural and scientific levels is an important expression of the spirit of being the master of the country. Let the Tianjin municipal working class strive to live up to the expectations of the CCP Central Committee with practical actions, enhanced awareness and sharpened ability and make even greater contributions toward the four modernizations of the motherland.

BRIEFS

NEI MONGGOL GRASSLAND CONFERENCE -- The Nei Monggol regional conference on grassland work was recently held in Hohhot. The conference urged efforts to complete the grassland spot-checking work in 1983 and to strive to complete a survey on grassland resources in 5 years. It also called for efforts to expand artificial grassland acreage from 5.6 million mu to 40 million mu in 10 years and to build residential housing and water conservancy and other facilities separately in order to protect and rationally utilize grassland. Li Wen, deputy secretary of the regional party committee, attended and addressed the conference. [Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 17 May 82 SK]

HEILONGJIANG: OBSTACLES IN CRIMINAL CASES VIEWED

HK251018 Harbin HEILONGJIANG RIBAO in Chinese 17 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Clear Away the Obstacles"]

[Text] In the struggle to crack down on serious criminal activities in the economic area, Hegang municipality has arrested and punished Sun Liansheng, who attacked the person who reported him and the witness. Suileng County has also arrested according to law criminal Wang Cai who falsified documents. All this is important in removing obstacles, doing away with interference and ensuring the smooth progress of this struggle.

With the deepening of the struggle, problems similar to those of Hegang municipality and Suileng County have also been fund in many areas and units of our province. Some are even more serious. For example, some people have resorted to various means to openly absolve criminals in the economic field. Some have refused to testify as witnesses. Some have concealed the truth, producing false evidence. Some have given hints or passed on useful information to lawbreakers. Some have also threatened and assaulted informers, witnesses or persons in charge of relevant cases. All these have created obstacles in the struggle to seriously crack down on criminals in the economic field and hampered the smooth handling of cases. Therefore, we must pay serious attention to this problem, adopt effective measures and resort to legal means where necessary. The aim is to remove these obstacles in time.

The carrying out of the current struggle to crack down on serious criminal activities in the economic area does not equate a mass movement. Still less is it a case of subjecting everyone to a test. But in the "decision," the party Central Committee and the State Council clearly pointed out that concerning major and important cases which are relatively complicated and which cover a relatively wide scope, we must follow the mass line. Within certain limits, we must arouse knowledgeable individuals to truthfully expose and report on those guilty of serious crimes. Only by removing obstacles in carrying out such work can we safeguard the enthusiasm of the masses and protect the accusers, witnesses and those in charge of a case who exercise their legitimate rights and protect their personal safety. If we are not prudent in our approach to these problems, one or two incidents arising in an area or unit can also produce a great impact. Therefore, this is a very important piece of work. We must take a solemn and serious approach and cannot slacken our vigilance.

What we mean by obstacles and interference, generally speaking, involves two kinds of people. Those of the first kind are filled with selfish ideas, full of worries and afraid of offending others. They therefore fail to expose and report offenders and to testify to facts as they are, thus giving rise to difficulties in the work of investigation and conviction. This represent a problem concerning ideological awareness. Through penetrating and conscientious ideological education, we must make things clear to them and enable them to understand the principles involved. After this process, we believe that the persons concerned will raise their awareness, change their attitude and help make things clear to others. Another kind of people, including those who have falsified evidence, destroyed evidence, or even made vengeful attacks and committed violence, have run afoul of the criminal law and have become criminals. They must be resolutely dealt with according to law.

Cracking down on serious criminal activities in the economic area is an important manifestation of class struggle in our socialist society under the new historical conditions. It is a serious anticorruption struggle. Thus, it is nothing strange that certain obstacles and interfering factors have appeared in this struggle. So long as we have a clear idea of this and take effective measures, any obstacles and any interference can be removed. The struggle to crack down on serious criminal activities in the economic area can surely be carried on in an even more penetrating and healthy manner.

HEILONGJIANG URGES IMPROVED ECONOMIC RESULTS

SK201015 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 18 May 82

[Station commentary: "Strive To Achieve Speed in Industrial and Communications Production With Good Economic Results"]

[Excerpt] Since the beginning of this year, the situation on our industrial and communications production has been very good. Our light industry has steadily developed, heavy industry has begun improving and economic results have been gradually improved. In the first quarter, the output value of our industrial and communications departments increased 7.5 percent, and their profits increased 12 percent compared with the corresponding 1981 period. That the growth of profits surpasses output value is a very heartening achievement. We should notice that in the first quarter 24.7 percent -- about one-fourth of the annual output value plan -- was fulfilled and that only 8.6 percent of the annual profit plan was fulfilled. We have lagged behind the plan. Therefore, we must pay special attention to this.

We have suffered a lot for overemphasizing the pursuit of output value and ignoring economic results for a long period of time. Comparing 1981 with 1966, the number of enterprises under local budget in our province increased by 81.2 percent; the total industrial output value of our province increased by 86.5 percent, but the profits of our province declined 37.7 percent. This explains our problem. Of course, there are many factors affecting profits such as price increases of raw materials. However, one of the major factors is that we blindly pursued output, built duplicate plants and ignored economic results in the past. We should conscientiously sum up experiences and lessons, correct guiding thought and shift our emphasis of developing industry to improving economic results.

The fact that there is a wide gap between the speed and economic results of our province's industrial and communications production indicates that our potential is great. From now on, we should mainly rely on bringing into play our latent potential to develop our production and improve economic results. While improving economic results, we should in turn tap our potential and speed up our growth. We should strive to adopt advanced techniques and equipment to reform existing industrial and communications enterprises. We should concentrate on projects which need little investment and yield quick results and great profits. We should try to invest our money in projects which can help upgrade quality, increase variety, reduce consumption and enhance product competitiveness to improve the administrative and managerial level of existing enterprises. By so doing, we will be able to achieve great results with little investment.

At present, 32 percent of our industrial and communications enterprises' basic management work is in disorder. Waste is a very serious problem. We should do a good job in basic management work while conducting enterprise consolidation to make up what we have lost. There is much room in management to improve economic results. Years of practice have taught us that the key to achieving a good, unexaggerated speed in industrial and communications production is to eliminate our blindness and enable our production to meet the needs of society. In order to do so, we should study the knowledge of commodity production, gradually master social needs for commodities and the pattern of changes in social need and, under the guidance of the state's planned economy, try in every possible way to revitalize our production to make commodities highly remarketable and resolutely correct the tendency prevailing in production and circulation that only the interest of individual units, not the need of the entire society, is emphasized.

NINGXIA TAKES STEPS TO BAN 'HARMFUL' TAPES

HK270849 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 1

[Report: "Propaganda Department of Regional CCP Committee Holds Meeting To Implement the Relevant Central Instruction, Resolutely Curb the Dissemination of Harmful Audio and Video Tapes in the Region"]

[Text] Since the party Central Committee and the State Council issued the "Decision Banning the Import, Duplication, Sale and Playing of Reactionary, Pornographic and Obscene Audio and Video Tapes." The Propaganda Department of the Ningxia Hui Autonomous Regional CCP Committee has resolutely implemented the ban in the region. Therefore, initial results have been achieved in curbing the dissemination of harmful audio and video tapes from abroad in the region.

Over the past few years, harmful audio and video tapes from abroad have flowed into our region through different channels, a large number of which are pornographic and even reactionary. The spread of these tapes in society seriously corrupts our social values and causes some people, especially youths and juveniles, to feel uneasy. This jeopardizes the building of socialist spiritual civilization. Since the issue of the relevant ban, the regional CCP committee has paid great attention to the problem. The Propaganda Department of the regional CCP committee held a special meeting to make arrangements. An inspection group including personnel of parties concerned of the region was sent to more than 30 units in Yinchuan and Shizuishan municipalities to make social investigation. The regional broadcasting administrative bureau examined all their radio and TV programs for recreation and amusement and made a thorough checkup on their stored audio and video tapes. The commercial departments put a stop to sale of all audio and video tapes which had not been examined. Schools and scientific research departments have registered and sealed up the video tapes which have nothing to do with their work. The inundation of harmful audio and video tapes from foreign countries has been tentatively stopped in the region. However, as a whole, the examination was not thoroughly done in the region. We should make cadres and the masses further understand the harmfulness of these reactionary and pornographic tapes. Therefore, we must grasp well the work and cope with all practical problems that may arise.

In order to stop the spread of these tapes in our region, the propaganda department of the regional CCP committee convened a meeting in Yinchuan municipality from 4 to 6 May, a meeting of the propaganda department heads of CCP committees at the prefectural, municipal and county levels as well as directors of broadcasting bureaus and stations at these levels. Also present at the meeting were responsible comrades of the departments concerned of the region and of the units which are in possession of video sets. The meeting reviewed the implementation of the central instructions in various localities and studied the problems calling for immediate solution in the work of checking up on the audio and video tapes from abroad as well as some concrete measures which should be taken to further push the work forward. The meeting held: CCP committees and people's governments at all levels should earnestly strengthen their leadership and grasp the work as a matter of importance in building socialist spiritual civilization. In conjunction with the activities of the "five stresses and four beauties", education must be strengthened for cadres and the masses, especially youths and juveniles, with regard to adherence to the four basic principles and combating corrosive influence so that they will be stronger in discerning and resisting the ideological corruption of capitalism and the bourgeois way of life. At the same time, all departments in charge of propaganda, broadcasting, public security, commerce, culture and education in our region should make a thorough checkup again. Any reactionary and pornographic audio and video tapes, especially those spreading religious superstitious beliefs must be cleared or destroyed under the supervision of superior departments.

In future, all units, recreation units and individuals should strictly obey the relevant central instructions. Any audio and video tapes which are not distributed under the authorization of the central departments in charge, should not be openly or privately sold, duplicated, hired or played. Public security offices and judicial departments should reinforce their work of scouting around. All those who breach the regulations prescribed by the central authorities must be severely dealt with accordingly, and those who break the law must be punished according to law. In accordance with the relevant central instructions, the distribution work of audio and video tapes in our region will be under the control of the regional broadcasting administrative bureau. Radio stations must exert greater efforts in turning out more audio and video tapes which must be attractive, patriotic and revolutionary in order to meet the needs of the masses, especially for the cultural life of youths and juveniles.

NINGXIA RIBAO Commentator

HK270903 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 15 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "The Struggle Against Corruption Cannot be Relaxed for an Instant"]

[Text] The tracking down and banning of reactionary, pornographic audio and video tapes is a struggle in which socialist ideology is fighting against capitalist ideology. All cadres, especially leading cadres at all levels, party members and CYL members should attach great importance to this struggle.

Some comrades say: Our region, located in northwest China, is far from Hong Kong and Macao, so the problem in this respect is not so serious. This viewpoint does not tally with the actual situation. After the introduction of the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy, the moribund capitalist ideology and the bourgeois way of life have, in the past few years, been infiltrating our country through all possible channels. At the same time, a large number of pornographic, reactionary audio and video tapes have been flowing into our region. However, some of our people, through lack of vigilance, gladly accept and even distribute these tapes. This has caused an inundation of the decayed ideology and culture of capitalism, etching people's souls, corrupting the social mood and especially poisoning the minds of youths and juveniles. We must be clear about the social effects of such pollution and must not turn a blind eye to it and let matters drift.

Thoroughly tracking down all sorts of pornographic audio and video tapes is also a very serious and urgent political task. CCP committees and people's governments at all levels must be clear-cut and resolute in the task. They must take effective measures and grasp it as a matter of prime importance in building socialist spiritual civilization. They must earnestly convey and study the relevant central instructions. In complying with model examples, they may explain to cadres and the masses the harmfulness of reactionary, obscene audio and video tapes and pornographic books or periodicals. They must spell out clearly what sorts of tapes should be banned and confiscated and what methods should be adopted in doing so. They should arouse cadres and the masses to take an active part in the struggle of sweeping away spiritual rubbish. Special attention must be paid to intensifying ideological education for young people in socialism, communist and patriotism, enabling them to distinguish between what is noble, healthy and civilized and the moribund stuff of feudalism and capitalism. We must educate young people to enhance their national price and self-respect of ardently loving the motherland, the CCP and socialism and to raise their ability to discern and resist the ideological corruption of capitalism and the bourgeois way of life. All cadres, party members and CYL members must particularly strengthen their sense of policies, raise their consciousness of abiding by discipline and law and resolutely do all things in accordance with the instructions issued by the party Central Committee and the State Council.

We need the essence of culture, ancient and modern, Chinese and foreign, which can benefit our people. Audio and video tapes in foreign countries are not all pornographic and obscene. We must know how to distinguish them. We can select some of the tapes which are good and progressive for distribution.

We must stand by our open-door policy, but we must not relax our vigilance for one second in fighting against the decayed ideology of capitalism. Under the guidance of the CCP committees and people's governments at all levels and in coordination with all departments concerned, we must meticulously do political and ideological work and mobilize forces from all circles in the work of tracking down harmful audio and video tapes. At the same time, we must actively provide the masses of people with more good nourishment for the mind, penetratingly and continuously carry out activities of "five stresses and four beauties," and maintain our efforts in building socialist spiritual civilization in our region.

NINGXIA RIBAO ON RECRUITING NEW PARTY MEMBERS

HK241022 Yinchuan NINGXIA RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Uphold the Criteria for Party Members, Do a Good Job in Party Recruitment Work"]

[Text] At present, our party is faced with the magnificent task of leading the whole nation in building highly developed socialist material and spiritual civilization. This task has raised a new exacting demand on the construction of our party. In order to ensure the fulfillment of this glorious task, one of the important things we should do is to raise the combat effectiveness of our party by constantly consolidating and expanding the party ranks and strengthening the ideological and organizational construction of the party.

Since the smashing of the "gang of four," party organizations in many areas and units in our region have attached some importance to the work of recruiting party members and have recruited a number of new party members from key circles. During the period from 1977 to 1981, we have recruited a total of 13,721 new party members throughout the region, who constitute 9.3 percent of the existing party membership in our region. In recruiting party members, many party organizations have paid close attention to training activists and to admitting the conscious advanced proletarians who have distinguished themselves in fighting Lin Biao and the "gang of four," supporting the party's line, principles and policies and making contributions to the four modernizations. By so doing they have ensured that our new party members are well qualified. There are four main features of these new party members. 1) Most of them are the backbone on the first line of production. During the past 5 years, we have recruited in our region, 7,400 new party members from our industrial and agricultural frontline of production. More than 60 percent of them are core workers up to or above the level of head of a production team or head of a production group. 2) A large number of intellectuals have been admitted into the party. Over the past 5 years, a total of 2,249 professional and technical workers have been admitted into the party throughout our region and they constitute 16.4 percent of all new party members whom we have admitted during these years. 3) We have paid attention to recruiting the advanced persons and model workers who have emerged in the struggle to realize the four modernizations. According to an investigation in some units, more than 50 percent of the advanced workers and model workers have been admitted into the party. 4) Most of the new party members are young and only a few of them are beyond the age of 50. Over the past 5 years, 59.8 percent of the newly recruited party members in the region are below the age of 36.

Generally speaking, our work of recruiting party members in the past few years has been carried out satisfactorily, but there are also a few problems. The party organizations in a few units have failed to pay sufficient attention to recruitment work or to do this work in a planned manner. Some party organizations have failed to pay adequate attention to training activists or to do their recruitment work meticulously. Others have laid excessive stress on the needs of their work and have based the evaluation of their candidates on a few of their actions over a short period and neglected to inquire into their actions and political and ideological consciousness over a long period of time in the past. These party organizations have thus lowered the criteria for party members and recruited some people who are below the standards of qualification for party membership. Still others have even been afflicted by the unhealthy trend and have admitted some people as a "special favor," or because of their connections or "under-the-counter relationships" or even bartered party membership.

At present, there are 148,000 party members throughout our region, which is 3.86 percent of the total population of the region. Most of the existing party members are good or relatively good, but a few of them fail to meet the criteria. Moreover, our party members are not dispersed evenly. In some trades and professions there are few party members on the first line and in some areas the composition of the party ranks falls short of the requirements of the four modernizations. The educational level of our party members is low and the number of party members who are professionals and technical personnel is too small. The number of party members among minority nationalities and women and in mountainous areas is also too small, but that of young party members below the age of 26 is even smaller.

Taking into consideration of the above-mentioned situation, the party committees at all levels should not only pay close attention to satisfactorily educating their existing members and consolidating the basic-level party organizations, but should, at the same time, do a good job of recruiting party members in an arranged, planned and purposeful manner according to our needs and the objective possibility, so as to more satisfactorily meet the demands of socialist construction. This has already become one of our important tasks in strengthening the construction of our party.

One of the major tasks in strengthening the construction of our party and raising its combat effectiveness is to conscientiously ensure that all the new party members are up to the criteria. In recruiting party members in the future, we should take into account the strategic tasks of building the two civilizations, adhering to the four basic principles and training successors to the communist cause. Moreover, we should also take into account the existing problems of party work style having not taken a radical turn for the better and be fully aware of the existing impurity in our party organizations, the defects in the ideological consciousness of our party members and their poor party work style. Therefore, taking the situation as a whole, we should not stop our recruitment work, but on the other hand, we should by no means carry out our present recruitment work on a large scale. We should only recruit a limited number of new party members in strict accordance with the principle of upholding the criteria for party membership. We should pay attention to admitting into the party those advanced elements who are politically highly conscious and who are competent in various professions. We should strictly prevent those who have started their career by joining the rebels and by following Lin Biao and Jiang Zing counterrevolutionary cliques and who have a serious tendency of sectarianism, from sneaking into the party ranks and thus ensure the purity of the party organizations.

We should do a good job of training, educating and examining the activists who are applying for party membership. We should do a good job of selecting party-member candidates and of laying the foundation for the recruitment work. The basic-level party organizations should show full enthusiastic concern for the candidates and help them to make progress by giving them various training courses and party lessons. They should help them to fix in their mind a correct objective for entering the party and give them practical training by assigning certain social work to them. Generally speaking, every candidate should wait for 1 or 2 years to undergo training, a relatively systematic education and a comprehensive check and evaluation of their ideological consciousness, political virtues and work performance. A thorough enquiry should be made about the candidate's personal history, the major members of his family and his chief social relations. In recruiting party members, we should proceed in strict accordance with the party constitution and carry out the recruitment procedures for the recruits one by one. Before the discussion for the recruitment of any candidate in a party branch meeting, opinions about the candidate should be solicited from all sides. Before the approval of the admittance of a candidate into the party, the party committee concerned should send some people to talk with people both outside and inside the party and solicit opinions from all of them. The approval should be decided through the collective discussion in a party committee meeting instead of arbitrarily by one or more persons. We should prevent the practices of sudden recruitment of a certain number of party members for fulfilling the recruitment quotas. We should resolutely eliminate the unhealthy practices of admitting people into the party because they are the intimate friends of some party cadres or because they belong to the same sections as some party cadres do and of admitting people into the party because of "under-the-counter relations." We should also eliminate the unhealthy practice of arbitarily selecting people to be recruited into the party without undergoing the proper procedures and the unhealthy practice of bartering party membership. Anyone who engages in these practices should be severely handled and should receive party disciplinary punishment if his case is serious. The party membership of those who have actually been admitted into the party by means of various unhealthy practices should all be definitely declared null and void.

In order to remedy the shortage of party members in some fields, we should pay attention to recruiting qualified people from various professionals and technicians and from middle school and primary schoolteachers, higher education students, women and minority nationalities. Owing to the lack of party members on the first line of production and the lack of young party members, the party organizations at all levels should pay attention to recruiting young party members from basic-level units and the first line of the production. We should recruit young members under the age of 25 from the CYL.

Our party committees at all levels should strengthen their leadership over the recruitment work and should divide the areas and units under these committees into groups according to their conditions and give them corresponding guidance. At present, there are quite a large number of the party's basic-level organizations that are weak and lax and need to be reorganized. These organizations, though having undergone reorganization, are still afflicted with quite a few problems. Therefore, they should not recruit any new members until they have undergone a much more thorough reorganization.

SHAANXI MARKS ANNIVERSARY OF MAO'S YANAN TALKS

OW211039 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0149 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Xian, 21 May (XINHUA) -- More than 90 writers and artists in Shaanxi Province recently held a symposium on Mao Zedong's thinking on literature and art at Yangjialiang, the site of the Yanan forum on literature and art.

Speaking at the symposium were Hu Cai, chairman of the Xian branch of the Chinese Writers Union; writers Du Pengcheng and Wang Wenshi, proser Li Roushui and young writer Chen Zhongshi. Hu Cai is one of those who heard Chairman Mao deliver his talks at the Yanan forum on literature and art. They discussed at length how literature and art can serve the people and socialism; the relationship between literature and art and politics; writers' stand, thinking and feelings; and the question of party spirit of literature and art. They pointed out that the basic spirit of the "Talks" has fostered one generation of literary and art workers after another and, while encouraging writers to plunge into the thick of life and produce good works inspiring the people to press forward, has promoted our literary and art cause. The "Talks" still is of great guiding significance for literary and art workers.

Responsible comrades of the Shaanxi provincial party committee attended the symposium and delivered speeches. They urged the provincial literary and art circles, guided by the basic spirit of the "Talks," to firmly take the road of integrating themselves with the masses, promote the four modernizations and the spiritual aspect of socialist modernization and produce more and better works to help creative writing flourish.

The symposium was sponsored by the Shaanxi Provincial CCP Committee's Propaganda Department.

XINJIANG FORUM HELD ON MAO'S LITERARY THOUGHT

HK260803 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 25 May 82

[Summary] "This morning, the Xinjiang branch of the Chinese Writers Association held a forum in Urumqi on Mao Zedong literary and art thought. The participants in the forum unanimously declared that they would conscientiously study Mao Zedong's literary and art thought, uphold and enrich Mao Zedong's theory on literature and art, and make contributions to the prospering of literary and art creation in the autonomous region. The forum was presided over by (Abuliesi Nageer), chairman of the Xinjiang branch of the Chinese Writers Association. More than 300 professional and amateur writers of various nationalities from Urumqi attended the forum."

The atmosphere was lively throughout the forum, and all the participants spoke out freely. They pointed out that the contents of Mao Zedong's literary and art thought, which is embodied in his works on literature and art written over many years, as well as in his own active participation in literary creation and activities are extraordinarily rich. They said, the scientific principles of Mao Zedong's literary and art thought should be used to analyze and solve new problems; and should be continually further enriched. At present, there are in our society two wrong tendencies toward Mao Zedong's literary and art thought some people totally negate the value of Mao Zedong's literary and art thought, while the others simply ignore the necessity of further enriching Mao Zedong's literary and art thought. The participants in the forum showed their determination to carry out the struggle between the two lines, distinguishing right from wrong, and upholding the correct direction of Mao Zedong's literary and art thought. In affirming the guideline that literature and art must serve the people and literary and art workers must integrate themselves with the masses, the forum appealed to the literary and art workers to go deep into the realities of life, to depict the new era and grasp its nature and main trend.

"(Liu Jiaowu), honorary chairman of the Xinjiang branch of the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles; and the responsible people of other organs concerned also attended the forum and delivered speeches."

PRC, TAIWAN PENTATHLETES COMPETE IN TOKYO MEET

OW261443 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0216 GMT 26 May 82

[Newsletter by Central People's Broadcasting Station reporter Cui Xiaoliang and XINHUA reporter Liu Wenyu: "Deep Kindred Feelings Between Compatriots -- On the Days of Union Between Pentathlon Athletes From Both Sides of the Taiwan Strait"]

[Excerpts] Tokyo, 25 May (XINHUA) -- On the afternoon of 16 May, when the Chinese team from Beijing arrived at Tokyo's Narita Airport to attend the Asian qualifying round for the world modern pentathlon championships, a plane carrying the Chinese Taibei team also landed at the metropolis' Haneda airport. During the ensuing 10 days, the modern pentathlon athletes from the two sides of the Taiwan Strait joined each other in training and contests. The feelings of kinship they expressed when chatting cordially and encouraging each other not only pleased the Chinese compatriots here, but also deeply moved the Japanese friends.

The Asian qualifying round was sponsored by the Japanese union of modern pentathlon and biathlon. Four athletes were sent from each side of the Taiwan Strait. Japan, the host country, had 20 athletes taking part in the competitions.

When the Chinese athletes were competing against the Japanese players, the Chinese Taibei athletes who were standing by cheered on their compatriots. Likewise, when the Chinese Taibei athletes entered a contest with their Japanese counterparts, members of the Chinese team cheered for their brothers from Taiwan. After the Chinese Taibei team had received good scores in the fencing contest, the Chinese team members congratulated coach Chen Xiuhui of the Chinese Taibei team. In response to the congratulations, coach Chen said: "Thank you, thank you!" When the Chinese team received the best score in the group swimming contest, Chinese Taibei team leader Deng Yisheng, with a smile on his face, said to Chinese team leader Ma Gingshan: "You swim very well. Congratulations!" To this, team leader Ma replied modestly: "Thank you. We should continue to strive hard."

During the days of competition, the athletes from the two sides of the strait rode the same bus when traveling between the hotel and the contest site. On the bus they chatted happily and cordially, exchanging their experiences and enquiring about each other's physical culture and sports activities. Their talks touched on a wide range of subjects.

To express the cordial feelings between compatriots, the brothers from the two sides of the strait exchanged souvenirs. The Taiwan compatriots gave the mainland compatriots Taiwan-made cotton T-shirts, while the latter gave their kinsfolk from Taiwan some paper designs, porcelain vases made in Boshan, Shandong, and several pieces of Hangzhou brocade with designs showing the Great Wall and the landscapes of the West Lake and Li Jiang.

The close contacts in Tokyo between the athletes from the two sides of the strait greatly delighted the Japanese friends. Shiro Matsuoka, chairman for general affairs of the executive committee for the event, said: "It is of profound importance for athletes from mainland China and Taibei to promote friendship through sports activities, no matter how little progress they are making in this regard." Kunihara Suga, chairman of the executive committee, made this remark: "I was greatly delighted when I saw team leader Ma and team leader Deng chatting cordially with one another. I feel that the day is not far off when mainland China and Taiwan will become one entity. China's reunification is our common aspiration as well."

By Central People's Broadcasting Station reporter Cui Xiaoliang and XINHUA reporter Liu Wenyu.

SAUDI ARABIA JOINT VENTURE 'RUNNING SMOOTHLY'

OW170607 Taipei CHINA POST in English 12 May 82 p 10

[Text] The single-protein pilot plant, a joint venture of the Republic of China and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, has been running smoothly, producing 300 kilograms of single-protein every day, said a top-ranking official with the Chinese Petroleum Corporation Monday. Pan Chu-tsai, director of the refining and manufacturing research center of the CPC in Chiayi, said the single protein produced by the pilot plant has been used by the research organization to raise animals like hogs, chickens and fish with good results. Pan noted the nation imports 2 million metric tons of animal feed from foreign countries, costing about U.S. $60 million ever year. The oil expert said that the nation only produces 1 percent of the animal feeds its needs and that in order to reduce the reliance on imports from foreign countries, the nation should actively increase the production of single protein. Pan explained that the Sino-Saudi Arabia joint venture is producing the single protein by methanol, which is made from natural gas produced in Saudi Arabia.

The refining and manufacturing research center of the CPC set up a single-protein pilot plant in August 1980. The protein contained in the products by the plant has reached 70 percent, amounting to soybean powder, which is a kind of good animal feed. At present there are some Saudi Arabian technicians receiving training at the research center, said Pan, adding that it is expected to mass-produce the single protein after solving the problem of production cost.

SAUDI POSTS, TELEGRAPH MINISTER ARRIVES ON VISIT

OW171413 Taipei CNA in English 1350 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Taipei, May 17 (CNA) Dr. Alawi Kayyal, minister of posts, telegraph and telecommunications of Saudi Arabia, arrived here Monday for a five-day visit. He is accompanied by Fahad as-Sharif, assistant deputy minister for administrative and financial affairs of the ministry; Shaykh Fuad Abu Mansur, assistant deputy minister for employment and maintenance of the ministry; and Shaykh Rab'a ad-Dahlan, director general of telephones for the western region of the kingdom. The Saudi officials were greeted upon their arrival at CKS International Airport by Chinese Communications Minister Lein Chan. They will meet government leaders here and tour this nation's cultural institutions and industrial complex.

HONDURAN CONGRESS DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR VISIT

OW171409 Taipei CNA in English 1331 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Taipei, May 17 (CNA) -- J. Efrain Bu Giron, president of the National Congress of the Republic of Honduras, and Mrs. Bu Giron arrived in Taipei Monday for a seven-day visit. They are accompanied by Nicolas Cruz Torres and Justo Pastor Calderon, deputies of the congress, and Mrs. Irmas Acosta de Fortin, president of the University of "Jose Ceicilio del Valle." While here, they will call on leaders of the national legislative bodies and government officials, and visit the cultural and economic establishments of the Republic of China.

WEN WEI PO STRESSES STEPPING UP SOVIET STUDIES

HK270314 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 27 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "It Is Necessary To Step Up Soviet Studies"]

[Text] In his speech in Tashkent, Leonid I. Brezhnev appealed to China for improving the relations between China and the Soviet Union. Later, at a congress of the Communist Youth League of the Soviet Union, he repeated this proposal. The content of Brezhnev's proposal for improving Sino-Soviet relations includes the resumption of the Sino-Soviet border talks, the reduction of medium-range missiles in the Far East and the strengthening of scientific and technical contacts and trade between the two countries.

At that time, the chief of the First Far Eastern Department of the Soviet Union was making a personal visit to China, where he met China's Deputy Foreign Ministers Qian Qichen and Yu Hongliang. At the same time, China also sent research workers to make investigations and studies in the Soviet Union.

Trade between China and the Soviet Union is increasing. In 1982, the total amount of trade between the two countries will be $300 million, a 43-percent increase over that in 1981. All this shows that Sino-Soviet relations are bound to attract people's attention throughout the world.

China's leaders have already declared that China will adhere to its foreign policies of antihegemonism and peaceful coexistence. Thus, it seems that there will not be too great a change in Sino-Soviet relations. However, Sino-Soviet relations have become more complicated and China must not only maintain its deployment of armed forces along the Sino-Soviet border to counter the Soviet Union, but must also be prepared to carry out various kinds of negotiations with the Soviet Union in order to increase trade and economic contacts between the two countries. In the face of this changed situation, China has to step up its studies of the Soviet Union in order to flexibly and effectively handle its relations with the Soviet Union while adhering to the principles of anti-hegemonism and peaceful coexistence.

This makes me recall the fact that in the initial period after the founding of the PRC, China regarded "the Soviet Union today as the China tomorrow" and learned about everything from the Soviet Union. As a result, there was an upsurge of studying the Soviet Union. For example, courses in the Russian language were given to all students in the institutions of higher learning and there were a large number of Russian linguists among China's foreign language specialists. This example alone was enough to show how enthusiastic China was in learning from the Soviet Union at that time. Since the sudden emergence of the divergence between China and the Soviet Union, the Soviet Union has withdrawn all its specialists from China and torn up all its contracts with China. The relationship between the two countries has become as cold as the freezing point or lower and all of China's studies of the Soviet Union have been suspended. A large number of Russian linguists have been transferred to other professions, and as time passes, China has become somewhat unfamiliar with how things stand in the Soviet Union.

We should change this situation, no matter from what angle we view this problem. To be realistic, we should realize that after all, the Soviet Union is a superpower in the world during our time. In every corner of the world it is exercising its impact and playing its role. For example, it has instigated Cuba to invade the Congo [as published] and Vietnam to invade Kampuchea. It has sent its army into Afghanistan, and it has direct control of the situation in Poland. Moreover, its influence has indirectly penetrated into Latin America. Thus it has gradually gained initiative in its contention with the United States. Besides, the Soviet Union has always coveted China's territory and has deployed its armed forces along its border with our country. If we only take into account our national interests, we will see that it is imperative for us to adequately know an antagonistic neighbor in order to know both the enemy and ourselves.

Stepping up studies of the Soviet Union is significant in another special sense. This is because the Soviet Union is the homeland of Lenin, the land where the practice of socialism first began, and because it was the forerunner and the base of the world communist movement in the past. The various problems that have cropped up in its evolution must therefore be studied and answered by the Marxists-Leninists of our time. We should make a scientific analysis of these problems in order to facilitate the spread of Marxism-Leninism and increase the influence of Marxism-Leninism. At the same time, by so doing we can also provide an important reference for China's socialist construction and avoid repeating the mistakes that the Soviet Union has committed.

Stepping up Soviet studies is an important task at present.

HSIN WAN PAO ON FALKLANDS CONFLICT, SUPERPOWERS

HK260800 Hong Kong HSIN WAN PAO in Chinese 25 May 82 p 6

["Evening Talk" article by Yang Chu [5017 2612]: "Argentina Mentions Opposition to Superpowers"]

[Text] Unqualified

Britain is not a superpower. Its area is small, its population is not great and it has not a big power. Generally speaking, it no longer publicly upholds hegemonism and power politics as it once did. Hegemonism and power politics are the politics of the superpowers.

Still to the Point

Still, both Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez and Navy Commander Jorge Isaac Anaya have stressed that they oppose the politics of the superpowers. They were not wrong in saying so. Why not? It is not because Britain has suddenly become a giant, nor because Britain has recovered its position as "the empire where the sun never sets." No, the lost glory of the empire can never be restored.

The United States, the Evildoer

The trouble in the South Atlantic has been stirred up by a superpower. This superpower is the United States. U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig has publicly admitted that the United States is giving military aid to Britain. The supply of intelligence and war materiel and the spiritual support that the United States has given Britain are the main reasons why the British Government made up its mind to fight this tough war. In other words, this is why some of the British youths have lost their lives. If the United States had not encouraged Britain, these British youths would probably not have died.

Both Parties Have Suffered

Britain declared that it had shot down more than 60 Argentine planes, sunk a few Argentine warships, killed several hundred Argentine people, and inflicted serious losses on Argentina. True, Argentina has suffered serious losses. What about Britain? The losses it has suffered are also serious. So far, it has admitted that three of its warships have been sunk. Each of these warships was worth more than $100 million.

Two-Faced Policy

Since Britain has suffered serious losses, it has to return to the negotiation table to solve the Falklands problem through negotiations. In this case, it will have achieved nothing. On the other hand, Britain will be indebted to the United States for the support it gave. The United States has hurt the feelings of its southern neighbors in Latin America. It has alienated the Third World countries. It has shown them that if any country does not obey the United States, the United States will not let this country get off easily and it may treat this country in the same manner it has treated Argentina. What a sinister two-faced trick!

Something in the Words

Argentine Defense Minister Amadeo Frugoli said yesterday that the Falklands conflict might be further aggravated and "may develop into a worldwide conflict." What did he mean? A newspaper in Buenos Aires reported that one of the three members of the Argentine ruling junta told its reporter that it was up to Argentina to decide whether it will buy Soviet-made weapons.

The Need To Cool Off

The United States has stirred up trouble in the South Atlantic, and this trouble has developed into a serious conflict and a war, which provides an opportunity for the Soviet Union to exploit. Some people in Britain are still infatuated with "military successes" and refuse even to consider a "cease-fire." If they cool off a little, they will sooner or later find that what they are doing is foolish and will not bring anything good either for themselves or others.

PRC STEPS UP COAL EXPLOITATION IN SOUTHWEST

HK241047 Hong Kong WEN WEI PO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 1

[Dispatch from correspondent Cheng Hsiang [4453 5046]: "Southwest China Coal To Be Exploited in Two Stages; China Decides To Invest Over $6 Billion"]

[Text] Beijing, 23 May -- China plans to invest nearly 16 billion yuan (equal to $6.6 billion) in the coming four 5-year plan periods in exploiting its coal and other resources in the southwest. When this plan is completed, not only will the economic situation in Yunnan and Guizhou be greatly improved, but the energy and power supply for Hong Kong, Macao and Southeast Asian countries, including the supply of coal, electricity and gas, will also have a reliable source. This was revealed by Wang Tingyuan, general manager of the Southwest Energy Joint Development Corporation, to our correspondent before going to Yunnan and Guizhou to make investigations. Now some of the main responsible persons in this corporation have been sent to West Europe to seek investment and some others have been sent to Yunnan and Guizhou to inspect work.

According to Wang Tingyuan, this grand exploitation plan will be carried out in two stages. The first stage starts from this year and will last until about 500 to 600 million yuan have been invested for this stage. It is planned that the annual output of the three mines in Guizhou's Liupanshui will be increased from the present 6 million tons to 10 million tons, and the increased portion, that is, 4 million tons, will all be for export.

The main tasks in this stage are: 1) Rebuild the existing 21 pairs of pits in Liupanshui to boost output. 2) Rebuild the Kunming-Zhanjiang railway so that its transportation volume will be expanded by 4 million tons. 3) Build a coal port in Zhanjiang with berths for 50,000-ton vessels and an annual shipment capacity of 2 million tons. 4) Build a gasworks in Shenzhen that can produce 1 million cubic meters of gas per year to supply both Shenzhen and Hong Kong. Before 1985, when the work in this stage is completed, there will be 4 million tons of dressed coal for export.

The second stage of the exploitation plan is also to be completed during four 5-year plans, from the present to the year 2000. A total investment of $6.25 billion will be needed for this stage. After completion, the production capacity of coal in the southwest will reach 35 million tons a year. The second stage plan includes: 1) The construction of 32 pairs of new shafts and increasing the new production capacity by 25 million tons (together with the 10 million tons in the first stage, total production will be 35 million tons a year). 2) The construction of a new 600-km railroad from Hongguo, Panxian County to Guizhou to Nanning in Guangxi. 3) The construction of a deep-water port in Zhanjiang with berths for bulk cargo freighters of 100,000 to 150,000 tons and with an annual export capacity of 15 million tons. This will link the forces of production, export and transportation. 4) The construction of three power stations with a generating capacity of 2.2 million kilowatts, using coal and peat for fuel. 5) The development of other mineral resources.

Wang Tingyuan said: The proven reserves of the coal mines in the southwest is 60 billion tons, or about one-tenth of the proven reserves of the entire country. The areas contiguous to Yunnan and Guizhou have always been know as the coalfield of the southwest. The western parts of Yunnan and Guizhou are also important production bases for nonferrous metals in China. Therefore, various countries are keenly interested in this exploitation plan. Two countries have already sent teams to make inspections, and the businessmen of many countries have also sent cables making enquiries. In accordance with the principle of mutual benefit, the Southwest Energy Joint Development Corporation will be happy to cooperate with Hong Kong and Macao businessmen, and Overseas Chinese capital and foreign capital interested in taking part, and, beginning with coal, will set the pace for the exploitation of resources in the whole of the southwest.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 104 28 May 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

Prospects of USSR-U.S. Disarmament Talks 'Gloomy' A 1
PRC Sworn In as Member of Olympic Committee A 2
Trade With Developing Countries Quadruples A 2
[CHINA DAILY 27 May]

UNITED STATES

CHINA DAILY on Suit Against U.S. Over Cargo [28 May] B 1

SOVIET UNION

Soviet Criticism of PRC-India Talks Assailed C 1
Fedorchuk Replacement of Andropov in KGB Noted C 2

NORTHEAST ASIA

Premier Zhao Ziyang To Visit Japan 31 May-5 Jun D 1
PRC-Japanese Trade Progress Summarized D 1
Korean Army Group Feted by Sichuan PLA D 2
Ji Pengfei Receives Nepalese Journalists D 2
Briefs: DPRK Youth Delegation D 2

WESTERN EUROPE

AFP Cites Portuguese Army Chief of Staff on Visit G 1
Chen Muhua, Economic Group Conclude FRG Visit G 1
PRC Army Delegation Concludes Visit to Italy G 2
People's Friendship Delegation Leaves for France G 2
Qiao Shi Meets With Belgian Workers Party Group G 2

EASTERN EUROPE

Wang Zhen Concludes Three-Week Romania Holiday H 1
Meeting With Ceausescu H 1
Departure From Bucharest H 1
Romanian Army Officials Feted in Beijing H 1

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Huang Hua Attends African Liberation Day Fete I 1
PRC Urges Sanctions Against South Africa I 2
Trade Union Delegation Pays Visit to Botswana I 3
PRC Envoy at National Day Function in Cameroon I 3

WESTERN HEMISPHERE

Commentary Urges Falkland Islands Cease-Fire J 1
Youths Leave for Study in U.S., Canada J 2

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

HONGQI Calls for Upholding Banner of Communism [No 10, 16 May] K 1
HONGQI on Basic Principles Guiding Constitution [No 10, 16 May] K 6
GUANGMING RIBAO Discusses Draft Constitution [19 May] K 10
Beijing Releases Former Kuomintang Personnel K 13
State Council Approves Levying Export Duty K 14
Military Commission Honors Air Force Group K 15
Xu Shiyou Discusses Recently Publichsed Memoirs [XINHUA RIBAO 14 May] K 15
Literary Journal KUNLUN To Publish 2d Issue K 16
Beijing Units Report Savings on Transport Costs [CHINA DAILY 28 May] K 16
RENMIN RIBAO Views Fuel Policy for Car Industry [24 May] K 17
RENMIN RIBAO Commentator on Children's Goods [21 May] K 18

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Anhui Radio Urges Action Against Economic Crimes O 1
Zhou Zijian Inspects Anhui Water Project O 1
Jiangxi CCP Committee Holds Work Conference O 2
Shandong People's Congress Holds Session O 3
East Sea Fleet Holds Political Work Conference O 3

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Ren Zhongyi Visits Guangzhou PLA Flood Fighters P 1
Shenzhen Economic Zone To Develop Two More Areas P 1
NANFANG RIBAO on Struggle Against Economic Crime [25 May] P 2
Huang He Flood Control Meeting Held in Henan P 3
Radio Commentary P 3
Hubei Reports Measures To Check 'Three Excesses' P 4
Briefs: Shenzhen Legal Advisory Department P 4

SOUTHWEST REGION

SICHUAN RIBAO on Resistance to Economic Changes [28 May] Q 1
Yin Fatang at Xizang Rally on Economic Crime Q 2
Xizang Convenes Air Defense Work Meeting Q 2

NORTH REGION

Beijing Forum Views Work Against Economic Crimes R 1
Beijing WANBAO on Planned Parenthood Work [11 May] R 2
Hebei People's Congress Committee Meeting Ends R 3
Hebei Conference Discusses Tax Work R 3
Nei Monggol's Zhou Hui on Rural Policies R 4
Zhou Hui Speaks at Industrial Workers Reception R 4

NORTHEAST REGION

Heilongjiang's Yang Yichen at Workers' Rally S 1
Yang Yichen at Nationalities Affairs Conference S 1
Heilongjiang Releases KMT Personnel in Custody S 2
Jilin Releases 66 Former Kuomintang Personnel S 2
Jilin PLA, Militia Urged To Combat Drought S 2
Liaoning Cracks Serious Armed Murder Case S 3
Liaoning Hits Excessive Consumer Goods Imports S 3
[LIAONING RIBAO 16 May]

NORTHWEST REGION

Severe Windstorms, Snow in Gansu Harm Crops T 1
Qinghai Meeting Reports on Economic Situation T 1
Xinjiang Air Force Unit Steps Up Propaganda Work T 2
Briefs: Xinjiang Economic Situation T 2

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

MING PAO: Deng Concerned About Guangdong, Fujian [28 May] W 1
PRC Reportedly Restricts Trade With ROK, Taiwan W 2
[SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST]

PROSPECTS OF USSR-U.S DISARMAMENT TALKS 'GLOOMY'

OW280301 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82

[Commentary from the "International Current Events" program: "Another Marathon Disarmament Meeting -- on the Soviet U.S. Geneva Talks on Limiting Medium-Range Nuclear Weapons in Europe"]

[Excerpts] The Geneva talks between the Soviet Union and the United States on limiting medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe, which began at the end of last November, were resumed on 20 May after an adjournment of about 2 months.

In the past 6 months or so the two nuclear superpowers, the Soviet Union and the United States, have fiercely quarreled inside and outside the conference room in contending for nuclear superiority in Europe. Each has put forward plans aimed at weakening the other and strengthening its own nuclear superiority. Debating endlessly and with neither side willing to compromise, the talks have so far made no progress. Just as pointed out by international public opinion, the Soviet-U.S. Geneva talks, like all East-West disarmament talks, are another marathon meeting, which will be an on-and-off affair and cannot possibly produce any substantive result in a short time.

Shortly before the Geneva talks began, U.S. President Reagan put forward a so-called zero option as the basic U.S. position in the Geneva talks. The zero option proposes that the United States is prepared to cancel its scheduled deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles in West Europe, if the Soviet Union will dismantle its SS-4, SS-5 and SS-20 medium-range missiles. The purpose of this proposal is to weaken the existing Soviet nuclear superiority in Europe.

The Soviet Union is very annoyed by this proposal. In return, the Soviet Union proposes that the East and the West give up all medium-range and tactical nuclear weapons in Europe. The Soviet proposal includes not only U.S. nuclear weapons in European countries but also British and French nuclear forces. Judging by the present balance of military forces between the East and the West in Europe, the Soviet Union is superior in conventional weapons and medium-range nuclear weapons, while the West holds the edge in tactical nuclear weapons, including short-range missiles and bombers. It is obvious that the Soviet proposal is aimed at reducing Western superiority in tactical nuclear weapons.

Because of the serious differences between the two sides, the Geneva talks were adjourned after more than 20 meetings had failed to produce any result. During the adjournment of the talks, the dispute between the Soviet Union and the United States centering on medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe did not stop, but became more heated.

On 16 March, the day before the adjournment of the Geneva talks, Brezhnev dished out a new proposal on a unilateral moratorium on additional deployment of medium-range missiles in Europe. He proposed that if the West cancels deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles in West Europe, the Soviet Union is also prepared to reduce the number of its medium-range missiles. This new Soviet move was still aimed at preventing the United States from deploying new medium-range missiles and preserving its own superiority in medium-range missiles. It naturally was rejected by the United States.

At the end of March the United States made a counterproposal on holding a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting. On 9 May, Reagan put forward a concrete plan for large-scale reduction of nuclear weapons. On 18 May, Brezhnev expressed his hope for the Soviet Union and the United States to begin nuclear arms talks as soon as possible and for both sides to freeze their nuclear weapons when talks begin.

Now, with the Soviet Union waving the banner of moratorium and freeze and the United States flaunting the banner of reduction, a new round of long debate has begun. Resumed under these circumstances, the prospects of the Soviet-U.S. Geneva talks remain very gloomy. As the chief U.S. delegate to the talks put it, the United States and the Soviet Union have not come closer on the key issues.

PRC SWORN IN AS MEMBER OF OLYMPIC COMMITTEE

OW270734 Beijing XINHUA in English 0709 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Rome, May 26 (XINHUA) -- The 85th session of the International Olympic Committee (I.O.C.) met here today.

The four-day session will discuss preparations for the summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles, U.S.A., and the winter Olympic Games in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, in 1984. It will also elect new members of the I.O.C. leading body and discuss other issues related to the Olympic Games.

At the opening ceremony, seven new I.O.C. members, including He Zhenliang of China, Pirjo Haggman of Finland and Flor Isava Fonseca of Venezuela, were sworn in. Pirjo Haggman and Flor Isava Fonseca are the first woman members in the history of the I.O.C. Italian President Alessandro Pertini spoke at the ceremony.

TRADE WITH DEVELOPING COUNTRIES QUADRUPLES

HK270354 Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 27 May 82 p 2

[Special to CHINA DAILY]

[Text] Since 1970 China has rapidly expanded her trade ties with Third World countries. Her total trade volume quadrupled between 1975 and 1980, while her trade with the ASEAN, Middle East, and Latin American countries showed an even faster growth, according to the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade.

It is more than a thousand years since China established trade ties with Southeast Asia, North Africa, and the Middle East. Conditions now are favourable for expanding trade with these countries. China's farm tools, handicrafts, electrical appliances, chemical products, textiles, and other light industrial products are very popular among consumers there. And China is in need of sugar, cotton, natural rubber, ivory and many other products from these countries.

In spite of the distance separating China and Latin America, trade relations have grown rapidly since the 1960's. China has signed trade agreements with nine Latin American countries and is exporting to more than 40 countries and regions there. Her total trade with Latin American countries in 1980 amounted to $1,320 million, of which exports accounted for $480 million and imports $840 million.

As a developing socialist country, China regards it as her duty to support Third World countries in their struggle to establish a new economic world order and to develop their national economies, the ministry said.

To further expand China's economic relations and trade ties with Third World countries, it is necessary to carry out detailed studies of their import needs and their capabilities for export. Multilateral trade may be arranged, if necessary, and export credit will be considered for developing countries with financial difficulties. Various forms of cooperation such as leasing, consultancy, coexploitation of resources, project contracting, and technical cooperation can also be adopted, according to the ministry.

CHINA DAILY ON SUIT AGAINST U.S. OVER CARGO

HK280143 Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 28 May 82 p 1

[By CHINA DAILY staff reporter Xu Yuanchao]

[Text] China has given the United States until June 6 to respond to its demand for compensation for cargo lost when the Japanese freighter Nissho Maru was sunk by the U.S. nuclear submarine George Washington in the East China Sea in April 1981.

The People's Insurance Co. of China and seven Chinese trading corporations filed suit in U.S. Federal District Court in New York last month for almost $4.5 million in compensation.

It was the first time the Chinese have sued the U.S. Government since the founding of the People's Republic in 1949, according to Bruce Beringer, an attorney with the firm of Haight, Gardner, Poor & Havens, which filed the complaint on China's behalf.

"Our company is making efforts to safeguard China's appellant rights. If the U.S. Navy succeeds in having the accusation rejected by the district court, we will appeal to a higher court," a spokesman for the People's Insurance Co. told CHINA DAILY in an interview.

The Chinese cargo aboard the Japanese freighter included U.S. $3.74 million worth of goods and 26 cases of documents concerned with the development of China's Dexing copper mine, which were valued at $750,000.

Last November the U.S. Government paid compensation totaling $2.3 million to the Japanese owner of the Nissho Maru, the familes of the deceased crewmen, and the surviving crewmembers. To date, however, the navy has refused to compensate China because of an alleged lack of reciprocity in Chinese courts for U.S. citizens in a similar situation.

Capt. Richard McCarthy, an attorney in the Judge Advocate General's Office, held that the Chinese had no grounds for seeking relief in a U.S. court, under Section 785 of the Public Vessel Act. The Legal Counsel's Office of the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade (CCPIT) submitted a legal opinion to the navy on February 17, demonstrating the existence of reciprocity.

"If the court of the United States accepts suit brought in it by the Chinese injured party of the present case, whose cargo loss was caused by the fault of a United States vessel, the People's Court of China, under corresponding circumstances, will accept suit brought to it by the American injured party," the opinion stated. But the U.S. Navy rejected that opinion as grounds for establishing reciprocity and has made no other reply up to now.

The insurance company will also appeal to Columbia University School of Law Professor Randall Edwards, an expert in international law who is now paying a visit to China, according to the spokesman.

The U.S. State Department has made an oral promise that if Edwards supports Chinese claims, the U.S. will reconsider its position, the spokesman said.

Besides the People's Insurance Company of China, the other plaintiffs are the China National Technical Import Corp., China National Arts and Crafts Import and Export Corp., China National Textiles Import and Export Corp., China National Light Industrial Products Import and Export Corp., China Resources Textiles Co. Ltd., and China National Packaging Import and Export Corp.

SOVIET CRITICISM OF PRC-INDIA TALKS ASSAILED

OW280831 Beijing in Russian to the USSR 1800 GMT 26 May 82

[Commentary by (Hung Bo), editor of "International Affairs" rubric feature]

[Text] Dear Soviet radio listeners: The second round of talks between PRC and Indian officials was held recently in the Indian capital of New Delhi. As we told you in yesterday's broadcast, both sides at the talks in New Delhi, which were held in a frank and relaxed atmosphere, exchanged views on a wide range of issues, discussed certain governing principles and methods of solving the border problem and discussed questions of cultural, trade and scientific and technical exchanges between the two countries. They have already made progress.

Everyone knows that there was a reversal in PRC-Indian relations at the beginning of the 1960's. Today, 25 years later, these two large Asian countries have sat down at the negotiating table and discussed methods of normalizing unresolved questions between them with the aim of developing friendly relations. This great and worthy event was warmly received by the world public and attracted a lot of attention.

However, Moscow came out with unfounded attacks. When the talks between the PRC and Indian officials began, a TASS observer slanderously asserted that at the talks the PRC was adhering to the logic of an aggressor and even clamored that a fair solution of the border issue would be for the PRC to return occupied lands to India and to renounce territorial claims. The TASS observer's attacks on the PRC have no basis; his aim is to drive a wedge into PRC-Indian relations, which at present are developing and being reestablished.

Today we will ask the editor of the "International Affairs" rubric, (Hung Bo), to tell you about this issue: [Begin recording] Hello, dear Soviet radio listeners. The comrade announcer just mentioned the unfounded attacks on the PRC by a TASS observer. First, I would like you to take into account that the PRC-Indian border has never been fixed. The PRC has never occupied even an inch of Indian lands; therefore, the so-called issue of the PRC's returning occupied lands to India and renouncing territorial claims has never existed.

The PRC and India are two of the world's great countries, with ancient civilizations. Friendly relations have existed between the peoples of the two countries for 2,000 years now. Both the Chinese and Indian peoples have had a bitter past; they have been subjected to aggression from the outside. However, now they are making efforts in building their countries. This is a favorable basis for bringing the peoples of the two countries closer together and for reestablishing and developing relations of friendship and cooperation between the two countries.

In June last year, when PRC Foreign Minister Huang Hua visited India, the governments of the two countries decided to hold talks between their officials to discuss the border issue and find a way for the future improvement of bilateral relations. The first round of talks between officials of the two countries was held in Beijing in December 1981, after which bilateral relations made some positive progress. In PRC-Indian relations, a border issue has been left by history; this is the consequence of imperialist aggression and expansion against China. The PRC-Indian border issue involves a border line of some 2,000 kilometers and an area of some 125,000 square kilometers. Both sides put forward many facts covering historical, geographical, racial, religious, legal and administrative aspects and their own viewpoints in order to resolve the problem. Any prejudiced person would expect to reach an objective conclusion if he would only study the viewpoints and facts put forward by both sides. But the PRC-Indian border issue is a complex issue and both sides believe that there can be no quick solution.

Nevertheless, both sides have expressed willingness to try to find a way of resolving the problem in the future.

Today, while the PRC and India are making efforts to improve relations, a TASS observer concocts an absurd story, licentiously sowing discord between the PRC and India and allowing himself to play the role of shameful instigator. This only shows how low the Soviet ruling clique has sunk. The PRC-Indian talks, which are held to improve relations, are the affair of these two countries. It should be of no concern to any third party. But attacking one side to please the other has been a habitual and clumsy trick of the Soviet rulers. The question arises: What is the TASS observer's purpose? Could it be that he wants India to dance to his tune? But India is an independent and sovereign country; it knows what it should do and will not dance to another's tune. Or is it possible that this observer wants to influence the PRC? This is an even wilder dream.

Everytime something happens in the international arena, the Soviet ruling clique, invariably implementing its great-power chauvinism and hegemonism, tries to brandish its scepter and give orders to others. This has become a conditioned reflex so it would not be inappropriate to tell the Soviet ruling clique: You are losing your prestige in Third World countries and your scepter already lost its strength long ago.

The normalization of PRC-Indian relations is beneficial to peace and stability in Asia and the world. However, while the second round of PRC-Indian talks was going on, the TASS observer, going against the hopes of the Chinese and Indian peoples and putting himself in opposition to world public opinion, gave orders left and right, trying to drive a wedge into PRC-Indian relations and to undermine the friendship between them. This shows that the Soviet ruling clique fears that an improvement in relations between the PRC and India, two large Asian countries, will greatly influence peace and stability in Asia and the world and become an obstacle to the implementation of its strategy of southward expansion and the furthering of its hegemonistic policy.

It is worth recalling at this point that the Kremlin regards the improvement of Indian-Pakistani relations with the same gloomy attitude. In order to lay claim to world hegemony, the Soviet Union tries to create all kinds of discords and contradictions among countries to extract advantages for itself. But this time it is sadly mistaken; nothing will come of it. [end recording]

FEDORCHUK REPLACEMENT OF ANDROPOV IN KGB NOTED

OW270736 Beijing XINHUA in English 0716 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Moscow, May 26 (XINHUA) -- General Vitaliy Fedorchuk has replaced Yuriy Andropov as chairman of the Soviet Committee of State Security (KGB), it was reported here today. The decision was made by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the report said.

Fedorchuk was born in 1918 and graduated from a high institute affiliated to the KGB. He became the Ukrainian KGB chief in 1970 and Politburo member of the Ukrainian party Central Committee in 1976.

Andropov was elected a secretary of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party at its plenary session on May 24.

PREMIER ZHAO ZIYANG TO VISIT JAPAN 31 MAY-5 JUN

OW271146 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1131 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 27 May (XINHUA) -- Upon invitation of the Japanese Government, Premier of the PRC State Council Zhao Ziyang will pay an official visit to Japan from 31 May to 5 June.

PRC-JAPANESE TRADE PROGRESS SUMMARIZED

OW280139 Beijing XINHUA in English 0118 GMT 28 May 82

[Round-up: Sino-Japanese Economic Cooperation Marks Steady Progress -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] Tokyo, May 28 (XINHUA) -- The total value of trade between China and Japan in 1981 reached 10 billion U.S. dollars, 10 times the 1971 value. This steady progress is a result of normalization of relations between the countries in 1972, the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty, and a long-term trade agreement signed in 1978.

Trade between the countries is usually conducted on the principle of equality, mutual benefit and supplying each other's needs. It includes cooperative enterprises, compensation trade and material processing. China has provided Japan with crude oil, coal and other energy resources, foodstuffs, cooking oil and other Chinese products. Japan has supplied China with engineering equipment, construction materials, steel, chemical ferlilizer and industrial chemicals.

Moreover, the General Administration of Civil Aviation of China (CAAC) has 17 weekly scheduled flights to Japan, and Japan Air Lines (JAL) has 10 weekly flights to China. When China and Japan signed an aviation agreement in 1974, only two weekly scheduled flights were scheduled from each country.

Containerized shipping has begun between the two countries, and negotiations are underway to open a regular ocean shipping line.

Sino-Japanese cooperation in industrial and mining production has made much headway. One of the major projects is cooperation in exploiting Chinese resources and energy. China and Japan have either reached agreements or are negotiating cooperations to exploit Chinese coal, natural gas and copper, to construct hydropower stations and to reserach new energy sources.

Since 1979, Japan has provided loans to China with favorable terms. Most of the loans have been used for constructing railways, ports, coal mines and projects with equipment imported from Japan.

Some of the Sino-Japanese joint-venture enterprises have opened business either in China or in Japan. For the promotion of such enterprises, the two countries have begun final negotiations on land taxes and other levies and on investment guarantees.

At a meeting held in late 1981, China and Japan stressed the need to link the strengthening of economic cooperation and bilateral cooperation with strategic and long-term interests.

Presently, the two countries are actively exploring new methods of cooperation, and Sino-Japanese economic cooperation should have a prosperous future. As Premier Zhao Ziyang told Japanese journalists on May 14 in Beijing: "In the present turbulent international situation, China and Japan should endeavor to establish and develop long-standing and stable relations of friendship and cooperation which will not be affected by international storms. This is of great significance to our two countries, and it will also exert far-reaching influence on peace in Asia and the world."

KOREAN ARMY GROUP FETED BY SICHUAN PLA

HK270517 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 27 May 82

[Summary] A Korean People's Army friendship delegation arrived in Chengdu from Xian on 25 May. Chengdu PLA units commander You Taizhong gave a banquet for them the same evening. During their stay in Chengdu the Korean guests visited the Emei machinery plant and various scenic spots. The delegation left by plane for Hangzhou on 26 May.

JI PENGFEI RECEIVES NEPALESE JOURNALISTS

OW241634 Beijing XINHUA in English 1509 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 24 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Ji Pengfei met this afternoon with a Nepalese journalists delegation led by Manju Ratna Sakya, president of the Nepal Journalist Association. Sundar N. Bhattarai, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Nepalese Embassy in Beijing was present.

The Nepalese guests arrived May 21 at the invitation of the All-China Journalists' Association.

BRIEFS

DPRK YOUTH DELEGATION -- Beijing, 11 May (XINHUA) -- Han Ying, first secretary of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Youth League, gave a banquet here this evening in honor of a delegation from the Socialist Working Youth League of Korea led by Pak Chong-sung, vice chairman of its Central Committee. The delegation arrived here this morning as guests of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Youth League. [Text] [Beijing XINHUA in English 1652 GMT 11 May 82 OW]

AFP CITES PORTUGUESE ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF ON VISIT

OW271618 Hong Kong AFP in English 1536 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpt] Hong Kong, 27 May (AFP) -- Chinese Army Chief of Staff General Yang Dezhi has accepted an invitation to visit Portugal, a founder member of NATO, in line with China's state policy of strengthening its links with Europe and "helping to defend world peace". The date of General Yang's trip to Europe has yet to be fixed, said Portuguese Army Chief of Staff General Melo Egidio in an exclusive interview with AFP today shortly before his departure for home after a 12-day China visit.

In his "very interesting" two-hour talks with General Egidio in Beijing on world situation and strategy, Chinese Defense Minister Geng Biao has told him that the threat to world peace would come from "imperialism and hegemonism", meaning, in the Chinese political vocabulary, the United States and the Soviet Union.

General Egidio who also had an hour-long talk with Chinese Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang, said the Chinese leaders, in favor of NATO, would like to see a "Europe with greater (?unity) and capabilities" to defend world peace. He confirmed that Chinese leaders had expressed a "willingness" to enhance closer links with NATO countries, [words indistinct] the United States.

At the head of a four-member Portuguese military delegation, General Egidio had seen Chinese [word indistinct] and tank units carry out maneouvres in Beijing and boarded Chinese warships in Shanghai. The general said the Chinese arms industry had [word indistinct] rapidly and turning out more weapons on the basic principle of "self-reliance" while striving to modernize all the three (?branches). He would (?not) say what types of weapons China has been producing, but he said the military aircraft, tanks, warships, guns and rifles he saw in maneouvres had been Chinese-made.

Weapons apart, General Egidio said, "(?the) main factor in any armed forces is still the human factor on which depends the efficiency of armed forces, and that's where the strength of the Chinese army lies." If weapons are only as good as the troops that use them, the Chinese armymen certainly impressed General Egidio with their exercises in (?light, medium and heavy) artillery, which were "very well executed with great precision."

As the first foreign military delegation allowed to visit a Chinese infantry school in Shijiazhuang, 240 kilometres (150 miles) south of Beijing, General Egidio and his colleagues came away deeply impressed with "the extremely good level of (?troop) training which would ensure the quality of any armed forces."

The Portuguese (?Army) leader was enthusiastic about "the exceptional manner" in which the (?Chinese had) received his country's military delegation. He said: "This indicates that our visit to China has contributed to the strengthening [word indistinct] not only between the two armed (?forces but) much more importantly, between the two countries and the two people."

CHEN MUHUA, ECONOMIC GROUP CONCLUDE FRG VISIT

OW261932 Beijing XINHUA in English 1923 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Bonn, May 26 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese Government economic delegation headed by Chen Muhua, state councillor and minister for economic and trade relations with foreign countries, left Frankfurt for home today after a ten-day visit to the Federal Republic of Germany. West German Federal Minister of Economics Otto Graf Lambsdorff and Chinese Ambassador Zhang Tong saw the delegation off at the airport. The delegation arrived in West German on May 16 and attended the second meeting of the mixed commission of economic cooperation between the two countries. It met with the chancellors of Bavaria and Baden-Wuerttemberg on May 20 and 21 respectively, and exchanged views with them on economic cooperation. During its stay in West Germany, the Chinese delegation also visited North Rhine-Westphalia and other places, and had frank and comprehensive discussions with economic circles on closer trade and economic cooperation between China and West Germany.

PRC ARMY DELEGATION CONCLUDES VISIT TO ITALY

OW271656 Beijing XINHUA in English 1526 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Rome, May 27 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese army delegation headed by Deputy General Chief of Staff Wu Xiuquan today left here for Austria after concluding a nine-day visit to Italy.

Attending a farewell banquet given by Wu at the Chinese Embassy here Wednesday were Italian Defense Chief of Staff Vittorio Santini and his wife, Deputy Defense Secretary General Martini, Deputy Secretary General of the Navy Pellini and other high-ranking officers.

During its visit here, the delegation held talks with Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio, Santini and other high-ranking officers. Views on the current international situation and military cooperations between the two countries were exchanged during the talks.

PEOPLE'S FRIENDSHIP DELEGATION LEAVES FOR FRANCE

OW270205 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1633 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 25 May (XINHUA) -- At the invitation of the France-China Friendship Association, the delegation of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries headed by Xie Bangding, vice president of the association, left Beijing for France by plane on the evening of 25 May for a friendly visit.

QIAO SHI MEETS WITH BELGIAN WORKERS PARTY GROUP

OW251945 Beijing XINHUA in English 1528 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- Qiao Shi, head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, met and had a cordial conversation here this evening with a delegation from the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Belgium led by Ludo Martens and Patriek Debosere, chairman and member of the Central Committee of the Party. Later, Qiao Shi hosted a dinner for the delegation. Qian Liren, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, was present.

The Belgian delegation arrived in China May 6 at the invitation of the department. The guests toured Beijing, Chengdu, Lhasa, Chongqing, Yichang and Wuhan and left Beijing for home this evening.

WANG ZHEN CONCLUDES THREE-WEEK ROMANIA HOLIDAY

Meeting With Ceausescu

OW271843 Beijing XINHUA in English 1837 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Bucharest, May 27 (XINHUA) -- President Nicolae Ceausescu stressed today his great satisfaction with the result of his recent visit to China.

Ceausescu, who is also general secretary of the Romanian Communist Party, said the understanding and agreements reached during the visit have laid the foundation for the further development of the very friendly relations between the two parties and the two peoples. He made the remarks when he received and had a cordial conversation with Wang Zhen, member of the Political Bureau and the Standing Committee of the Military Commission of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party.

On Romania's internal situation, President Ceausescu said Romania has made some achievements in the past years, but has also met with some problems and difficulties. The Communist Party and the people are doing their utmost to fulfill the development program set forth by the 12th party congress. In this respect, he said, Romania's cooperation with the socialist countries, China in particular, plays an important role.

Wang Zhen praised Romania for its achievements in national construction and its important role in international life. He also pointed out the bright prospects of Sino-Romanian economic cooperation.

Departure From Bucharest

OW280738 Beijing XINHUA in English 0700 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Bucharest, May 27 (XINHUA) -- Wang Zhen, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, left here for home after a three-week holiday and visit to Romania.

Wang is also member of the standing committee of the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee and president of the party school of the CCP Central Committee. He was seen off at the airport by C. Olteanu, alternate member of the Executive Committee of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Romanian Communist Party and minister of national defence.

Wang Zhen and his party visited industrial, agricultural, social and cultural projects in Bucharest and other three counties and toured several military schools to see the training of military officers in Romania. He also held talks on the education and training of party and government functionaries with Dumitru Popescu, member of the executive committee of the R.C.P. Central Committee and rector of the Stefan Gheorghiu academy for training leading cadres in charge of party affairs.

ROMANIAN ARMY OFFICIALS FETED IN BEIJING

OW251943 Beijing XINHUA in English 1553 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- A banquet in honor of a group of vacationing Romanian military officials led by General Dumitru Rosu was given here this evening by Liu Huaqing, deputy chief of General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army. Hosts and guests toasted to the continuous development of friendship between the two parties, the two peoples and the armed forces of the two countries.

Also present at the banquet were Xu Xin, assistant to the chief of the P.L.A. General Staff, Li Zhongxuan, deputy commander of the P.L.A. Beijing units and political commissar of the Beijing garrison; and Romanian Ambassador to China Florea Dumitrescu and Mrs. Dumitrescu.

The Romanian visitors arrived here yesterday at the invitation of the Chinese Ministry of National Defense.

HUANG HUA ATTENDS AFRICAN LIBERATION DAY FETE

OW251840 Beijing XINHUA in English 1636 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- African Liberation Day was marked here today at a reception given by diplomatic envoys of the African countries to China. State Councillor and Minister of Foreign Affairs Huang Hua was present on invitation.

Abderrahim Harkett, dean of the African diplomatic corps and Morocco ambassador to China, delivered a speech at the reception. He said: "The African continent, in spite of difficultues, pursues its struggle for total liberation from the colonial and racist yoke, furnished efforts to preserve its unity, its sovereignty, its independence and as well as to fight against under-development."

He said: "The peoples of Africa have a strong hope that, thanks to their maturity and their wisdom, our leaders will persevere in looking for African solutions in order to preserve our unity and our cohesion, to keep us outside international rivalries and find solutions to our disputes. This will enable Africa to pursue its battle against colonialism, racism and apartheid, to devote its energies and resources to the fight against economic under-development, as also to ensure the coordination of the efforts of the African states in order to develop their cooperation in the fields of communal interest."

Referring to the situation in South Africa, Harkett said: "We express all our solidarity to the heroic people of Namibia in their fight for total independence and territorial integrity. We declare, once again, that the modalities of accession to independence with Resolution 435 of the Security Council, with the decisions of the Organisation of African Unity and non-aligned countries, and this so as to comply with the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people."

"In its battle for total liberation, the African continent has won victories thanks to the sacrifices made by African freedom-fighters, but we should not forget the previous assistance of friendly, peace and justice-loving peoples", he said.

"The People's Republic of China and the Chinese people have always granted an effective support to the African liberation movements as well as their disinterested assistance to African countries for the development of their national economy," he said. "The Government of the People's Republic of China endeavors to defend in international meetings the African cause and that of Third-World countries fighting for a more just and better balanced, new international economic order."

Huang Hua said: "Over the past 19 years, the heroic African people, inspired by the charter of the Organization of African Unity, have fought in unison against the common enemy, smashed the shackles of the colonial rule and frustrated interference by outside forces, thus winning great victories in the cause of achieving and consolidating national independence."

Referring to the Namibian People's struggle for national independence, Huang Hua said: "However desperately the South African racist regime may struggle for survival, it cannot block the progress of history. It is bound to fail provided that the Namibian people, in close unity with other African countries and people, persist in unity and struggle. The day is not far off when the entire African continent will win complete independence and liberation.

He said: "Following the attainment of political independence, the people in various African countries have devoted themselves to the economic development and construction of their countries and improving their own living standard. They are striving for economic independence so as to consolidate their political independence." "The African countries have laid emphasis upon collective self-reliance, continuously intensified the regional economic and trade cooperation and waged, together with other developing countries, unremitting struggles for the establishment of a new international economic order."

He believed that so long as the African countries strengthen their unity and cooperation, make full use of the rich resources in Africa, give play to the favourable natural conditions in Africa, mobilize all the positive factors in society, supply each other with needed goods and learn from each other the strong points to make up for their own deficiencies, they will certainly turn Africa into a prosperous new continent.

He said: "China and African countries had similar experience in the past and are faced with the common task of economic development. Our hearts are linked together." He reiterated: "The Chinese Government and people will, as always, firmly stand on the side of the African countries and peoples. We will learn from each other and work shoulder to shoulder for human progress and world peace."

Also present at the reception today were leaders from various ministries under the State Council, the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries, Beijing Municipality and the Chinese Islamic Association.

PRC URGES SANCTIONS AGAINST SOUTH AFRICA

OW241840 Beijing XINHUA in English 1830 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Manila, May 24 (XINHUA) -- Ho Liliang, head of the Chinese delegation to the Asian regional conference on action against apartheid, today called for "comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa." The conference opened this morning at the Philippine International Convention Center in Manila.

In her speech at the conference, Ho Liliang reviewed the Chinese Government's policy on southern Africa during the past more than 30 years and reiterated the following guidelines:

-- Condemn the policy of apartheid and racial discrimination pursued by the South African authorities and firmly support the South African people's struggle for national liberation.

-- Condemn the South African authorities for their illegal occupation of Namibia and firmly support the struggle of the Namibian people for national self-determination, freedom and independence.

-- Condemn the South African authorities for their military invasion of neighboring independent African countries and firmly support these countries' struggle for the preservation of their sovereignty.

-- Stand for the application of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

-- Consistently refuse to have any direct or indirect contact with the South African authorities in the political, economic, military, diplomatic and other fields.

"We are firmly opposed to any collusion, military collusion in particular, between the Pretoria racist regime and the Taiwan authorities, and regard such collusion as a provocation to the Chinese people and the people of Africa," she added. She proposed that the conference adopt a forceful declaration against apartheid of the South African authorities.

The Asian regional conference on action against apartheid is held in accordance with a U.N. resolution adopted last year, proclaiming 1982 as the international year of mobilization for sanctions against South Africa.

Attending the 3-day conference are delegations from Asian countries and representatives of various international and non-governmental organizations, totaling some 2,000 people.

TRADE UNION DELEGATION PAYS VISIT TO BOTSWANA

OW270818 Beijing XINHUA in English 0744 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Gaborone, May 26 (XINHUA) -- Botswana President Quett Masire received here this afternoon a visiting Chinese trade union delegation led by Chen Yu, vice president of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions. He had a cordial talk with the Chinese guests. Chinese Ambassador to Botswana Wang Rensan was present.

Botswana Minister of Home Affairs K.L. Disele received the delegation yesterday. The Chinese delegation also exchanged views with the host Botswana Federation of Trade Unions. Ambassador Wang Rensan gave a reception this evening in honour of the delegation. Minister of Home Affairs K.L. Disele and chiefs as well as leaders of the Botswana trade unions were present. The Chinese trade unionists had visited farms, a diamond mine, a meat company and places of interest. The delegation, which arrived here on May 19, will leave for Nigeria tomorrow.

PRC ENVOY AT NATIONAL DAY FUNCTION IN CAMEROON

OW211257 Beijing XINHUA in English 1241 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Yaounde, May 20 (XINHUA) -- A grand military parade was held here today to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the founding of the United Republic of Cameroon. President Ahmadou Ahidjo presided over and reviewed the parade on Independence Avenue. Members of the navy, army, air force and police marched past the reviewing stand. This was followed by a procession of the masses in their holiday best and carrying banners and placards with the inscription: "Unity of the people is the guarantee of the development of the nation."

Attending today's celebration were delegations from 16 countries, including a Chinese Government delegation headed by Dai Nianci, vice-minister of urban and rural construction and environmental protection.

Cameroon proclaimed independence in 1960 and the united republic was founded on May 20, 1972. The day was declared the country's National Day.

COMMENTARY URGES FALKLAND ISLANDS CEASE-FIRE

OW271320 Beijing XINHUA in English 1249 GMT 27 May 82

[Commentary: Immediate Ceasefire Is Top Priority -- by Correspondent Yu Minsheng" -- XINHUA headline]

[Text] United Nations, May 26 (XINHUA) -- United Nations Security Council Resolution 505 adopted today requests the U.N. secretary general to resume his mission of mediating the Malvinas dispute.

The resolution, the result of six days of hectic negotiations and consultation inside and outside the Security Council meeting, asks Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to contact the British and the Argentines at once to reach an agreement on ceasefire through negotiations and end the hostilities on the Malvinas Islands.

The resolution, though imperfect, shows the strong desire of the great majority of nations for a peaceful settlement of the Malvinas issue. It has created conditions for bringing about a ceasefire, renewing negotiations and enabling the secretary general to continue his peace efforts.

The peace mission of the secretary general ended in failure on May 20. The following day, British Marines landed in the islands en masse. In the past week, the military conflict between Britain and Argentina has been escalating. The situation in the South Atlantic has been deteriorating drastically which has caused anxiety and uneasiness among the various countries. The Security Council met for six days running to seek a solution to the crisis. Argentina and Britain were urged to cease fire immediately and return to the negotiating table while the Security Council was asked to authorize the secretary-general to resume his mediation. This is the common desire of most participants of the meeting. And today's resolution is the outcome of their common efforts made in the past few days.

The representatives of most countries ardently hoped in their speeches that the two sides would stop firing at once. But it was learnt that Britain was unwilling to accept ceasefire as a precondition for negotiations. Therefore, the resolution did not stress the important problem of immediate ceasefire. However, it was believed, only immediate ceasefire could create the condition for peaceful negotiations and prevent the Malvinas crisis from continuing to escalate. Any military escalation will make the situation in the South Atlantic deteriorate further and become more complicated. This will be unfavorable not only to peace in Britain, Argentina and the South Atlantic area but also to peace and stability in the world.

Representatives of many countries spoke highly of the peace efforts made by the secretary-general over the past two weeks and urged Argentina and Britain to conduct further negotiations on the basis of the agreements already reached. To this, however, Britain disagreed, saying that it disapproved of some of the agreements (for example, simultaneous withdrawal of troops by both sides and the establishment of a U.N. administrative organ), and insisted that further negotiations with the help of the secretary-general should be started from the "zero point". In fact, it will be pointless for the secretary-general to make further efforts if the achievements of his previous endeavours for peace are not mentioned at all.

The situation in the South Atlantic is deteriorating constantly. The most pressing step now is an immediate ceasefire and return to the negotiating table.

YOUTHS LEAVE FOR STUDY IN U.S., CANADA

OW230714 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0212 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Urumqi, 22 May (XINHUA) -- Four youths of the Xinjiang production and construction corps engaged in supporting border construction work recently left for the United States and Canada for further study. Prior to this, nine youths engaged in supporting border construction work were selected one after another to study or go on an investigation tour abroad.

All these youths came to Xinjiang from Shanghai, Tianjin or Wuhan in the early 1960's. Among these youths are farming machinery operators, repairmen, farmhands and drilling machine operators. While engaged in construction work in border areas, they persisted in studying by themselves assiduously and had acquired certain technological expertise and practical experience in production work. Before studying abroad, they had to pass strict examinations and screening by the departments concerned.

Among the first two groups of youths dispatched to study abroad were Bai Zhengguo and Song Malie from Tianjin and Zhuang Jun from Shanghai. As they had achieved outstanding academic records, they were invited by farm owners of the host countries to stay on their farms at high salaries and were promised that arrangements would be made for their family members to settle down with them. However, they turned down the invitation because of their attachment to the motherland.

HONGQI CALLS FOR UPHOLDING BANNER OF COMMUNISM

HK280829 Beijing HONGQI in Chinese No 10, 16 May 82 pp 2-6

[Article by HONGQI editorial department: "Our Banner Is Communism"]

[Text] Recently, the facts of numerous illegalities and crimes in the economic field have told us that we are facing a serious struggle under new conditions between capitalist ideological corruption and socialist ideological opposition to corruption. This struggle is protracted. All communists and party cadres will have to stand up to new, rigid tests repeatedly during the struggle.

The Central Committee of the Chinese Community Party has pointed out solemnly to the whole party: We must persist in the party's policy of pursuing open policies toward foreign countries and flexible economic policies domestically to speed up our socialist modernization; while at the same time we must persist in carrying on the struggle against corrosion by bourgeois ideology and uphold the communist integrity of our party forever. All members and cadres of our party must firmly remember the fundamental aim of our party to serve the people wholeheartedly, the eventual aim of our party to realize the lofty ideal of communism, and the fundamental nature of our party as the vanguard of the working class. Should any member or cadre of the party waver on this fundamental point, he certainly has been affected by the corruptive bourgeois ideology. If he refuses to repent, he is not qualified to be a Communist Party member and is betraying the communist cause.

Communism means, in the first instance, the social system of communism, and, in the second instance, the communist movement under the guidance of the communist ideological system. We have conducted the communist movement organizationally and with political programs in China ever since the founding of the party. We have completed the task of the new democratic revolution, the task of the socialist transformation of the ownership of the means of production, begun socialist construction on a hugh scale and entered a new historical period of all-round socialist modernization. We have also completed the tasks of a few historical stages in the communist movement. What we are embarking on now is no longer a communist movement in an ordinary sense, which means that the proletariat has not yet won its revolution, has not yet seized political power and has not yet become the ruling class. We are now conducting a communist movement after we have already set up a socialist system, that is, the first stage of the communist system. We, members of the CCP and party cadres, should be proud of this.

Our tasks of revolution are far from having been accomplished. This was clearly pointed out in the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC": "In firmly correcting the mistake of the so-called 'continuous revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat,' a slogan which was advanced during the 'Great Cultural Revolution' and which called for the overthrow of one class by another, we absolutely do not mean that the tasks of the revolution have been accomplished and that there is no need to carry on revolutionary struggles with determination. Socialism aims not just at eliminating all systems of exploitation and all exploiting classes but also at greatly expanding the productive forces, improving and developing the socialist relations of production and the superstructure and, on this basis, gradually eliminating all class differences and all major social distinctions and inequalities which are chiefly due to the inadequate development of the productive forces until communism is finally realized. This is a great revolution, unprecedented in human history." While working at their posts, all party members and cadres must contribute their due share toward this great revolutionary movement.

If the communist movement is to advance continuously and to win victories, our party must conduct communist ideological education among the various nationalities of the whole country, but first of all, among party members and cadres.

Party members, especially party cadres, should carry on their work with communist spirit. They should shape their words and deeds to communist thinking and morality. Some comrades maintain that we are now in a socialist society, so we should promote only socialist morality and should not promote communist morality. This is wrong. In the stage of the new democratic revolution, Comrade Mao Zedong put forth the need to publicize communist thinking and Comrade Liu Shaoqi also proposed that communists should have communist morality. Why should communist morality not be advocated in a socialist society? It is true that in a socialist society, the consumer goods should be allocated to the laborers according to the principle of from each according to his ability and to each according to his work. We must continuously implement this principle, improve it while carrying out the policies, and overcome the malady of egaliterianism. However, in implementing this principle, we do not reject the communist attitude toward labor. On the contrary, it is necessary to encourage the people to adopt this attitude. In particular, the party members and cadres should be encouraged to actively participate in voluntary, unpaid labor without fixed quotas.

As a matter of fact, many members in our party, as well as many model workers and other advanced persons in our country are engaging in noble communist labor every day, every month and every year. There is no contradiction between upholding the principle of to each according to his work and advocating the communist attitude toward labor. They supplement each other. Advocating the communist attitude toward labor and the application of communist morality in handling the social relationships of various forms will not hinder the implementation of the system of to each according to his work and the implementation of the various social policies at the present stage of socialism, but will generate an indispensable force to promote such implementation. These precious communist elements in socialist society are significant in resisting corrosion by capitalist ideology, enhancing enthusiasm and creativeness of the working people and promoting healthy development of socialist modernization.

Every member of the party joins the party voluntarily. That is, beginning with the day he takes the oath to join the party, he has pledged his determination to struggle all his life for the realization of communism and to submit consciously to the restraint of party discipline. This voluntariness includes the determination to abandon all things harmful to the interests of the party and to sacrifice his life when he is required to do so. Every party member should correctly handle the relationship between discipline and creativeness. The two coincide if observed from the communist ideological perspective. Our proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation and our martyrs set examples in many ways. Comrade Zhou Enlai was a good example. All his life he seldom acted in his own way. He did whatever the party assigned him to do, and did it assiduously. He achieved great success in what he did. Some of our comrades hold that the presentation of the four basic principles would prevent the emancipation of the mind and the development of creativeness and subsequently they did not dare to think, speak and act. For party members, the emancipation of their minds, the development of their creativeness, and their daring to think, speak and act should not deviate from the guidance of communist ideology. If we separate emancipation of the mind, creativeness and daring to think, speak and act from Marxist theory, we shall be deviating from the principled stand of Communist Party members and shall invariably sink into the quagmire of bourgeois ideology.

Historical lessons merit attention. During the "Great Cultural Revolution," the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques assumed the ultraleftist outlook, or rather, came from the ultraleft to sabotage our party's communist movement, thereby greatly impairing the nature of our party as the vanguard force of the working class and the communist integrity of our party members. Their pernicious influence is far from being completely wiped out and is corroding some people. For example, the said that "when one is in power, one will have everything." This viewpoint was very harmful.

Upholding this wrong viewpoint, some people expressed the filthiest things in their innermost being by a theoretical form, so as to provide a "theoretical basis" for all their filthy activities which deviated from the principle of party spirit. Incited by this wrong viewpoint, some adventurers, speculators and dregs of society came from the top downward, from the bottom upward and from every direction to establish ties to seize power from the old revolutionaries, veteran cadres and party members. Before the "Great Cultural Revolution," some comrades inside our party sometimes showed individualism but, more often than not, they told themselves that individualism was undesirable and, therefore, dared not show it to the party organization. However, during the "Great Cultural Revolution," abetted by the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques, individualism swelled to a serious extent. If I do not like the look of you, I shall shove you to the ground; it is better for me to hold power than you; my faction will take a share proportionate to its strength; I want to hold open negotiations and have a showdown. These deeds completely bared some people's filthy innermost being. Even up to the present, some people regard anarchism and extreme individualism as something natural. They regard them with pride instead of shame. This historical lesson shows how important it is for party members and cadres to maintain their communist integrity.

Since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee, a series of social policies have been adopted under new conditions. For instance, externally, we have introduced the open policies of taking in foreign capital, running joint ventures with foreign capital, processing materials for foreign businessmen, carrying out compensatory trade and conducting business in labor cooperation. Internally, we have adopted flexible economic policies. For example, we will permit the various forms of economic undertakings and business management to exist for a long time under the precondition of giving absolute superiority to socialist public ownership; in the countryside, we have instituted various forms of the production responsibility system, developed a diversified economy, expanded the acreage of land for personal needs and opened trade fairs; in the cities and towns, we have carried out the economic responsibility system and developed the collective economy; with regard to financial policy, the localities are allowed to "eat in separate kitchens" and the enterprises are allowed to retain a portion of their profits and restore the bonus system; and many other social policies have been adopted. Practice has proved that these policies are essential, correct and effective. We must uphold these policies and make further efforts to implement and perfect them. However, we should see that, due to domestic factors and international influence, class struggle still exists in China to a certain extent. The present campaign against serious criminal activities in the economic filed is an important manifestation of class struggle in the economic field. Class enemies at home and abroad are trying by every possible means to sabotage our socialist modernization and disrupt our communist movement. The criminals who engage in smuggling, trading in smuggled goods, giving and taking bribes, speculation and cheating, and who seek private gain at public expense and take forcible possession of state property, have gone to an unbearable extent in shamelessly devising all possible means to achieve their ends. Capitalists make reckless moves in pursuit of profit; they dare to commit any crime, and even risk the gallows. What difference is there between capitalists like this and the elements in our country who commit serious crimes in the economic field? Is there any socialist road in these people's minds? Is there any communism there? Is there any patriotism? Is there any national dignity? Is there any national and personal moral character? There is not a trace of these things!

The realities at present show more clearly that it is extremely important for party members to maintain their communist integrity. To do so, they must carry out the struggle between the two fronts. They must wipe out the pernicious influence of the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing cliques and of the "leftist" ideas. They must also combat bourgeois liberalization and particularly at present combat corrosion by capitalist ideas.

We must have all-round, clear understanding about the various aspects of the corrosion of the party organizations, party members and cadres. As a whole, the CCP is good and has combat effectiveness.

During the period from the third plenary session to the sixth plenary session, we had already accomplished the historical task of setting the guiding ideology to rights, reiterated and established the Marxist ideological, political and organizational lines, formulated and carried out a series of correct principles and policies for dealing with domestic and foreign affairs and won remarkable success. The political maturity of our party Central Committee and, in particular, its Marxist leadership level shown in the socialist modernization which has been carried out according to the national conditions, have been recognized by all outside and inside the party and have attracted worldwide attention. Our faith in this point should never waver.

However, we should also see the other aspects. First, communist ideology has weakened in varying degrees in the minds of a very few old party members and old cadres. As for some of them, their ideal of and faith in communism wavered because the party's guiding ideology had been erroneous for some time or because the state had met serious difficulties. Others were poisoned by the fallacy that "power will be invalid after the specified date" as professed by the "gang of four" so that after being reinstated, they forgot their original intention of fighting their whole lives for communism and became intent on seeking personal interests for their sons and daughters. Second, the many young party members who joined during the "Great Cultural Revolution" lacked education in the basic knowledge of communism, and some of them joined the party as speculators. These two conditions gave rise to some unsteady elements in our ranks of party members and party cadres. Corruptive bourgeois ideology can be disseminated in the party through these unsteady elements. Some of them have actually been hit by the "sugar-coated bullets" of the bourgeoisie and have taken the road to decadence and degeneracy.

At present, our party is facing many new problems and new tasks in the ideological, political and organizational fields which we have to scrutinize and solve in the light of communist ideology.

Our party has been emphasizing the emancipation of the mind since the 3d plenary session of its 11th Central Committee. Emancipation of the mind means making our thinking and understanding tally with objective reality. At that time, it was aimed mainly at shaking off the long-term yoke of "leftist" ideas, for our cause would not advance if this yoke were not removed. The profound and lasting significance of the emancipation of the mind should in no way be underestimated. At the moment, some people have not completely shaken off the yoke of "leftist" ideas. Yet it should be soberly realized that at the same time corrosion by capitalist thinking is becoming increasingly serious. This can be shown by the fact that the ideas of bourgeois liberalization have spread unchecked. The Central Committee of the party has always been explicit about the meaning of emancipation of the mind. It has been clearly elucidated and repeatedly stressed in the relevant documents of the party Central Committee and the speeches delivered by leading comrades at the central level that emancipation of the mind means seeking truth from facts. Yet, this slogan "emancipate the mind" has actually encountered boycott from the "left" and distortion from the right.

In recent years, we have been increasingly expanding our academic exchanges with foreign countries. We have absorbed good managerial experience and advanced science and technology from other countries and have gained knowledge in academic fields from the outside world that we did not have in the past. We have widened our field of vision and have broadened our mental horizon. This should be affirmed. But, we must also admit that in the course of academic exchanges, certain comrades, due to lack of thorough understanding and study, are short of scientific analysis of certain foreign things. Some people are writing articles and making speeches blindly publicizing ideas which had already been criticized by Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin in their times. Certain ideological trends which are in vogue in the West, such as existentialism, are viewed with much interest by some of our younger people. Some young people are indeed groping for knowledge, but in general they lack the theoretical preparation of Marxism. Because the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing counterrevolutionary cliques had left our country in a terrible state, the socialist system was damaged, the party's image was impaired and the problems which were left behind could not be solved at one blow.

In this situation, the young people who lack the theoretical preparation of Marxism and do not know the histories of our party and state lost their confidence in Marxism and the socialist system. They felt that they had found a new way out once they contacted the Western ideological trends. Therefore, if we are to uphold the party's correct principles on the ideological front, we should, while criticizing "leftist" things, adopt a Marxist attitude toward certain prevalent Western ideological trends, analytically point out their rational parts and make convincing criticisms against the parts which are erroneous.

The proletariat is the most revolutionary class and is the most adept in learning. We must not only study Marxism but also learn from all foreign countries the things which are useful to us. But, the class and the people whom our party represents do not permit us to alter and weaken our party's nature as the vanguard force of the working class and our faith and trust in communism. They do not permit the party members to be corroded by capitalist ideology. On the contrary, they invariably demand that the party members preserve their communist integrity, that we uphold the party's fine traditions and that we persist in putting the communist thinking in a ruling position in the ideological sphere.

In the past 60 years and more, our party took a tortuous path many times and suffered defeats several times, but it continued to firmly carry out the historical tasks of the proletariat. We won countless victories but we did not stand still after winning a victory. Instead, we always marched forward to win a new victory. In his article "The Situation and Tasks in the War of Resistance Against Japan After the Fall of Shanghai and Taiyuan," Comrade Mao Zedong castigated class capitulationism and national capitulationism and pointed out that in one respect we should hold the ground we had already won, for this ground was our strategic point of departure, but our chief purpose was to extend the ground already won and to seize new ground. It is precisely in this way that our cause and communist movement have always advanced step by step toward our great ideal.

Let us read the "Report on the Review of the Program and on Changing the Name of the Party" which Lenin delivered to the Seventh Congress of the Russian Communist Party (Bolshevik). This report is of great significance to us today in upholding the ideal of communism and communist thinking. He called for making a clean break with the anarchists and with social-chauvinism in the Social Democratic Party. He said: "When the workers set up their own state they realized that the old concept of democracy -- bourgeois democracy -- had been surpassed in the process of the development of our revolution. We have arrived at a type of democracy that has never existed anywhere in Western Europe." ("Collected Works of Lenin," vol 27, p 114) That was to say, he combined the resumption of the name of the Communist Party with a new type of democratic government which had been established. We have called our party the Communist Party right from its inception. We have already established a government under the people's democratic dictatorship. There are conditions and it is necessary for us to distinctively put forth the question of holding high the banner of communism in the party. The "resolution" adopted by the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee pointed out: "Our present endeavor to build a modern socialist China constitutes but one stage of this great revolution. Differing from the revolutions before the overthrow of the system of exploitation, this revolution is carried out not through fierce class confrontation and conflict, but through the strength of the socialist system itself, under leadership, step by step and in an orderly way. This revolution which has entered the period of peaceful development is more profound and arduous than any previous revolution and will not only take a very long historical period to accomplish but will also demand many generations of unswerving and disciplined hard work and heroic sacrifice. In this historical period of peaceful development, revolution can never be plain sailing. There are still overt and covert enemies and other saboteurs watching for opportunities to create trouble. We must maintain high revolutionary vigilance and be ready at all times to come out boldly to safeguard the interests of the revolution. In this new historical period, the entire membership of the CCP and the entire people must never cease to cherish lofty revolutionary ideals, maintain a dynamic revolutionary fighting spirit and carry China's great socialist revolution and socialist construction through to the end."

We must adhere to this orientation pointed out by the "resolution;" adhering to this orientation means holding high the banner of communism.

We hold high the banner of communism and uphold the communist integrity of party members. But we certainly do not mean to immediately put into practice the policies that will come with the advanced stage of communism. In "On New Democracy," Comrade Mao Zedong said: "Beyong all doubt, now is the time to spread communist ideas more widely and put more energy into the study of Marxism-Leninism, or otherwise we shall not only be unable to lead the Chinese revolution forward to the future stage of socialism, but shall also be unable to guide the present democratic revolution to victory. However, we must keep the spreading of communist ideas and propaganda about the communist social system distinct from the practical application of the new democratic program of action; we must also keep the communist theory and method of investigating problems, undertaking research, handling work and training cadres distinct from the new democratic line for national culture as a whole. It is undoubtedly inappropriate to mix the two up." ("Selected Works of Mao Zedong," vol 2, p 666) The conditions at present are entirely different from those at that time. However, the principles which Mao Zedong talked about are still applicable. We are now engaging in the socialist cause. Being the first stage of communism, socialism should also be called communism. There is of course a great difference between the present socialist system and the advanced stage of communism. Moreover, we have adopted some social policies which comply with the actual situation. For example, the individual economy is permitted to exist under the condition of putting public ownership in a position of absolute superiority; the individual economy of working people is an appendage and a necessary complement to the socialist economy. These policies are not socialist in nature. For this reason, on the one hand, we should uphold communist thinking and should not turn away from it even a little bit on the ground that certain social policies have been adopted; on the other hand, we should formulate policies under the guidance of communist thinking and in accordance with the actual situation and should not immediately put into practice the policies of the advanced stage of communism just for the sake of upholding communist thinking.

In short, all our members and cadres of the Communist Party must apply communist thinking in observing and dealing with all social problems. Actual life tells us that if we approach and carry out the party's policies under the guidance of communist thinking, we shall come to conditions and results greatly different from those which we may come to if we approach and carry out the party's policies by deviating from communist thining. To each of our party members and cadres, holding high the banner of communism means using communist thinking to guide and govern their words and deeds. Only thus will it be possible to maintain the communist integrity of our party and guarantee that our party's cause will continue to gain new developments and win new victories.

HONGQI ON BASIC PRINCIPLES GUIDING CONSTITUTION

HK271459 Beijing HONGQI in Chinese No 10, 16 May 82, pp 17-19

[Article by Lin Liangqi [2651 5328 8501]: "The Four Basic Principles Represent the Fundamental Guiding Ideology in Revising the Constitution"]

Text] Every country always follows fixed principles or a guiding ideology in formulating or revising its constitution. This goes without saying. What is the fundamental guiding ideology for "the draft of the revised constitution of the People's Republic of China" that the 23d Session of the 5th NPC Standing Committee decided to promulgate? In the preamble of the constitution, it was clearly pointed out: "Under the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party and under the guidance of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought, the Chinese people will continue to uphold the people's democratic dictatorship, to uphold the socialist road, to improve various socialist systems, to develop socialist democracy, to round out the socialist legal system, to seek rejuvenation through self-reliance, to fight amid hardship, and to gradually build our country into a highly democratic and highly civilized socialist country with modernized industry, modernized agriculture, modernized national defense and modernized science and technology."

The four opening lines here, or the four basic principles represent the fundamental guiding ideology followed in revising the constitution this time, and also the basic principles that our country must follow.

The four basic principles put forth are not the subjective wish of any individual. Instead, they represent the sum of the experiences of our people in a long period of revolutionary struggle under the leadership of the party and are the embodiment of objective laws governing the development of the history of our country. The "draft of the revised constitution" points out: "After 1840 feudal China gradually shaped up into a semicolonial and semifeudal country. The Chinese people kept fighting in a brave struggle for national independence, for national liberation and for democratic freedom." For over 100 years, on the scene of Chinese political struggle, various political forces successively staged their own performances and showed their own powers, to different degrees. Men of insight bent on reform put forth various programs to save the country and the people. Some called for the conduct of education to enlighten the people. Some urged the advocation of science to save the country. Some also called for the use of force to overthrow tyrants. Of all the ideas advanced, there was really no lack of relatively good ones. But before Marxism-Leninism reached China and before the birth of the Chinese Communist Party, there was not an idea that could show us a fundamental road to thorough liberation for the Chinese people. Given the conditions of China, only socialism was capable of arousing the revolutionary enthusiasm of the masses of hardworking people. Only by using the Communist Party, the vanguard of the proletariat armed with Marxism-Leninism, could we organize the proletariat and all the people in waging a thorough anti-imperialist and antifeudal struggle. Only in this way could we, after the victory of the democratic revolution, immediately lead China toward socialism. Such was the fact. Once Marxism-Leninism reached China and the Chinese Communist Party appeared on the Chinese political scene, a turn of the tide came in the Chinese revolution. With its correct revolutionary program, the Chinese Communist Party won the support and trust of people of all walks of life in the country. A new situation appeared in the revolution. Just as the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of the Party Since the Founding of the PRC" adopted at the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee pointed out: "The then Kuomingtang, or other bourgeois and petit bourgeois political factions did not and could not possibly find a way out for the country and the people. Only the Chinese Communist Party showed the people the way out for China. The way out was to thoroughly overthrow imperialist and feudalist reactionary rule and switch over to socialism." History of over 100 years has proved an imperishable truth: The four basic principles, which accord with the desire of several generations of people in China and reflect the laws of historical development independent of human will, are a fundamental guarantee for the Chinese people's turning our state into a highly democratic and highly civilized powerful and modern socialist country. Therefore, in formulating and revising the constitution, we can in no way deviate from the four basic principles. Whether we uphold or oppose the four basic principles and whether we uphold them properly -- this concerns the nature and orientation of development of the state's political, economic and cultural systems, concerns the relations among various classes, among various nationalities and among various political forces of the state, and also concerns the role, effectiveness and dignity of the constitution itself. In this regard, we have both positive and negative experiences for reference.

Since the founding of the PRC, we have promulgated three constitutions. The 1954 Constitution was a relatively good one. 1) It summed up and affirmed the experiences of the new democratic revolution led by the Chinese Communist Party and consolidated the results of the revolution of our people and the new victories scored in the political and economic fields since the founding of the PRC. 2) It prescribed the state system of the People's Republic of China as "a people's democratic state led by the working class and based on the worker-peasant alliance." 3) Based on the principle of integrating Marxism-Leninism with the practice of China, it objectively analyzed the main contradictions in Chinese society and put forth the main tasks for the transitional period of the state in light of the fundamental demands during the transitional period of the state and the common wishes of the masses of people in building socialism.

The main tasks called for "gradually realizing the socialist industrialization of the state and gradually accomplishing the socialist transformation of agriculture, handicrafts and capitalist industry and commerce." In a word, the 1954 Constitution embodied four basic principles, defined a socialist road compatible with the features of China, ensured the smooth socialist transformation of the system of private ownership of the means of production, stimulated the development of industry, agriculture and the whole national economy, and laid a material foundation for our modernization effort today.

The Constitution promulgated in 1975 during the "Great Cultural Revolution" abandoned some basic principles of the 1954 Constitution and embodied the guiding ideology of so-called "continuous revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat." The main problems with this constitution were: 1) It affirmed wrong "leftist" viewpoints -- which clearly deviated from the orbit of Mao Zedong Thought -- as Marxism-Leninism and Mao Zedong Thought [as published], thus creating confusion about the guiding ideology for the whole country. 2) Contradictions of two different types were seriously confused. The dictatorship of the proletariat was interpreted as "overall dictatorship." The article, "The Proletariat Must Exercise Overall Dictatorship Over the Bourgeoisie in the Superstructure Covering All Fields of Culture," was put forth, undermining socialist democracy. 3) The "leftist" economic policy was used to replace the socialist economic policy consistently upheld by our country. 4) Regional revolutionary committees at various levels practicing the party's "centralized leadership" were affirmed, creating a chaotic state in which the party was not separated from the government in the state system and the latter was replaced by the former. The party was thus turned from a leader in the social and political life of the state into something that directly interferes and that directly takes charge. This constitution put in the form of law many erroneous theories and erroneous practices related to the "Great Cultural Revolution," causing damage to the state in the political, economic and cultural fields and providing a handful of careerists and conspirators with a legal basis for usurping party and state leadership. After the 4th NPC, the forces of the "gang of four" counterrevolutionary conspiratorial group were strengthened not only in the party but in the government, not only at central but at regional levels. This was a serious consequence of the 1975 Constitution, which negated the 1954 Constitution, which deviated from the four basic principles and which followed wrong guiding ideology.

The 1978 Constitution was formulated after the downfall of the "gang of four." But due to the limitations of the then prevailing historical factors, it failed to give up the erroneous theories, policies and slogans embodied in the 1975 Constitution. Though some ingredients of the four modernizations program were added to it as guiding ideology, the theory of "continuous revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat" remained as its basis. It is clear that this constitution has in many places become incompatible with the needs of our political and economic life and the needs of the building of a modern state and must be revised.

Different guiding ideas produce different constitutions and different consequences and effects in state political life. The 1954 Constitution embodied in a relatively satisfactory way the four basic principles and accorded with the interests and aspirations of the people of the whole country. It won the wholehearted support of the people of the whole country and gave full expression to the dignity of the constitution. The later two constitutions, and the 1975 one in particular, impaired the dignity of the constitution, due to their being divorced from the four basic principles, to different degrees. We must seriously take this as a profound lesson.

The 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee marked an end to the situation of party work advancing in a period of hesitation and indecision and the beginning of an overall and serious rectification of "leftist" mistakes noticed during the "Great Cultural Revolution" and before. The 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee adopted the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of the Party Since the Founding of the PRC" and reaffirmed the need to continuously uphold the four basic principles. This paved the way for our revising the constitution and putting the business of revising the constitution again on a very reliable and solid foundation.

We know that in upholding the four basic principles, the most important thing is to adhere to the two calling for the socialist road and party leadership. Upholding the socialist road and upholding party leadership are two aspects of one thing. In upholding the socialist road, we must uphold party leadership. Whether we have upheld party leadership, or whether we have done this well depends on whether we have upheld the socialist road. In the articles in the 1975 Constitution and the 1978 Constitution (especially the former), there appeared many terms about "party leadership" and "socialism." But prompted by erroneous guiding ideology, these articles were permeated with the erroneous theory of "continuous revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat." This basically violated the rights of the people and undermined the foundation of the people's democratic dictatorship, confronting us with the danger of our country's deviating from the socialist road in political, economic, cultural and other fields. This actually weakened the party's leading position in state life, basically running counter to the four basic principles. Now, though the "draft of the revised constitution" just mentions the four basic principles in its preamble, it has clearly defined our socialist system and people's democratic dictatorship as the state's fundamental system. Based on this system, it has prescribed our economic system and cultural system, set forth criteria for the proper handling of relations among various political bodies, among various mass organizations and among various nationalities and stipulated the composition of people's congresses and people's governments at all levels. This enables the spirit of the fundamental state system to run through all the articles in the "draft of the revised constitution" and forms the basis for the formulation of all other systems, ensuring that the political life, economic life and cultural life of the state always advance along a socialist orbit. Meanwhile, the draft has drawn lessons from the 1975 and 1978 Constitutions. In line with the "resolution" of the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Cnetral Committee and with the spirit of the party Central Committee's instructions on the reform of state organs, it has put forth reform measures for separating the party from the government and defined the premier responsibility system of the State Council, the responsibility system involving ministers and the various forms of socialist responsibility. In the form of general laws, this has affirmed the results of the reform of state organs and the economic system, allowing the improvement and strengthening of the party's leading position in state life.

The "draft of the revised constitution" clearly stipulates that the Chinese people will uphold the four basic principles. This means that every citizen of the People's Republic of China must uphold the four basic principles. These principles cannot be deviated from or abandoned, still less opposed. If anyone opposes the upholding of the four basic principles as the guiding ideology for our country and even brings in guiding ideology of any kind then he has acted against the laws of historical development and against the will of the whole people.

The party has led the people in formulating the constitution. The party will also lead the people in observing the constitution. Once the constitution is approved, all citizens, public organizations, units, and parties and groups, including the Chinese Communist Party, must observe it. Every member of the Chinese Communist Party is not only a member of the party organizations but also a citizen of the People's Republic of China. Like every citizen, he must do his part in observing the constitution. In this regard, no Communist Party member should be allowed to be a privileged citizen. Whether a Communist Party member upholds the four basic principles depends on whether he really observes the constitution and consciously upholds the dignity of the constitution.

Upholding the four basic principles is the fundamental guiding ideology for the current revision of the constitution. They should also become the guiding ideology for the launching of an all-people campaign to discuss the "draft of the revised constitution. Every citizen of the country must take this guiding ideology as a basis, air his own views on the revision of the constitution, and speak freely, enabling the four basic principles to be better embodied in the constitution as guiding ideology.

GUANGMING RIBAO DISCUSSES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

HK271215 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 19 May 82 p 3

[Article by Zhang Huanguang [1728 3562 0342]: "On the Vital Significance of the Draft of the Revised Constitution to Perfecting the Government Administration Structure"]

[Text] A constitution is the fundamental law of a country. The formulation and revision of a constitution are closely bound up with and greatly affect the national economy and the people's livelihood. In order to suit the development and changes of objective conditions, there are many important revisions and changes in the new draft of the revised constitution, compared with the 1978 document. With regard to the central government structure, the most important changes are: restoring the post of state chairman; enlarging the power of the NPC Standing Committee; establishing a Central Military Council; and some other important changes in the power, formation and leadership system of the State Council. These changes will undoubtedly produce a great impact on the development of our socialist cause. Now, according to my initial personal understanding, I would like to say something about the vital significance of the draft of the revised constitution in perfecting the government administrative structure.

Advantages and Main Disadvantages

As everyone knows, in either modern or ancient times, the ruling class of a country, in order to protect its own interests, has to set up organizations and appoint officials to manage state affairs. What does state management mean? In a broad sense, it generally means the overall management including legislative, judicial, administrative, procuratorial work and so forth, and in a narrow sense, it usually means the administrative management by state executive organs. The management mentioned in this article refers to the state administrative management.

In modern society, either in capitalist countries or in socialist countries, there is a problem of management over socialized large-scale production and modern social life. However, owing to different social systems, the state administrative management in socialist countries is essentially different from that of the capitalist countries. In socialist countries, as the people are the masters of the country and the government is the people's government, the subject and object of management are consistent with each other. In other words, the masses of people are simultaneously conductors and objects of state management. This determines that the socialist state administrative management bears the nature of a democracy. In capitalist countries, however, the subject of the management is capitalists and their agents, and the object is the proletariat and other laboring people who are exploited and ruled by them. The subject and object of the management are two groups of people who are separated and are antagonistic to each other. Thus, the bourgeois nature of the capitalist state management is obvious. In fact, the fundamental difference between these two administrative management systems is just where the advantages of the socialist state administrative management lie.

Although there are vital disadvantages in the capitalist state administrative management, there are still some points that we can study and make use of. For example, in modern capitalist countries, in order to protect the interests of the bourgeoisie, unremitting efforts are being made to explore and seek the most effective ways and methods in state administrative management, and to study and explore the problem of how to establish a complete and rigorous system of management. In reforming the administrative structure, some foreign governments have stressed streamlining organizations, clarifying functions and powers, adopting scientific methods, improving work efficiency and authorizing social organizations to manage some state affairs. These are also good for our reference.

Although there are many advantages in our state administrative management system, we must admit that there are also various disadvantages in our system, in addition to imperfection.

For example, there are overlapping and overstaffed departments everywhere and at each level, and as a result of having too many deputy and nominal posts with unclarified duties and responsibilities, redtape and other malpractices exist to a serious degree. The main expression is bureaucratism and low work efficiency. These are problems to be solved in our present reform of government organizations, which is attracting worldwide attention. In order to solve these problems, not only is it necessary to establish steamlined and perfect management organizations but also necessary to lay down rigorous and effective rules and regulations. In this respect, the draft of the revised constitution reflects the results and requirements of the development of the reform and has made clear and concrete stipulations for the state administrative management system.

Power Must Be in Accord With Duty

The State Council is the executive organ of the supreme power organ in our country. It is the supreme state administrative organ leading all administrative organs of the whole country. It is responsible for carrying out the party's line, policies and principles and the laws and decrees enacted by the NPC and its Standing Committee. It exercises unified leadership over the work of various ministries, commissions and other subsidiary bodies under it as well as the work of local administrative organs at various levels throughout the country, manages the internal and foreign affairs of our country as well as our national defense and financial, economic, cultural and educational affairs, and exercises concrete leadership over our socialist modernization drive. Its tasks are arduous and its responsibilities are grave.

On the basis of the original prescriptions, the draft of the revised constitution has made some new stipulations on the functions and powers of the State Council, such as, to enact and approve administrative laws and regulations (referring to the approval of departmental administrative laws and regulations of various ministries and commissions as prescribed in article 91), which is prescribed in the first point of article 89, to decide on the duties and responsbilities of various ministries and commissions and to exercise leadership over national administrative work which does not belong to or concern various ministries and commissions, which is prescribed in the second point of this article, and to decide on the concrete division of functions and powers of the central authorities, provinces, autonomous regions and municipalities directly under the central government, which is prescribed in the third point of the same article. These are functions and powers actually exercised by the State Council but which were excluded in the stipulations of the previous constitutions. Making these functions and powers clearly prescribed in the fundamental law of our country will be of vital importance to perfecting our government administrative structure.

There is a generally recognized principle in the science of administrative management governing the functions of administrative organizations, that is, the principle of clarifying duties with corresponding powers. It not only requires the setting up of special departments and the appointing of people to take up specific duties, but also requires that they be authorized corresponding powers to carry out the duties. Duty without power or power without duty will naturally result in bringing harm to the administrative management and affecting the fulfillment of the tasks. Therefore, making the above-mentioned functions and powers clearly stipulated in laws entirely conforms to the principle of duties being in accord with powers. It is advantageous to work of the administrative organs and their personnel and to overcoming malpractices such as overlapping departments and redtape. It is advantageous to overcoming bureaucratism and raising work efficiency.

Audit and Supervision

The draft of the revised constitution stipulates that the State Council and all people's governments above the county level must establish auditing organs to independently exercise the power of audit and supervision according to law. This is a new stipulation which was not included in the previous three constitutions. It lays a foundation for an auditing system in new China.

As we all know, a complete financial administrative system usually consists of four major links or stages: budget, accounting, final accounts and audit. Audit is the last stage or link. Budget deals with the plans for financial revenue and expenditure. Accounting and final accounts deal with the records detailing the execution of financial revenue and expenditure plans, and auditing plays the part of examining the execution of revenue and expenditure plans. So, according to its original meaning, audit means making systematic examinations of books of accounts of the others by means of scientific methods so as to affirm whether their books of accounts are correct and reflect their financial status and achievements and errors in management. All this is fairly assessed in an auditorial report. With the development of social economic life, the meaning of an audit is also being changed. Now, auditing is not restricted to examining the execution of financial revenue and expenditure plans. It covers a wider range and has a greater variety. In a modern country, as the government has more things to do and its revenue and expenditure in a fiscal year cover a wider range, the handling of financial matters has become more complicated. Therefore, more than 100 countries in the world, including England, the United States, France, Japan, the Netherlands and Thailand, have established special auditing bodies and systems to deal with them. Of course, they are only instruments serving the ruling class, the bourgeoisie. In our country, during the period of the new democratic revolution, we also established auditing bodies and systems in the revolutionary bases. Although they resembled the capitalist organs and systems in forms, they were different in nature from the latter. They were instruments serving the people's revolutionary war. In this sense, the establishment of auditing organs as prescribed in the draft of the revised constitution can be regarded as a direct inheritance of the revolutionary tradition.

Auditing plays a very important role in perfecting and improving the state financial system. The main roles it plays can be summed up in the following two aspects: First, examining mistakes and preventing malpractices. This is a basic task for auditing, and its most important function as well. It is necessary to point out that if problems or mistakes are discovered through auditing, we still cannot be certain that this is a success of the auditing, because it is the duty of auditing to find out problems and mistakes. On the other hand, if no problems and mistakes are found, we also cannot be certain that the auditing is unsuccessful, because auditing at regular intervals or at any time can spur the financial workers to be more careful in their work and avoid mistakes and malpractices. Thus, auditing also plays a role in instituting preventive measures. Second, analyzing problems and offering opinions to improve work and promote the development of social economy. At present, it is imperative to practice this system to hit at economic crimes and other serious violations of the accounting system and breaches of financial discipline.

From this we can see that the stipulation in the draft of the revised constitution about auditing is entirely necessary. It is an important measure to plug the loopholes in our financial work and perfect our financial management system. While practicing this system, it is also necessary to enact and implement the auditorial law as soon as possible. This is a guarantee for carrying out the auditing system.

Embody Advantages of Two Systems

It is clearly stipulated in the draft of the revised constitution that the State Council applies the system of decision by the premier. The premier calls and presides over the regular and plenary meetings of the State Council. The ministries and commissions apply the system of decision by ministers. The ministers call and preside over the regular meetings of the ministries and commissions. Thus, the advantages of both systems of decision by chief officer and decision by committee members are embodied in this stipulation. It will surely play an active role in raising the efficiency of the administrative work of the State Council.

As we all know, the structure (or system) of the administrative organs has many different forms. The system of decision by chief officer and the system of decision by committee is distinguished by the number of people who make the final decision. Under the system of decision by chief officer, the chief officer makes the final decision and is responsible for all administrative measures. The presidential system in the United States is an example of this. It is also called the sole responsibility system. Under the other system, all administrative measures are decided in committee meetings according to the majority of the voters, and all participants in the committee meetings are responsible for these measures. It is also called the collective responsibility system. The committee system in Switzerland is an example of this.

Each of the two systems has its own advantages and disadvantages. The main advantages of the chief officer system are: having the duties clarified and power concentrated, being able to command and act more flexibly and quickly and being easier to keep secrets. Its main shortcomings are: not being able to give sufficient and overall consideration to the problems due to the limits of personal intelligence, and being easier to lead to making arbitrary decisions and taking preemptory actions or practicing graft, without the supervision by others. The advantages and disadvantages of the committee system are quite the contrary. For this reason, it is generally believed that the committee system is more suitable for legislative and consultative organs while the chief officer system is more suitable for administrative organs, because these organs are executive organs and need to be more resolute and swift in action and sometimes need to keep secrets. Montsquieu, a French Enlightment bourgeois thinker held that "it is important to be swift in action in administrative management. Therefore, it is better to have only one person to decide on the matter rather than to have many. In legislative work, however, as it needs careful considerations, it is better to have more people to decide on the matter than to have only one." This means having the matter discussed by a group of people and decided by only one person. This is a rather profound understanding of administrative management.

The system of decision by the premier and the system of decision by ministers prescribed in the draft of the revised constitution have the advantages of the chief officer system, and the regular and plenary meetings of the State Council called and presided over by the premier as well as the regular meetings of the ministries and commissions called and presided over by ministers have the advantages of the committee system. Thus, by combining the advantages of the two systems, the leading system of the State Council is advantageous to developing the democratic style of work, to pooling the wisdom of the masses and to making swift decisions under highly centralized guidance. This not only conforms to the principle of democratic centralism, but also suits the characteristics of government work.

Besides, the draft of the revised constitution also makes concrete stipulations on the term of office of the premier of the government administration and commune management, strengthening grassroots power organs and so forth. These stipulations are entirely necessary. They will be of vital significance to perfecting the government administrative structure in our country.

BIEJING RELEASES FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL

OW281230 Beijing XINHUA in English 1223 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 28 (XINHUA) -- All the seven former Kuomintang party, government, military personnel and its special agents below county or regimental level in custody were released here today.

At a meeting held in Beijing prison for the release, two of them were given the judgement of release and certificate of release by the Beijing Intermediate People's Court and the Beijing bureau of reform through labour respectively.

The other five have been released on bail for medical treatment years ago. Three of them received today and yesterday the judgements and certificates at their home villages. The other two will receive theirs tomorrow.

Han Zhenrong, 57, one of the released, was met in the prison by his wife and daughter and other relatives. His daughter said that her whole family thanked the party's policy and the whole family will work still harder in the building up of socialist country. Her father, she added, will also serve the people in the late years of his life with his cooking skill.

Bedding, clothes and 100 yuan will be issued to all the released.

The released will tour the city proper and visit some factories.

STATE COUNCIL APPROVES LEVYING EXPORT DUTY

OW280213 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1310 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 27 May (XINHUA) -- A XINHUA reporter has learned from the General Administration of Customs that from 1 June 1982 the Chinese customs office will levy export duties on 34 export commodities.

During the initial period after the founding of the Republic, regulations governing the levying of export duties were instituted and export duties were levied on a few commodities. In May 1951, the "customs regulations governing import and export duties" approved and promulgated by the former government administration council stipulated that export duties be levied on peanut oil, peanuts, hog bristles, tung oil, peppermint oil and jellied peppermint. Later, in view of changes on the international market and in the domestic situation, the levying of export duties on these six commodities was suspended at different times. The present levying of export duties on certain commodities is an important economic measure adopted in a new situation to further use the economic leverage of duties to implement the policy: it is necessary to have planned economy and at the same time give to the supplementary, regulatory role of the market; and an important economic measure to unify policy on foreign trade.

Regarding the rate of export duties, with the exception of coal, on which an export duty of 40 yuan per dun is levied, commodities are classified into 6 categories and export duties are levied on them at the rate of 10 to 60 percent of their cost. The names of commodities under different categories and their duty rates run as follows:

A duty rate of 10 percent of their cost is levied on chestnut, ferromanganese, ferrochrome, (vanadium iron), titanium and other ferroalloy.

A duty rate of 20 percent of their cost is levied on rice, soybean, sugar, tung oil, turpentine oil, rabbit hair, freshwater fish, jellyfish, almonds, goat hide, pig iron, tungsten iron and ferromolybdenum.

A duty rate of 30 percent of their cost is levied on prawns, raw lacquer, rosin, tungsten ore, antimony, ferrosilicon and pearls.

A duty rate of 40 percent of their cost is levied on Pacific herring roe, fruit of Chinese wolfberry [lycium Chinese] and tin.

A duty rate of 50 percent of their cost is levied on Chinese cinnamon and chiretta [anoelicae sinensis].

A duty rate of 60 percent of their cost is levied on eel fry and root of membranous milk vetch [astragalus membranaceus]

MILITARY COMMISSION HONORS AIR FORCE GROUP

OW280234 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1207 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 27 May (XINHUA) -- The Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee recently issued an order conferring the honorable title of "Red Banner Independent Air Force Group for Flying Safety" on the independent group of a certain division of the PLA Air Force's air units to commend its outstanding meritorious deeds in guaranteeing flying safety on a long-term basis and promoting the building of units.

This group has always paid great attention to strengthening political and ideological work, persistently engaged in flight training as the central task, fulfilled and overfulfilled all annual tasks, including norms of flying time, set by the higher level, and 12 times successfully fulfilled the task of scientific research tests for national defense. In carrying out training tasks and preparations against war, all members of the group pay attention to the scientific method, seriously implement ordinances, regulations and rules and strictly follow the system of personal responsibility. Thanks to strict training, the group's pilots have solid technical foundation and can handle various complicated situations and head off any disaster. Members of the group's ground crew are conscientious, responsible and scrupulous about every detail. They examine the aircraft strictly in accordance with maintenance regulations. Thanks to firmly grasping safety work, the group has guaranteed flying safety for 27 years in a row.

In the order, the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee called on all PLA commanders and fighters to learn from them, strive to do political and ideological work well, promote socialist spiritual civilization, persistently launch struggle against bourgeois liberalization and corruption by capitalist ideas, and forever keep the distinctive political character of the proletarian army. It called on all commanders and fighters to strengthen education and training, seriously implement all ordinances, regulations and rules and make still greater contributions to building our army into a modern and regularized revolutionary force.

XU SHIYOU DISCUSSES RECENTLY PUBLISHED MEMOIRS

OW251436 Nanjing XINHUA RIBAO in Chinese 14 May 82 p 1

[Text] Comrade Xu Shiyou's memoirs, entitled "The 16 Years I Was in Shandong", has recently been published by the Shandong People's Publishing House. The memoirs mainly depict his life during the revolutionary war.

Comrade Xu Shiyou fought and worked in Shandong for 16 years -- 1939 through 1954. These years include the 11 years of war of resistance against Japan and the liberation war, years when the flames of battle raged everywhere. With him in the lead, the people of Shandong and an army made up of the sons of the people of the country surmounted untold difficulties, fought bloody battles and opened up and then expanded a number of anti-Japanese revolutionary bases during those years. During this period Comrade Xu Shiyou participated in the famous Laiwu battle, the Menglianggu campaign and the battle for Jinan; thus, he made important contributions to the cause of people's revolutionary war.

The 120,000-character-long "The 16 Years I Was in Shandong" looks back on the momentous militant life in those years, depicts Comrade Xu Shiyou's colorful and legendary military career and faithfully records a number of important campaigns and specific examples of battle.

Comrade Xu Shiyou was recently interveiwed by a reporter. During the interview, he related: Every time I recall those years, three lofty images invariably come to my mind. The first is that of the party; the second is that of the people; and the last is that of the fighters. Without party leadership, it would have been almost impossible for persons like me to have taken a correct road. Without the vigorous support given us by the masses of the people and without the sacrifice of the fighters, there would be none of today's victories. The purpose of my memoirs is to tell the young generation that the victory of our revolution did not come easy and that we must value it. This is our older generation's unshirkable duty.

LITERARY JOURNAL KUNLUN TO PUBLISH 2D ISSUE

OW271100 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2340 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] The first issue of the large-size comprehensive literary journal KUNLUN attracted attention when it was published. The second issue will soon come off the presses. KUNLUN, a large-size comprehensive journal carrying mainly literary works with military themes, has attracted wide attention from readers at home and abroad. The second issue,which is rich in content and characterized by vividness, will soon reach the stands.

After KUNLUN was published and distributed among troop units, the commanders and fighters on drilling grounds, in the border areas and at missile-launching sites, construction sites, airfields and military posts have all shown intense interest. Comrade (Zhao Tie) said in his letter: The first issue of KUNLUN has created many inspiring images. For example, company commander (Yan Zihu) in the novel "(She Tian Lang)" was portrayed so vividly that one could feel his flesh and blood that made people hate, angry and sigh. Both new and veteran writers inside and outside the army who attended the forum on literary creation with military themes have flocked to read the newly published KUNLUN. They have called it a flower that grows in the fertile soil of protracted war in our country. The works published in the first issue portrayed many vivid and moving images, such as the battle-seasoned general, the professor engaged in the launching of missiles, the innocent and lovable fighters, the young and capable cadres at the grassroots levels, and the demobilized and transferred armymen. All this has left readers with unforgettable impressions.

The second issue of KUNLUN, which will soon come off the press, carries several fine medium-size novels as well as prose works by veteran writers (Bi Ye), (Wang Meng) and (Du Xuan); a seven-act play, "General Peng," describing the proletarian revolutionaries of the older generation; speeches by Comrade Ba Jin and Liu Baiyi at the recent forum on literary creation with military themes and a fine collection of new works by (Wang Zhiyuan), (Tian Jian) and (Xu Geng).

A reader's letter praised KUNLUN as a fertile plot for cultivating flowers of military literature and a garden that unites writers both inside and outside the army. It describes war, praises socialist new persons, provides food for thought for the four modernizations drive and carries fine works for literary appreciation.

BEIJING UNITS REPORT SAVINGS ON TRANSPORT COSTS

HK280145 Beijing CHINA DAILY in English 28 May 82 p 2

[Text] The Beijing branches of the National Import and Export Corporation saved 2.416 million yuan last year by transporting their exports more efficiently, INTERNATIONAL TRADE NEWS reports.

The Beijing units transported some 420,000 tons of export products in 1981. In order to cut costs and improve efficiency, they have attempted to:

1. Avoid detours in transportation. Export goods were purchased, processed, inspected, and packed in the production areas for direct export. Some of them were trucked directly from factoriesto railway stations, thus reducing storage and handling costs.

Some 4,400 tons of steel products were transported directly from Sichuan and Shanxi Provinces without coming to Beijing first, saving 40,000 yuan. In another case, 4,200 tons of hoisting jacks were shipped straight from the factories, saving 2,400 yuan in storage and 30,000 yuan in freight costs.

2. Explore new forms of transportation. Such alternatives as land-and-water coordinated transport through Hong Kong, multi-form coordinated transport through Xiangang Port in Tianjin, and overland transport to Iran and Europe have all been tried with initial success.

Last year, some 400 container boxes were shipped through overland, which proved to be fast, safe and relatively inexpensive saving US$18,000.

3. Raise transport capacity by putting more goods in each railway car or by putting different kinds of goods in each car. Last year, 13,000 tons of foodstuffs were transported in this way, saving more than 140,000 yuan.

4. Improve packing and making more compact. Some wooden boxes were replaced by paper ones and some paper boxes by transportation of unpackaged goods. This turned out to be successful for some textiles and furniture. Last year, 120 cubic metres of wood and 9,450 yuan were saved by improved packing of two lots of handicraft exports.

RENMIN RIBAO VIEWS FUEL POLICY FOR CAR INDUSTRY

HK271157 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 2

[Article by Sun Zengxiang [1327 2582 4382]: "An Inquiry Into Our Country's Fuel Policy for the Automobile Industry"]

[Text] Since last year a few comrades have expressed a lot of opinions on our country's fuel policy for the automobile industry and internal-combustion engines for agricultural use. A short time ago, the departments concerned called a number of comrades together to inquire into and expound on this problem. Since diesel oil is in relatively short supply in our country, most comrades believe:

First, our automobile industry should take gasoline as the main fuel and supplement it with diesel oil. Viewed from the conditions in our country and the experience of most countries in the world, developing diesel cars is an important way to save energy and improve the efficiency of highway transportation. We have relatively few diesel cars in our country and so we should actively produce diesel cars. This is an orientation of development that should be affirmed. However, owing to the fact that diesel oil is in shorter supply than gasoline in our country, the automobile industry should take gasoline as the main fuel. At the same time, it is necessary to actively develop heavy diesel cars. Specifically speaking: All trucks with a load capacity of over 6 tons should be equipped with diesel engines. Trucks with a load capacity of 4-5 tons should mainly be fueled by gasoline. Diesel cars should not be developed in the near future. Some diesel cars may be developed in the future in line with the supply of oil. All light cars with a load capacity of under 3.5 tons and sedans should be fueled by gasoline with the exception of some diesel cars for export.

Second, internal-combustion engines for rural use should take diesel oil as the main fuel and be supplemented with gasoline. The engines used for irrigation and processing as well as those fitted in tractors and walking tractors should chiefly be diesel ones. A small number of gasoline engines may be developed according to the need for them and internal-combustion engines using other sources of energy may also be developed and utilized. There is a great consumption of diesel oil for agricultural use in our country. The general function of the existing diesel engines for agricultural use is poor and their consumption of oil is too high. There is great potential for economizing on energy. It is necessary to actively renovate the old products and develop new ones. It is also necessary to formulate plans to reduce oil consumption and renovate and transform the old engines and fix a deadline for their fulfillment.

Third, we should improve the octane rating of gasoline and alter the specifications of diesel oil for agricultural use. Most of the existing trucks are using 70-octane gasoline. If we replace it with 80-octane gasoline, we can generally save 10 percent of the gasoline. In the future it is necessary to gradually replace the current 70-octane gasoline with 80-octane gasoline. There is a high percentage of wax in diesel oil for agricultural use and it has a high solidifying point. It does not burn completely so that consumption and wear and tear of spare parts of the diesel engines are fairly high and the losses of the oil refinery in producing diesel oil for agricultural use are relatively great. Therefore, it is necessary to gradually alter the specifications of diesel oil for agricultural use and replace it with zero-grade diesel oil.

Fourth, we should readjust the price of diesel oil so that the price parities between gasoline and diesel oil gradually become more rational.

Fifth, we should increase the production of gasoline and diesel oil, especially the production of diesel oil. Even if there is no increase in crude oil production and we have to ensure the export of crude oil, there is still a potential for increased production of diesel oil. The specific measures are: First, reduce the amount of crude oil consumed and increase the amount of crude oil processed; second, reduce the amount of heavy oil consumed and, by processing it intensively, improve the rate of recovery for kerosene, gasoline, diesel oil and lubricating oil.

Sixth, we should step up the scientific research on the trial-manufacture and production of new fuel-efficient automobiles, tractors and internal-combustion engines, in order to replace the old and obsolete products. At the same time, the departments concerned should formulate, as speedily as possible, the limits of oil consumption and the standards of quality for automobiles, tractors and internal-combustion engines, issue production licences and control the continued production of poor quality products whose consumption of oil is too high.

RENMIN RIBAO COMMENTATOR ON CHILDREN'S GOODS

HK250943 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 21 May 82 p 1

[Commentator's article: "Supply Children With Good and Cheap Articles for Daily Use"]

[Text] At the beginning of last year, the CCP Central Committee put forth that training some 300 million children and teenagers to become a new generation of moral, educated, strong, valiant and industrious people with lofty communist ideals is the common duty of the whole party and the whole society. In accordance with this spirit of the Central Committee, a national committee of goods for children's daily use has been set up to coordinate with departments concerned in making overall planning in this respect and in studying and solving problems concerning children's food, clothing, toys, articles for use, and so on. After much work has been done, production in this aspect has taken on a new look. The output value of children's toys last year, for example, was nearly 26 percent more than the year before.

Our country has a large number of children. With the gradual increase of the income of workers, staff and peasants, their purchasing power is gradually rising. In particular, parents love their children even more since the idea of each couple giving birth to only one child has been spread. They pay even more attention to bringing up their children and are willing to spend more money on them. Therefore, it is even more obvious that goods for children's daily use on the market cannot meet the needs; for example, milk products, milk substitutes and fresh milk can only meet the needs of a very small portion of babies and infants who are less than 2 years old; there is a great shortage of thin-soled shoes for girl primary school pupils and leather shoes for children; there are very few toys and electronic games which help develop children's intelligence, build up their bodies and foster their interests in culture and science and the quality of these toys and games is not very good either. In short, there are not enough articles for children's daily use, the models are out-dated, their colors and varieties are monotonous and many of them are not up to technical and hygienic standards. Under these circumstances, they neither meet the children's needs nor fulfill the parents' wishes.

Children are the future and hope of the country and nation. Comrade Chen Yun once said that showing concern for the next generation and for children and teenagers is showing concern for the brilliant prospects of our motherland. The healthy growth of children needs the education of a spiritual civilization and needs increasingly abundant supplies of goods for use. Vigorously developing the production of consumer goods for children to eat, wear, use and play is important economic work and is also a social task of training future generations. Children's goods for daily use play an inestimable and tremendous part in the growth of their bodies, wisdom and mind and in fostering their morals and conduct. Departments concerned should attach importance to the production and supply of goods for children's daily use, put it on the order of the day and place it in a proper position.

We should carry out necessary investigations and studies on the production, supply and market demand of consumer goods for children, make clear existing problems in raw materials, taxation, price, percentage of profits for industry and commerce and technological strength, and put forth effective methods for solving these problems.

Most of the plants producing goods for children's daily use are enterprises under the system of collective ownership. The production conditions of many of these enterprises is very poor and they do not have sufficient production capacity. There are not enough raw materials for producing some products. The technical strength of some enterprises is weak. Particularly, the output value in producing goods for children's daily use is low and the profits less. This may easily incur losses and affects the enterprises' enthusiasm for production. In order to change this situation as quickly as possible, we should carry out serious analysis and studies, adopt appropriate measures in raw materials supplies, taxation, price, investment and loans and give necessary help to enterprises so that they may get rational profits. Of course, production and management units should also correct the idea of attaching importance only to the large and neglecting the small and should not think only of getting more profits from goods for children's use. At present, it is worth noting that the quality of some toys and clothing for children is secondary but their prices are high. We should strive to improve management and operation, save raw materials, lower the cost of production and provide as many fine quality low-priced children's goods for daily use as possible.

All goods for children's daily use, no matter whether they are for eating, wearing, using or playing, should be conducive to developing children's intelligence and health. More toys for developing children's intelligence, knowledge and health should be produced. We should carry out studies on developing new milk products, milk substitutes, auxiliary foodstuffs and fortified food containing various nourishing additives and they should fully meet hygienic requirements. We should improve the design of children's clothes. They should have new patterns, look pleasing to the eye and be comfortable and convenient. In designing and manufacturing goods for children's use, we should pay attention to meeting the requirements of spiritual civilization. These goods should be suited to our national characteristics and customs and to the present consumption level of the people in our country. Some enterprises blindly seek "Westernization" and produce children's clothes which are neither foreign nor Chinese. This is not good. Children grow quickly and they often need new clothes, shoes and hats before the old ones are worn out. Single sons and daughters have no brothers or sisters to make use of them. Therefore, it is not necessary to use raw materials whose quality is too high or which will last too long. Generally speaking, medium-grade and low-grade goods for children's use with new patterns and varieties are still needed by the broad masses of consumers. The idea that since the living standard has risen, we should attach importance only to high-grade products and neglect medium-grade and low-grade ones is not comprehensive. Production departments should appropriately fix the percentage for high-grade, medium-grade and low-grade products and make the products cheap and fine. These are the common requirements of various consumers.

It is the bounden duty of industrial and commercial departments to develop goods for children's daily use. Supplies, scientific research, financial, transportation and educational departments should actively coordinate. Mass organizations such as the women's federation, trade union, and youth and arts organizations should also give their support and help. We suggest that leading organs should inspect and be concerned with this major issue that involves millions of children. In short, we should mobilize and organize social strength in various fields to give a hand in developing goods for children's use. At present, the national committee of goods for children's daily use has initiated and held an exhibition. This is a good start. We hope that various activities for promoting the development of goods for children's daily use will also be held.

ANHUI RADIO URGES ACTION AGAINST ECONOMIC CRIMES

OW270001 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Station commentator's article: "Further Study the 'Decision' Well and Carry Through the Struggle Against Serious Criminal Activities in the Economic Sphere to the End"]

[Excerpts] Currently, the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere is being healthily launched throughout the province. Numerous cases of smuggling, peddling smuggled goods, corruption, taking bribes, profiteering, fraud and other serious criminal cases have been exposed. Some pending cases are being solved. The struggle has had a great impact on criminals who have seriously undermined the economy. As a result, unhealthy trends and evil practices have diminished somewhat. The situation as a whole is good; the struggle has been successfully launched; the results are remarkable.

However, we should sober-mindedly understand that this struggle has just begun. We have achieved only initial results. Many major and key cases still remain to be completely exposed, while some exposed cases still remain to be thoroughly investigated and handled. Many cadres, including some leading cadres, are still not fully aware of the seriousness, harm involved in and particularly the protracted nature of this struggle. The development of the struggle is still uneven.

Therefore, the struggle is still very arduous. The key to achieving complete success in the struggle lies in solving the question of enlightenment among some comrades, particularly some leading comrades. A prominent misunderstanding is the underestimation of the enemy's situation and the seriousness of corruption by bourgeois ideology. In the final analysis, it is the lack of understanding of the significance of the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere.

The fundamental way to solve the question of ideological understanding today is to conscientiously study the party Central Committee's directives, particularly the CCP Central Committee's and the State Council's "decision." To achieve greater results in the struggle, we must repeatedly study the "decision," seriously understand its guidelines and essence and continually heighten our consciousness in carrying out the "decision."

Along with deep development of the struggle, we must further strengthen party leadership. Leading responsible comrades of all party committees must personally grasp and the investigation and handling of major and key cases. They must not only assume command; they must also go out to battle. They must not shift the task onto other comrades.

All party members and functionaries, particularly leading cadres at all levels, must take a correct attitude toward this struggle in accordance with the principle of party spirit and the interests of the state. They must actively participate in, and lead, this struggle, undergo tests, maintain the communist integrity of the party and strive to be firm, sober-minded and capable Marxists.

ZHOU ZIJIAN INSPECTS ANHUI WATER PROJECT

OW270209 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Excerpts] Fuyang Prefecture, Anhui, is vigorously disseminating Bo County's experience of sinking hand-pressured wells to protect seedlings against drought and strive to achieve a bumper harvest this year. Since the spring of this year, there has been no rain in Bo County. The masses in the county have been mobilized to use water in old wells and newly sunk hand-pressured wells to protect seedlings from drought. As a result, leaf tobacco, cotton, corn and other spring-sown crops on the county's more than 500,000 mu have been growing very well. Not long ago, Governor Zhou Zujian went to Bo County to examine the work. He personally pressured a well to water the fields. He praised hand-pressured wells as a good means to fight drought, and called for their dissemination.

Fuyang Prefecture now has 120,000 hand-pressured wells. The prefecture plans to sink another 180,000 hand-pressured wells this year. In addition, the prefecture will restore 20,000 machine-operated wells.

JIANGXI CCP COMMITTEE HOLDS WORK CONFERENCE

OW231930 Nanchang Jiangxi Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpts] According to a JIANGXI RIBAO report, the Jiangxi Provincial CCP Committee recently held a work conference calling on party organizations, cadres and masses throughout the province to unify their thinking, boost their morale and double their efforts to fulfill or overfulfill the year's various tasks. On behalf of the provincial CCP committee, Bai Dongcai, permanent secretary of the provincial CCP committee, spoke at the conclusion of the conference on a number of important views concerning ideological understanding. While discussing Comrade Bai Dongcai's talk, comrades attending the conference unanimously agreed with his views.

Over 290 persons attended the conference, including secretaries of the various prefectural, municipal and county party committees; responsible comrades of party committees of plants and mines; and responsible comrades of the various provincial-level departments.

The meeting stressed the importance of perfecting and stabilizing the various forms of the agricultural production responsibility system. It pointed out that in recent years the agricultural production responsibility system has been the focus of discussion both inside the party and among cadres and the masses, and that the system is also an important subject of practice for the entire party and cadres at all levels in the rural areas in their great efforts to uphold the line implemented since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. The meeting maintained that in summarizing the experiences of and perfecting and stabilizing the responsibility system, the biggest obstacle at present is still the influence of "left" ideas. This merits our grave attention. In removing "left" ideological obstacles, it is also necessary to combat and overcome tendencies of complacency and the lack of enthusiasm for progress. At present, stabilizing all forms of the responsibility system is most important. As long as they are chosen by the masses themselves and satisfy the needs of the masses, all forms of the responsibility system should be stabilized and not changed. The meeting called on party organizations at all levels to deeped the struggle of combating corrosion and degeneration in order to maintain the purity of the party and communism. The current struggle to crack down on serious crimes in the economic sphere is of vital importance to the success or failure of China's socialist modernization and to the prosperity or decline and survival or death of our party and our country.

The attitude taken by our cadres, party members and particularly leading cadres toward the current campaign to crack down on serious crimes in the economic sphere means a severe test for each of them. We must enhance our consciousness, strengthen our party spirit and participate in and lead the struggle with a firm, clear-cut stand. In leading the struggle, the party must have strong determination, take a serious attitude and be extraordinarily cautious in adopting methods, steps and measures to guide the campaign. The meeting pointed out that the current movement of "five stresses and four beauties," the decorum and courtesy month activities launched last March, the obligatory tree-planting campaign and other obligatory labor activities have all had a good beginning and achieved very good results. Efforts should be made to consolidate these achievements and persist in these activities. The meeting pointed out that to ensure the purity of the leading bodies it is necessary to adopt firm and reliable measures. Those who make their fortunes by following the Lin Biao and Jiang Qing cliques in their rebellious acts; those who are heavily imbued with a factionalist mentality; those who beat, smash and loot; and those who seriously disrupt the party's unity politically and who seriously violate laws and discipline in the economic sphere -- all must be purged. Not a single one of these people will be promoted, and those who are already in the leading bodies must be resolutely purged.

In strengthening the party's organizational building, it is necessary to begin with the grassroots units because they form the foundation of the entire party. It is necessary to strengthen the organizational structure of the grassroots party organization by integrating the organizational building task with the overall restructuring of enterprises, the perfecting and stabilizing of the production responsibility system in the rural areas and the struggle to crack down on serious crimes in the economic sphere, thereby correcting the looseness and feebleness in some of the grassroots organizations.

The meeting also made arrangements for studying and discussing the revised draft constitution.

SHANDONG PEOPLE'S CONGRESS HOLDS SESSION

SK160412 Jinan Shandong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] The 14th session of the 5th provincial people's congress standing committee and the 17th standing committee meeting of the 4th provincial CPPCC committee opened in Jinan on 15 May. At yesterday morning's provincial people's congress plenary meeting, Zho Lin, chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee, relayed the situation of the 23d Session of the National People's Congress Standing Committee and the guidelines of speeches delivered by Vice Chairmen Peng Zhen and Yang Shangkun on studying and discussing the draft of the revised constitution. Zhao Feng, vice chairman of the provincal people's congress standing committee, presided over the meeting. Zhang Ye, Li Yuang, Chen Lei, Zhang Zhusheng, Yang Jieren, Zhu Benzheng, Zhang Fugui, Zhou Zhijun, Wang Jiechen and Wang Baomin, vice chairmen of the provincial people's congress stading committee, attended the meeting. Responsible persons of the provincial higher people's court, the provincial people's procuratorate, departments concerned of the provincial people's government, people's congress standing committees of municipalities under the jurisdiction of the province and various administrative offices attended the meeting as observers. Committee members to the 17th standing committee meeting of the 4th provincial CPPCC committee also attended the meeting as observers.

Participants in the above meetings held group discussions on the draft of the revised constitution and relevant documents yesterday afternoon.

EAST SEA FLEET HOLDS POLITICAL WORK CONFERENCE

OW280512 Hangzhou Zhejiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1040 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpts] The East China Sea Fleet held a political work conference of units stationed on mountains and islands on 20-27 May.

Xie Zhenghao, commander, and (Song Xianzhang), deputy political commissar, of the East China Sea Fleet, attended the conference and made speeches. (Wang Junjie), director of the Political Department of the East China Sea Fleet, made a report entitled "Carry Out Cultural Activities in a Thorough and Sustained Way and Vigorously Strengthen Political and Ideological Building of Units Stationed on Mountains and Islands."

During the conference, delegates conscientiously studied relevant documents of the party Central Committee and important speeches central leading comrades made recently, and summed up and exchanged experiences in strengthening political and ideological work in units stationed on mountains and islands in the light of the actual conditions of the units. Nineteen advanced units and individuals reported on their experiences and deeds at the conference.

At today's closing ceremony, commendation order by the fleet for the 19 advanced units and individuals were read, and awards were presented to them.

REN ZHONGYI VISITS GUANGZHOU PLA FLOOD FIGHTERS

HK260912 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] On their way to express sympathy and solicitude for the people of disaster areas in Qingyuan County yesterday morning [25 May] Guangdong Provincial CCP Committee First Secretary Ren Zhongyi and provincial Governor Liu Tianfu called on commanders and fighters of a certain unit of the Guangzhou PLA units who are engated in providing disaster relief.

In his talk to the commanders and fighters, Comrade Ren Zhongyi said: When the catastrophic flood hit Qingyuan County, the PLA unit rushed to the flood-stricken areas as quickly as possible and rescued large numbers of people from being marooned by the floodwaters. During our journey, many people in flood-stricken areas told us: It was our beloved Liberation Army that saved our lives. On behalf of people throughout the province, I would like to express thanks to all the commanders and fighters of the three armed services who have participated in this disaster relief work.

Comrade Liu Tianfu also spoke highly of the PLA units' contributions to combating the floods and providing disaster relief. He said: An important reason there were not more deaths during one of the most exceptional and serious floods in history is that the PLA units timely rushed to the flood-stricken areas to rescue people there. The people's own army shares the comforts and hardships of the people; the army and the people are truly one family.

SHENZHEN ECONOMIC ZONE TO DEVELOP TWO MORE AREAS

OW261022 Beijing XINHUA in English 0746 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Shenzhen, May 26 (XINHUA) -- Development of two additional areas will soon begin within the Shenzhen special economic zone in Guangdong Province, where special policies are implemented to encourage Hong Kong, Macao and foreign investment.

The Hong Kong Lian Cheng Enterprise Company will invest 400 million Hong Kong dollars on the development of Wenjindu area, and 2,000 million Hong Kong dollars in an area along the Shenzhen Bay, with land provided by the development corporation of the Shenzhen special economic zone.

In the first stage of development, according to authorities of the zone, 75,000 square meters will be opened up in Wenjindu, on which 60 villas, four tall buildings, the lowest 25 stories high, schools, kindergartens and recreational centers will be built. The total area to be developed in Wenjindu will be 260,000 square meters.

The development project along the Shenzhen Bay will involve construction of a university, primary and middle schools, kindergartens, villas for professors and scientists, a bathing beach, a seaside park, a theater and other facilities.

The agreement on development of the two areas was signed in August 1981 between the Hong Kong Lian Cheng Enterprise Company and the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone Development Corporation. According to the agreement, the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone Development Corporation will provide land for the Hong Kong company to set up industrial and commercial enterprises for a term of 30 years. The term for the construction and operation of housing estates and educational and cultural establishments will be 50 years.

Other areas now being developed in the Shenzhen special economic zone include the Shekou industrial district and the site of the former Bao'an County, known as the "old-town area" of Shenzhen.

NANFANG RIBAO ON STRUGGLE AGAINST ECONOMIC CRIME

HK270415 Guangzhou NANFANG RIBAO in Chinese 25 May 82 p 1

["Nanfang Forum" column article by Zheng Yan [6774 6056]: "Be Sure To Avoid Feelings of Relaxation"]

[Text] The struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic sphere has now been going on for more than 4 months. Of the large number of economic crime cases that have come to light, many have already been handled in accordance with the law and the criminals involved have received the punishment they deserved. Many people involved in economic crime have turned themselves in and mended their ways. The broad masses of cadres and the people have raised their understanding of the serious, damaging and dangerous nature of the corrupting influence of bourgeois ideology and have strengthened their conscious opposition to such corruption. We have already achieved considerable results.

These achievements, however, do not mean that we can relax our efforts. According to reports, some leaders in areas with serious problems in the economic sphere are reluctant to grapple with the problems and difficulties involved in the exposure and investigation of economic crimes. In areas where the smuggling and selling of contraband are less widespread, some leaders believe the problem to be almost solved and prefer to wait before taking further action. The existence of such problems of understanding has seriously hindered efforts to carry out this struggle in a thorough manner. It is imperative that we carry out further study of the resolution passed by the party's Central Committee and the State Council on severe punishment of criminals who seriously undermine the economy. We must ceaselessly correct our understanding and work resolutely to carry this struggle through to the end.

As the Central Committee's resolution points out, opposition to criminal activity in the economic sphere is a major responsibility of the whole party and the whole nation this year and for a long time to come. It is also an important guarantee for the protection of the socialist system and the smooth implementation of socialist modernization. It should be said that while many comrades have acquired some understanding of the seriousness of criminal activity in the economic sphere, they often fail to understand the complexity and long term nature of this struggle. Because they are unprepared in spirit for a long struggle and are unable to cope with difficulties, they are apt, under certain conditions, to feel anxious and hesitant and to slacken their efforts. Under the new historical conditions in our socialist country today it is important that we fully understand the fact that criminal activity in the economic sphere is an important manifestation of the class struggle. Because of domestic factors and foreign influences, class struggle will continue to exist within certain limits for a long time to come. Under certain conditions, this struggle may even become more intense. It is for this reason that criminal activity in the economic sphere will be with us for some time to come. There are economic criminals of long standing who, having been punished, may well renew their criminal activities as soon as circumstances and climate permit. There will also be new economic criminals. Because of this, the struggle against serious economic criminals will be a long one and we should remember that we cannot accomplish the task at one stroke. It is imperative that we make ideological and organizational preparations for this long-term struggle. We must not relax our efforts because of isolated victories, nor must we shrink from the difficulties we encounter. Taking into account the problems that exist in our own districts and departments, we must adopt effective measures that will help us to overcome difficulties and to carry out this struggle in a thorough manner.

We must make a proper appraisal of and adopt a correct attitude toward the achievements gained in this struggle. In the past few months of work, we have done no more than open up a new phase. At present there are still a number of serious and important cases which have yet to be exposed. The cases brought to light so far have tended to be clear-cut cases in which criminal methods were easy to spot. There are also a number of old cases that were brought to light several years ago. Cases that have been well covered up and which involve complicated circumstances, however, are far more difficult to expose. Rather than being "not far off," results in this struggle are still a long way off.

We must avoid overestimating our achievements and underestimating the problems. We must prevent any weakening of our leadership of this struggle and must avoid complacency. Failure to grasp this struggle firmly is something we must guard against at all costs. We must carry out frequent analysis of the situation, summarize experience, and keep a clear mind so that we will be able to promptly discover and resolve problems hindering this struggle and to promote the development of the struggle in a healthy and thorough manner.

HUANG HE FLOOD CONTROL MEETING HELD IN HENAN

HK271347 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Summary] The 1982 meeting on Huang He flood control work in Henan, Shandong, Shanxi and Shaanxi Provinces concluded in Zhengzhou municipality on 25 May. The meeting stressed: "In the light of the new situation on the Huang He and the new problems, it is necessary to take corresponding measures to make good preparations against floods so that the Huang He can safely pass through this year's flood season."

This meeting opened on 21 May. Dai Suli, secretary of the Henan Provincial CCP Committee, governor and general commander of the Huang He flood control general command, and Wang Huayun, chairman of the Huang He water conservation committee and deputy general commander of the Huang He flood control general command, attended the meeting and delivered important speeches.

The meeting demanded: "Leading comrades of all prefectures, municipalities, counties and communes along the Huang He must not slacken their vigilance, but must sharpen their vigilance a hundred times. They must to to the forefront of the struggle against floods and do their best to ensure that there will be no breaches in the large Huayuankou embankment if a flood peak of 22,000 cubic meters per second should occur. We must do a remarkable job of passing through the flood season safely."

The comrades present at the meeting seriously discussed the speeches of the leading comrades, closely linked the Huang He flood control with the four modernizations and had total confidence in doing well in the Huang He flood control control work this year.

In his speech, Wang Huayun pointed out that the riverbed of the Huang He has gradually become silted. As a result, embankments of the river have become low. This is one of the main causes for flooding at the lower reaches of the Huang He. Wang Huayun stressed: "The cadres and the masses along the Huang He must take a serious view of the new situation of the Huang He and of factors which are not beneficial to flood control. They must heighten their vigilance a hundred times and make good preparations against floods to ensure that the Huang He will safely pass through the flood season."

Radio Commentary

HK271449 Zhengzhou Henan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Station commentary: "Heighten Vigilance a Hundred Times and Ensure that the Huang He Will Safely Pass Through the Flood Season"]

[Summary] This year's Huang He flood season will soon begin. Heightening our vigilance a hundred times and making good preparations against floods to ensure tht the Huang He will pass through the flood season is a glorious yet arduous task confronting leaders at all levels of the party and the government and the masses on both sides of the Huang He.

"In the past, the Huang He underwent several dry seasons. Although people made preparations against flooding, no floods occurred. This has caused some comrades to slacken their vigilance."

In the 1980's, the Huang He will undergo wet seasons. Last year, serious flooding occurred in the upper reaches of the Huang He. Now, the lower reaches of the river are likely to have relatively serious floods. The flood control tasks on the Huang He are very arduous. We must not slacken our vigilance. "We must clearly explain the new situation of the Huang He the new problems and the danger arising therefrom to the cadres and the masses in our province along the Huang He so as to make them see the advantageous aspects of the Huang He flood control work and have confidence in overcoming floods and to make them see the existing disadvantageous factors and heighten their vigilance a hundred times. Thus, they will make good preparations ideologically and materially for fighting floods at all times." Strengthening leadership and adhering to the principle of attaching more importance to prevention of floods than to dealing with emergencies after flooding is the key to doing flood control work well. In flood control work, we must implement the system of personal responsibility. It is necessary to commend those who strictly perform their duties and achieve outstanding results and make important contributions. The honorable titles of advanced workers and model workers must be conferred on them. It is also necessary to severely punish those who neglect their duties and cause serious losses.

HUBEI REPORTS MEASURES TO CHECK 'THREE EXCESSES'

HK280839 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] In approving and transmitting a report on the situation of excessive investment, excessive scale and excessive requirements in capital construction and suggestions for correcting the situation submitted by the provincial planning committee, the provincial capital construction committee and the provincial construction bank, the provincial people's government demands that units in all localities strictly follow procedures for capital construction and put an end to unhealthy practices in capital construction. The report states that in order to do away with the "three excesses" in capital construction, we should first of all establish and perfect the system of feasibility study reports and of technical and economic proof and approval. Second, we should strictly follow procedures for capital construction. From now on, there must be a plan for any project, which is to be submitted for approval irrespective of the source of funds. Design and execution must be carried out strictly in accordance with this plan. Third, in the plan for obtaining investment, sufficient figures must be stated according to the progress of the project and nothing should be omitted. Fourth, we should make efforts to work out a general account for the project in the designing stage, a budget for executing the project and a final account upon completion of the project. They should not be changed or exceeded at will. The construction bank should, in strict accordance with the approved general account, control investment, supervise the allocation of funds and refuse to allot more than the general account. Fifth, we should set up a strict economic responsibility system and further define the economic responsibility of respective departments. While carrying out capital construction, if any problem occurs in a certain link, responsibility should be investigated and affixed to respective departments.

BRIEFS

SHENZHEN LEGAL ADVISORY DEPARTMENT -- The Shenzhen special economic zone in Guangdong Province recently established a legal advisory department to give legal assistance in making use of foreign capital, importing technology and handling foreign firms' investments in the special zone. This legal advisory department does everything possible to ensure the successful fulfillment of contracts and to uphold the lawful rights and interests of the state, the collectives and the investors. The legal advisory department is an organ in which people's lawyers perform their duties. When lawyers perform their duties in accordance with the law, they are protected by the laws of the state and cannot be interfered with by any units or individuals. At present, many state-run enterprises, integrated enterprises and enterprises in which foreign firms have invested have engaged lawyers to serve as their legal advisers. [Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 13 May 82 HK]

SICHUAN RIBAO ON RESISTANCE TO ECONOMIC CHANGES

HK280317 Chengdu Sichuan Provincial Service in Mandarin 0030 GMT 28 May 82

[Report on 28 May SICHUAN RIBAO commentator's article: "Break Through the Resistance and Speed Up the Pace of Forming Joint Undertakings and Carrying Out Reorganizations"]

[Excerpts] The article says: The process of setting up joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization in the province's industry and communications enterprises, which has been underway for 2 years, now, has played a positive role in stimulating the development of production. However, our progress is far from meeting the objective demands of national economic development. At present, there is still very great resistance to this process. Where is this resistance? To put it briefly, first, there are constraints imposed by the current systems and by certain policy factors. Second, people are bound by the force of habit of small producers. Third, areas and departments are hampered by departmentalist thinking.

The article says: Fundamentally speaking, the way to solve these problems is to carry out a reform of the system. However, is there no way of breaking through the boundaries between areas, departments and ownership systems and speeding up the forming of joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization before the current systems are reformed? The experience of Nanchong Prefecture in forming a joint undertaking of its entire motor transport tells us that the key to overcoming multiheaded leadership and forming a joint enterprise lies at the levels of the province, prefecture and county.

To have the industrial departments organize joint undertakings according to their category and to their product lists, as stipulated by the State Planning Commission, is a good way of reorganizing industry along the lines of coordination between specialized departments and an effective way of overcoming multiheaded leadership, trade overlapping, duplicate production and blind construction. We must get a good grasp of this work.

The article points out: It is essential to have unified plans in order to speed up the pace of forming joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization. These plans must be based on the central towns. The four municipalities of Chongqing, Chengdu, Zigong and Dukou, the nine prefectural municipalities, and areas where industry is relatively concentrated must first carry out this work by trades on the spot; the work should then be gradually expanded. The provincial industry and communications departments and bureaus must help the municipalities and prefecures to formulate plans and enthusiastically support all their subordinate enterprises in taking part in local joint undertakings. They should also provide the necessary capital and material support. The plans for setting up joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization must be integrated with readjustment and with the technical reform of the enterprises. All municipalities and prefectures must formulate their general plans this year.

The article says: It is necessary to step up administrative intervention in the work of forming joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization. Joint undertakings should be promoted wherever their establishment will help to develop production and improve economic returns. As for certain leading cadres who persistently refuse to form joint undertakings under various pretexts, even though the reasoning has been clearly explained to them, the policy measures are well known to them and the interests of all parties are properly handled, it is necessary first to educate and second to criticize them, and those who refuse to change their ways must be transferred from their leadership posts to other work.

The article says in conclusion: We must unswervingly follow the path of forming joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization. No matter how great the resistance on the road ahead, so long as we are resolved to overcome the difficulties and forge ahead, the province will certainly be able to achieve new breakthroughs in its work of forming joint undertakings and carrying out reorganization.

YIN FATANG AT XIZANG RALLY ON ECONOMIC CRIME

HK280229 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 0000 GMT 28 May 82

[Summary] The Xizang Regional CCP Committee held a rally of leading party members and cadres of the regional organs on 22 May to further launch the struggle against serious economic crimes. Regional CCP Committee First Secretary Yin Fatang presided and spoke, and Deputy Secretary Song Ziyuan delivered a mobilization report.

Comrade Song Ziyuan said: Xizang has been unfolding the struggle against serious economic crimes for 4 months now. A number of cases have been cracked and some people who committed serious crimes have turned themselves in. "Generally speaking, the development of the struggle is healthy, and it is now being conducted in depth. However, certain units are still very slow to act in this struggle, which is related to the life or death and the prosperity or decline of the party and state. This is an attitude of extreme lack of responsibility to the cause of the party and people. It is a sign of weak party spirit. We cannot tolerate this." Comrade Song Ziyuan demanded that party committees take immediate action, enhance their understanding, correct their attitude, and wage the struggle with vigor. The responsibility of the leadership must be investigated in units where action is slow. It is necessary to concentrate forces to unearth and investigate major and important cases. The regional CCP committee's office for hitting at serious illegal and crminal activities in the economic field must work closely with the public security departments, procuratorates and courts in this work. It is necessary to launch a powerful political offensive to persuade people who have committed serious economic crimes to give themselves up. These people must not miss their present opportunity; they must hurry to give themselves up.

Comrade Yin Fatang said in his speech: "The struggle against serious illegal and criminal activities in the economic field is a major expression of the class struggle in new historical conditions. Far from being almost ended, this struggle has only started. It must be launched in a sustained manner." He said: "Our aim in hitting at serious illegal and criminal activities in the economic field is not just to unearth some cases, but to conduct anticorruption education for the party members, cadres and the masses. We must continue to implement the policy of opening up to the outside world and enlivening the domestic economy. However, we must certainly not on that account relax vigilance against the corruption by capitalism and the remains of feudal ideology." In concludion, Yin Fatang called on the regional organs to enhance their understanding and make a success of the struggle, w[illegible] must be carried through to the end.

XIZANG CONVENES AIR DEFENSE WORK MEETING

HK260153 Lhasa Xizang Regional Service in Mandarin 0000 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] According to XIZANG RIBAO, a regional people's air defense work conference was recently held in Lhasa. The meeting demanded that in this work the region resolutely implement the principle of making all-round plans, focusing on the key points, combining the peacetime and wartime use of projects and putting quality first, and develop, consolidate and perfect people's air defense work in connection with Xizang realities and in light of local conditions. The participants held: Xizang is located on the motherland's southwest border and occupies a very important strategic position. We can understand the importance of people's air defense work, be constantly on the alert, and promote people's air defense work in the region. During the discussions, the participants held: Due to the fact that the foundation for people's air defense in Xizang was rather poor in the past, we must, when carrying out this work, base our efforts on reality, act in the light of local conditions, focus on the key points, integrate urban construction with air defense projects, combine the peacetime and wartime use of the projects, and bring into full play the role of people's air defense construction. Yang Zongxin and Hou Jie, vice chairman of the regional people's government, and (Zhan Yueqi), deputy commander of Xizang Military District, attended and spoke at the meeting.

BEIJING FORUM VIEWS WORK AGAINST ECONOMIC CRIMES

HK280352 Beijing City Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] The Beijing Municipal CCP Committee held a municipal discipline inspection work conference on the morning of the day before yesterday to review the past struggle against serious illegal and criminal activities in the economic field and to make arrangements for further carrying out the struggle in depth. The conference called on the CCP committees at various levels and the departments concerned to resolutely carry the struggle through to the end by making persistent efforts and pursuing victory.

The conference pointed out, after more than 4 months of effort, we have scored initial achievements in the sturggle to crack down on serious illegal and criminal activities in the economic field throughout the city. Up to now, more than 2,300 cases of economic irregularities have been checked and more than 900 cases have been investigated thoroughly and have been dealt with or are being dealt with. Under the influence of the policy "leniency to those who confess their crimes and severity to those who refuse," a number of people who are willing to turn over a new leaf have been redeemed and some die-hard criminals have been isolated. The broad masses of people warmly support this sturggle; they have written an increasing number of letters of exposition and denunciation. Through this struggle we have hit hard at the evil trends of illegal and criminal activities in the economic field and have greatly boosted the healthy trends of socialism.

In the current excellent situation, it is necessary to sum up experiences, determine where we lag behind, make a greater resolution and, in accordance with the guidelines of the decision of the CCP Central Committee, continue to strengthen leadership over the struggle in order to develop the struggle in-depth. For this purpose, the conference set forth four demands as follows:

First, it is necessary for the leading cadres at various levels to continuously study the relevant documents of the CCP Central Committee, further raise their understanding and strengthen their resolve to struggle. It is necessary to fully understand that the struggle to uphold the purity of communism and resist corruption and degeneration waged among the CCP members and government functionaries has a great bearing on the success and failure of our socialist modernization program and the prosperity and decline of our party and state. The current struggle has just been started and the tasks are still very strenuous. The CCP committees at various levels must conscientiously, actively and forcefully exercise good leadership over this struggle. With respect to serious illegal and criminal activities, such as smuggling, selling of smuggled goods, profiteering, swindling, graft, taking bribes and grabbing large amounts of state and collective properties, it is imperative to thoroughly investigate them one by one and promptly deal with them according to party and administrative discipline and state law. With respect to people who intentionally shield and cover up crimes, who resist inspection by the use of their power and influence and who place all sorts of obstacles in the way of the investigation work, it is necessary to seriously deal with them according to party discipline and state law and the seriousness of their case.

Second, it is necessary to conduct education in resisting corruption. At present, our primary attention should be focused on two matters: First, leading cadres at various levels should step up education of their children; second, widespread education in resisting corruption of capitalist ideas and upholding communist ideas should be conducted among CCP members thorughout the city before October in order to fundamentally raise their ability to resist corruption and prevent degeneration.

Third, conscientious attention should be focused on the examination and handling of major and important cases.

Fourth, it is necessary to step up investigation work and strictly act according to policies.

The conference emphatically pointed out that hitting hard at serious illegal and criminal activities in the economic field is a central task of the whole party. It is imperative to unswervingly carry this struggle through to the end.

At the meeting held the day before yesterday, the responsible comrade of the preparatory group of the discipline inspection commission of the municipal CCP committee also made arrangements for the various tasks of discipline inspection work for this year. Municipal CCP committee Permanent Secretary Chen Xitong attended and spoke at the meeting.

BEIJING WANBAO ON PLANNED PARENTHOOD WORK

HK270635 Beijing WANBAO in Chinese 11 May 82 p 3

["Words of a Hundred Schools" column article by Zhou Jianren [0719 1696 0088]: "Planned Parenthood and Carrying on the Family Line"]

[Text] All living things in this world have an instinct of reproducing future generations and multiplying. This is to carry on their family lines. This also holds true of human beings. Nevertheless, man is different from animals after all. Man belongs to social colonies. The reason why people bear children is not just to multiply but also to inherit and carry forward the undertakings of our predecessors.

The earliest human society was a matriarchal society, in which the mother was the center of a family. Even now, one or two minority nationalities in our country are still living in a matriarchal society. Later, the matriarchal society gradually evolved into a patriarchal society and fathers began to occupy a principal position. In the long process of human history, the history of the patriarchal society is far shorter than that of the matriarchal society. It is thus clear that both women and men were able to carry on the family lines. Later, in the class society, particularly in the feudal society, in order to safeguard the ruling position of a smaller number of people, the exploiting classes created various superstitious ideas so that their subjects might be absolutely submissive to their rule. Women were reduced to the lowest stratum and they were deprived of even their right to carry on the family line. As the old saying goes: "Women have three obediences -- to father before marriage, to husband after marriage, and to son after the death of husband." Women did not have independent personalities or the right of making decisions for themselves. If they had no sons or if they had only daughters, their husbands would take a concubine in order to have a son or adopt a son of their brothers. This idea is in fact a feudal idea.

However, this idea still finds support today. There are some people who are not contented just to have a daughter and who simply must have a son. This causes difficulty in the work of planned parenthood. As a matter of fact, anyone who has common sense understands that either a son or a daughter has genetic factors from his or her parents. From the standpoint of blood relationship, either of them can carry on the family line. Therefore, the constitution of our country stipulates that women enjoy equal rights with men in all spheres of political, economic, cultural, social and family life, and daughters and sons enjoy equal rights of inheritance. This is in conformity with both the principle of democracy and science.

In the old society, there were also superstitious factors in the so-called carrying on of the family line. It was believed that after a man died, only his son was able to release his soul from purgatory by burning incense for him. In the new society, this superstitious idea is not so common but the idea that one must have a son even if one has already had a daughter is an obstacle to planned parenthood work.

The reason why living things multiply is to make their future generations prosperous. There is a limit to the world's material resources. Without controlling childbirth, men cannot become prosperous but will have difficulty even to exist. For the sake of our future generations and in order to better carry on the family line, we have to practice planned parenthood and control the growth of population. For this, we have to further eradicate the feudal idea of respecting only men and looking down upon women. Men and women are equal. A son can carry on the family line and a daughter can also carry on the family line. A child can use either his father's surname or his mother's. Men and women should really be equal.

HEBEI PEOPLE'S CONGRESS COMMITTEE MEETING ENDS

HK270747 Shijiazhuang Hebei Provincial Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 18 May 82

[Summary] The 15th meeting of the 5th Hebei Provincial People's Congress Standing Committee concluded on 17 May. The meeting adopted a resolution approving the 1982 provincial budget, approving in principle the provincial regulations on control of trade fairs, and dealt with appointments and dismissals. Committee Vice Chairman Cao Youmin presided at the closing session. Chairman Jiang Yizhen and Vice Chairmen Wu Qingchang, Ge Qi, Ding Tingxin, Quan Zhemin, Zhao Zhenzhong, Zhang Da, Geng Changsuo, Pan Chengxiao, Zhou Xueao, Huang Hua, and Yang Dingan were also present. Provincial Chief Procurator Sun Guangrui attended as an observer.

The resolution on the 1982 provincial budget called on the people of the province to overcome difficulties in the future and work hard to increase production, improve economic returns, strengthen financial management, increase revenue, oppose waste, and strive to fulfill the year's financial tasks.

HEBEI PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE DISCUSSES TAX WORK

HK250351 Shijiazhuang Hebei Provincial Service in Mandarin 0400 GMT 17 May 82

[Summary] The provincial government held a provincial tax work conference in Shijiazhuang from 9 to 15 May. The participants seriously studied the relevant documents of the Central Committee and State Council and the spirit of the national tax work conference, exchanged experiences in work since the third plenary session, and made arrangements for this year's work. Yue Zongtai, deputy secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor, presided. Guo Zhi, secretary of the provincial CCP committee and vice governor, made a speech.

From January to April the province completed 36.3 percent of the year's quota for collection of industrial and commercial tax, with an increase of 17.4 percent over the same period last year. The conference held: "Although the province's financial and economic situation is gradually turning for the better, there are still very many difficulties, and the tasks remain very arduous. We must keep clear heads and strive to overfulfill this year's tax collection tasks."

The conference called for the launching of an extensive publicity and education drive regarding tax collection, to enable the cadres and masses to take a correct view of the role of tax collection in accumulating construction capital for the state. The tax rules and regulations must be strictly followed. The following tasks must be tackled well: 1) promote the development of production, centered on improving economic returns; 2) strengthen the tax collection and control force and block all loopholes; 3) enforce revenue discipline still more strictly; 4) strengthen leadership over tax collection work.

NEI MONGGOL'S ZHOU HUI ON RURAL POLICIES

OW280447 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0722 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpts] Hohhot, 27 May (XINHUA) — On his way to investigate rural areas, Zhou Hui, first secretary of the Nei Monggol Autonomous Regional CCP Committee, told a XINHUA reporter: At present and in the future the major task in the rural and pastoral areas in Nei Monggol is to continuously implement the various principles and policies laid down since the third plenary session for rural and pastoral areas, particularly, to perfect and stabilize the production responsibility system in a down-to-earth way.

Comrade Zhou Hui said: The question of having enough food and clothing for peasants and heroism in the Nei Monggol Autonomous Region has been basically solved since the third plenary session and the situation is gratifying. This fully demonstrates the various principles and policies drawn up by the party Central Committee for the rural and pastoral areas since the third plenary session, especially the production responsibility system profoundly cherished by the peasants and herdsmen, are completely compatible with realities and absolutely correct. However, what we should guard against at present is making the same old mistake as in the past of "making new changes in the policy as soon as one has enough to eat."

Citing facts, Zhou Hui explained that the various forms of production responsibility as a whole should be stabilized and perfected step by step. Comrades engaged in agricultural and animal husbandry work should put a firm grip on existing principles and policies instead of trying to make "new changes."

ZHOU HUI SPEAKS AT INDUSTRIAL WORKERS RECEPTION

SK270559 Hohhot Nei Monggol Regional Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] According to our sources, Zhou Hui, first secretary of the Nei Monggol Autonomous Regional CCP Committee, recently received representatives in Fengzhen County who were going to attend the meeting sponsored by enterprises under the Second Light Industrial Bureau on summing up, appraising and rewarding work achievements scored in conducting education among staff and workers. In his speech at the reception, he noted that in developing industries, attention should be paid to expanding their connotation and that efforts should be made to open more production avenues and upgrade economic returns. At present, some enterprises claim that they have suffered losses due to the price hikes for raw materials and manpower increases. This is an objective reason. However, we should find more reasons which are more subjective and exert efforts to devise ways to upgrade technical standard and product quality, increase variety of products and lower costs to enable products enjoying brisk sales.

In his speech, Comrade Zhou Hui stated: After examining products turned out by enterprises under the Second Light Industrial Bureau in Fengzhen County, I was very satisfied with them. Their products have enjoyed brisk sales in several foreign countries. As a result, they have not only solved the employment problem this year but have also earned more foreign exchange for the state. Both young men and women are able to engage in the production of these commodities, such labor-intensive enterprises are also able to arrange jobs for youths awaiting work. Since our country is densely populated and has a backward economy, it is necessary for us to develop more handicraft industries in a timely manner. To overcome the problem of some young men looking down on service and handicraft trades, we should make efforts to enhance ideological education among them.

HEILONGJIANG'S YANG YICHEN AT WORKERS' RALLY

SK280302 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpts] The provincial rally of representatives of advanced collectives and workers distinguished in children's work concluded successfully in Harbin this afternoon after a 4-day meeting.

Attending the closing ceremony were leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's congress standing committee, the provincial people's government and the provincial CPPCC committee, including Yang Yichen, Chen Junsheng, Zhao Dezun, Wang Yilun, Chen Jianfei, Hou Jie, Chen Yuanzhi, Lu Guang, Zhang Ruilin, Wang Pinian, Wang Caoli, Wang Jun, (Wang Guangwei) and Tang Liandi. The closing ceremony was presided over by (Wu Lintao), chairman of the provincial women's federation. (Zhang Wenlin), deputy secretary-general of the provincial people's government, read the decision of the provincial people's government on commending the advanced collectives and individuals outstanding in children's work.

Leading comrades of the provincial people's congress standing committee, the provincial people's government and the provincial CPPCC committee presented awards to 817 collectives and individuals that received the honorable title of advanced units and workers at the rally. The rally also issued a written proposal to all workers engaged in children's work, urging them to enhance their spirit, work hard and make new contributions in fostering a new generation.

(Wang Guangwei), deputy governor, delivered a closing address.

YANG YICHEN AT NATIONALITIES AFFAIRS CONFERENCE

SK280441 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpt] The provincial nationalities affairs work conference concluded this afternoon. The conference earnestly summed up our province's nationalities affairs work in the past 3 years. Since the party's third plenary session, our province, under the leadership of the provincial CCP committee and the provincial government, has earnestly implemented a series of important policy decisions of the party Central Committee on nationalities affairs, enabling the economy of nationalities to greatly develop, the policy toward nationalities to be further implemented and the unity among nationalities to be further strengthened.

The conference noted: Our province's present and future nationality work must be carried out around the basic goal set forth by the party Central Committee on promoting the national economy and spiritual civilization. It urged efforts to attach primary importance to developing the economy of nationalities, further improve the relations between various nationalities, strengthen unity among nationalities, grasp educational physical culture and public health work well, respect the language, writing, habits and customs of minority nationalities and energetically train, select and employ minority cadres. The conference also offered some valuable suggestions on how to do a good job in our province's nationality work.

This afternoon leading comrades of the provincial CCP committee, the provincial people's congress standing committee, the provincial government and the provincial CPPCC committee, including Yang Yichen, Li Lian, Chen Junsheng, Zhao Dezun, Wang Yilun, Chen Jianfei, (Wang Zhao), Hou Jie, (Wang Fei), Chen Yuanzhi, (Gong Benyan), Lu Guang, Zhang Ruilin, Liu Qian, Wang Pinian, Wu Cheng, Wang Caoli, Wang Jun, Wang Jinling, (Wang Guangwei), Tang Liandi, and Jin Langbai and responsible comrades of departments concerned received all comrades attending today's conference. Li Lian, second secretary of the provincial CCP committee, addressed the conference.

HEILONGJIANG RELEASES KMT PERSONNEL IN CUSTODY

SK280624 Harbin Heilongjiang Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] In line with the decision adopted by the 22d Session of the NPC Standing Committee, our province's public security departments have released all 125 former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel at and below county and regimental levels held in custody. Rallies to mark this occasion were held separately in Harbin, Zhaoyuan, Beian and Tailai, those personnel have received ideological education, showing varying degrees of determination to mend their way. At the rallies, responsible persons of the people's courts and the reform-through-labor organs in carious localities issues certificates of pardon and release and granted citizenship to them. The people's governments also gave them each a new suit, bedding and 100 yuan as pocket money.

Representatives of those released and representatives of their family members spoke at the rallies. They thanked the party and the people's government for their lenient policy and expressed their determination to make contributions to the unification of the motherland and the construction of our country's socialist modernization with their production and work in the days to come.

Those personnel released, after visiting plants and shops and touring round the city tomorrow, will return to their native towns or work in local plants.

JILIN RELEASES 66 FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL

SK261428 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] According to our sources, in accordance with a decision adopted by the 22d Session of the Standing Committee of the 5th NPC, the provincial public security department held a rally in Changchun this morning to pardon and release, for the first time, 66 former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and special agents below the country and regimental levels held in custody. At the rally, the Changchun municipal and the Siping prefectural intermediate people's courts announced the letter of ruling on pardoning and releasing 66 former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and special agents below the country and regimental levels held in custody. Certificates of pardon and release were issued to them by the public security and labor reform organs. In addition, each of them was given adequte bedding and clothing and 100 yuan in pocket money. Those who want to return home were given adequate money for travel and provided with grain coupons.

(Zhang Jintao) spoke at the rally on behalf of all those released. He thanked the party and government for their education, redemption and for giving them a new lease on life. He also pledged to make contributions to the four modernizations, the return of Taiwan to the motherland and the fulfillment of the great task of unifying the country.

(Yang Jianzhi), deputy director of the provincial public security department, spoke at the rally. Attending the rally were leaders and representatives of 17 units including the provincial people's court, the provincial procuratorate, the judicial department, the united front work department and the propaganda department. An informal dinner was held for them after the rally.

JILIN PLA, MILITIA URGED TO COMBAT DROUGHT

SK270406 Changchun Jilin Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] The provincial military district held a telephone conference yesterday evening urging all subordinate PLA units and the broad masses of militia in the province to act immediately to help local people combat drought.

The telephone conference pointed out: Our province is now being hit by drought, and this situation is serious in some localities. This has a direct impact on the growth of crops. To help the local people do a good job in combating drought, the provincial military district has set forth concrete demands to subordinate PLA units and the militia in the province. Party committees and leading comrades at all levels must enhance their understanding and realistically attach importance to drought-combating work. The people's armed forces departments must closely coordinate with the local governments to organize the militia and the broad masses of commune members and the people to combat drought. Militia must bring their role as shock work teams into full play in the drought-combating work. All PLA units subordinate to the provincial military district must promote our army's glorious traditions and actively assist the local people to combat drought and make contributions to reaping a bumper agricultural harvest in our province in 1982.

LIAONING CRACKS SERIOUS ARMED MURDER CASE

SK280502 Shenyang Liaoning Provincial Service in Mandarin 2200 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] According to LIAONING RIBAO, on 25 May the Liaoning provincial public security department sent a congratulatory telegram to Dalian municipality and circulated a notice of commendation throughout the province hailing the successful crackdown of the "27 February" serious armed murder case by the Dalian municipal public security organs.

The municipality disclosed that, on the evening of 27 February, two armed ruffians entered a building in the (Houjiagou) area of (Shahekou) District in Dalian municipality, shot one person dead, wounded another and then escaped. These arrogant criminals also mailed an anonymous threatening letter to the municipal public security bureau 7 days after the incident.

With favorable support of departments concerned and the masses, public security cadres and policemen under Dalian municipality arrested the culprits in only 2 days (23 and 24 May) without firing shots or hurting anyone. Their model 54 pistol and over 100 bullets were confiscated. The personnel concerned also discovered wristwatches and identification cards of victims as well as the same writing paper as that used in their threatening letter in their house.

According to the investigation of the case, the culprits are identified as the worker (Wang Jun) of the Dalian steel plant and his younger brother (Wang Sheng). Both of them confessed to the murder case and firearm robbery. The case is still being processed.

LIAONING HITS EXCESSIVE CONSUMER GOODS IMPORTS

HK260857 Shenyang LIAONING RIBAO in Chinese 16 May 82 p 3

[Commentary by Xue Qun [1331 5028]: "We Must Not Blindly Import Consumer Goods"]

[Text] At present certain kinds of imported consumer goods, such as tape recorders, TV sets, dress materials, garments and wristwatches are being poured into our market. This situation has brought about many adverse impacts on our country's consumer goods industry.

Some people are of the opinion that since there is money in the hands of the masses and since their demand for consumer goods has become more exacting, importing large quantities of consumer goods will promote the development of our national industry as well as meet the needs of the people's life. This idea is wrong, though it sounds reasonable. Importing large quantities of consumer goods will only result in our domestic market being flooded by imported goods and some consumer goods produced domestically becoming unmarketable.

This will not only prevent the development of our national industry but it will be detrimental to it. At the same time, the excessive importation of comsumer goods will also make it easier for the capitalist lifestyle and degenerate ideology to percolate into our country and corrupt the general mood of our society. Some people regard importing foreign goods as a pleasure and owning foreign goods as an honor. They are even reluctant to part with the foreign trademarks that are stuck on their glasses, for fear that without the trademarks, they will not be able to show off that their glasses are foreign. Others are infatuated by greed for material gains and have colluded with dishonest foreign merchants and wantonly carried out activities of speculation, trafficking contraband, fraud, embezzlement and bribery at the expense of the interests of the state and the people. Thus they have embarked on a criminal path. From the above we can see that eliminating the blind importation of consumer goods is imperative both for developing our country's consumer goods production and for checking the spread and overcoming the impact of the capitalist lifestyle and degenerate ideology.

Encouraging the reduction of importation of consumer goods by no means signifies that we should close the door and reject all things that are imported. In order to develop our trade and exchange with other countries in the world and in order to facilitate our four modernizations, we need to import some consumer goods while learning and referring to the advanced experiences of other countries and introducting advanced technology and equipment from abroad. For example, we have good reason to import a small quantity of consumer goods that we presently cannot produce domestically and for which there is an urgent demand arising from the people's life, if we can thus meet the demands of the people's life. In order to learn from and refer to foreign goods, we can also import some advanced and suitable consumer goods as samples for imitation. We should pay special attention to introducing some advanced technology of consumer-goods production and conscientiously make efforts to master it so as to promote the development of our own consumer-goods industry. After all, a socialist country like ours can never have any hope of solving the problem of consumer-goods supply by excessive importation. All we can do is to learn from anything foreign that is useful for us, vigorously develop our own consumer-goods industry on the basis of self-reliance, and strive to raise the quality, increase the varieties and lower the costs of the consumer goods we produce so as to make our consumer goods cheaper and better, and so as to meet the everincreasing needs of our people.

Undoubtedly, the quality of some of the consumer goods produced in our country is not as good as those imported from abroad, but imported consumer goods differ in quality and some of them also are of poor quality. It is never true that anything imported from abroad is automatically good. It is not a healthy idea to blindly seek imported goods and to look down on anything produced at home. It is an even more unhealthy idea to be ashamed of being Chinese for that reason. Throughout his lifetime, our beloved Premier Zhou Enlai always wore a wristwatch produced in our country. This showed a proletarian revolutionary's support and love for the consumer-goods industry of his country. We should learn from and carry on this spirit.

SEVERE WINDSTORMS, SNOW IN GANSU HARM CROPS

SK220355 Lanzhou Gansu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1125 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] The broad masses of cadres and the people in Wuwei Prefecture are working hard to strive to minimize losses caused by windstorms and snowstorms. Wuwei Prefecture was hit by 8-grade gales and snowstorms and experienced low temperature successively on 1-14 May, causing grain and cash crops to suffer serious damage. After the disasters, prefectural responsible comrades have led over 200 prefectural and county level cadres to go to rural farming areas to study concrete measures for antidisaster work along with the masses. Gulang County has reallocated 880,000 jin of seedlings, 800,000 yuan of funds and over 220 tons of chemical fertilizer to the commune members and the masses and organized them to replant or to change the variety of farm crops. Minqin County has replanted and switched over its 28,000 mu of grain and cash crops which suffered the hardest hit to growing corn, cereal grain, cabbage and melons. It has also watered other disaster-stricken crops.

The provincial CCP committee and the people's government have shown concern for the anti-disaster struggle launched by the masses in Wuwei Prefecture and have allocated in a timely manner some fodder and chemical fertilizer to the disaster-stricken areas.

QINGHAI MEETING REPORTS ON ECONOMIC SITUATION

SK280259 Xining Qinghai Provincial Service in Mandarin 2330 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 25 May, the provincial CCP committee propaganda department and the office of the provincial people's government convened a meeting of cadres of the provincial level organizations. Song Lin, deputy secretary of the provincial CCP committee and deputy governor, delivered a report on the province's economic situation.

Comrade Song Lin pointed out in his speech: Since the 3d plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee, the economic situation in our province, as elsewhere, has been stable and very good. The various undertakings are now on the track of stable development. During the past 3 years, particularly this year, our province's industrial and agricultural production has made healthy progress.

Thanks to the liberalization of policies and the implementation of various forms of the production responsibility system in accordance with local conditions, the situation in farming and livestock production is very good. The number of livestock, sheep and goats on hand last year stood at 21.8 million, an increase of 210,000 over 1980. There was rather serious drought and waterlogging last year. However, the masses made great efforts to minimize losses. Rural people's minds were at ease, grain prices were stable and public order was good. This year's agricultural situation is the best since 1958.

The industrial and communications front has implemented the readjustment policy and closed, suspended operations, merged and transferred to other lines of production 80 enterprises. The output value of the light and textile industries has accounted for 39.5 percent of the t[illegible] industrial output value. The province has had 45 products win provincial good-qua[illegible]ty prizes and 5 products win national silver medals. The province's industrial production has grown continuously. First quarter industrial output was valued at 275 million yuan, 23.3 percent of the annual plan. Thanks to the increases in total output and income from sales, industrial and commercial taxes have been collected expeditiously and economic effectiveness has been improved.

Comrade Song Lin also discussed the party and government efforts to improve the people's living standards. He said: During 1979-81, the state subsidized an average 425 million yuan and 390 million jin of (?grain) annually in our province. The province spent 650 million yuan to improve the people's living standards during those 3 years.

With the care and support of the party and the state, problems in livelihood of our province's peasants and herdsmen have virtually been solved. The overwhelming majority of urban cadres and workers have had their income increased and their livelihood improved.

According to statistics, the 1981 per capita income of herdsmen was 186 yuan. The per capita income of staff and workers of the state-owned sector was 1,103 yuan, an increase of 17 percent over 3 years ago. The average housing space of staff and workers today is 5.49 square meters, well above the national average.

Comrade Song Lin pointed out: The party and state in recent years have strived to improve the people's living standards while facing great difficulties. Our achievements are hard-earned. In conclusion, he said that: All facts show the party's line, principles and policies adopted since the third plenary session are correct. Our economic situation is good. However, we must note that there are still difficulties and problems in our economic work. Our province is a minor one with a weak economic foundation and limited financial and material resources. This calls for us to implement the principle of acting according to one's capabilities and to put production development before everything else. Everyone must do his duty well, [words indistinct] and score greater achievements in our various undertakings.

XINJIANG AIR FORCE UNIT STEPS UP PROPAGANDA WORK

HK190303 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 18 May 82

[Summary] The political department of the air force command post of the Urumqi PLA units has sent a propaganda group into the units to conduct education for the cadres and fighters in loving the motherland, Xinjiang, and their units and jobs.

"The fourth company of a certain unit is stationed on the Tianshan mountains. Certain fighters held that the hardships of the border region were too great. The propaganda group lectured them on 'lovely Xinjiang, the antihegemonist outpost,' and in connection with the state of mind of the cadres and fighters told them about the old generation of proletarian revolutionary fighters from [words indistinct] to Chen Canquiu, Mao Zemin and Li Xinlu, who battled bravely to liberate Xinjiang. They went on to talk about the aggressive nature of the new and old czars from the time of the opening up of Xinjiang. As a result everyone understood: Xinjiang is not only a good place vast in expanse and rich in materials; it also occupies a very important strategic position. They pledged to regard hardship as an honor, regard the interests of the party and people as the most important thing, be content with life in the border region and make new contributions to guarding it."

BRIEFS

XINJIANG ECONOMIC SITUATION -- Urumqi, 21 May (XINHUA) -- all economic sectors of the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region report stability and growth in the first 4 months of 1982, according to yesterday's Xinjiang daily. The paper said agriculture and animal husbandry report healthy production prospects. Despite lasting low temperatures and drought in some areas of the region, spring sowing was completed by early May on more than 1.09 million hectares. Field management of winter wheat has been strengthened, the paper says, thus guaranteeing a good crop. A high lamb survival rate of 95 percent was also recorded, the paper said. Afforested areas in the first 4 months reached about 25,730 hectares, an increase of 11.3 percent over the first half of last year. Industrial output value in the first 4 months of the year increased 8.8 percent compared with the same period last year. An increase of 18.1 percent was registered in light industry. The volume of rail freight increased 14.55 percent in the first 4 months of the year from the same period of last year, and the turnover of retail sales of daily commodities increased 8.2 percent. The total value of exported goods more than tripled, the report said. [Beijing XINHUA in English 0723 GMT 21 May 82 OW]

MING PAO: DENG CONCERNED ABOUT GUANGDONG, FUJIAN

HK280659 Hong Kong MING PAO in Chinese 28 May 82 p 6

[Special dispatch from Beijing: "Deng Xiaoping Is Concerned About Guangdong and Fujian"]

[Text] While upholding the open-door foreign policy and implementing the policy of enlivening the domestic economy, the CCP is launching a full-scale struggle against corrosion within the party and carrying out a rectification movement among the CCP members. The reasons are that the implementation of the open-door foreign policy makes it inevitable that there will be contact with industrialists and businessmen from capitalist society and the capitalist profit-before-everything mentality and bourgeois ways of life that come with them are bound to exert their influence; and, following the implementation of the policy of enlivening the economy, the remnant forces of the old society and the decadent ideas of the exploiting classes are bound to spread unchecked and stir up trouble.

The situation is exactly like this. From the material that has already been revealed we can see that, over the past 2 to 3 years, the capitalist profit-before-everything mentality and bourgeois ways of life have obviously exerted a corrosive influence on the CCP cadres in many fields of social life on the Chinese mainland. Quite a few cadres, and even leading senior cadres, have become moral degenerates due to their being seduced by material benefits. This has seriously obstructed the correct implementation of the open-door foreign policy and the policy of enlivening the domestic economy, disrupted the modernization program and exerted an adverse influence on social stability. From this the CCP has drawn the conclusion that, by launching a struggle against corrosion, it is possible to educate and redeem a large number of cadres, restore and improve the prestige of the CCP among the masses and ensure the smooth execution of the modernization program.

This reporter has learned that Deng Xiaoping has full confidence in the open-door policy and the policy of enlivening the economy. After spending a holiday in the south at the beginning of this year, he returned to Beijing. He vigorously supported the struggle against corruption which was decided upon and directed by Chen Yun and decided to go to the south again to inspect work in Shenzhen and Zhuhai and to acquaint himself with the development of the special economic zones. He holds that, first of all, it is necessary to affirm the contributions of the achievements of the special economic zones to the modernization program of the state. It is imperative to uphold the open-door policy. We should not waver because of the adverse influence brought by the open-door policy. He emphatically pointed out that the question of smuggling, sale of contraband, corruption and bribe taking is fairly serious in Guangdong and Fujian Provinces. However, the responsibility does not lie with the open-door policy, but with the cadres themselves.

It has been learned that the news that Deng Xiaoping had decided to inspect the two special economic zones of Shenzhen and Zhuhai was revealed unintentionally by Zhou Zang in his speech at Shenzhen in February this year. The news was immediately transmitted to Hong Kong and reported in newspapers. As a result, he changed his mind and sent a special plane instead last month to fetch all the leading cadres at the provincial level in both Guangdong and Fujian to Beijing for a meeting. After listening to reports about the two provinces, he instructed the leading cadres of the two provinces to pay close attention to the struggle against corrosion. They should not let even one potential major economic case go unexposed and should punish all culprits severely. They should also step up ideological and political work among cadres who are CCP members in order to strengthen their capability to resist material seduction and avoid being struck down by capitalist fragrant wind and poisonous fog.

PRC REPORTEDLY RESTRICTS TRADE WITH ROK, TAIWAN

HK260600 Hong Kong SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST in English 26 May 82 p 8

[By Peter Humphrey]

[Text] China has yielded to North Korean pressure to start a clampdown on its "indirect" trade with South Korea through Hong Kong.

Chinese officials engaged at the recent Guangzhou trade fair were issued with an instruction manual and given oral briefings in which they were forbidden to form trading relationships with foreign and Hong Kong-Chinese companies engaged in this covert line of business. This was disclosed by sources close to China's principal trade organizations at the fair, who said that Beijing has recently grown extremely cautious over this indirect trade following its increasing publicity abroad.

Instruction manuals are issued to trade officials at the fair every year, listing all countries of the world and providing explicit guidance to officials on how to deal with trading partners from each country. Generally, the sources explained, there is little change from year to year in the policy towards each country, but small changes do take place concomitant with changes in diplomatic relations. This is the first year since trade with South Korea and Taiwan through third parties surged in 1979 that such strict official instructions on the subject have been incorporated in the briefings.

These disclosures follow reports in the SOUTH CHINA MORNING POST early this month that China's indirect two-way trade with South Korea through Hong Kong had expanded 10-fold over the two years 1980-81 to reach a total of HK$1.22 billion. Korean businessmen and officials estimated total Sino-South Korean trade last year through all third territories at over HK$5.5 billion. It was also disclosed that indirect trade with other "enemy" countries like South Africa and Israel was similarly on the rise.

Trade with South Korea has been tacitly encouraged by the South Korean authorities because Seoul's importation of Chinese coal and its export to China of consumer goods has been viewed as valuable business.

Beijing, however, has trodden more warily in endorsing the trade because at stake are China's friendly relations with the North Korean regime in Pyongyang. Beijing has no diplomatic relations with Seoul.

Reliable South Korean sources have said that Pyongyang's President Kim Il-song has recently applied pressure on Beijing to restrict its indirect trade dealings with the South -- and it is this pressure which businessmen have felt in recent months.

A clampdown is also under way against indirect trade with Taiwan, apparently because of Taiwan's rejection of the communist regime's nine-point re-unification proposal and the Nationalists' unabated invocations for recovery of the mainland.

It is in China's imports from South Korea and Taiwan that the clearest effects of a clampdown have been witnessed, which statistics show to have slipped considerably during the first quarter of this year.

Taiwan exports to the mainland via Hong Kong intermediaries dropped 24 percent from last year's first quarter to the equivalent of around HK$473 million, according to the Hong Kong government's Census and Statistics Department. In the same quarter last year these exports had jumped five times over 1980.

South Korean exports to China through the colony in the first quarter of this year fell 16 percent to HK$143 million, while in the 1981 quarter they had jumped 64 percent.

However, China's exports to Taiwan from January to March this year still increased by 11 percent over the first quarter of last year to HK$115.5 million, and exports to South Korea doubled to $126.5 million. This seems to indicate either a lesser concern by Beijing, or at least lesser control, over outward-bound goods than over imports.

Imported South Korean goods in China would be more detectable by North Korean diplomats and students resident there. And Taiwanese goods, analysts say, might arouse indignation and protest from hardline communists who resent Taiwan's intransigence over reunification proposals and prefer a more hard-handed approach to the Nationalists.

In both cases, the opponents of covert trade would find it harder to detect China's exports to Taiwan and South Korea, this trade being less in Peking's control because the regime cannot always know where foreign traders are shipping Chinese goods.

Beijing now dictates that goods from Taiwan cannot enter China without permits from the Ministry of Economic Relations and Foreign Trade, which are difficult to obtain, according to recent reports.

Since December some traders in Hong Kong have been reported as having South Korean goods confiscated or held by the Chinese authorities until fines were paid for their return.

DAILY REPORT

China

Vol I No 105 1 June 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

UNITED STATES

Senate Majority Leader Baker Pays Visit to PRC B 1
Arrival in Beijing B 1
Liao Chengzhi Hosts Banquet B 1
Meeting With Deng Xiaoping B 2
AFP on Deng's Remarks B 2
Baker, Hummel Host Reception B 2

NORTHEAST ASIA

Premier Zhao Ziyang Begins Visit to Japan D 1
Departure From Beijing D 1
Arrival in Tokyo D 1
Official Welcome by Suzuki D 2
First Zhao-Suzuki Talk D 2
Zhao-Suzuki Banquet Toasts D 5
Second Zhao-Suzuki Talk D 7
Zhao's Economic Proposal D 8
Article on Growing Relations D 9
[RENMIN RIBAO 31 May]
Review of PRC-Japan Ties D 10
Radio Previews Visit D 11

SOUTHEAST ASIA & PACIFIC

DK's Ieng Sary Interviewed by Correspondents E 1
Former South Vietnamese Official Interviewed E 2
Briefs: Bulk Carrier for Hong Kong E 4

WESTERN EUROPE

Ji Pengfei Meets With West German Delegation G 1
Huang Hua Meets Outgoing Portuguese Envoy G 1
Officials Attend Norwegian Envoy's Reception G 1
Union Leader Attends French Labor Congress G 1
Commercial Delegation Concludes Visit to Italy G 1

EASTERN EUROPE

Romanian Military Officials Visit Nanjing H 1
Power Delegation Leaves for Romania, Hungary H 1
Wan Li Attends Meeting Honoring Tito's Birthday H 1
Zhu Kuifan Receives Yugoslav Youth Delegation H 2

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Special Envoy He Ying Pays Visit to Egypt I 1
Comments on Visit I 1
Meeting With Mubarak I 1
Egyptian Official's Remarks I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Editorial Stresses Educating Rural Cadres [RENMIN RIBAO 28 May] K 1
Article Discusses State, Government Systems [RENMIN RIBAO 24 May] K 3
Leaders Meet Former KMT General Li Hanhun K 6
Deng Xiaoping Meeting K 6
Ye Jianying Meeting K 6
CPPCC National Committee Fete K 6
CPPCC Members Inspect PLA Engineer Corps Unit K 7
Demonstration Televised K 8
Yang Shangkun Addresses Army Management Meeting K 8
JIEFANGJUN BAO Editorial K 9
Yang Shangkun Lauds Beijing PLA Units at Meeting K 9
Wang Zhen Arrives in Urumqi From Romania 28 May K 10
Xinjiang TV Begins Uygur-Language Channel K 11
Wan Li Receives Men's Badminton Team 29 May K 11
Zhao Ziyang, Others Visit Goods Exhibition K 11
Leaders Address Children in Beijing 30 May K 12
Deng Yingchao Addresses Child Care Workers K 13
Leaders Attend Soong Ching Ling Memorial Ceremony K 15
Daqing Satellite Communications Experiment Planned K 17
1982 Economic Yearbook Scheduled for Publication K 17
RENMIN RIBAO Carries HONGQI Table of Contents [30 May] K 18

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Zhou Zijian at Anhui Meeting on Constitution O 1
Fujian's Xiang Nan on Work Among Intellectuals O 1
Shanghai Releases Former Kuomintang Personnel O 2
Briefs: Anhui Drought Circular O 2

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong's Ren Zhongyi Inspects Disaster Areas P 1
Heavy Rainfall, Storms Continue in Guangdong P 1
Further Report P 1
Additional Statistics P 2
Economic Society Established in Shenzhen Zone P 2
Hubei Holds Report Meeting on Draft Constitution P 2
Heavy Rainstorms Cause Flooding in Hunan P 2

SENATE MAJORITY LEADER BAKER PAYS VISIT TO PRC

Arrival in Beijing

OW301216 Beijing XINHUA in English 1210 GMT 30 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 30 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr., Mrs. Baker and their party arrived here by special plane this afternoon for a 10-day visit to China at the invitation of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress.

They were greeted at the airport by Zeng Tao, deputy secretary-general of the N.P.C. Standing Committee, and Mr. Arthur W. Hummel, Jr., U.S. ambassador to China, and Mrs. Hummel.

It is learned that Senator Baker will exchange views on issues of common concern with Chinese leaders in Beijing. The American guests will then tour Shanghai, Suzhou and Xian after their sojourn in Beijing.

Liao Chengzhi Hosts Banquet

OW311516 Beijing XINHUA in English 1501 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr., Mrs. Baker and their party were honored at a banquet given by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress at the Great Hall of the People here this evening.

Liao Chengzhi, vice-chairman of the N.P.C. Standing Committee, presided over and spoke at the banquet. The Chinese side, he said, is "looking forward to a frank and sincere exchange of views with the senator in the next few days."

Liao Chengzhi added: "The development of Sino-U.S. relations is not only in the fundamental interests of our two peoples, but also conducive to the peace and stability in Asia and the world as a whole. That is why the normalization of Sino-U.S. relations is warmly received by our two peoples.

"At present, the development of Sino-U.S. relations is seriously hindered, and our two peoples are deeply concerned over this. We believe that the serious differences between the two countries are not difficult to bridge in conformity with the desire of our two peoples, provided that the norms governing international relations are truly upheld."

In his reply, Senator Baker said he hoped that his visit could play a role in strengthening Sino-U.S. ties. He added: "Although there are still areas of disagreement between us, I am certain that with understanding and determination on both sides, these differences can be resolved satisfactorily."

"As majority leader of the U.S. Senate," Senator Baker said, "I can assure you that the great majority of my colleagues strongly support continued good relations between our two countries."

U.S. Ambassador to China Arthur W. Hummel, Jr. and Mrs. Hummel attended the banquet. Also present were Hao Deqing and Deng Zhaoxiang, members of the N.P.C. Standing Committee; Aisin Ghiorroh Puchieh, deputy to the N.P.C.; Zeng Tao, deputy secretary-general of the N.P.C. Standing Committee; and Han Xu, vice-minister of foreign affairs.

Prior to the banquet, Liao Chengzhi met with Senator Baker. This morning, Senator Baker and his party toured the Great Wall and a Ming tomb.

Meeting With Deng Xiaoping

OW010908 Beijing XINHUA in English 0900 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China, today met with U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr. It was learned that they exchanged views on Sino-American relations.

Deng Xiaoping said: "China hopes to maintain its friendship with the U.S." He pointed out that "only if China and the U.S. deal with the problems confronting them in the spirit of safeguarding each state's interests and respecting the other's national interests can the two countries establish and develop good relations and the relations will not be impaired." Deng Xiaoping also reiterated China's position on the Taiwan issue. He said he hoped that the Reagan administration would take a wise position for an early settlement of this issue.

Baker said that he would make further efforts to develop Sino-American friendly relations. [Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin at 1200 GMT on 1 June, in a similar report on the Deng meeting with Baker, adds the following at this point: "He held that the development of the relationship between the two countries has a bright future."]

Present at the meeting were Arthur W. Hummel, Jr., U.S. ambassador to China, and the principal members of Baker's party. Also present were Zeng Tao, deputy secretary-general of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, and Han Xu, vice-minister of foreign affairs.

Deng Xiaoping posed for photos with Mr and Mrs Baker and their party.

AFP on Deng's Remarks

OW010558 Hong Kong AFP in English 0534 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, 1 Jun (AFP) -- Chinese strongman Deng Xiaoping has said he would like to meet United States President Ronald Reagan, visiting U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said today.

Mr Baker (Rep, Tennessee) made the announcement after a meeting here with the Chinese Communist Party vice-chairman, who was the architect on the Chinese side of the normalisation of Sino-American relations. Mr Deng's call comes at a time of controversy between the United States and China over Taiwan.

Thomas Griscom, Mr Baker's press attache, said Mr Deng had expressed the wish for an exchange of views with Mr Reagan, not only on the Taiwan issue, but "the overall relationship between our country and China".

Baker, Hummel Host Reception

OW011252 Beijing XINHUA in English 1247 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 1 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr. and Mrs. Baker and U.S. Ambassador to China Arthur W. Hummel, Jr. and Mrs. Hummel gave a reception at the U.S. Embassy here this afternoon.

Among the Chinese guests attending the reception were Liao Chengzhi, vice-chairman, and Hao Deqing and Deng Zhaoxiang, members, of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; Aisin Ghiorroh Puchieh, deputy to the N.P.C.; Zeng Tao, deputy secretary-general of the N.P.C. Standing Committee; and Zhang Wenjin and Han Xu, vice-ministers of foreign affairs.

Today, U.S. Senator Baker also had separate talks with Hao Deqing and Zhang Wenjin.

PREMIER ZHAO ZIYANG BEGINS VISIT TO JAPAN

Departure from Beijing

OW310158 Beijing XINHUA in English 0138 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, left here by special plane this morning for an official visit to Japan at the invitation of the Japanese Government.

Among those seeing the premier off at the airport were Vice-Premier Wan Li, State Councillor Gu Mu, Secretary-General of the State Council Du Xingyuan, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Gong Dafei, Vice-Minister of the State Economic Commission Lu Dong, Vice-Minister of the State Planning Commission Gu Xiulian, Vice-Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Wei Yuming and Charge d'Affaires ad interim of the Japanese Embassy in China Koji Watanabe. Premier Zhao shook hands with them before boarding the plane.

Members of Premier Zhao's party include Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Zhang Jingfu, state councillor and minister in charge of the State Economic Commission; Wu Xueqian, vice-minister of foreign affairs; Zheng Tuobin, vice-minister of foreign economic relations and trade; Chen Chu and Tian Jiyun, deputy secretaries-general of the State Council; Gan Ziyu, vice-minister of the State Planning Commission; and Song Zhiguang, Chinese ambassador to Japan (already in Japan).

Arrival in Tokyo

OW310804 Beijing XINHUA in English 0749 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council of the People's Republic of China, arrived here today for an official visit to Japan at the invitation of the Japanese Government.

The special plane carrying the Chinese premier and his entourage touched down at Haneda Airport at 1353 hours local time. The Chinese premier's entourage includes Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Zhang Jinfu, state councillor and minister of State Economic Commission; and other officials.

Upon the arrival of the Chinese guests, the crowds waiting at the airport burst into cheers and applause.

Seiya Nishida, head of the suite of honour and chief of protocol of the Japanese Foreign Ministry, and Sung Zhiguang, Chinese ambassador to Japan, went aboard the plane to greet Zhao Ziyang.

Standing at the entrance to the plane, Zhao Ziyang, in all smiles, waved back to the welcomers. He shook hands with Yasue Katori, Japanese ambassador to China and officials of the Chinese Embassy here. Then he drove to the state guest house in the city where he will attend an official welcoming ceremony to be presided over by Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki later this afternoon.

Zhao Ziyang is scheduled to have his first round of talks with Suzuki after the ceremony and take part in a banquet given by Suzuki in his honour.

During his stay in Japan, Zhao Ziyang, as he told Japanese journalists earlier this month, "will discuss and exchange views with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki on the international situation and the furtherance of Sino-Japanese relations."

He will also meet Japanese Emperor Hirohito and renew acquaintanceship with Japanese friends in various circles.

The Chinese premier is to address a rally under the auspices of various Japan-China friendship organizations.

Zhao Ziyang will give a press conference in Tokyo. A joint press communique summing up the visit will be released later this week.

The Chinese premier and his entourage are scheduled to tour Tokyo, Kobe, Osaka, Nara and Kyoto during their stay in Japan.

In this 10th year after normalization of relations between China and Japan, following Zhao Ziyang's visit, Zenko Suzuki will pay a visit to China later this year.

Official Welcome by Suzuki

OW311754 Beijing XINHUA Dimestic Service in Chinese 1322 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, 31 May (XINHUA) -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki presided over an official ceremony this afternoon at the state guest house to welcome Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang.

Zenko Suzuki arrived at the state guest house by car at 1600. After walking into the entrance hall, he warmly shook hands with Zhao Ziyang. Zhao Ziyang said with a smile: "Nice to see you again." Zenko Suzuki smilingly replied: "Welcome, welcome." Press photographers lost no time in taking shots of this scene of warm friendship. Luxuriant trees in the yard of the state guest house looked particularly fresh and green after a drizzle. Chinese and Japanese national flags on lampposts around the state guest house fluttered in the wind.

Zhao Ziyang and Zenko Suzuki walked out of the entrance hall over a red carpet to mount the reviewing stand. At this time, a clarion bugle call sounded and the welcoming ceremony started. A band played the national anthems of China and Japan. Zhao Ziyang, accompanied by Zenko Suzuki, then reviewed the guard of honor of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces.

Following the review, Zhao Ziyang waved his greetings to the welcoming crowd. At this time, Japanese children and representatives of Overseas Chinese and Chinese students studying in Japan waved Chinese and Japanese national flags to warmly welcome Zhao Ziyang and his party.

Zhao Ziyang shook hands with Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa and other members of the Japanese Cabinet. The welcoming ceremony was attended by about 300 people.

First Zhao-Suzuki Talk

OW311934 Beijing XINHUA in English 1906 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in their first round of talks here this afternoon exchanged views sincerely on the current international situation and world-wide problems of common concern. The talks were held at the Japanese prime minister's official residence.

Prime Minister Suzuki said that the relations between Japan and China have entered the stage of durable and unfailing friendship. The numerous achievements made by the two countries in the past decade are not only beneficial to Japan and China but also to peace and stability in Asia and the world, he added. In the coming decade, the cooperative relations between the two countries will develop further.

Premier Zhao said that the Sino-Japanese relations will develop further in depth and breadth through the mutual visits by the prime ministers of the two countries this year. These visits are beneficial to the two peoples and vital to peace and stability in Asia and the world. This is of great significance throughout the 1980's.

Zhao Ziyang said: The current international situation is marked by ever increasing tension and turbulence. While old problems remain unsettled, new crises are emerging. Their root cause lies in the rivalry between the two superpowers. On the one hand, one must see that the Soviet Union and the United States are quickening their pace of contention for strategic superiority in a really aggressive manner. On the other hand, the Soviet Union has much more difficulties than it had last year when the Cancun conference was held. Zenko Suzuki said: The international situation is really getting more serious and urgent. The reason lies in the continued increase of military strength by the Soviet Union which, with its powerful military strength, invaded Afghanistan, penetrated into and exerted influence upon Poland and the Third World, and supported Vietnam in its aggression against Kampuchea. This is the reason for the international tension.

The Chinese premier said: China stands for strengthening the unity and cooperation with the Third World countries, opposing hegemonism and safeguarding world peace. He stressed: China and Japan are confronted with common threats. In face of the current turbulent international situation, it is all the more necessary for the two countries to develop further their relations of friendship and cooperation and contribute to peace and stability in Asia and the world.

The Japanese prime minister expressed concern and worry over the Sino-U.S. relations. With respect to this, Zhao Ziyang said: As to the crisis in the Sino-U.S. relations, China is not to be blamed. Nevertheless, we have still made great efforts. We have shown necessary and maximum consideration to problems left over by history on condition that China's sovereignty is not violated. However, negotiations have achieved no results so far. U.S. Vice-President George Bush's visit to China has promoted the two sides' understanding of each other's stand; thus, the talks were conducive. [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese at 1721 GMT on 31 May, in a virtually identical report on this subject, renders the previous clause "...thus, the talks were beneficial."] But so far the U.S. side has made no steps forward to solve the question of arms sales to Taiwan. Differences between the two sides remain to be settled and the crisis has not passed. The two sides will continue their negotiations. Whether any progress can be made in the future all depends on what a resolve the U.S. leaders will make. Premier Zhao stressed: No matter how the Sino-U.S. relations may develop in the future, China will make no change whatsoever in its policy of developing friendly and cooperative relations with Japan.

On the Sino-Soviet relations, Zhao Ziyang said, there have been no changes in this respect. We have noted Soviet leaders said that they wanted to improve the Sino-Soviet relations, but they haven't take any practical action. The worsening of the Sino-Soviet relation is not caused by the improvement of the Sino-U.S. relations and the change in the Sino-U.S. relations will not bring about a change in the Sino-Soviet relations. We always lay stress on establishing state relations on the basis of the five principles of peaceful coexistence. We have always held that the question of the Sino-Soviet relations should be settled through negotiations, but the Soviet Union shows no good faith.

On Japanese-Soviet relations, Zenko Suzuki said the Soviet Union has been increasing its military strength in the Far East year by year and expanding the construction of its military installations on the four northern islands, inherent territories of Japan. This is a hidden threat to Japan. He said Japan has its own basic force of defence to safeguard the country.

The Soviet Union strongly demanded that Japan provide economic cooperation in exploiting Siberia, the Japanese prime minister said. But Japan would by no means separate economics from politics and engage in unprincipled economic cooperation. Japan follows the principle that the four northern islands should be returned and a peace treaty should be concluded. When this is not achieved, it is impossible to establish real Japanese-Soviet friendly ties.

Zenko Suzuki said that Japan also asks the Soviet Union to stop its aggression against Afghanistan and not to interfere in the internal affairs of Poland and other countries. Otherwise, Japanese-Soviet relations cannot be improved.

On the issue of Kampuchea, Zhao Ziyang said China supports a political settlement of the Kampuchea issue, but such a settlement should be based on the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. The time for a political settlement of the issue is now immature, he said. China has consistently supported the three patriotic forces in Kampuchea in getting united and has made many efforts in coordination with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to achieve this end. One important principle for the union among the three patriotic forces is that it is beneficial to the struggle of resisting the Vietnamese aggressors. Thus, a real union is in need, a common programme for the union should be worked out and the three forces should be equal. China hopes to see an independent, neutral and non-aligned Kampuchea. If Democratic Kampuchea requires and the ASEAN countries agree, China hopes that Kampuchea will become a member of the ASEAN.

Zhao Ziyang said: The relations between China and ASEAN are good. China hopes to see a strong and united association of Southeast Asian nations. We attach great importance to the role played by the ASEAN countries in opposing Soviet and Vietnamese aggression and expansion and safeguarding peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Zenko Suzuki said that the five ASEAN countries cherish an ardent desire for self-reliance and Japan is willing to provide assistance to ASEAN. There is still no indication that the situation in the Indochinese Peninsula is turning for the better. Japan will maintain close contact with ASEAN, extend support to Democratic Kampuchea as far as possible on the international arena, make Vietnam withdraw its troops and help establish peace in Indochina through peaceful negotiation. We have cooperated with various ASEAN countries along this orientation.

During the talks, Prime Minister Suzuki expressed his hope that the situation on the Korean Peninsula will remain stable. Premier Zhao said that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is devoting every effort to build the country, develop its national economy and raise the people's living standards. It is ready to adopt positive measures to lessen the North-South military confrontation and war threat. There is no such problem as the North thrusting into the South. He reiterated that China supports the proposition of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea.

Among others attending the talks on the Chinese side were Huang Hua, Zhang Jingfu, Wu Xueqian; [Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service adds the following names: Zheng Tuobin [6774 2148 1755], Chen Chu [7115 2806], Tian Jiyun [3944 4764 0061], Gan Ziyu [3927 1311 3768], Song Zhiguang [1345 0037 0342] and Xiao Xiangqian [5135 0686 0467]; and on the Japanese side were Yoshio Sakurauchi, Kiichi Miyazawa, [Yasue Katori, Kensuke Yanagiya and (Akiteru) Kiuchi].

Zhao, Suzuki Banquet Toasts

OW010535 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1700 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Tokyo, 31 May (XINHUA) -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki hosted a grand banquet this evening at his official residence to warmly welcome Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang. In their toasts, both pledged to further strengthen the longstanding friendly and cooperative ties between the two nations.

An atmosphere of Sino-Japanese friendship and solidarity prevailed this evening at the prime minister's official residence. When Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki came shoulder to shoulder into the banquet hall, the band played Chinese and Japanese music, and the whole hall resounded with warm applause.

Chinese and Japanese flags hung at the center and on the two sides within the banquet hall. The tables were decorated with beautiful flowers.

Amid warm applause, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki made a toast. He said: "This year is the 10th anniversary of the normalization of relations between Japan and China, a year worthy of commemoration. The friendly and cooperative relations between Japan and China have been developed firmly and solidly in the past decade. In the fact of increasingly tense international situation, these relations have made new progress year after year and, like a warm breeze in May, contributed positively to peace and stability."

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki noted: "The friendly and cooperative relations between Japan and China, we may say, do not simply reflect only a period of time in the international political situation; they have a broad foundation which has been built by the peoples of the two countries through frequent visits and exchanges at various levels in the past."

He said: "It is a matter of course that Japan and China should maintain their friendly relations for a long time to come. However, it would be wrong to take for granted the friendly relations existing between the two countries. Only conscientious efforts of the persons concerned of both countries make it possible to have today's relations between Japan and China and to further develop tomorrow's relations between the two countries. We must bear this deeply in our mind."

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said: "Japan and China have different histories and social systems. Therefore, tireless and sustained efforts should be made to deepen their mutual understanding and friendly ties." He added: "To bring about a new leap in the next 10 years, I wish to march forward together with His Excellency Premier Zhao and others present here today on the sound foundation that we have built over the past 10 years."

Zenko Suzuki said that China is carrying out a modernization policy. "Here I wish to once again assure you unequivocally that we will do our best to cooperate with your country in making efforts toward this end," he said.

In his toast, Premier Zhao Ziyang said: "This year is the 10th anniversary of the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations. This past 10 years have seen fine relations between our two countries." He said: "Despite the intricate, turbulent and changing international situation, happily the relations between our two countries have been developing smoothly and progressing continuously.

"Through our concerted efforts, we have concluded the Sino-Japanese treaty of peace and friendship and signed a host of agreements on trade, air transport, sea transport, fishing, culture, science and technology, we have established and developed political relations of peace and friendship as well as economic relations of equality and mutual benefit."

He pointed out: "Facts have proved that the friendship and cooperation between China and Japan are fully in the interests of the Chinese and Japanese peoples and constitute an important factor for maintaining peace in the Asian-Pacific region and the whole world."

Zhao Ziyang said: "The Chinese Government treasures the fine relations that have been established between China and Japan and is willing to make continued efforts to consolidate and develop such relations. It deems it extremely important for the two countries to establish a friendly and cooperative relationship that is durable, stable and unaffected by any changes in the international situation. To this end, a more solid foundation should be laid during the 1980's"

Referring to China's domestic situation, he said: "The Chinese people are striving to work for socialist modernization by uniting as one. China's economic construction is embarking on the path of steady and healthy growth under the guidance of the principle of readjustment, restructuring, reorganization and upgrading." He said: "In China's economic construction, we mainly rely on the efforts of the Chinese people. At the same time, we attach great importance to the continued implementation of the open-door policy and the development of the external economic relations, which are one of China's long-term policies. To develop Sino-Japanese relations has an important place in China's foreign policy."

Looking forward to the future of Sino-Japanese relations, Zhao Ziyang said that with the advance of China's cause of modernization, the friendly and cooperative relations between China and Japan will expand more extensively in all realms. He stated that the Chinese Government would like to make unremitting efforts to this end together with the Japanese Government.

Their toasts were met with bursts of applause. After the banquet, the Chinese premier and Japanese prime minister posed for a picture in the reception hall. Premier Zhao also met with Takeo Miki and Takeo Fukuda, former prime ministers; Hajime Fukuda, speaker of the House of Representatives; and Masatoshi Tokunaga, speaker of the House of Councillors, and had friendly conversations with them.

Also invited to the banquet were Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs; Zhang Jingfu, state councillor and minister in charge of the State Economic Commission; Wu Xueqian, vice minister of foreign affairs; Zheng Tuobin, vice minister of foreign economic relations and trade; Chen Chu and Tian Jiyun, deputy secretaries general of the State Council; Gan Ziyu, vice minister in charge of the State Planning Commission; Song Zhiguang, ambassador to Japan; and other Chinese guests.

Among the more than 100 guests present at this evening's banquet were Takaaki Hattori, president of the Japanese Supreme Court; and Cabinet members, including Yoshio Sakurauchi, minister of foreign affairs; Michio Watanabe, minister of finance; Kichiro Tazawa, minister of agriculture, forestry and fisheries; Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry; Tokusaburo Kosaka, minister of transportation; and Toshio Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency.

Also attending the banquet were responsible persons of the Liberal Democratic Party, the Japanese Socialist Party, the Komei Party, the Democratic Socialist Party and the New Liberal Club, personages from the economic, cultural, science and athletic circles as well as responsible persons of Japan-China friendship organizations.

Second Zhao-Suzuki Talk

OW011228 Beijing XINHUA in English 1211 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- China and Japan pledged today to establish long-standing and stable ties of economic cooperation in the spirit of peace, friendship, equality and mutual benefit. This is the main topic at the second round of talks held between Premier Zhao Ziyang and Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki here this morning.

The two premiers first reviewed the development of relations between China and Japan. Premier Zhao said that since the normalization of relations in 1972, and particularly since the conclusion of the treaty of peace and friendship between China and Japan in 1978, the development of relations between the two countries has been smooth and fruitful. The Chinese Government has taken note of this with satisfaction. He said that in the past decade the two countries have established peaceful and friendly political relations as well as equal and mutually beneficial economic relations, while exchanges in the domains of technology, culture and education have also made rapid progress. The friendly and cooperative relations between them have developed at an unprecedented pace and scale. These developments serve the fundamental interests and meet the common aspirations of both the Chinese and Japanese peoples, and are conducive to peace and stability in Asia and the rest of the world.

Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said the Sino-Japanese relationship has now entered a ripe stage. In the next decade, effort should be made to further expand and strengthen this relationship. This is not only in the interest of the Chinese and Japanese peoples, but will also contribute to peace and stability in Asia and the world.

On the occasion of the 10th anniversary of the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations, he said, the exchange of visits between the two prime ministers and their discussions on further developing bilateral cooperative relations are of epoch-making significance.

Premier Zhao said that there are many favorable conditions for the development of economic relations between China and Japan despite their different social systems. This may be summed up as "timeliness, topographical advantages and harmony between the peoples". "Timeliness" means the normalization of relations, the conclusion of the peace and friendship treaty and the smooth development of friendly ties between the two countries. International developments have also made it feasible and necessary to enhance such cooperation. "Topographical advantages" mean that China and Japan are close neighbors separated only by a strip of water. China is rich in mineral and other resources while Japan possesses advanced industrial technology. They can help supply each other's needs and make up each other's deficiencies. "Harmony between the peoples" means the long-standing traditional friendship between the two countries and their people's strong desire to remain friends from generation to generation. Both governments have taken a positive attitude towards promotion of relations between the two countries.

Premier Zhao put forward the three-point principle for the promotion of economic relations between China and Japan. He said that the three-point principle can be summarized as: peace and friendship, equality and mutual benefit, and long-standing stability.

He stressed that the 1980's are years of significance in all aspects. It is China's hope, he said, that Sino-Japanese economic relations would gain new developments in the 1980's through efforts from both sides, thus laying a foundation for a long-standing and stable system of Sino-Japanese economic cooperation.

Prime Minister Suzuki said that he agreed to Premier Zhao's basic ideas regarding the friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries in the decade to come. "We should develop these relations fromthe present basis," he said. The two governments, he noted, are at one in this regard.

Referring to the problem of Japanese orphans in China, Prime Minister Suzuki said that "the Chinese Government has been most considerate in this matter. I express my gratitude in the name of the Japanese Government and people." He asked Premier Zhao to convey the gratitude to the Chinese foster-parents of these orphans.

At the end of the talks, Prime Minister Suzuki said he was happy with the fruitful results of the talks in the past two days. Premier Zhao also expressed similar satisfaction.

During the talks, Premier Zhao informed Prime Minister Suzuki of the Chinese Government's decision to present Japan with a male giant panda.

Prime Minister Suzuki expressed deep thanks, adding that the Japanese people, children in particular, and the Japanese Government will be very happy.

Zhao's Economic Proposal

OW010728 Beijing XINHUA in English 0717 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang proposed to the Japanese side here today a three-point principle for promoting the economic ties between China and Japan. The proposal was made during the second round of talks he had with Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki this morning.

The three points of the principle are:

1. The economic relations between China and Japan should be developed energetically on the basis of their present peaceful and friendly ties and in line with the (1972) Sino-Japanese joint statement and the (1978) Sino-Japanese treaty of peace and friendship.

2. The economic relations between China and Japan should steadily develop in scope and depth according to the principle of equality and mutual benefit and proceeding from each other's needs and possibilities so as to help supply each other's needs and make up for each other's deficiencies.

3. The development of economic relations between China and Japan should be long-standing and stable and impervious to international storms, in comformity with the fundamental interests of the people of both countries and their aspirations for a friendship from generation to generation.

The three-point principle, Premier Zhao Ziyang noted, can be summarized as: Peace and friendship, equality and mutual benefit, and long-standing stability.

The proposal, as the Chinese premier has explained, is meant to lay a foundation for the establishment of a system of long-standing and stable cooperation between China and Japan.

Huang Hua, Zhang Jingfu and Wu Xuegian, who accompanied Premier Zhao in his Japan tour, and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and some other Japanese Cabinet members were present at the talks.

Article on Growing Relations

HK311254 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 31 May 82 p 6

[Article by Zhang Yunfang [1728 0061 2455] "Favorable Climatic, Geographical and Human Factors -- on Sino-Japanese Friendly Relations Which Continue To Grow With Each Passing Day"]

[Text] Premier Zhao Ziyang will go to Japan today for an official visit, adding a new page to the history of Sino-Japanese friendship.

Last year a Japanese paper conducted a public opinion survey among the citizens, asking: Which country in the world do you think is on the most intimate terms with us? China ranked first in replies. According to data from Japan a dozen years ago, however, most Japanese people did not understand China. The great changes that have taken place in the past dozen years are precisely the achievement of the normalization of Sino-Japanese relations.

Since the resumption of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations in 1972, the two countries have signed aviation, trade, ocean shipping, fishery, cultural, scientific and technological agreements one after another. In 1978, the two countries concluded the Sino-Japanese treaty of peace and friendship. Over the past decade, leaders of the two countries have visited each other on many occasions and the two countries have established 39 sister city, province and county agreements. All this is a faithful record of the growing development of Sino-Japanese relations and the deeper understanding between the peoples of the two countries.

With the development of the international situation, both China and Japan are sharing increasingly identical views on some major international affairs. Although the social systems of the two countries are different, both of them are subject to threats from the hegemonists. On issues having a strong bearing on the world situation as a whole such as the Afghan and the Kampuchean issues, both countries have taken identical stands. YOMIURI SHIMBUN said: "The basically identical views of China and Japan on world issues are a major feature of Sino-Japanese relations today."

Another outstanding feature in the Sino-Japanese friendly relations is the continuous development of the economic and trade relations between the two countries. In 1972 business transactions between the two countires amounted to only $1 billion, but they are well over $10 billion now. Today, Japan has become China's biggest trading partner, accounting for a quarter of China's trade volume, while China's export to Japan ranks fifth in Japan's import volume. Moreover, over the past few years, the China Import and Export Corporation has set up more than 10 offices in Japan and set up 5 joint companies with Japan. Permanent Japanese foreign trade institutions in Beijing exceed 100. NIHON KEIZAI SHIMBUN said in an article that the economic development of China and Japan reflected the will of the people of the two countries and was an important link in Sino-Japanese relations today. During the past decade, cultural educational, scientific and technological exchanges between the two countries have also been very frequent. The Japanese Government has undertaken rotational training of Chinese teachers in Japanese. There are now nearly 1,000 Chinese students and trainees studying in Japan. The number of Chinese students sent to Japan is second only to that sent to the United States. When recalling Sino-Japanese friendly relations on New Year's Day this year, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said:

"Since the normalization of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations, mutual exchanges between the peoples of the two countries have developed in depth and breadth. I firmly believe that the mutual understanding brought about by such an extensive exchange is the basis of the lasting friendly relations between the two countries."

When talking about Sino-Japanese relations, the Japanese people often quote a Chinese saying: Favorable climatic, geographical and human factors. The six Chinese characters appropriately summarize the favorable conditions for further developing Sino-Japanese relations.

Favorable climatic factor refers to the current international situation. Now the world is full of the smell of gunpowder. Although Japan has become the second largest economic giant of the West, it is poor in natural resources and has to rely on imports for a great many things. If a war breaks out which results in the blockade of the shipping routes, it will be put in a tight spot. Like China, it also hopes for a peaceful international environment. The fact that both China and Japan have the same expectations of the international situation will inevitably promote further development of Sino-Japanese relations.

Favorable geographical factor refers to close neighbors separated only by a strip of water. The shortest distance between the two countries is only 100 miles. Owing to geographical proximity and covenient transportation, it is more advantageous to buy Chinese goods than European or U.S. goods, even at the same prices.

Favorable human factor refers to the popularity of Sino-Japanese relations. In their mutual contacts, the people involved have a common feeling; there is a reliable feeling of proximity between the people of the two countries.

The favorable conditions in Sino-Japanese relations determine that the relations between the two countries can withstand the storm and stress of the world and develop in the direction of friendship. Former Japanese Finance Minister Michio Watanabe said: China has what Japan does not have; while Japan's strong point is precisely what China needs. There are bright prospects for Sino-Japanese friendship and cooperation. It will benefit future generations of the two countries.

Looking forward to the future of Sino-Japanese relations, people are filled with confidence. It is believed that the current visit of Premier Zhao Ziyang to Japan will promote further development of the friendly relations between the two countries.

Review of PRC-Japan Ties

OW310655 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1238 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 28 May (XINHUA) -- Major events in 10 years of friendly relations between China and Japan:

In September 1972, Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan visited China at the invitation of Premier Zhou Enlai of China. On 29 September the Governments of China and Japan issued a joint statement, declaring the end of the abnormal state of affairs between the two countries and the decision to establish diplomatic relations and normalize relations between China and Japan. This opened a new chapter in the history of relations between the two countries. In April 1973 China and Japan exchanged their first ambassadors.

On 12 August 1978 the Governments of China and Japan signed the China-Japan Treaty of Peace and Friendship.

In October of the same year Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping visited Japan and attended the ceremony at which the instruments of ratification of the China-Japan Treaty of Peace and Friendship were exchanged. The formal coming into force of the China-Japan Treaty of Peace and Friendship marked a new beginning of the good-neighbor and friendly relations between the two countries.

The friendly exchanges between China and Japan have developed tremendously since the establishment of diplomatic relations. Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng visited Japan. Deng Yingchao, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, also visited Japan and attended the unveiling ceremony of a tablet of Premier Zhou Enlai's poem in Arashiyama. Since then other Chinese state leaders and delegations of many trades and organizations as well as personages from various circles have also visited Japan. Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, former Speaker of the House of Councillors Ken Yasui, Speaker of the House of Councillors Masatoshi Tokunaga and Speaker of the House of Representatives Hajime Fukuda visited China. Leaders and delegations of Japan's Diet, government, political parties, military, economic, finance, trade, cultural, educational, sports, press, scientific and technical and mass organizations as well as personages from various circles visited China one after another.

In the past 10 years important agreements and accords signed between China and Japan include the China-Japan trade agreement, the China-Japan long-term trade agreement, the China-Japan air transport agreement, the China-Japan maritime transport agreement, the China-Japan fishery agreement, the agreement on laying submarine cables between China and Japan, the agreement and technical cooperation contract on building the Baoshan iron and steel complex in Shanghai, the agreement on joint exploration and exploitation of petroleum and natural gas resources in the southern and western parts of the Bohai Sea, the agreement between the Chinese and Japanese Governments on promoting cultural exchanges, the memorandum on academic exchanges, the agreement between the Chinese and Japanese Governments on scientific and technical cooperation, and so forth.

In 1971, before the normalization of relations between China and Japan, the total trade volume between the two countries was U.S. $1 billion, an increase of 900 percent in 10 years.

In 1980 China and Japan began holding Sino-Japanese Government officials' conferences periodically in Beijing and Tokyo for consultations between senior Chinese and Japanese officials in charge of foreign affairs.

The Chinese and Japanese Governments also successively decided to set up consulates general in Shanghai and Osaka and Guangzhou and Sapporo.

Since Tianjin and Kobe became friendly cities in June 1973, 39 more friendly pairings have been formed between cities, provinces and prefectures of the two countries.

Radio Previews Visit

OW310229 Beijing in Japanese to Japan 0930 GMT 30 May 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] In commemoration of the 10th anniversary of the establishment of normal diplomatic relations between China and Japan, the prime ministers of the two countries are scheduled to exchange visits this year. This is of historic significance in friendly Sino-Japanese relations. We, the people of China, are looking forward to the mutual visits of the leaders of the two countries. The following is a Radio Beijing commentary on the premier's coming visit to Japan:

The Sino-Japanese joint statement issued 10 years ago reads in part: China and Japan are neighboring countries separated only by a strip of water, and there is a long history of traditional friendship between them. The normalization of relations between China and Japan will open a new page in the annals of relations between the two countries.

A review of the course of the past 10 years shows that this prediction has been remarkably fulfilled. Especially subsequent to the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty signed 4 years ago, relations between the two countries have developed rapidly. Over the last 10 years the leaders of the two countries have exchanged visits, and their ministers have also made frequent visits to hold useful discussions and exchange views on international developments of common interest and on ways to improve the relationship between the two countries. Furthermore, periodic meetings of high-level officials of the two countries began to be held 2 years ago. This was indeed an epochal event in friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries. These ministerial meetings have already been held twice, alternately in Beijing and Tokyo. In addition, periodic meetings of vice foreign ministers have been held three times. Moreover, delegations of the Japanese upper and lower houses and delegations of the NPC (equivalent to the Japanese Diet) have also exchanged visits.

Private-level exchanges of personnel between the two countries have become more frequent, with hundreds of delegations exchanging visits. Private citizens of Japan did a great deal to realize the normalization of relations between Japan and China, and they are still making great contributions to the development of the friendly ties between the two countries.

Over the last 10 years, the economic ties of the two countries have made considerable progress. The volume of trade last year already reached the 10 billion dollar level, or 10 times the trade volume of 10 years ago when the normalization of relations was realized. Japan ranks first in China's foreign trade.

Economic cooperation is progressing steadily in many areas. China has a large population and territory and is blessed with rich resources. On the contrary, Japan does not abound in resources, but it has advanced science and technology and superb experience in management. Given these conditions, if these two countries complement each other in the economic field and cooperate with one another on the basis of equality and reciprocity, it will be beneficial to their economic development.

In addition, mutual friendly visits and cooperation in the areas of culture, education, science, technology, medicine and public health have borne satisfactory results.

The history of friendly relations between China and Japan is 2,000 years old. These relations will continue to deepen and develop steadily in the new ear.

Prime Minister Suzuki said that there are no troubles or difficulties confronting relations between Japan and China, and only friendship and trust exist between them. Premier Zhao Ziyang, too, at his recent press conference, said: We not only value the existing fine relationship between Japan and China but also are under obligation to continue to strive to strengthen and develop this friendly relationship. Thus, he expressed his intention to further improve Sino-Japanese relations through his coming visit to Japan.

China and Japan are neighbors separated by the sea. For these two countries to establish and develop a lasting, stable relationship which will not be affected by international storms under the current complex and unstable international situation will not only accord with the interests of the peoples of the two countries but will be beneficial to peace and security in the Asian-Pacific region and the rest of the world.

Premier Zhao Ziyang's upcoming visit to Japan will surely further consolidate the bridge of friendship between the two countries and move their friendly relations forward even more.

DK'S IENG SARY INTERVIEWED BY CORRESPONDENTS

OW290911 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1529 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Phnum Malai, Democratic Kampuchea, 28 May (XINHUA) -- Ieng Sary, Democratic Kampuchea's deputy prime minister in charge of foreign affairs, and Division Commander (Sokpiap) and Division Political Commissar (Nikhon) of Democratic Kampuchea's National Army on 27 May received XINHUA and RENMIN RIBAO correspondents from Bangkok at two campsites in the Sisophon area south of Highway No 5 in Battambang Province. They spoke glowingly of the great victory won by Democratic Kampuchean forces against enemy mopping-up operations in the Sisophon area.

At a certain place in the Phnum Malai area where the atmosphere of war had just vanished, Ieng Sary told the correspondents that the plan for the recent dry season "mopping up" operations by the Vietnamese aggressor troops in Kampuchea was drawn up in cooperation with the Soviet Union. The Vietnamese offensive against the Sisophon area could be roughly divided into three stages. The first stage began on 14 January and ended on 17 February. Using the tactic of a surprise attack, the enemy penetrated deep into the rear area of the Democratic Kampuchean forces and pressed on toward the Kampuchean-Thai border. As a result, the enemy occupied quite a large area. The Democratic Kampuchean forces, with the exception of those that continued fighting in the jungles, were forced to withdraw to the west of Highway No 502. The second stage was a period in which the Democratic Kampuchean forces inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Beginning in mid-February, the Democratic Kampuchean forces avoided frontal contacts and switched to tactics characterized mainly by guerrilla warfare, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy, with the fighting reaching a stalemate. The third stage began on 2 April and ended on 12 April. The enemy was forced to withdraw completely from places it had temporarily occupied. The Vietnamese forces' dry season offensive against the Sisophon area finally ended in defeat by the end of April.

Ieng Sary said emphatically that in launching the "mopping-up" operations against the Sisophon area this year, the Vietnamese forces were more ambitious than before, attempting to achieve multiple military, political and diplomatic goals. But the result proves that the Democratic Kampuchean forces cannot be wiped out, but are tempered in battle and getting stronger. The Vietnamese forces failed to achieve their goals.

(Sokpiap), commander of a certain division stationed in the Phnum Malai-Phnum Mak Hoeun area, added: In the dry season offensive, the enemy did not mount a frontal attack on Phnum Malai and Phnum Mak Hoeun, but tried to first gain complete control of the area to the south of the two mountains and then move northward and take Phnum Malai to achieve a greater political impact. However, the Democratic Kampuchean forces seized the initiative by striking at the two enemy battalions committed for the surprise attack and constantly disrupted the Vietnamese forces' main advance route between Takong and Veal Veng, giving effective support to the Democratic Kampuchean forces on the main battlefields near Chakrei and in other places.

At a command post north of Chakrei, facing a crater-filled battleground, Political Commissar (Nikhon) told the correspondents: In the dry season offensive, the Vietnamese forces threw in more than 10,000 troops. During the fighting, another 5,000 troops were added to replace the wounded and killed and those withdrawn for rotational rest and reorganization, but this could not reverse the defeat.

In the 3 months of fighting, the enemy mounted four general offensives, and fierce fighting took place at (Bai-lan-ta-lie) Mountain, (San-bo-lun) Mountain, (Da-si-da) Mountain and the Kampuchean village of (Duo-ze-lei) across from (Kao-ding) Mountain in Thailand. In the 3 months, Democratic Kampuchean forces killed and wounded a total of nearly 3,000 enemy troops, destroyed 19 enemy tanks and recovered all the lost territories of the area under their control. Now, in clearing up the battlefields, 10,000 land mines have been dug out, and all the origianl residents have returned to rebuild their homes on the ruins of war.

FORMER SOUTH VIETNAMESE OFFICIAL INTERVIEWED

OW301201 Beijing in Vietnamese to Vietnam 1400 GMT 28 May 82

[Station correspondent's recent interview with former Justice Minister of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam [PRGRSV] Truong Nhu Tang during his visit to the PRC -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Your Excellency Truong Nhu Tang, during your visit to China in 1980 our Beijing radio station's correspondent had a chance to interview you and, over our radio station, you addressed the entire Vietnamese people. In your address, you said that you had contacts with Vietnamese nationals of various strata and that overseas Vietnamese in various parts of the world were determined, together with the Vietnamese people at home, to topple the Le Duan clique's rule. Please, Your Excellency, tell us about the situation in this regard over the past several years.

[Answer] Overthrowing the Le Duan clique is both the earnest aspiration and firm determination of Vietnamese people of all strata at home and abroad because the clique has detrayed the Vietnamese nation, repressed the Vietnamese compatriots and resigned itself to serving as a cheap lackey of the Soviet hegemonists. Over the past years, Vietnamese nationals in all parts of the world have repeatedly exposed the clique's crimes before world public opinion and the governments of friendly countries. Associations and organizations of Vietnamese nationals have emulated one another in opposing the presence of Le Duan's men whenever they showed up overseas. They have endeavored, by all means, to win the sympathy and support of the people and governments of countries in the world for the Vietnamese people's just struggle to topple the dictatorial and fascist Le Duan clique.

Following my visit to China in the fall of 1980, I met with people of various strata and government officials in other countries such as the United States and the Common Market countries in order to clearly expose the fascist nature of the Hanoi authorities headed by the Le Duan clique. Our world publicity campaign has received the warm welcome and sympathy of friends everywhere. Overseas Vietnamese are thinking day and night about the endurance, hardships and miseries of their compatriots at home who are being rudely oppressed under the Le Duan clique's rule. They are seeking, by all means, to get in touch with, provide support to and coordinate their activities with their compatriots at home. The communication and the coordination of activities between the Vietnamese people at home and abroad are aimed at weakening the Le Duan clique in all fields -- diplomatically, politically, and militarily -- before an uprising to topple the clique.

[Question] Please give us your observations of the recent Fifth VCP Congress and tell us, according to your knowledge, about the observations of overseas Vietnamese in various parts of the world of this congress.

[Answer] My general observation is that the Fifth VCP Congress has exposed a serious intraparty split and signaled the Le Duan clique's intensification of dictatorial and fascist measures and its complete subservience to the Soviet Union. It has also revealed its economic collapse and its intensifying and prolongation of the war of aggression in Kampuchea. A further analysis shows that:

First, the repeated delays of the Fifth VCP Congress and the purge within the leadership and among party echelons proved that there was an intense intraparty struggle. Large numbers of cadres and party members are disheartened and have criticized and expressed distrust of the erroneous political line and economic plan set forth by the Le Duan leadership clique.

Second, the Le Duan clique shirked its responsibility for its leadership blunders. Instead, it harshly criticized those leading and executive echelons that did not side with it and did not approve of its complete subservience to the Soviet Union and of its wrecking of Sino-Vietnamese friendship. Its criticisms were aimed at eliminating and purging those who did not side with it.

Third, a look at the composition of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau shows a concentration of power in the hands of the Le Duan clique, thus signalign an intensification of dictatorial and fascist rule.

Fourth, the Fifth VCP Congress failed to devise a concrete economic plan because Soviet aid is trifling and irregular.

Fifth, the presence of many generals in the Political Bureau and the party Central Committee indicates a hardline policy of continuing to provoke hostilities against China and intensifying the war of aggression in Kampuchea.

As for Vietnamese nationals in different parts of the world, regarding the Fifth VCP Congress, they have no confidence in the law, and they worry. They have no confidence in the law because the Le Duan clique, for the past 7 years, has not matched its words with its deeds. They worry because the clique will intensify its dictatorial and fascist rule and will further repress their compatriots and relatives.

[Question] Your Excellency, how do you assess Nguyen Co Thach's recent trip to Western Europe, and what was the reaction to the trip among Vietnamese national in Western Europe?

[Answer] Nguyen Co Thach's recent trip to Western Europe had two objectives -- political and economic. Politically, it was aimed at delivering the Le Duan clique from its isolation in the world which resulted from the Western people's condemnation of its trampling on human rights in Vietnam and its invasion of Kampuchea. Moreover, it was also designed to motivate Western countries to isolate Democratic Kampuchea with their empty-seat votes at the coming UN Assembly. This scheme was also coordinated with the scheme to manipulate nonaligned countries at the coming Baghdad conference. Economically, it was designed to court Western countries so as to get more aid because the trifling Soviet aid has begun to sadden the Le Duan clique and choke Vietnam's battered economy.

How ironic it was when Pham Van Dong said that borrowing new loans to pay old debts is like slaking one's thirst with poison. Yet the clique does not even have poison to quench its thirst.

In April, the Common Market affirmed that it would continue cutting aid to Vietnam as long as human rights continue to be trampled underfoot in Vietnam and as long as Kampuchea continues to be invaded.

Vietnamese nationals in West European countries have launched campaigns, given explanations, and laid bare the true nature of the Hanoi regime before world public opinion and the governments of the countries where they reside. In Paris, Vietnamese nationals, in coordination with Kampuchean and Lao friends, staged a demonstration in front of the place where Nguyen Co Thach held a press conference.

[Question] For several years, the Le Duan clique has striven to spread the allegation about the China threat to Vietnam. Would you please give your opinion on this matter?

[Answer] It is common that thieves often cry "stop thief" and locusts insolently want to fight against elephants. Relying on the Soviet Union's power, the Le Duan clique has, on the one hand, lent a hand to its hegemonistic master in encircling China, and it invaded friendly neighboring Kampuchea. On the other hand, it has directly provoked hostilities and carried out propaganda and aroused enmity against China. This runs counter to the Vietnamese people's aspiration of building up, consolidating and strengthening friendship between the peoples of China and Vietnam. It has feverishly carried out propaganda about the China threat in order to cover up its true nature as a lackey and aggressor, to sow confusion among and agitate a number of Southeast Asian countries about the so-called Overseas Chinese peril, to create pressure on and block Chinese support for and aid to the resistance movements of the peoples of Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos against the Le Duan clique, and to deceive Western countries in its effort to isolate China. Ironically, China, a great benefactor and friend of the Vietnamese people, has been turned, but the Le Duan clique, into Vietnam's direct and most dangerous enemy. This runs counter to the will of the Vietnamese people, who resolutely and absolutely oppose the wrecking of the close Sino-Vietnamese friendship.

[Question] To end this interview, I suggest that Your Excellency say something to our numerous listeners.

[Answer] I am very happy to have a chance to talk to you, compatriots. I think that where there is oppression, there is struggle. Compatriots at home and abroad have no alternative but to rise up in struggle of every form to topple the Le Duan clique because it is driving our country and people on the path of complete subservience and serving as lackeys to the Soviet hegemonists; of a prolonged war of aggression against Kampuchea; of enmity and hostilities against China, a great benefactor and friend of the Vietnamese people during their wars of resistance; and of poverty, misery, ignorance and backwardness.

Under the Le Duan clique's rule, there is no independence, no freedom, no peace, no democracy, no decent life. Holding all power and brute force in its hands and relying on the power of its Soviet master, the Le Duan clique is repressing the compatriots in a ruthless, dictatorial and fascist manner. Rise up, compatriots, to win back independence, democratic rights, and a decent life, and proceed toward toppling the Le Duan clique in order to save our country and people and to build a peaceful, independent, unified, democratic, neutral and nonaligned Vietnam.

Overseas Vietnamese constantly think about their beloved homeland and share the sufferings of their compatriots and relatives who live under the Le Duan clique's harsh, oppressive rule. Despite the hardships they have to undergo in their lives as exiles, our overseas Vietnamese are struggling continuously to expose the traitorous, aggressive, dictatorial and fascist nature of the Le Duan clique. Their struggle before world public opinion is designed to win the sympathy and moral and material support for the struggle of their compatriots at home. Although many difficulties, hardships and sacrifices lie ahead in our people's struggle, their just revolution for national liberation will certainly be victorious. I hope to have more chances to talk to you, compatriots, in the days ahead.

[Correspondent] I thank you, Your Excellency Truong Nhu Tang, for your kindness in receiving and granting this interview to a Beijing radio correspondent. My salutations to you, Your Excellency.

BRIEFS

BULK CARRIER FOR HONG KONG -- Dalian, 26 May (XINHUA) -- The Dalian Shipyard in Liaoning Province launched a 27,000-ton bulk carrier here this morning for Green Island Inc. of Hong Kong. Built according to the standards of the Lloyd's Register of Shipping, the new ship, the Haifu, is 197.15 meters long and 23 meters wide, and sails 16.3 nautical miles per hour. Construction on the ship began on August 20, 1981, and it is scheduled to be delivered to the Hong Kong firm in early August this year. The Dalian shipyard is now building another two 27,000-ton similar ships for the Hong Kong firm and will soon begin building a third vessel. [Text] [Beijing XINHUA in English 0255 GMT 26 May 82 OW]

JI PENGFEI MEETS WITH WEST GERMAN DELEGATION

OW281612 Beijing XINHUA in English 1522 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 28 (XINHUA) -- Chinese State Councillor Ji Pengfei and his wife hosted a dinner for Friederich Halstenberg, treasurer of the Social Democratic Party of Germany, and Mrs. Halstenberg here this evening. Among those present were Ou Tangliang and Sun Chengpei, council members of the Association for International Understanding of China; Qian Liren, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party; and Wilfried Noelle, minister of the Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany in Beijing, and Mrs. Anna-Marie Noelle. Mr. and Mrs. Halstenberg will leave May 30 for a visit to other parts of China.

HUANG HUA MEETS OUTGOING PORTUGUESE ENVOY

OW171509 Beijing XINHUA in English 1504 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Huang Hua, state councillor and minister of foreign affairs, met here this afternoon with out-going Portugal ambassador to China Antonio Ressano Garcia.

OFFICIALS ATTEND NORWEGIAN ENVOY'S RECEPTION

OW170736 Beijing XINHUA in English 0717 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 17 (XINHUA) -- Jan G. Joelle, charge d'affaires ad interim of the Norwegian Embassy in Beijing, and Mrs. Joelle gave a reception at noon today to mark the Constitution Day of Norway. Among the guests at the reception were Tang Ke, Chinese minister of petroleum industry; Zhang Wenjin, vice-minister of foreign affairs; and leading members of other government departments. Diplomatic envoys to China of various countries were also present.

UNION LEADER ATTENDS FRENCH LABOR CONGRESS

OW302016 Beijing XINHUA in English 1538 GMT 30 May 82

[Excerpt] Paris, May 29 (XINHUA) -- The French Democratic Confederation of Labor today ended its 39th congress in Metz, northeast France, and reelected Edmond Maire general secretary of the organization. The five-day congress was attended by 1,800 delegates from the country.

A Chinese delegation led by Huang Minwei, vice chairman of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, attended the congress on invitation. It also had meetings and friendly talks with General Secretary Edmond Maire and other leaders of the French confederation. A message of congratulation conveyed to the congress by the delegation said the Chinese workers and trade unions hope to see their friendly relations with the French workers and unions strengthened and developed.

COMMERCIAL DELEGATION ENDS VISIT TO ITALY

OW290219 Beijing XINHUA in English 0204 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Rome, May 28 (XINHUA) -- The delegation of the China International Trust and Investment Corporation [CITIC] ended its 10-day visit to Italy and left here for home today. The delegation, led by Chairman of the Board of Directors of the corporation Rong Yiren, arrived here on May 19 at the invitation of the Italian Commercial Bank. The Chinese guests visited Milan and Rome, and met Italian Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade Baldassare Armato, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Commercial Bank Innocenzo Monti and President of the Confederation of Industry Merloni. He contacted many people in the commercial circles and discussed the way to promote economic and technical cooperation between the two countries. Rong Yiren also gave an interview to representatives of the press.

ROMANIAN MILITARY OFFICIALS VISIT NANJING

OW291028 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] In the past few days, a group of vacationing Romanian military officials led by General Dumitru Rosu visited Nanjing, where they were warmly welcomed.

The Romanian military officials visited certain army divisions under the Nanjing PLA units on 27 May. Responsible persons of the army division (Jian Hongguou) and (Zhong Xiuming) and other commanders and fighters lined up to welcome them. The Romanian guests watched certain companies' military drill and their demonstration of military skills. The guests highly praised the fighters' spirit of hard training and their consummate military skills.

During their stay in Nanjing, the Romanian military officials also visited the Nanjing radio plant and toured the Chang Jiang Bridge and other scenic spots. They will depart Nanjing for Zhenjiang, Wuxi, Suzhou and Yixing on 29 May.

POWER DELEGATION LEAVES FOR ROMANIA, HUNGARY

OW200735 Beijing XINHUA in English 0710 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 20 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese electric power delegation led by Li Peng, vice-minister of water conservancy and power, left here this morning for visits to Romania and Hungary at the invitation of the Romanian Ministry of Electric Power and the Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Trade. The delegation will also discuss with the two ministries matters related to cooperation on electric power.

WAN LI ATTENDS MEETING HONORING TITO'S BIRTHDAY

OW251302 Beijing XINHUA in English 1246 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 25 (XINHUA) -- The Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries held a meeting here this afternoon to mark the 90th birthday of the late President of Yugoslavia Josip Broz Tito.

Wan Li, member of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party and vice-premier of the State Council, attended the meeting. Wang Bingnan, president of the association, and Mirko Ostojic, Yugoslav ambassador to China, spoke at the meeting.

Wang Bingnan gave a brief account of Tito's life. He cited him as the great leader of the Yugoslav people, a great friend of the Chinese people and an outstanding communist fighter. Wang praised him for his great efforts for freedom, national independence and socialist construction of his country and for his tremendous contributions to the international communist movement.

He also praised Tito for his unremitting efforts to safeguard the principle of the Nonaligned Movement and its unity. "Tito firmly supported the just struggle of the oppressed nations and people, opposed colonialism, imperialism, hegemonism and foreign rule of all forms and defended the world peace. He had enjoyed high prestige among the people of the world," he said. Wang said Tito supported the Chinese people's revolutionary struggle and developed the friendship between the people of China and Yugoslavia. "Comrade Tito's political foresight and sagacity, his dedication to defending the truth and his lofty spirit of communism have won deep respect and admiration from the Chinese people," he said.

Wang said: "The heroic Yugoslav people would carry on Comrade Tito's behest, closely unite around the League of Communists of Yugoslavia and advance victoriously along the road of socialism, self-management and non-alignment."

In his speech, Ostojic said: "Tito spent his whole life in the struggle of our working class and laboring people. Under extremely difficult conditions, Tito trained our party and enabled it to play its role in the arduous days for the struggle against fascist efforts to spread war to the world.

"Tito was one of the founders of Non-Aligned Movement. He also was an initator of the socialist system through the workers self-management, because he found that the working class would become our social motivation force and it would open the way to build up forces."

The ambassador stressed that "Yugoslavia will exist and developnormally only on the basis set up and achievements made under the leadership of Tito. As for Yugoslavia, there is no other way but to strengthen its independence and its foreign policy of non-alignment and to develop socialist self-management." The ambassador said: "The Yugloslav people of all nationalities are grateful to Tito for linking the Yugoslav people with the great Chinese people before his death.

"Yugoslavia is following closely China's every step and measure taken for its modernization. We feel happy about your successes and wish you still greater achievements," he said.

Among those attending the meeting were Li Shuzheng, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the CCP Central Committee; Qian Qichen, vice-minister of foreign affairs; Hua Nan, deputy director of the General Political Department of the Chinese People's Liberation Army; Chen Jie, deputy to the minister of foreign economic relations and trade; and leaders of the All-China Federation of Trade Unions, the Central Committee of the Communist Youth League, the All-China Women's Federation, the Academy of Social Sciences and the Beijing Municipality. Also present were Mrs. Ostojic, diplomatic officials of the Yugoslav Embassy and Yugoslav experts and students in Beijing.

The Yugoslav color documentary film "Tito" was shown at the end of the meeting.

ZHU XUEFAN RECEIVES YUGOSLAV YOUTH DELEGATION

OW201758 Beijing XINHUA in English 1525 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 20 (XINHUA) -- Zhu Xuefan, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, met and had a cordial conversation with a delegation from the Union of Socialist Youth of Yugoslavia at the Great Hall of the People today.

The delegation, led by Vlatko Bojadziski, member of the Presidium of the Union, arrived here May 18 at the invitation of the Chinese Communist Youth League.

Han Ying, first secretary of the Central Committee of the league, gave a banquet for the delegation this evening.

SPECIAL ENVOY HE YING PAYS VISIT TO EGYPT

Comments on Visit

OW281930 Beijing XINHUA in English 1923 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Cairo, May 28 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Government envoy He Ying told XINHUA today that his current visit to Egypt has already achieved positive results. He conveyed the friendly sentiments and best wishes of the Chinese Government and people to the people and Government of Egypt.

He had talks with the Egyptian side on major international issues and on the development of bilateral relations. The two sides expressed satisfaction with their talks.

The Chinese envoy arrived here on May 23 and is continuing his friendly visit. On May 24 he was received by Deputy Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs Kamal Hasan 'Ali and held talks with Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs 'Umar as-Shafi in a friendly and cordial atmosphere.

Meeting With Mubarak

OW301646 Beijing XINHUA in English 1632 GMT 30 May 82

[Text] Cairo, May 30 (XINHUA) -- Egyptian President Husni Mubarak today received Chinese Government special envoy He Ying, who presented the president a message from Chairman Ye Jianying of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. During their talk, Mubarak expressed satisfaction with the development of the good relations between Egypt and China.

Talking to reporters after the meeting, He Ying said he exchanged views with the president on the situation of the Middle East, adding that the two sides had identical views on many problems. He also said China congratulated Egypt on the peaceful recovery of the Sinai Peninsula.

He said the Chinese Government has invited Mubarak to visit China. Chinese leaders are looking forward to the visit and are viewing it as a major event in the relations between the two countries, he said.

He Ying said Mubarak also discussed with him the Iraq-Iran war. He said that both sides hope for a quick negotiated settlement. From the very start of the war, he said, the Chinese Government has emphasized that it is a tragedy to the people of both countries and expressed the hope for an early and peaceful end of the war. He said that the Chinese Government showed great appreciation of the mediation efforts by Islamic and non-aligned countries.

He Ying held talks Saturday with Usamah al-Baz, first foreign under secretary and director of the President's Office for Political Affairs.

Egyptian Official's Remarks

OW311958 Beijing XINHUA in English 1930 GMT 31 May 82

[Excerpts] Cairo, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Egypt is ready to help end up the Iraq-Iran conflict as soon as possible. These remarks were made here today by Usamah al-Baz, Egyptian first foreign under secretary and director of the President's Bureau for Political Affairs, following a meeting of the National Democratic Party's Political Bureau chaired by President Mubarak.

Regarding the message handed yesterday to Egyptian President Mubarak by the visiting Chinese envoy He Ying, Al-Baz said that it falls within the framework of consultation between the two countries and He Ying's briefing the president on the recent contacts China made with a number of Middle East leaders.

EDITORIAL STRESSES EDUCATING RURAL CADRES

HK281345 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 28 May 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Grasp Well the Education of Rural Cadres, a Matter of Prime Importance"]

[Text] In the vast rural areas, among communes and production brigades with almost the same natural conditions and guided by the same line, guiding principles and policies of the central authorities, some of them can correctly implement and pursue the party's guiding principles and policies and develop their production more rapidly under the condition that they have good party committees and party branches and several honest, upright, devoted and able and efficient cadres who unite as one. In such communes and production brigades, the general mood of the society is better, the masses work with greater enthusiasm and the material and cultural life has gradually improved. On the contrary, in places where the work style of cadres is not healthy and the leading bodies are lax or in a state of paralysis or semiparalysis, it is impossible to carry out the work well there.

In other words, with the party's correct political line and policies, all-out efforts should be made to educate cadres.

In the process of promoting and improving the responsibility system in production, in places where the training of the cadres of communes and production brigades and the establishment of the system of cadres' personal responsibility have been carried out well, people take the initiative to do their work effectively. In places where these two kinds of work have not been grasped well, people are very often thrown into passivity and a certain amount of confusion might even occur.

The majority of our rural cadres are good and comparatively good. Over a long period of time, they have united with the broad masses of peasants to fight in the forefront of revolution and production. They work hard and perseveringly and have scored great achievements. In the meantime, we should soberly realize that some cadres have separated themselves from the masses to varying degrees and have been contaminated by unhealthy trends. A tiny number of them have even taken bribes and bent the law and committed crimes. Those criminal elements who violate the law should be punished according to law. Those cadres who have been contaminated by unhealthy trends should be educated so that they will resolutely mend their ways. With regard to the majority of rural cadres who have this or that kind of shortcoming or mistake, education is their main problem. As for those cadres who make some mistakes in their work, such as resorting to coercion and commandism, issuing confused orders, carrying out criticism and struggle arbitrarily, and so forth, leaders at the higher levels should bear more responsibility and take the initiative to answer for all the mistakes committed. Comrades at the lower levels should not be blamed too much.

With regard to ideological education for rural cadres, our present efforts should be concentrated to solve the following two problems: first, a tiny number of people are not willing to work; second, a considerable number of people do not know how to fulfill their duties.

There are a number of reasons why some cadres of communes and production brigades, and cadres of production brigades and production teams in particular, are unwilling to work. Some of them fear that they will commit mistakes, be criticized and offend other people. Some cadres wrongly think that being a cadre, one has to work hard, earn little and suffer losses. Some cadres do not understand the party's present policies or even resent them. That is because the party's policies contradict their personal interests in addition to their erroneous understanding.... In the final analysis, all those things occur because some cadres do not handle well the relations between the interests of the individual, the party and the people. The fundamental reason for such education is to enable them to become more conscious of serving the people wholeheartedly. As for Communist Party members and cadres of the party, they should never forget the basic principle of serving the people whole-heartedly and subordinating individual interests to those of the party and people regardless of the changes of the situation and tasks. They should resolutely do things which are beneficial to the majority of the masses regardless of the personal scarifice or Loss.

After the implementation of the responsibility system in agricultural production, Communist Party members and cadres of production brigades and production teams should exert great efforts in labor and fulfill production tasks assigned to them. However, it is not enough merely to do that. They should bear the overall interests in mind and make contributions to the party's cause. Their minds should be set on the people's cause and their attention should be directed to the production and work of the whole production brigade and production team. They should first of all think of the interests of the state, the collective and the masses. On no account should they concern themselves with their own small families alone, without giving consideration to the big family of the state and the collective.

When the sense of serving the people is strengthened and they feel they must do something, there is still another question; that is, they must be able to do it.

Rural work has now entered a new period of great transition. The highly concentrated managerial mode in farm production and the phenomenon of "eating out of a big pot" have been replaced by various production responsibility systems established in line with local conditions. Both "unified planning" and "assigning responsibility" have been taken into consideration, and the principle of distribution according to work has been carried out. In the production patterns, the isolated monoculture of grain has been replaced by the development of a diversified economy. Under the premise of ensuring the fulfillment of the state plans and the steady growth of grain production, and proceeding from the actual conditions in various localities, broad production avenues have been opened up to promote the overall development of agricultural production, forestry, animal husbandry, sideline production, fishery, commerce and industrial production. There are many new problems, new tasks and new situations in the transition period. Therefore, not only is it necessary to raise our level of understanding but it is also necessary to solve a series of concrete problems. Many comrades feel deeply that their ideology, knowledge and experience cannot conform to the new situation, and that they are not capable of using the new methods since the old are not applicable. For this reason, all of us must use our brains, study hard and be reeducated through practice so that our ideological and theoretical level, our cultural and scientific level and managerial level can be raised, our understanding of the party's policies enhanced, and our methods of work improved. We must follow the mass line and observe economic and natural laws. We must encourage our cadres to explore and create new methods in line with actual conditions. Practice itself is a great school. We cannot have more knowledge and raise our ability without practice.

It is necessary to consolidate grassroots organizations and train our cadres in a planned way. Now there are training classes in most localities. They must continuously be run well. Some other measures, such as establishing the system of personal responsibility for cadres, summing up work and making a public appraisal at regular intervals and giving rewards and punishments impartially, which have played an active role in boosting the spirits of the cadres and overcoming the sluggish work style, must also be popularized and perfected.

We must show concern for the life of the grassroots cadres and do our utmost to help them overcome their difficulties. However, we must not only show concern for their economic difficulties, we must also show concern for their political progress. It is necessary to give living allowances to cadres in the production brigades and teams, but the number of cadres receiving these allowances must not be too big and the allowances must not be excessive. Our principle is: Everything must be supported by the masses; do not become divorced from the masses.

In the new period of great transition, we can find good party members and good cadres everywhere, who have inherited and developed the good traditions of the party. They are working selflessly for the public interest, caring for others more than caring for themselves. They are fond of study and are good at carrying out the party's policies in line with their local conditions. They are very creative in their work.

We must extensively popularize their advance ideology and advanced deeds among the masses so that everyone will learn from them.

In the new historical period, party members and cadres in the rural areas must boost their spirits, heighten their confidence and be modest in their study so that they can make more and greater contributions for the socialist construction of the four modernizations.

ARTICLE DISCUSSES STATE, GOVERNMENT SYSTEMS

HK280805 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 5

[Article by Liu Han [0491 3466]: "China's State System and Government System"]

[Text] Following the "common program" and the three constitutions after the founding of the PRC, the draft revised consitituion once again explicitly stipulates our country's state system and government system. Stipulating our country's state system and government system is one of the important tasks of the constitution and is an important manifestation of using a fundamental law to sum up and record the fruits of victory of the people's revolution. All the constitution's stipulations concerning the state's fundamental system and tasks, the fundamental rights and duties of citizens of the structure of the state must embody the state system and the government system.

The state system refers to the state's class contents. It states which classes are in a ruling position, which are allies and which are being ruled. The class contents of a state determine its nature. Any country, past or present, has a state system. However, the exploiting classes usually deny the class nature of a state and consequently, they cannot give a scientific answer to the state system that is in conformity with reality. Besides, since they try to deny and cover up the class nature of a state, they often put a mysterious shroud, or a shroud of a state of the whole people, on the state by means of an illusory God's will or preaching the supraclass theory, thus creating unintelligible confusion over the question of the state system. In particular, this question involves the fundamental interests of the exploiting classes. With this question they want to defend the existence of the system of private ownership and the oppression and exploitation of the broad masses of laboring people by the exploiters. On the question of the state system, that is, the class nature of a state, their class bias and views of historical idealism are most fully exposed.

Article 1 of the draft revised constitution of our country clearly stipulates: "The PRC is a socialist state of the people's democratic dictatorship led by the working class and based on the alliance of workers and peasants." This is also stipulated in the same article: "The socialist system is the basic system of the PRC. Disruption of the socialist system by any individual and in any form is prohibited." In article 2, this is newly stipulated: "The people have the right to administer the affairs of the country and its economic, cultural and social affairs, according to provisions of the law, through various channels and in various forms." In this way, the stipulations on the state system written in our country's new draft constitution are more complete than the "common program" or the three former constitutions. The people's democratic dictatorship accurately gives expression to our country's state system. This dictatorship is inseparable from the socialist economic system and political system. The basis of the socialist economic system is the ownership of the means of production by the whole people and the collective ownership by the laboring masses. It has destroyed the system of man exploiting man and implemented the principle of from each according to his ability and to each according to his work. Without this, there will be no reliable basis for or material guarantee to the people's position of being masters of their own affairs. The basic characteristic of the socialist political system is that the people have the right to administer various undertakings of the country. This is the greatest and most fundamental right of the people. Of course, without this, we cannot begin to talk about the people's position as masters of the country.

Viewed from the experiences and lessons in the course of practice of the people's democratic dictatorship in our country in the past more than 30 years, the core of the question of our country's state system is how to ensure that the people can be masters of their own affairs; this is where the essence of the people's democratic dictatorship lies. Therefore, all stipulations on the state system in the constitution and law and guarantees given by systems and materials center closely around this core.

In the present stage of our country, people who form their own state, elect their own government and have the right to administer various undertakings of the state include all socialist laborers, patriots who support socialism and patriots who support the reunification of the country. They account for over 99.9 percent of those citizens who are over 18 years of age. This is the most extensive and true democracy, unprecedented in history, the most solid foundation that makes our state system superior to any state system of the exploiting classes and the source of strength that gives great vitality to our state system.

In contrast with the state system, that is, the nature of the state, the government system is the form of state. Comrade Mao Zedong said: "Regarding the question of 'the system of government,' this is a matter of how political power is organized, the form in which one social class or another chooses to arrange its apparatus of political power to oppose its enemies and protect itself." ("The Selected Works of Mao Zedong," vol 2, p 670) Here two aspects are included. One is the form of organization of state political power as stipulated in the draft revised constitution: "The organs through which the people exercise state power are the National People's Congress and the local people's congresses at various levels." They are elected democratically and are responsible to the people and subject to their supervision. "All organs of state administration and all judicial and procuratorial organs are established by the organs of state power to which they are responsible and to whose supervision they are subject. " The other is the organization principle for state organs, that is, the principle of democratic centralization. Without an appropriate form of organization, it will be impossible to represent the state or to administer the country. Without an appropriate principle of organization, it will be impossible to fully arouse the enthusiasm, initiative and creativeness of the people in administering various undertakings of the state. Without a whole set of central and local state organs, the system of government will become empty. Without the principle of democratic centralization, state organs cannot be set up, nor can they function normally or give full play to their role in accordance with the demand of the people.

Historically, politicians and legalists have made complicated classifications of government systems. For example, government systems under the slave system in ancient Greece were classified as monarchy, aristocracy, oligarchy, democracy, mixed government system and so on. West European scholars in the Middle Ages also made similar classifications. As a matter of fact, monarchy was universally adopted by countries under the slave system and the feudal system and it was an autocratic monarchy at that. Only a very small number of countries adopted other government systems, such as the democratic republican government system or hierarchal monarchy. Under feudal autocratic monarchy, the broad masses of peasants did not have any right to participate in state power. Government systems adopted by current bourgeois countries are basically of two categories: one is the republican government system and the other is the constitutional monarchy. The most reactionary, most savage and highly aggressive fascist dictatorship also once emerged in these two forms. Of course, the relatively more common one is the republican government system, which can further be divided into parliamentarian and presidential government systems. No matter what form a bourgeois country may adopt, all its state organs and their activities will take orders from the bourgeoisie. Under the rule of the bourgeoisie, the broad masses of laboring people only enjoy certain limited rights and they will never be able to become masters of the country.

What government system should be adopted after state power is in the hands of the working class? Both Marx and Engels explicitly stated that the form of a democratic republic should be adopted. In "The Central Committee's Letter to the League," they said: Germany "should persist in establishing a united and inseparable republic." ("The Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 1, p 390) During the revolution from 1848 to 1850, they also put forth "a red republic" and "a socialist republic." In 1871, when Marx summed up the experiences of the Paris Commune, he said: 'The essence of the commune is a working class government and a political form that economically emancipates labor has finally been discovered. After Marx died, Engels also said in 1891 and 1894 that only in a democratic republic could the working class acquire a ruling position, and held that a democratic republic was a readymade political form for the working class to exercise its rule. The system of people's congresses in our country is a concrete form of a democratic republic which Marx and Engels always stressed.

Like all other things, a country has a content and form. The state system is its content and the government system is its form. The form is determined by the content and reacts to the latter. In studying the questions of a state, we should first of all pay attention to its content and reveal its essence. Only in this way can we clearly distinguish different types of states in history and the different nature of numerous countries in the world today. However, when we stress the content, we do not mean to neglect the form. The form reflects the content which requires a form suited to it and serving it. Why was the monarchy a typical government system of feudal countries in history? This was determined by the ruling position of the landlord class in the state and by the dominant mode of production of the small-scale peasant economy. With the exception of a small number ofcountries where constitutional monarchy appeared as a result of compromise with the landlord class, monarchy is usually not adopted in the bourgeois revolution. This is also determined by the fact that the bourgeosie wants to freely develop capitalism and that the dominant mode of production is large-scale social production. The government system of a state is chiefly determined by the class which is in the ruling position and by the mode of production. Besides, the government system is also influenced by various factors such as the balance of force between classes, geographical conditions, national traditions and international surroundings. This was proved by the emergence of city-states and city-republics in the slave society (for example, Athens) and in the feudal society (as with, the cities of Venice and Florence) as well as today, with the queen of Great Britain and the emperor of Japan.

Our government system is organically integrated with our state system. However, contradictions always exist between the content and form of anything. Similarly, contradictions also exist between our state system and government system. These contradictions are not contractions between the nature of our country's state system but are contradictions between some aspects and some links of the government system and the needs of the state system, that is, they are not essential contradictions. Therefore, the way to resolve these contradictions can only be gradual reforms, so that some aspects and links of the government system which are not suited to the state system can become suited to it.

In the spirit of the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee and the spirit of the "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" adopted at the 6th plenary session, the draft revised constitution has strengthened the system of the people's congresses, extended the functions and powers of their standing organs, and has made a series of new stipulations on reviving the post of a state chairman, on perfecting the work system of the State Council and its structural reforms, on setting up the Central Military Commission, on appropriate decentralization of powers, on extending the local decisionmaking power of national autonomy, and on strengthening grassroots state power and establishing mass autonomous organizations. These reflect important reforms and new development of our country's state structure.

Gradual reforms of our country's political structure, economic structure and leadership structure will certainly make our country's government system even more suited to the state system, giving full play to the people's democratic dictatorship and promoting and ensuring that our country's socialist modernization will be victoriously carried out.

LEADERS MEET FORMER KMT GENERAL LI HANHUN

Deng Xiaoping Meeting

OW310756 Beijing XINHUA in English 0741 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Deng Xiaoping, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and chairman of the National Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, met here this morning in the Great Hall of the People with Li Hanhun, former governor of the Kuomintang Guangdong Provincial Government and deputy commander-in-chief of the Third War Zone. Also present were his wife, Wu Jufang and their daughter Virginia Li and son Victor Hao Li.

When Li Hanhun, who had arrived here from the United States for a visit May 29, and his family came to the Fujian Hall of the Great Hall, Deng Xiaoping shook hands with them saying, "We welcome you and your family to the motherland." Then they had a joyful and cordial conversation.

Among those attending the meeting were Liao Chengzhi, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, Yang Jingren, head of the United Front Work Department of the C.P.C. Central Committee, and Wang Feng and Peng Youjin.

Later, Deng Xiaoping had lunch together with Li Hanhun, Wu Jufang and their children.

Ye Jianying Meeting

OW311654 Beijing XINHUA in English 1520 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Ye Jianying, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of China and chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, met this afternoon at his home with Li Hanhun, former governor and deputy commander-in-chief of the Third War Zone, his wife Wu Jufang and their daughter and son.

Ye and Li, old acquaintances, met today in Beijing for the first time in scores of years. During the first revolutionary civil war (1924-1927), the two served together in the national revolutionary army. Vice-Chairman Ye said to Li, "Welcome, you come a long way." He asked about the life and work of Li's family. Wu presented Ye a picture of her family taken on the 50th anniversary of their marriage. Seeing the guests off, Ye said he hoped that they would come again.

Present on the occasion were Xiao Ke, vice-chairman of the National Committee of the Chinese People's Consultative Conference; and Ping Jiesan, adviser of the United Front Work Department of the C.P.C. Central Committee.

CPPCC National Committee Fete

OW291306 Beijing XINHUA in English 1257 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 29 (XINHUA) -- The National Committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference gave a banquet here this evening in the Great Hall of the People for Li Hanhun, former governor of the Kuomintang Guangdong Provincial Government and deputy commander-in-chief of the Third War Zone, his wife Wu Jufang, and their daughter and son.

Xiao Ke, vice-chairman of the C.P.P.C.C. National Committee, hosted the banquet. Before the banquet, Xiao Ke had a cordial conversation with Li Hanhun and warmly welcomed him for his visit to the motherland.

Attending the banquet were leading members of the C.P.P.C.C. National Committee, the United Front Work Department of the C.P.C. Central Committee and the democratic parties of China, as well as Li Hanhun's old friends.

CPPCC MEMBERS INSPECT PLA ENGINEER CORPS UNIT

OW290423 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1406 GMT 28 May 82

[Report by XINHUA reporters Liu Huinian, Gao Chunfang and Jie Yanzhen]

[Text] Beijing, 28 May (XINHUA) -- Responsible persons of the CPPCC National Committee inspected a PLA Engineer Corps unit and its modern weapons and equipment and watched a military demonstration by the unit. They highly praised the People's Army unit for its fresh achievements in modernizing national defense and building socialist ethics.

The responsible persons of the CPPCC National Committee inspected the PLA unit and watched its military demonstration on the mornings of 27 and 28 May. Vice Chairmen Liu Lantao, Zhou Peiyuan, Qian Changzhao and Dong Qiwu and more than 150 standing committee members and members of the CPPCC National Committee in Beijing participated in the inspection and watched the military demonstration. It was the first time since the founding of the PRC that the CPPCC National Committee had organized such activities.

On the two mornings, the Engineer Corps unit gave briefings on and demonstrated the operation of various rubber rafts and assault boats, the laying of a heavy-duty pontoon and mechanized bridge across a river, demolition with a rocket, cutting a path with a military bulldozer and laying mines with rockets. With high morale, PLA commanders and fighters skillfully and accurately demonstrated various tactical actions and displayed their heroic spirit of fearing neither hardship nor sacrifice and pressing forward with indomitable will. Every time they finished demonstrating something, members of the CPPCC National Committee responded with warm applause. When they saw fighters laying a heavy-duty pontoon bridge across a 160-meter-wide river in 27 minutes and heavy-duty trucks running over the bridge at high speed, they could not refrain from praising the fighters for their skills. Despite their advanced age and poor health, they walked back and forth over the Chinese-made modern pontoon bridge with great interest and pride. Immediately after a rocket was fired to lay mines, colorful parachutes dropped as if flowers were spread by angels from the sky. When rockets were fired for a demolition exercise, a magnificent sight of fire dragons with smoke trailing behind occurred. Members of the CPPCC National Committee talked cheerfully and humorously and were profuse in their praise.

Following the demonstration, four vice chairmen of the CPPCC National Committee accompanied by Commander Tan Shanhe and Political Commissar Wang Liusheng of the Engineer Corps received the commander and fighters of the demonstration team on the demonstration ground, congratulated them on their success and gave ebullient speeches. They praised the commanders and fighters highly for the revolutionary heroic spirit of fearing neither hardship nor sacrifice that they had displayed during the demonstration. They said: This military demonstration has given us an opportunity to see the great changes that have occurred in building a revolutionary army in a modern and regular manner since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee. We feel comfortable and assured when we see the powerful People's Army. Our army is invincible in the world.

They also warmly encouraged the army to continuously make progress under the leadership of the party Central Committee and its Military Commission.

Accompanying members of the CPPCC National Committee on the inspection were Han Huaizhi, assistant chief of the General Staff of the PLA; Hua Nan, deputy director of the General Political Department; He Biao, deputy director of the General Logistics Department; and Li Zaishan, deputy political commissar of the Science and Technology Commission for National Defense.

Demonstration Televised

HK010500 [Editorial Report] Beijing Domestic Television Service in Mandarin at 1100 GMT on 29 May carries as the third item in its newscast a 2-minute filmed report on a military demonstration given by an unidentified PLA Engineer Corps unit on the outskirts of Beijing on the mornings of 27 and 28 May for CPPCC National Committee members.

The film's first segment opens with a short of two trucks carrying parts of a pontoon brigade and arriving at an unidentified site on the morning of 27 May. This is followed by closeup shots of CPPCC National Committee Vice Chairmen Liu Lantao, Zhou Peiyuan, Qian Changzhao and Dong Qiwu watching the demonstration from an open-air stand in the company of several unidentified men in PLA uniform. It then shows the laying of a pontoon bridge across an unidentified river, several trucks moving across the pontoon bridge and the CPPCC leaders walking on the pontoon bridge.

The film's second segment shows the CPPCC leaders watching the second part of the demonstration from the same open-air stand in the company of several unidentified men in PLA uniform on the morning of 28 May. It then shows a military bulldozer cutting a path and the firing of rockets from four trucks on the demonstration grounds. The film ends with several shots of the CPPCC National Committee vice chairmen reviewing several hundred fighters in PLA uniform on the demonstration grounds in the company of an unidentified man in PLA uniform. According to a XINHUA report, PLA Engineer Corps Commander Tan Shanhe accompanied the CPPCC leaders to receive the commander and fighters of the demonstration team after the demonstration.

YANG SHANGKUN ADDRESSES ARMY MANAGEMENT MEETING

OW300141 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1204 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 29 May (XINHUA) -- An all-army conference on management and education, which concluded today, pointed out: All army units should conscientiously do a good job of management and education in the new situation and institute scientific management in accordance with rules, ordinances and regulations in order to build our army in a revolutionary, modern and regular manner.

The conference opened on 19 May. Yang Shangkun, Geng Biao, Wei Guoqing and Yang Dezhi, responsible comrades of the CCP Central Committee's Military Commission, addressed the conference. They encouraged leading army cadres at various levels to seriously study new situations and new problems in army building and to assiduously study culture, science and methods for managing and educating a modern army so as to raise the management and education of our army to a new level.

The conference was jointly sponsored by the PLA General Staff Department and the General Political Department. It seriously analyzed the army's work in management and education, summed up and exchanged experiences and discussed and laid down tasks and measures in management and education. The conference held that management and education work in the army has been done better and better in recent years. Particularly since Comrade Deng Xiaoping called for building our army into a powerful, modern, regular and revolutionary army, regular education and training have been carried out throughout the army. As a result, a gratifying situation has occurred in army building.

The conference pointed out: Management and education work is an important aspect in strengthening our army in a revolutionary, modern and regular manner and is the basis for all other work. Management and education involve administrative work as well as political and ideological work. To do a good job in personnel and business management, it is first necessary to perform ideological work well among people. Strict management should be combined with patient persuasion and education and with the building of socialist ethics. Efforts should be made to help cadres and fighters foster lofty revolutionary ideals and the concept of serving the people wholeheartedly. Cadres and fighters should conscientiously have their words and deeds conform to their professional ethics and be moral, cultured, disciplined and revolutionary soldiers with ideals.

It is necessary to encourage cadres to strengthen their devotion to their work and to increase their ability to lead troops in the new situation. We must uphold the principle of being strict in running the army, scientifically manage army units in strict accordance with rules and regulations, institute a strict system of personal responsibility and build normal order in work, life, education and training in order to regularize or standardize the management of the army.

At the conference, the General Staff Department and the General Political Department issued a general order to commend 83 advanced units and 30 advanced individuals and gave them awards.

JIEFANGJUN BAO Editorial

OW300142 Beijing Domestic Service in Mandarin 2230 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] The JIEFANGJUN BAO on 30 May carries on editorial enticled "Strive To Raise the Army's Management and Education Work to a New Level."

The editorial says: Management and education are an important part of the work to strengthen the revolutionization, modernization and regularization of the army -- an important foundation necessary for the army to successfully carry out all its tasks. Since the downfall of the gang of four, especially since Comrade Deng Xiaoping took charge of the work of the Military Commission, the army's management and education work has been obviously strengthened, and the situation is getting better every year. The recent all-army conference on management and education laid down the basic future tasks and concrete measures for management and education. We must conscientiously carry them out in actual work.

YANG SHANGKUN LAUDS BEIJING PLA UNITS AT MEETING

OW301345 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0718 GMT 30 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 30 May (XINHUA) -- The Beijing PLA units held a meeting attended by representatives of advanced units and individuals in developing socialist spiritual civilization to commend the advanced and pace setters. Those attending the meeting unanimously held that to raise the level of spiritual civilization among PLA units to a new height, the key link is to pay full attention to educating cadres and fighters and to bring up the new generation with communist ideals.

Leading comrades of the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee Yang Shangkun, Wei Guoqing and Yang Dezhi attended the meeting. They extended their greetings and delivered speeches. Also attending the meeting were responsible persons of the three PLA general departments He Zhengwen, Liang Biye, Gan Weihan, Shi Jinqian, Hua Nan and Xu Guangyi.

In his speech, Yang Shangkun praised the achievements scored by the Beijing PLA units in developing socialist spiritual civilization. He said: The Beijing PLA units have made these outstanding achievements within a short time. This is because they have worked conscientiously. The leading comrades and the broad masses of commanders and fighters of the Beijing PLA units have conscientiously implemented the directive issued by the party Central Committee. This work style of doing things conscientiously will definitely enable anyone to pass tests with flying colors. The leadership at all levels throughout the army must conscientiously grasp spiritual civilization, persistently pay attention to spiritual civilization and attain even greater achievements.

Wei Guoqing and Yang Dezhi pointed out: Building a highly developed socialist spiritual civilization is a basic guarantee in upholding the four basic principles and realizing the four modernizations. It is also a firm and correct political orientation that we must follow in building a modern, regular revolutionary army. It is our long-term strategic task. They expressed the hope that the Beijing PLA units work ceaselessly and unremittingly; march forward incessantly; raise spiritual civilization to a new level; create even more advanced companies and individuals in developing spiritual civilization; and create new experience and make fresh contributions to developing spiritual civilization in the whole army.

At the meeting of representatives of advanced collectives and individuals in developing socialist spiritual civilization held by the Beijing PLA units from 20 to 29 May, many advanced units and pace setters were commended. The meeting earnestly summed up the experience in extensively developing spiritual civilization. More than 1,100 representatives attended the meeting. They unanimously held that in developing spiritual civilization among PLA units, the key link is to guide cadres and fighters in fostering communist ideals. They said: During the war days, when material conditions were rather inferior, we relied on revolutionary thinking and spirit to win victories. Today, when we carry out socialist construction and face a new situation in combating corrosion by bourgeois thinking, we need even greater efforts to arm ourselves with communist ideals.

The meeting emphatically pointed out: It is necessary to pay attention to educating people with communist ideals in the following three aspects:

1. It is essential to extensively carry out education in maintaining faith in communism and to conscientiously organize the study of Marxism-Leninism-Mao Zedong Thought.

2. Efforts must be made to do a good job in studying the party's line, guidelines and policies and helping cadres and fighters strengthen their sense of responsibility in implementing the party's policies.

3. It is necessary to guide cadres and fighters to temper themselves in work and in practice and to pay attention to the transformation of their world outlook.

The comrades attending the meeting also held: In carrying out education on communist ideals, it is essential to use vivid methods and to educate cadres and fighters in close connection with the central task of PLA units. We must be good at guiding cadres and fighters to earnestly link their ambition and interest with the collective and general interest and to combine their practice in fostering lofty ideals with a down-to-earth style of work. Efforts must be made to earnestly study and popularize the experience of advanced individuals and units. The leading cadres at all levels must play their leading and exemplary roles well.

The meeting commended more than 170 advanced units and individuals, awarded 6 advanced units and individuals with honorary titles, and designated 38 cadres and fighters as pace setters in developing spiritual civilization.

Also attending the meeting and making speeches were leading comrades of the Beijing PLA units Qin Jiwei, Yuan Shengping, Fu Chongbi and others.

WANG ZHEN ARRIVES IN URUMQI FROM ROMANIA 28 MAY

HK290141 Urumqi Xinjiang Regional Service in Mandarin 1300 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Comrade Wang Zhen, member of the CCP Central Committee Politburo, member of the Central Military Commission Standing Committee and head of the CCP Central Committee Party School, arrived in Urumqi by plane at noon on 28 May after his vacation and visit in Romania. Wang Enmao, Xiao Quanfu, Tan Youlin, Ismail Amat, Zhang Shigong, Tomur Dawamat and other responsible comrades of the regional CCP committee, people's congress standing committee and government, the Urumqi PLA units, the Xinjiang production and construction corps, and the regional CPPCC greeted Comrade Wang Zhen at the airport. The Chinese airliner Comrade Wang Zhen traveled and landed on time at Urumqi airport at 1340. When Comrade Wang Zhen descended smiling from the aircraft, Wang Enmao and the other leading comrades went forward to warmly shake his hand. Comrade Wang Zhen spoke in Uygur to greet the minority nationality responsible comrades. Comrade Wang Zhen will stay briefly in Urumqi, where he will inspect work.

XINJIANG TV BEGINS UYGUR-LANGUAGE CHANNEL

OW011126 Beijing XINHUA in English 0745 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Urumqi, June 1 (XINHUA) -- The Xinjiang television station today begins a special channel with programs in the Uygur language, enabling minorities in Urumqi, capital of the Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region, to enjoy TV programs in their own language.

So far, Xinjiang is the first station to offer its minority people programs in their own language through a special TV channel.

Because Xinjiang is so far from the Central Television Broadcasting Station in Beijing, it has had to establsih its own television center. Since the Xinjiang television station was set up in 1970, programs in Han and Uygur languages have to share a single channel for the lack of personnel, technique and equipment.

With the help of relevant departments of the region, the station has in the past year added equipment, transmitting centers and more than 20 minority editors and interpreters, providing the resources for opening the new channel.

The station will, through the special channel, provide four round-up programs a week, including news, art and literature, and general information. It will also run TV university courses in the Uygur language from September this year.

The autonomous region now has 12 video relay stations and 28 translator stations, giving an area inhabited by 36.8 percent of the region's population access to the programming put on by the station.

WAN LI RECEIVES MEN'S BADMINTON TEAM 29 MAY

OW291236 Beijing XINHUA in English 1224 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 29 (XINHUA) -- Vice-Premier Wan Li received this morning in Zhongnanhai the Chinese men's badminton team who returned earlier this week from London after winning the 12th international badminton championships (Thomas Cup).

He congratulated the team for carving for the first time China's name on the Thomas Cup. "It is a matter of the country's prestige and the people's feelings. When you win, the people are happy," he said.

He also praised the four coaches Wang Wenjiao, Chen Fushou, Hou Jiachang and Tang Xianhu, all Overseas Chinese from Indonesia, for their patriotism in returning to the motherland in the 1950s and 1960s and for their training of new talent. The vice-premier attributed the current victory to their efforts.

This morning the State Physical Culture and Sports Commission and the All-China Sports Federation hosted a welcome reception for the winners of the Thomas Cup.

Li Menghua, minister in charge of the commission, cited the players for "their dauntless spirit in turning from setbacks to victory." He called upon all athletes to learn from this spirit as manifested by the badminton team, the women's volleyball team, the table tennis players as well as the mountain climbers.

ZHAO ZIYANG, OTHERS VISIT GOODS EXHIBITION

OW290127 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1565 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 28 May (XINHUA) -- Zhao Ziyang, premier of the State Council, paid a visit to the national exhibition and sales fair of articles for children's use on the evening of 28 May. He wrote an inscription: Think about the children, future generations and the future of the motherland!

Wan Li, Chen Muhua, Wang Renzhong, Ngapoi Ngawang Jigme, Yang Shangkun, Bo Yibo, Liu Lantao and Hu Yuzhi also visited the exhibition and sales fair on the evening of 23 May.

Seeing the rich and various children's food, toys, clothing, shoes, hats and articles of daily use on display, Zhao Ziyang, Wan Li and the other comrades were very pleased. They hoped that the whole party and the entire society will pay attention to the healthy growth of children and produce more and better goods for their use.

LEADERS ADDRESS CHILDREN IN BEIJING 30 MAY

OW310128 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1651 GMT 30 May 82

[Excerpts] Beijing, 30 May (XINHUA) -- Leading comrades of the party and the government cordially received 300 children from Beijing and Tianjin at the Great Hall of the People today. They held a discussion and happily celebrated the "1 June International Children's Day" with them.

When Ulanhu, Wan Li, Xi Zhongxun, Gu Mu, Yang Dezhi, Hu Qiaomu, Yao Yilin, Bo Yibo, Kang Keqing and other leading comrades arrived at the Beida Hall of the Great Hall of the People, the children shouted and jumped for joy. A group of Young Pioneers ran toward the leading comrades and put red scarves around their necks. Then, warm applause broke out in the hall. The leading comrades had pictures taken with them.

All 300 children representatives were outstanding Young Pioneers who had made remarkable achievements in "five stresses and four beauties" activities. Briefing the leading comrades at the discussion on their own achievements or on the achievements of other Young Pioneers from their schools in study, sports, labor and social activities were Fan Xiaohui, a fourth grader of the Yumin primary school in Beijing; Li Zhe, a third grader of the Hangu district No 1 primary school in Tianjin; Zhang Wenhui, a fifth grader of the Shijia Lane primary school in Beijing; Wen Yuanyuan, a first grader of the Benxi Road primary school in Hongqiao district, Tianjin; He Yuxiang, a fifth grader of the Lixue Lane primary school in Beijing; Yu Yong, a fourth grader of the Machangdao primary school in Nankai district, Tianjin; and Wu Yirong and Cui Ran, fourth graders of the Yueyangdao primary school in Heping district, Tianjin. After listening to their briefings, the leading comrades cheerfully praised them as fine models for children throughout the country and placed earnest hopes on them.

Comrade Hu Qiaomu said: "You are so young, but you have already understood that you should serve the people, and you have done many good things. You are really worthy young masters of our country and society. With young masters such as you, our country has a very bright future. Children throughout the country should learn from you, as should the adults throughout the country, including ourselves. We should assume the responsibility of ensuring your healthy growth." Comrade Hu Qiaomu hoped that all the children at the discussion would not be conceited and complacent but would help, encourage and unite their less advanced schoolmates to make progress together. Comrade Hu Qiaomu said: "I hope that from now on you will be determined to do good, not bad things, and to struggle against bad people and bad deeds all your lives." Then, Comrade Hu Qiaomu asked the children: "Do you have this determination?" The children answered in unison: "Yes, we do." Comrade Hu Qiaomu gladly said: "I hope you will turn your determination into action."

In his speech, Comrade Bo Yibo expressed the hope that the children would begin now to foster their patriotic and internationalist feelings and moral character as well as the habits of working hard, observing discipline, loving the collective and finding it a pleasure to help others. They should love culture and science and study hard and intensively in order to become educated, able successors to the revolutionary cause. They should pay attention to physical training and hygiene so as to grow up in a healthy way. He said: "Children are the flowers of the motherland. I hope you will make the big garden of the motherland more beautiful. Children represent the future of the motherland. I hope you will build a more beautiful and magnificent future."

In their speeches, Comrades Yang Dezhi and Ulanhu hoped that the children would make continuous efforts to consolidate and develop their achievements and would continue to make progress.

The discussion was presided over by Hu Qili, director of the General Office of the CCP Central Committee. Present were responsible persons of the departments concerned in Beijing and Tianjin Municipalities, including Rong Gaotang, Han Ying, Zhou Pengcheng, Guo Liwen, Hu Dehua, Zhang Chengxian, Zhang Wensong, Bai Jiefu and Guo Chunyuan.

Following the discussion, the children were invited by the CCP Central Committee to tour Zhongnanhai by car. While in Zhongnanhai, they visited Comrade Mao Zedong's former residence and toured Yingtai and other scenic spots.

DENG YINGCHAO ADDRESSES CHILD CARE WORKERS

HK281407 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 26 May 82 p 1

[Text of Deng Yingchao's speech at Beijing meeting to mark the International Children's Day -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] At a report meeting held in Beijing to mark the 1 June International Children's Day, Deng Yingchao, member of the Politburo of the Central Committee of the CCP, vice chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and honorary president of the All-China Women's Federation, made a speech. The following is the text:

Comrades and friends: General speaking, I am a child care worker too,as I am of one mind with all of you. Though old, I am still young at heart. So it may be said that I am your colleague. Today, I am extremely happy and pleased to be able to attend this report meeting to mark the 1 June International Children's Day. Being extremely grateful, may I now pay my highest respect and extend my cordial greetings to all comrades who have worked arduously and made contributions to the healthy growth of children.

The speeches just made by the three comrades are so vivid, nice and touching, and I am deeply impressed. I am particularly moved by the fact that these three comrades,who have devoted themselves to this work for many years, fear neither hardships, fatigue, nor difficulties in their child care work. Such spirit merits our emulation.

Since the party Central Committee called on the entire party and society to pay attention to and concern themselves with children's healthy growth in the first half of last year, the party committees at all levels and various circles of society have attached great importance to child care work, and have vigorously encouraged and supported child care workers. Thanks to the concern of the party and government and thanks to the concerned efforts and coordination of various circles of society, a new atmosphere has been created in our child care work. I believe this work will surely have a bright future. It is actually a work of great promise and great prospects in the socialist modernization drive of our country. In order to do a good job in child care work, I would like to put forth some suggestions for your reference.

1. PERSISTENTLY, EXTENSIVELY AND PENETRATINGLY PUBLICIZE THE CALL OF THE PARTY CENTRAL COMMITTEE AND THE NECESSITY AND SIGNIFICANCE FOR THE WHOLE PARTY AND SOCIETY TO PAY ATTENTION TO AND SHOW CONCERN FOR THE HEALTHY GROWTH OF CHILDREN.

It is necessary to deepen the understanding of the entire society and all families in work for children. Doing a good job in child care work is the beginning of the hundred years required to rear people and the starting point for promoting socialist material and spiritual civilizations and bringing up the new generation. It also constitutes the most important step in our building socialism and working hard toward the goal of communism. We must attach importance to child care work as something of strategic significance.

Why have I mentioned the two starting points and the strategic significance? It is because childhood is the foundation of one's life. The education and cultivation children receive during this period of time has a direct bearing on their maturation. During the time of childhood, children are pure and innocent, apt to ape, like something new and novel and are thirsty for knowledge. They are keen on everything. Therefore, they easily take on the color of their company. Our cause will realize great accomplishments provided we can actively and consciously take feasible measures for cultivating children during their childhood with a good character of loving the motherland, socialism, science and labor, taking good care of public property and lovingly helping others, and provided we can make them study hard, cherish ideals and be embued with good moral character and disciplines, and also educate them in knowing "the five stresses and four beauties." If we fail to take good care of children from childhood, but let them become tainted with bad thinking and habits, then it will be difficult to make a break with these bad things when they grow up, and this will inevitably result in irreparable losses to the socialist cause.

Cultivating children is a tough task, but some people think that this is not so, that it is an easy job. They look down on child care work. This is wrong. It seems that cultivation of children is something trifling and ordinary. But actually, this is a very arduous, uncommon and glorious task. Education of children is a comprehensive science of rearing people that consists of many subjects such as child psychology, child physiology, child pedagory, child logic, child medical science and social science. If you do not have a strong sense of responsibility, cast-iron will and diligence in studies, if you cannot immerse yourselves in the work and work cautiously and conscientiously, you can hardly master the law of child care work and even make achievements. At the same time, we must respect child care workers and help them overcome all difficulties in their work. Comrades who have done well in child care work will be encouraged, supported, cited and rewarded. Comrades who show negligence in work will be educated and criticized with patience. Those who have committed serious offenses by harming and persecuting children should be duly punished by law. We should not turn a blind eye to such offenses, or leave them to take their own course and even tolerate them. Article 46 in the draft of the revised constitution on the PRC clearly stipulates protection of children's rights. We must earnestly implement the relevant provisions in the constitution and work and fight unremittingly to protect the physical and mental health of children and ensure their enjoyment of their legitimate rights.

2. CHILD CARE WORKERS SHOULD BE GOOD AT STUDYING AND INCESSANTLY IMPROVE THEIR PROFESSIONAL COMPETENCE.

To carry out child care work well, it is necessary to have extensive knowledge. I hope all child care workers make themselves master necessary vocational skills and take Marxism-Leninism as the guiding thought. They must incessantly improve their professional competence, enhance their knowledge and broaden their horizon. I also hope you comrades will not only study books, but will also learn from your fellows in society, and this includes the objects of your work -- children. Only by understanding children will you be able to serve children well and work well as their teachers.

3. UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF THE PARTY, THE SCHOOL, FAMILY AND SOCIETY MUST FULFILL THEIR RESPECTIVE RESPONSIBILITIES AND CLOSELY COOPERATE.

In cherishing and cultivating the next generation, the school, society and family must pool their efforts. The efforts of any single component are not sufficient. We call on the three components to assume their respective responsibilities. I hope that workers in nurseries and child care centers and teachers will actively and creatively make use of their wisdom and determination to do a good job in bringing up, educating and cultivating children. I hope parents will understand the significance of carrying out family education and scientific methods in educating children. I hope that that all departments will take the initiative in showing concern for children, vigoroursly enriching their extracurricular activities and providing them with places to carry out their activities and with nutrition, both material and spiritual.

We also call on the three components to contend for the initiative to work in close cooperation and consciously act in concert. I hope that all coordinating organs will do their utmost to help schools, society and families exchange information and gradually unify their thinking and action so that our child care work will be carried out more smoothly and with better results. Only by so doing will it be possible for us to take on the strategic tasks assigned to us by the party and state of fostering qualified personnel for the needs of the four modernizations.

4. YOU ARE CHILD CARE WORKERS AS WELL AS PROPAGANDISTS FOR CHILD CARE WORK.

In order to carry out child care work well, not only must you continuously deepen your own understanding and improve your vocational skills in practical work, but you must also publicize the strategic significance of child care work to the entire society, and publicize correct thinking and methods in educating children. We must see to it that more and more people understand our perty's education policy and scientific methods in bringing up, educating and cultivating children so as to become a giant social force and create a new social mood. Why should you be the propagandists in this respect? It is because you have rich experiences gained from your work. If you carry out propaganda, what you say will be more convincing. I hope you comrades will carry out propaganda by means of holding forums, utilizing the broadcast media, writing articles and so on. You should not only act as good child care workers but as outstanding propagandists for child care work.

Generally speaking, I am your colleague. But there is no comparison between you and I in terms of professional competence. I hope you will give your comments and criticism on any improper points in the suggestions I have just put forth.

As we joyfully gather here today, we cannot help remembering Comrade Soong Ching Ling, who devoted her whole life to the healthy growth of children. Let us keep her in mind and learn from her forever. Finally, I wholeheartedly wish all you child care workers and lovely children a happy festival and good health!

LEADERS ATTEND SOONG CHING LING MEMORIAL CEREMONY

OW290914 Beijing XINHUA in English 0851 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 29 May (XINHUA) -- A ceremony commemorating the first anniversary of the death of Soong Ching Ling, honorary president of the People's Republic of China, was held here this morning at the late stateswoman's former residence, situated on the north bank of Houhai Lake.

The ceremony was held by the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, the National People's Congress Standing Committee and the State Council. Among the more than 600 people from many walks of life attending the ceremony were party and state leaders Deng Yingchao, Ulanhu, Yu Qiuli, Peng Chong, Chen Muhua, Wan Li, Xi Zhongxun, Wang Renzhong, Hu Qiaomu, Liao Chengzhi, Ngapo Ngawang Jigme, Xu Deheng, Shi Liang, Yang Shangkun, Bainqen Erdini Qoigyi Gyaincain, Zhu Xuefan and Young Pioneers.

After Ulanhu, member of the Political Bureau of the C.P.C. Central Committee and vice-chairman of the N.P.C. Standing Committee, announced the opening of the ceremony, Liao Chengzhi made a speech saying: "Comrade Soong Ching Ling, known throughout the world as a great patriotic, democratic, internationalist and communist fighter, has gone for a year now. But her great revolutionary spirit and lofty integrity, as well as her outstanding contribution to the country and the people will live forever in our hearts."

He said that since Comrade Soong Ching Ling came to Beijing from Shanghai in September 1949 at the invitation of the C.P.C. Central Committee to join in planning the establishment of the People's Republic, she used to live, work and study here, and brought forth fruitful results in promoting China's socialist construction and world peace.

He said, "The many relics, documents and artifacts here are a real record of Comrade Soong Ching Ling's devotion to the great revolutionary cause and powerful testimony of modern Chinese history. In order to carry on Comrade Soong Ching Ling's great revolutionary spirit and let the people to cherish her memory and learn from her from generation to generation, the place has been officially designated 'former residence of Comrade Soong Ching Ling, honorary president of the People's Republic of China.'"

Liao Chengzhi said that "before her death, Comrade Soong Ching Ling keenly looked forward to the reunification of the motherland, a goal toward which she did a great deal of useful work.

"The peaceful reunfication of the motherland is a common desire and the sacred duty of the Chinese people, including the Taiwan compatriots. We are deeply convinced that we will reach this goal. We warmly welcome Dr Sun Yat-sen's relatives and old friends now residing in Hong Kong and Macao, Taiwan and foreign countries, Comrade Soon Ching Ling's old friends as well as all celebrities and friends of various countries who wish to see a reunified and powerful China, to come to pay respects to Soong Ching Ling and to commemorate her together with us."

He said: "The socialist motherland which Soong Ching Ling loved had become even more prosperous and thriving. Comrade Soong Ching Ling would be relieved by the fact that the line, principles and policies formulated at the third plenary session of the 11th party Central Committee and the decision of the sixth session of the 11th party Central Committee are now being further implemented and that one after another new victories have been won in the socialist modernization drive of the country."

After the ceremony, Deng Yingchao unveiled a horizontal signboard inscribed with following characters: "Former residence of Comrade Soong Ching Ling, honorary president of the People's Republic of China" over the gate to the main hall. The brushwork was by noted calligrapher Qi Gong.

Party and state leaders, together with people of other walks of life, then visited the exhibition on Soong Ching Ling's life and contributions, her sitting room, study, meeting room.

Attending the ceremony were vice-chairmen of the national committee of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference, some members of the N.P.C. Standing Committee and standing committee members of the C.P.P.C.C. National Committee, deputies to the N.P.C., members of the C.P.P.C.C., leaders of the institutions directly under the party Central Committee and the State Council, leaders of various departments of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, various democratic parties and well known people from various walks of life.

Also present at the ceremony were some veterans of the 1911 revolution and relatives of those deceased, individuals who have returned to settle on the mainland from Taiwan or foreign countries, foreign friends and experts in Beijing as well as Soong Ching Ling's relatives now residing overseas and her old friends.

SATELLITE COMMUNICATIONS EXPERIMENT PLANNED

OW311240 Beijing XINHUA in English 1227 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- China will conduct an experiment in domestic satellite communications and T.V. transmission by using a satellite of the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (Intelsat) in the Indian Ocean region from June 6 to August 6. Ten ground satellite stations in Beijing, Shanghai and other sites will take part in the experiment, a spokesman for the Ministry of Posts and Telecommunications said today. The experiment, according to the spokesman, will solve problems involved in meeting the communications needs of various departments and China's remote border regions and will pave the way for the establishment of China's own domestic satellite communications system.

The spokesman said the experiment will be carried out at a control station in Beijing, and receiving stations in Urumqi, Hohhot and other parts of China to verify the feasibility of transmitting TV signals, telephones, telegraphs, facsimiles and data. At the same time, ground satellite stations in the cities of Shanghai, Nanjing and Shijiazhuang will also be part of the experiment.

Some time after the experiment, the spokesman said, China will build a number of ground satellite stations in the cities of Beijing, Chengdu, Hohhot and Urumqi, to form a satellite communications network using the Intelsat satellite in the Indian Ocean.

Departments to take part in the experiment will include Ministries of Water Conservancy and Power, Electronics Industry and Posts and Telecommunications, the State Bureau of Meteorology, the Central Meteorological Bureau and XINHUA NEWS AGENCY.

1982 ECONOMIC YEARBOOK SCHEDULED FOR PUBLICATION

OW290734 Beijing XINHUA in English 0711 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 29 (XINHUA) -- "China's Economic Yearbook" for 1982, a second expanded edition, has been completed and will be published in China in August, reports today's GUANGMING DAILY. The paper says that the book contains important party and state documents and the new economic policies and decrees slated last year totalling 400,000 characters, and more than 20 articles by Chinese economist Xue Muqiao, which elaborate on 10 major principles concerning China's economic construction and other major economic questions.

New contents include special reports and articles, a general description of China, descriptions of the economic growth of various economic departments and of various provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions, a brief review of economic theoretical studies and statistical data, chronicles of economic events in the country and appendices, the paper says.

In addition to detailed accounts of different departments and trades, the book also includes data from economic investigations at such major industrial enterprises as the Daqing oilfield and the Anshan iron and steel complex, surveys of special economic zones in the coastal Guangdong and Fujian Provinces and information on economic expansion in Chanzhou in Jiangsu Province and in Shashi in Hubei Province.

Chief editor of the book is Xue Muqiao, and the editorial board is composed of specialists from the Economic Research Center under the State Council and other noted Chinese economists. More than 500 economists, specialists and scholars across the country participated in the work.

The book will be published by the editorial office of the journal ECONOMIC MANAGEMENT under the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, and its Overseas Chinese and English languages editions will be printed and distributed in Hong Kong by the Modern Culture Corporation Ltd., Hong Kong, the paper says.

RENMIN RIBAO CARRIES HONGQI TABLE OF CONTENTS

HK310546 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 30 May 82 p 8

[Table of contents of HONGQI No 11, 1982]

[Text] Editorial: "Let the Motherland's Seedlings Grow Even More Sturdily"

Commentator's article: "A Brilliant Example of the Party's Leadership in Literature and Art"

Commentator's article: "Arid Areas in the Northwest Should Attach Importance to Planting Trees and Grass and Developing a Diversified Economy"

Article by Wang Shouda: "Make Efforts To Build Material and Spiritual Civilizations Investigations Report on Several Counties and Municipalities in Guangdong"

Article by Liu Hongru: "Exploit Domestic Funds"

Article by Qian Junrui: "Earnestly Carry Out Research on the Economies of Developing Countries"

Article by Xu Chongde: "An Important Reform in the Supreme State Administrative Organ"

Article by Wang Bingnan: "Treasure the Motherland's Honor, Safeguard National Dignity"

Article by Pan Qi: "Transport Workers Should Strive To Become Advance Elements in Propagating Socialist Spiritual Civilization"

Article by Xin Cheng: "Grasp Firmly the Central Link -- Ideological Education"

Article by Yu He: "Teachers Should Set Examples in Building Socialist Spiritual Civilization"

Article by Huang Zhigang: "It Is Profitable To Study the Theory of Reproduction"

Article by Zhang Jing: "Dialectically Ponder Over Economic Problems"

Article by Li Mengbai: "Are Capital Construction and Expanded Reproduction One and the Same Thing?"

Article by Tan Huazhe: "Can Robots Produce Surplus Value?"

Article by Wen Jianhu: "Several Practices in Intensive Farming"

ZHOU ZIJIAN AT ANHUI MEETING ON CONSTITUTION

OW290931 Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 28 May 82

[Excerpts] The Standing Committee of the Anhui Provincial CCP Committee held another meeting on the morning of 28 May to study and discuss the draft of the revised constitution of the PRC. It called on the party committees at various levels to conscientiously organize and lead the broad masses of people to discuss the draft. The standing committee of the provincial party committee held a meeting a week ago to study and discuss the draft of the revised constitution. Today's meeting was the second one held for the same purpose. Both meetings were presided over by Zhou Zijian, acting first secretary of the provincial party committee. The participants unanimously held that the draft of the revised constitution is relatively flawless, draws on our country's historical experience and is very much liked by the people throughout the country. The discussion of the draft by the people throughout the country will certainly make our democracy and legal system sounder and further consolidate and develop the political situation of stability and unity. In discussing the draft of the revised constitution, the standing committee of the provincial party committee held that it embodies the following key points:

1. The draft of the revised constitution explicity provides for upholding the four fundamental principles, the general principles for the institution and improvement of our country's various political and economic systems.

2. The draft of the revised constitution explicitly stipulates that all power in the PRC belongs to the people and that the organs through which the people exercise power are the NPC and the local people's congresses at various levels. It also explicitly provides for the fundamental rights of citizens, which embodies thefundamental principle of the people being the masters of the country.

3. In stressing the socialist legal system, the draft of the revised constitution explicitly stipulates that the constitution is the fundamental law of our state and has the supreme legal authority. It also provides that all PRC citizens are equal before the law.

4. The draft of the revised constitution stipulates that the basic task of the Chinese people in the coming years is to concentrate their effort on socialist modernization and that the state will continually raise labor productivity, increase economic effectiveness and develop the social productive forces by various means.

5. The draft of the revised constitution stipulates that socialist public property shall be sacred and inviolable and that all organizations and individuals are prohibited from seizing or damaging any state and collective property by any means. This is a powerful stimulus to the present struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field.

6. The draft of the revised constitution attaches importance to building socialist ethics by explicitly stipulating that the state promotes the virtue of love for the motherland, the people, labor, science and socialism and that it educates the people in the ideas and ethics of patriotism, collectivism, internationalism and communism.

The participants in the meeting also put forward some suggestions on the draft of the revised constitution. The standing committee of the provincial party committee called on the party committees at various levels to check up on the discussions already held on the draft of the revised constitution and to make concrete arrangements for further discussions in various parts of the province in order to do a good job in this regard.

FUJIAN'S XIANG NAN ON WORK AMONG INTELLECTUALS

OW290804 Fuzhou Fujian Provincial Service in Mandarin 1120 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] According to a FUJIAN RIBAO report, an examination of work among intellectuals is being actively carried out in all parts of the province. Units acting faster than others have already completed the examination, entered into the stage of comprehensive study, put forward measures for improvement and begun to solve some problems.

Leading comrades of party committees at all levels have paid rather great attention to the current examination. On many occasions Comrade Xiang Nan has given instructions and opinions on problems discovered in the examination. Comrade Cheng Xu has visited Fujian University, the Fujian Institute of Substance Structure of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, the Fujian Academy of Agricultural Sciences and the Fujian Normal University to seriously listen to the opinions of experts, professors and middle-aged key members of vocational staffs on work among intellectuals. More than 6,000 intellectuals at the higher and middle levels in various prefectures, cities and counties have attended discussion meetings or been interviewed. At discussion meetings and interviews, the intellectuals report that since the 3d Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee a great deal of work has been done to set things right in the province and great achievements have been made in implementing policy. They feel a greater ease of mind and express their determination to make greater contributions to the four modernizations program. In reporting problems, they are quite realistic, take the overall situation into consideration and show an understanding of the state's difficulties. In the course of the examination, the provincial party committee places special emphasis on the need to solve problems while carrying out the examination. Now, many units have put forward ways and measures for solving problems, and have already solved some of the problems. Several institutions of higher learning, scientific research units and production departments have implemented more than 10 measures for the good of young and middle-aged intellectuals. Fuzhou city has set up and is setting up more service centers in units with large numbers of intellectuals. Xiamen, Jinjiang, Putian, Sanming and other areas have helped some families solve their housing problems and readjusted jobs for some unsuitably employed technical personnel.

Recently the standing committee of the provincial party committee held a report meeting on the examination of work among intellectuals. Comrade Xiang Nan spoke at the meeting. He affirmed the achievements made previously, and pointed out: The examination of work among intellectuals should not be a one-shot deal, but should be continued. Attention should be given to solving problems.

SHANGHAI RELEASES FORMER KUOMINTANG PERSONNEL

OW291050 Beijing in Mandarin to Taiwan 1500 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] On the basis of the resolution of the NPC Standing Committee, the Shanghai Intermediate People's Court recently held separate meetings at the Shanghai prison and the No 2 bureau of reform through labor to leniently release all former Kuomintang party, government and military personnel and special agents below the county or regimental level in custody in Shanghai, and awarded them their citizen's rights. The public security organs in Shanghai issued them the certificates of release. New bedding, clothes and some petty cash were issued to those released. The state gave those with families enough money to cover their traveling expenses to their respective hometowns. For those with relatives in Taiwan who had expressed a willingness to go to Taiwan to reunite with their kinsmen and had applied for a permit, the state will try to help them achieve their goal whenever possible, and make things convenient for them. For those who can still work, the departments concerned will give them adequate job assignments. For those who cannot work and encounter difficulties in livelihood, the local governments will give them proper relief. The government will also assist those who are homeless in settling down, and the state will support those who are unable to work. The departments concerned in Shanghai held a dinner party to bid farewell to the released and organized a tour for them of the city proper and some localities.

BRIEFS

ANHUI DROUGHT CIRCULAR — The Anhui Provincial People's Government issued an emergency circular on 26 May calling on all localities to do a good job in combating drought. According to the circular, since April there has been little rain in most parts of the province, and many places have begun to show signs of drought, particularly areas north of the Huai He and in eastern Anhui. More than 20 million mu of wheat and spring-sown crops are now affected by the drought. In addition, more than 30 million mu of framland have just been harvested and are being sown to new crops. [Hefei Anhui Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 27 May 82 OW]

GUANGDONG'S REN ZHONGYI INSPECTS DISASTER AREAS

HK310419 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 30 May 82

[Summary] After visiting disaster areas in Shaoguan Prefecture, provincial CCP committee First Secretary Ren Zhongyi and Governor Liu Tianfu inspected Sihui, Fengkai, Deqing, Guangning and Huaiji Counties from 25 to 28 May to comfort the masses and hold discussions with the cadres. "Comrades Ren Zhongyi and Liu Tianfu proposed that the party and government organizations at all levels seriously study this flood disaster and the problems it has exposed and proceed to sum up experiences and lessons in our water conservation, afforestation, rural house construction, the insurance business and so on, in order to improve all our work. In addition, while promoting relief work through production, it is necessary to carefully consider long-term plans for developing the economy in the mountain areas."

Most of the state-owned factories in Guangning County are located on the banks of the Sui Jiang. They suffered serious damage and losses during the floods. "When the leading comrades of the province found out that some of these enterprises and many other factories had not taken part in insurance plans, they stressed the importance of developing the insurance business." Comrade Liu Tianfu said: "Insurance has great advantages for the state and the enterprises. The factories should actively participate in it." Ren Zhongyi stressed at a forum of county leaders that the county CCP committees must learn the lessons of this disaster and formulate long-term plans for construction in the mountain areas. Liu Tianfu urged mountainous counties to increase their forest cover and strive to become forestry bases.

Comrades Ren Zhongyi and Liu Tianfu returned to Guangzhou on 29 May.

HEAVY RAINFALL, STORMS CONTINUE IN GUANGDONG

HK300057 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 29 May 82

[Summary] From 0800 on 27 May to 0800 on 29 May, 46 counties and municipalities in Foshan, Shaoguan, Huiyang, Shantou and Zhanjiang Prefectures and Guangzhou municipality were hit by heavy and torrential rainstorms, with violent storms in places. Rainfall in Zhuhai municipality from 0800 on 28 May to 0800 on 29 May was 339 mm. The heaviest rainfall in Foshan Prefecture was at the Doumen Hongqi farm and (Tanzhou) commune in Zhongshan County.

According to initial statistics, some 270,000 mu of farmland have been inundated in Foshan Prefecture. A number of houses and water conservation facilities have been destroyed. Responsible comrades of the Doumen County CCP Committee went to the stricken areas on 29 May to arrange for material supplies and reilef work. There has been heavy rain and flooding in the Shenzhen area over the past 2 days. The customs building was flooded on 29 May.

Further Report

HK010031 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 2350 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Heavy rain fell in Foshan, Huiyang and Shantou Prefectures and the Guangzhou area on 31 May, with torrential rain in places. Due to the fact that the rainfall center on 30 and 31 May was along the coast of Foshan, Huiyang and Shantou Prefectures, the water level of the province's main rivers has not yet risen above the warning mark. From 28 to 30 May, torrential rain fell in parts of Foshan Prefecture. Over 300,000 mu of farmland were flooded. As a result of 2 days' rescue efforts, floodwaters have already been drained from 90,000 mu of early rice.

According to the provincial meteorological station, Shantou Prefecture will have torrential rains on 1 Jun, with violent rainstorms in parts of its western portion. Huiyang, Meixian and Zhaoqing Prefectures and Guangzhou municipality will have heavy to torrential rain. There will also be heavy rain in the southern part of Shaoguan Prefecture, with torrential rain in places. All departments concerned must watch the situation.

Additional Statistics

HK311340 Guangzhou Guangdong Provincial Service in Mandarin 1000 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Heavy to torrential rains have fallen throughout Foshan Prefecture. It was still raining at 0800 and 0900 this morning. From 28 May to the morning of 30 May at 0840, the amount of rainfall at the Hongqi farm in Doumen County reached 808 mm and the amount of rainfall at Guanghai, (Shanan) and Chixi communes in Taishan County reached 420-560 mm. According to preliminary statistics, 510,000 mu of fields throughout the prefecture were inundated and 79 villages flooded. The flood has also damaged a number of water conservation facilities. At present, Foshan Prefecture and stricken counties and communes have organized teams to fight the flood and deal with emergencies. They have gone to embankments to crash-repair the dangerous sections. They have made good arrangements for the livelihood of the masses in the stricken areas and have done well in restoring production after the disaster.

ECONOMIC SOCIETY ESTABLISHED IN SHENZHEN ZONE

OW300324 Beijing XINHUA in English 0255 GMT 30 May 82

[Text] Shenzhen, May 30 (XINHUA) — An economic society has been set up in the Shenzhen special economic zone in Guangdong Province to study economic problems arising in the zone and new economic developments at home and abroad. The society hopes to help development of the zone and bring about cooperation between the zone's economic management departments and enterprises and research institutes. At the society's first meeting, papers dealing with an initial study of the zone's land development through the use of foreign funds were read. Other subjects were an economic model of the zone, currency problems in the zone and the economic results of imported technology. The society now has 70 members, including economic researchers and managerial personnel.

HUBEI HOLDS REPORT MEETING ON DRAFT CONSTITUTION

HK280345 Wuhan Hubei Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 26 May 82

[Summary] The Hubei Provincial CCP Committee held a report meeting on the draft of the revised constitution in Wuchang on 26 May. Provincial CCP committee Secretary Huang Zhizhen delivered a mobilization report. After pointing out that the current study and discussion of the draft have only started, he demanded that party committees at all levels fully understand the importance of the all-people discussion and integrate it with the "five stresses and four beauties" drive and with socialist economic construction. Comrade Huang Zhizhen said: "By studying and discussing the draft of the revised constitution, we should conduct in depth education for the cadres and masses in upholding the four basic principles and in patriotism, collectivism, internationalism and communist ideology and morality. We should advocate love for the motherland, the people, labor, science and socialism, and oppose capitalist ideology, the remnants of feudal ideology and the influences of other decadent ideology, and thus lay a good foundation for a fundamental turn for the better in party work style, social mood and social order." The rally was presided over by Comrade Xia Shihou, member of the standing committee of the provincial CCP committee and vice chairman of the provincial people's congress standing committee.

HEAVY RAINSTORMS CAUSE FLOODING IN HUNAN

HK290223 Changsha Hunan Provincial Service in Mandarin 1100 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] According to statistics from the provincial hydrology center, heavy rain fell throughout Hunan from 25 to 27 May, and some places had violent and torrential rainstorms. Due to the concentration and intensify of the rain, mountain torrents rushed down in Taoyuan County, while flooding occurred in Yiyang County in the Dongting Lake area. At present, many parts of the province are hurrying to store and conserve water, while areas hit by calamities are stepping up antiflood and drainage work and doing everything possible to reap a bumper harvest this year.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

China

CONTENTS

Vol I No 106 2 June 1982

PRC INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

GENERAL

Commencement of U.S.-USSR Arms Talks Noted A 1
AFP on Spokesman's Comment A 1
West's Tasks at Versailles Summit Examined A 2
Chen Muhua Meets Philippine, Mongolian Envoys A 3
Group Leaves for Geneva UN Development Meeting A 3

UNITED STATES

U.S.-China Trade Council Views Trade Expansion B 1
Stoessel Speech at Meeting B 1
Stoessel Cited on U.S. Latin American Policy B 1

SOVIET UNION

USSR Ambassador's Remarks in Japan Assailed C 1
[RENMIN RIBAO 29 May]
Le Duan Meeting With Brezhnev in Moscow Noted C 1

NORTHEAST ASIA

Further Materials on Zhao Ziyang's Japan Visit D 1
Huang Hua-Sakurauchi Talk D 1
Meeting With Tanaka D 1
Call on Emperor D 1
Dietmen's Reception for Zhao D 2
Economic Groups' Fete for Zhao D 3
Visit to Steel Mill D 3
Japanese Coverage [cross-reference] D 4
Ji Pengfei Meets DPRK Writers, Artists D 4
Du Ping Fetes DPRK Army Delegation in Nanjing D 4
Qiao Shi Receives Korean Workers Party Group D 4

MIDDLE EAST & AFRICA

Islamic Association Fetes Libyan Delegation I 1
Trade Delegation Departs for Libya 29 May I 1
Wang Bingnan Fetes Central African Group I 1
Ulanhu Receives Credentials of Ambassadors I 1
With Chadian Ambassador I 1
With Zimbabwean Ambassador I 1

PRC NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Wan Li Urges Efforts To Combat Economic Crimes K 1
Metallurgy Chief Urges Raising Economic Results K 2
[RENMIN RIBAO 29 May]
RENMIN RIBAO on Economic Development Strategy [24 May] K 3
GUANGMING RIBAO Views Mao's Military Thinking [22 May] K 7

Communication, Transportation Association Set Up K 8
Officials Propose Utilization of Peat Resources K 9
Zeng Siyuan Stresses Success, Quality of Census K 9
Daqing Oilfield Provides Training for Cadres K 10
Water, Soil Conservation Group Established K 11
GUANGMING RIBAO Commentator on Yanan 'Talks' [22 May] K 11
Ding Ling Discusses Mao's Concern for Writers K 16
[RENMIN RIBAO 25 May]
YANGCHENG WANBAO Carries Bai Hua Article [21 May] K 18

PRC REGIONAL AFFAIRS

EAST REGION

Fujian Leaders Mark International Children's Day O 1
Jiangsu's Xu Jiatun Meets Young Pioneers 31 May O 1
Jiangxi's Bai Dongcai Visits Child-Care Center O 1
Shandong's Bai Rubing Visits Child-Care Workers O 2
Shandong Sponsors Forum on Mao's Yanan Speech O 2

CENTRAL-SOUTH REGION

Guangdong Allocates Funds for Disaster Areas P 1
China Investment Group Meets in Guangzhou P 1
Guangxi's Leaders at Children's Day Celebrations P 1
Hubei's Chen Pixian Stresses Care for Children P 2
Hunan's Mao Zhiyong Inspects Emulation Drive P 2

SOUTHWEST REGION

Tan Qilong Attends Chengdu Children's Exhibit Q 1
Yin Fatang Attends Xijang Cultural Festival Q 1
Yunnan Scores Results in Handling Economic Crime Q 1

NORTH REGION

Hebei Military District Holds Mao Study Course R 1
Hebei Holds Forum on Standing Committee Work R 1
Nei Monggol's Zhou Hui Visits Disaster Areas R 3
Tianjin Forum on 'Five Stresses,' Courtesy Month R 4
Briefs: Bohai Sea Oil Well R 4

NORTHEAST REGION

Heilongjiang Checks Illegal Housing Trasfer S 1
Yang Yichen Attends Children's Day Get-Together S 1
Heilongjiang's Yang Yichen at Youth Parade S 1
Heilongjiang Stresses Improving Product Quality S 2
Jilin Local Leaders Overemphasize Incentives S 2
National CPPCC Team Inspects Shenyang, Liaoning S 3

NORTHWEST REGION

Gansu's Feng Jixin at Railway Station Service T 1
Gansu's Feng Jixin Attends Children's Work Forum T 1
Ningxia People's Congress Committee Meeting Ends T 2
[NINGXIA RIBAO 18 May]
Ningxia Rally Commends Public Security Workers T 2
[NINGXIA RIBAO 21 May]
Wang Zhen Attends Xinjiang Children's Day Party T 3
Wang Enmao at Xinjiang Constitution Study Rally T 4

TAIWAN

Senator Goldwater Feted, Welcomed on Visit V 1
Chu Fu-sung Hosts Dinner V 1
Meeting With Premier Sun V 1
LIEN HO PAO 29 May Editorial V 1
Symposium on Taiwan-U.S. Relations Concludes V 3
U.S. Urged To Be Frank on Relations With Taiwan V 4

HONG KONG MEDIA ON CHINA

TA KUNG PAO Views China's Foreign Relations [2 Jun] W 1

COMMENCEMENT OF U.S.-USSR ARMS TALKS NOTED

OW010257 Beijing XINHUA in English 0241 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Washington, May 31 (XINHUA) -- U.S. President Reagan announced today that the United States and the Soviet Union will begin Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) in Geneva on June 29.

Speaking at a Memorial Day ceremony in Arlington National Cemetery, Reagan also said that the United States will abide by the old SALT treaties "so long as the Soviet Union shows equal restraint".

The United States and the Soviet Union issued a joint statement shortly before Reagan's formal announcement. "Both sides attach great importance to these negotiations", the statement says.

The U.S. delegation will be headed by Ambassador Edward Rowny. His Soviet counterpart will be Ambassador V.P. Karpov.

Earlier this month Reagan proposed a sharp reduction beginning with a one-third cutback on the current level of missile warheads. In response to the U.S. proposal, Soviet President Brezhnev said on May 18 that the essence of Reagan's plan was "absolutely unilateral in nature" and "directly prejudicing" to Soviet security. However, Brezhnev said his country was willing to negotiate an agreement. He advocated a nuclear freeze, which was later rebutted by Reagan as a design to maintain Soviet superiority.

In his Memorial Day address today, Reagan said, "As for existing strategic arms agreements, we will refrain from actions which undercut them so long as the Soviet Union shows equal restraint".

Reagan was referring to the expired 1972 SALT One agreement which limited some offensive weapons as well as missile defenses, and the 1979 SALT Two agreement, which set ceilings on long-range bombers, intercontinental ballistic missiles and multiple warheads. The SALT Two, once described by Reagan as "fatally flawed", was never ratified by the U.S. Senate.

AFP on Spokesman's Comments

OW011050 Hong Kong AFP in English 1042 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, 1 Jun (AFP) -- China today urged the United States and the Soviet Union to make their forthcoming bilateral Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) serve the cause of world peace.

Asked to comment on the simultaneous announcement by Washington and Moscow that they would open START talks in Geneva June 29, an official Chinese spokesman said: "We hope that their talks will yield results that will be advantageous and not disadvantageous to international peace and security".

Beijing had until now repeatedly said that the two superpowers had never taken any concrete steps toward genuine disarmament. "We have always maintained that the two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, should take the lead in substantially reducing their nuclear and conventional armaments," the spokesman added.

WEST'S TASKS AT VERSAILLES SUMMIT EXAMINED

OW011656 Beijing XINHUA in English 1503 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 1 (XINHUA correspondent) -- A summit of seven Western nations will be held in France from June 4 to 6. As part of its preparations for the meeting, the French Government reportedly has spent 5.5 million U.S. dollars in redecorating the 321-year-old Versailles Palace, the site of the summit, which will attract about 2,600 foreigners, including more than 2,000 newsmen, during the summit.

It is disclosed that at the meeting, the heads of government of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Canada and Japan will discuss mainly economic policies, trade relations and other economic problems.

These countries are more or less in the throes of economic difficulties. The countries of the European Economic Community have not been out of a slump following the grip of an economic crisis in the second quarter of 1980. The U.S. economy once again fell into a recession last August and is expected to recover only at a slow pace this year. Industry and mining in Japan had declined for five months running last March.

The worsening economic situation has caused serious unemployment in these countries, with the number of jobless in the EEC and the United States topping 10 million each and jobless rates reaching 9.7 and 9.4 percent respectively, both post-war records. Inflation rates, though somewhat lowered, have remained a double-digit figures in not a few of these countries.

It is generally held in West European countries that their failure in attempting an economic recovery is caused partly by the U.S. policy of high interests rates. At their foreign ministers meeting in late May, therefore, the EEC countries decided that they will continue pressing for U.S. interest rate reductions and economic policy revisions at the Versailles summit. The Canadian prime minister has indicated that if the United States does not lower its interest rates, his country will have to make a showdown with the U.S. president at the summit. The United States, on the other hand, has stressed that, above all, the Western countries should each try to readjust their own economic policies and that the U.S. Government is not going to change its existing economic policies. GUARDIAN, a British paper, points out in a recent article that problems about economic policies are likely to poison the atmosphere of the meeting.

Scuffles in trade are expected to be one of the main subjects to be discussed at the summit. World trade has slowed down in the past few years. It increased by one percent in 1980, only to return by a 1 percent drop the next year. Protectionist measures, such as export subsidies and import restrictions, adopted by the Western countries to rid themselves of economic difficulties have led to further scuffles in trade between the United States, Japan, and the West European countries. The United States and Western Europe, who have witnessed increasing trade troubles between them, are urging in strong terms that Japan makes its domestic market more open to the world by expanding imports. A Western newspaper says that scuffles among the United States, Japan and Western Europe have brought their trade to the brink of danger. To avoid becoming the target of attack at the coming summit, the Japanese Government reportedly decided on May 28 to adopt a second batch of measures designed to open its trade door wider. Japanese newspapers pointed out, however, that these were temporary measures meant only to lessen rather than settle the differences.

It is disclosed that the Versailles summit is also going to discuss East-West economic relations centered on the policies toward the Soviet Union. U.S. President Ronald Reagan declared on May 9 that the Soviet Union absolutely cannot be allowed to acquire Western technology for military use or Western finances to support its economy. During his recent visit to the United States, Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser appealed for coordination by the Western allies of their policies toward one another and those toward the Soviet Union; otherwise these countries will face a disastrous situation, he warned.

In their summit in Ottawa last year, the seven nations declared in a communique that in order to attain their goals in the political and security fields, the Western countries would conduct negotiations among themselves for improving the existing systems of control for trading strategic materials and related technology with the Soviet Union. Up to now, however, the Western countries have remained divided on this question. Self-interest has made each of them to follow its own policies in economic exchanges with the Soviet Union without regard for the interests of its allies.

The seven nations have made great efforts in the past few months toward a coordination of their positions. French President Mitterrand has visited the United States, Canada, Japan, West Germany and Britain. The ministerial meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development took place in Paris in mid-May. These activities were part of the preparations for the summit. However, some Western papers predict that the summit will yield no results of substance because the participating countries are all confronted with economic difficulties and are widely divided in their monetary and trading policies as well as policies toward the Soviet Union and the Third World. An international relations institute of France said in a recent report that the heads of government of the seven most developed nations in the West held one summit after another in the past seven summers, but the pomp of the ceremonies of the summit failed to cover up the contradictions and intense struggles among the Western nations. Some Western observers have predicted that the forthcoming summit will wind up with a brief statement to cover up rather than resolve the differences of the participating countries.

CHEN MUHUA MEETS PHILIPPINE, MONGOLIAN ENVOYS

OW020750 Beijing XINHUA in English 0740 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 2 (XINHUA) -- State Councillor Chen Muhua this morning met on separate occasions with the out-going Mongolian ambassador to China, L. Chuluunbaatar, and new Philippine Ambassador to China Fortunato U. Abat.

GROUP LEAVES FOR GENEVA UN DEVELOPMENT MEETING

OW292140 Beijing XINHUA in English 1534 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 29 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese delegation led by Shi Lin, adviser to the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, left here for Geneva this evening to attend a special high-level meeting of the 29th session of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Governing Council.

U.S.-CHINA TRADE COUNCIL VIEWS TRADE EXPANSION

OW020758 Beijing XINHUA in English 0741 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Washington, June 1 (XINHUA) -- The National Council for U.S.-China Trade expected a further development of trade relations between the two countries at its annual meeting here today. In the annual report presented to the meeting, the council's president, Christopher Phillips, recalled the progress made in trade between the two countries. He said that U.S.-China trade amounted to 5.5 billion dollars last year, and the council predicted that total trade value between the two countries will reach 6.5 billion dollars this year and climb to 10 billion dollars by 1985.

Phillips said that American firms now are more confident than ever about China's economic and political prospects. The council will continue improving and expanding services to its members and expects the activities of its member firms in the coming years to be more extensive than at anytime since the council was established in 1973.

The meeting elected Walter Sterling Surrey as new chairman of the council to replace David S. Tappan. Surrey is a senior partner of a Washington law firm. The meeting was attended by about 400 representatives of U.S. companies. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel addressed the luncheon. Chinese Ambassador Chai Zemin was present on the occasion.

Stoessel Speech At Meeting

OW020844 Beijing XINHUA in English 0828 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Washington, June 1 (XINHUA) -- U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel said here today: "The U.S.-China relationship, like all relationships between equal, sovereign nations, should be guided by the fundamental principles of respect for each other's sovereignty and territorial integrity and non-interference in each other's internal affairs."

Speaking at the ninth annual meeting of the National Council for U.S.-China Trade, Stoessel noted: "fostering a lasting relationship between the United States and China has been a vitally important bipartisan objective for the last four administrations." "Strong U.S.-China relations are not only critical for our long-term security but also contribute to Asian stability and global harmony." "We view China as a friendly country with which we are not allied but with which we share many common interests," he added.

During the decade-long process of the normalization of the relations between the two countries, Stoessel recalled, a number of principles upon which the United States bases its China policy have emerged. These principles, he said, "include our recognition that the Government of the People's Republic of China is the sole legal government of China and our acknowledgement of the Chinese position that there is but one China and that Taiwan is a part of China." He said the Reagan administration is committed to pursuing a durable relationship with China based on all the above principles.

Describing the question on U.S. arms sale to Taiwan as complex and historical, Stoessel said he believed that "so long as both sides demonstrate the statesmanship, vision, and good will that have characterized our relationship, we will be able to overcome our difficulties."

Speaking at length of the development of Sino-U.S. relations in the past years, Stoessel said that in areas such as trade, tourism, banking and agriculture, as well as in scientific, technological and educational exchanges, a close, cooperative relationship has been productive.

In conclusion he said: "U.S. foreign policy-makers clearly recognize that it is not in our interest to perpetuate the hostility that existed between the U.S. and China but to look ahead to decades of close Sino-American cooperation."

STOESSEL CITED ON U.S. LATIN AMERICAN POLICY

OW281525 Beijing XINHUA in English 1512 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Washington, May 27 (XINHUA) -- While siding with Great Britain, the U.S. reiterated that it remains ready to help or to support "any realistic diplomatic initiative which will bring a just peace" to the South Atlantic. In an address to the Pittsburg World Affairs Council this afternoon, Walter J. Stoessel, deputy secretary of state, underlined U.S. "willingness to aid in the search for a peaceful solution" to the dispute between Britain and Argentina. But he claimed that a "basic principle" of the U.S. foreign policy is that "historic change should occur peacefully and under the rule of law." "If we disregard it," he cautioned, "conflict will continue creating an opportunity for the Soviet Union and its allies to gain the influence they have long sought."

On the situation in Central America, he noted that this area is confronted by "severe economic and social problems" which he accused Cuba and the USSR of "attempting to manipulate ...to impose new dictatorships by force."

Stoessel acknowledged the U.S. could not "cure" this area's problems by itself. "Still less does our policy envisage the use of American troops, who are neither watned nor needed." What the U.S. would do, he said, was to promote "democracy and reform." "What is required of America today," he added, "is a threefold commitment to support democracy, economic development and security cooperation in Central America."

He listed the U.S. support for the March 28 constituent assembly election in El Salvador as an example of U.S. "commitment" to support democracy, although the result of the election was that a group of notorious ultra rightists emerged as the leading political power in that country, a group the U.S. Government had been shy to embrace and the U.S. Congress is still reluctant to provide with assistance.

He then cited President Reagan's Caribbean Basin proposals as evidence of U.S. willingness to support "sustained economic development" and made it clear that as a form of "security cooperation" the U.S. would provide moremilitary aids to some unstable regimes in this area against local guerrillas. "Military training and supplies can help local forces to repel guerrilla violence," he asserted.

Before concluding his speech, Stoessel discussed U.S. relations with Cuba by declaring that a better relationship between Cuba and the U.S. "is both possible and desirable but it cannot take place in the context of aggression and subversion."

USSR AMBASSADOR'S REMARKS IN JAPAN ASSAILED

HK010246 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 29 May 82 p 6

["International Jottings" by Bo Yong [3134 8673]: "Courting One's Own Disgrace"]

[Text] The USSR ambassador to Japan, Vladimir Pavlov, who recently assumed his post, called on secretary general of the Japan Liberal-Democratic Party Nikaido several days ago. Although it was a courtesy call, this Soviet ambassador did not fail to show his peremptory style. Indulging in self-glorification and acting superciliously as a presumptuous guest, he made his host quite unhappy. He was so insensitive that he even noisily boasted about the Soviet "desire for peace."

Does the Soviet Union really "long for peace" as claimed by Pavlov? Nikaido sternly and justly pointed out that "peace cannot be achieved through words alone. It will never work unless supported by action." His comment really hit the nail on the head. Nikaido also asked Pavlov, "Is it not true that the Soviet Union is intervening in Afghanistan with arms and is building military bases on our legitimate northern territory?" Facts speak louder than words. Pavlov, who is well known for his eloquence, was rendered speechless before such a charge, and finally had to take leave sullenly.

The Soviet Union always boasts about its "desire for peace" and its "good-neighbor policy" while continuing to occupy the territories of other countries. It clumsy trick like this can be nothing but a disgusting act. The new Soviet ambassador's performance was simply an act of courting his own disgrace.

LE DUAN MEETING WITH BREZHNEV IN MOSCOW NOTED

OW010736 Beijing XINHUA in English 0722 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Moscow, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Le Duan, general secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam, met Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev here today and presented him with a Ho Chi Minh Order First Class and a medal of the Hero of Labour of Vietnam.

A TASS report said that they discussed a number of questions related to the further and closer cooperation between the two countries. "Some questions of the international situation were discussed during the meeting," TASS added.

Le Duan held that an all-round development of cooperation with the Soviet Union was the cornerstone of Vietnam's foreign policy. He expressed "profound thanks" for the "effective assistance and support" of the Soviet Union. "Special attention was given to the situation in Southeast Asia." The Soviet side gave "full support" for Vietnam's efforts at "settling the outstanding issues of the area by way of talks," the TASS report said.

Le Duan was reportedly "on vacation" in the Soviet Union upon invitation.

FURTHER MATERIALS ON ZHAO ZIYANG'S JAPAN VISIT

Huang Hua-Sakurauchi Talks

OW011248 Beijing XINHUA in English 1243 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua and Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi held talks at the Foreign Ministry here this afternoon.

The two sides had an exchange of views in a friendly atmosphere on the United Nations special meeting on disarmament, the Kampuchea and Afghanistan problems and bilateral relations.

Present on the occasion were Chinese Vice-Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian, Chinese Ambassador to Japan Song Zhiguang, Japanese Deputy Vice Foreign Minister Kensuke Yanagiya and Japanese Ambassador to China Yasue Katori.

Huang Hua called on his old friend, ailing Aiichiro Fujiyama, in a hospital here at noon today.

Meeting With Tanaka

OW010841 Bekjing XINHUA in English 0827 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang today praised former Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka for his great contribution to the growth of Sino-Japanese friendly and cooperative ties.

Zhao Ziyang made the remarks at a breakfast hosted by Kakuei Tanaka in honour of the Chinese premier and his entourage in Tanaka's residence here.

The Chinese premier said that Tanaka is a far-signted Japanese statesman whose visit to China in 1972 opened up a new page in the annals of friendship between China and Japan.

He said that now good relations have been established between the two countries and they should continue to develop in the future to make them long-standing and stable. Friendship and cooperation between the two countries are an important factor in maintaining world peace and stability, he stressed.

Kakuei Tanaka told Zhao Ziyang that the steady growth of the friendship between Japan and China makes him extremely happy. The deepening of the mutual understanding and cooperation between the two countries are not only in the interest of Japan and China, but also contribute to peace in Asia and the rest of the world, Tanaka noted. Today, he said, he specially put up in the dining room a photo taken with the late Chinese Premier Zhou Enlai ten years ago.

Tanaka and his daughter, son-in-law and grand-daughter, together with a number of Diet members, greeted the Chinese premier on the lawn of his residence.

Call on Emperor

OW011216 Beijing XINHUA in English 1207 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Japanese Emperor Hirohito said today that the unrestrained talks between the Japanese and Chinese premiers are bound to make great contributions to the strengthening of the relations between the two countries.

The Japanese emperor made these remarks when he met with visiting Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang in the palace here this noon. Premier Zhao thanked the Japanese emperor for his interest in the growth of Sino-Japanese relations.

Crown Prince Akihito and Prince Hitachi met with Premier Zhao following the exchange of presents between the emperor and the visiting premier. Later, the emperor gave a luncheon in honor of Premier Zhao Ziyang and senior members of his entourage, including State Councillors Huang Hua and Zhang Jingfu, at the Homeiden Palace.

Present at the luncheon on the Japanese side were the Crown Prince Akihito, Prince Hitachi, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and the speakers of the upper and lower houses, and the chief justice of the Supreme Court.

Dietmen's Reception for Zhao

OW011318 Beijing XINHUA in English 1304 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, June 1 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang and the Speaker of the House of Representatives Hajime Fukuda, today hoped that the friendship and trust between China and Japan should be deepened to contribute to peace and prosperity in Asia. Fukuda said that Japan and China have embarked firmly and solidly on the road of good neighbourliness and friendship.

Premier Zhao Ziyang said that the two houses of the Japanese Diet have made a positive contribution to the normalization of Sino-Japanese diplomatic relations, the signing of the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty and the promotion of Sino-Japanese relations. They were speaking at a reception hosted by the two houses in honour of the visiting premier and his party at the speaker's residence this evening.

Fukuda said that Premier Zhao's visit, taking place on the eve of the tenth anniversary of the normalization of diplomatic relations between Japan and China, constituted an epoch-making milestone in deepening the Sino-Japanese relations.

Zhao Ziyang said many far-sighted and sagacious politicians in Japan have played a role of forerunners and founders in the promotion of Sino-Japanese friendship, and their merits and achievements will go down in the annals of Sino-Japanese friendship.

He noted: "The extensive cooperation in various fields between China and Japan is in the interests of the two peoples and is conducive to the maintenance of peace in the Asian-Pacific region and in the world in general."

At the reception, which was permeated with a cordial and warm atmosphere, Japanese dietmen and Chinese guests proposed toasts repeatedly to the friendly ties between the two countries.

Before the reception began, the Chinese premier met with the heads of the opposition parties and had long and cordial conversations with them. Premier Zhao visited a subway here this afternoon.

Economic Groups' Fete for Zhao

OW020908 Beijing XINHUA in English 0854 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 2 (XINHUA) -- Six Japanese economic organizations jointly gave a luncheon today in honor of Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang. Present at the luncheon were 400 people from Japanese economic circles.

Speaking at the luncheon on behalf of the hosts, Shigeo Nagano said that Japan and China have become important and indispensable trade partners. At the same time, their cooperation has become closer in the exploitation of petroleum, coal, nonferrous metals and other resources as well as in such basic industries as iron and steel.

He said that in the world today, there exist many difficult problems, both political and economic. In these circumstances, Japan and China, being in the Asian and Pacific region, have a most important bearing on the peace and stability of the region.

Nagano said that Japanese economic circles are willing, together with the government, to contribute to the development of economic cooperation with China on the principle of mutual benefit and equality.

In his reply Premier Zhao Ziyang praised the Japanese personages of economic circles for their prolonged and unremitting efforts for and valuable contributions to the development of economic and trade ties between China and Japan.

After briefing the Japanese friends on China's economic development, he said, "China's economic construction relies mainly on its own effort. At the same time, we must also learn from the strong points of others and adhere to the open door policy."

Premier Zhao indicated China's willingness to make joint efforts with Japanese friends of economic circles to establish a long-standing and stable relationship of cooperation between China and Japan on the basis of peace and friendship, equality and mutual benefit.

The luncheon was sponsored by the Tokyo Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Federation of Economic Organizations of Japan, the Japan Federation of Employers Associations, the Japan Committee for Economic Development, the Japan Foreign Trade Council and the Japan-China Association on Economy and Trade.

Visit To Steel Mill

OW020818 Beijing XINHUA in English 0813 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Tokyo, Jun 2 (XINHUA) -- Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang today praised the Japan Steel Tube Corporation for its rational lay-out, advanced equipment, high efficiency and excellent environment.

The Chinese premier visited this morning the Ohgishima hot strip mill of the Keihin works of the Japan Steel Tube Corporation. The mill is situated in the south of metropolitan Tokyo.

The Chinese guests were shown round a hot-rolled sheet workshop. Zhao Ziyang said to the general manager of the corporation that the establishment of a China section at the Keihin works demonstrated its desire to promote Sino-Japanese economic and technological cooperation. The manager assured the Chinese premier that he would do his best to promote the cooperation between the two countries.

Japanese Coverage

For Japanese coverage of Premier Zhao Ziyang's visit to Japan, including reports of meetings with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, see the Japan section of the 1 June Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT.

JI PENGFEI MEETS DPRK WRITERS, ARTISTS

OW281607 Beijing XINHUA in English 1524 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 28 (XINHUA) -- Chinese State Councillor Ji Pengfei met with the delegation from the General Federation of Literary and Art Unions of Korea led by Cho Yong-chul, vice-chairman of the Central Committee of the federation, in the Great Hall of the People here this afternoon. Ji Pengfei extended a warm welcome to the visiting Korean writers and artists.

Present were Lin Mohan, vice-chairman of the China Federation of Literary and Art Circles, and Chon Myong-su, ambassador of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to China.

DU PING FETES DPRK ARMY DELEGATION IN NANJING

OW300249 Nanjing Jiangsu Provincial Service in Mandarin 2300 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] On the evening of 29 May, Du Ping, political commissar of the Nanjing PLA units, met with and gave a banquet for all the members of the good-will delegation of the Korean People's Army led by Lt Gen Pak Chung-kuk, vice minister of the People's Armed Forces of Korea.

Political Commissar Du Ping spoke at the banquet. On behalf of the commanders and fighters of the Nanjing PLA units, he expressed warm greetings to the Korean comrades in arms. He said that the friendship between the peoples and armies of China and Korea is unbreakable and everlasting. He asked the delegation to convey the cordial regards of the commanders and fighters of the Nanjing PLA units to the commanders and fighters of the Korean People's Army.

Lt Gen Pak Chung-kuk said: We have seen with our own eyes the achievements of the Chinese people and army. The Korean and Chinese people are comrades in arms in the same trench. Our friendship, which is cemented in blood, surely will be consolidated and developed.

Also present at the meeting and banquet were Zhang Xiqin, deputy commander of the Nanjing PLA units; Guang Junting, (Yan Zhimin) and (Liu Xuanting), responsible persons of leading organs of the Nanjing PLA units; Zhao Chunzheng, deputy director of the Foreign Affairs Bureau of the Ministry of National Defense; and Senior Col Kim Byong-ho, military attache of the Korean Embassy in China.

The good-will delegation of the Korean People's Army arrived in Nanjing from Zhengzhou by plane on the morning of 29 May.

QIAO SHI RECEIVES KOREAN WORKERS PARTY GROUP

OW012106 Beijing XINHUA in English 1523 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, June 1 (XINHUA) — Qiao Shi, head of the International Liaison Department of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, met with and feted a visiting friendship group of the Korean Workers' Party at a banquet here this evening in the Great Hall of the People.

The group is led by Pak Yong-sok, member and a department head of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers Party.

Present at the meeting and the banquet were Qian Liren, deputy head of the International Liaison Department of the C.P.C. Central Committee, Li Senmao, vice-minister of railways, and Chon Myong-Su, Korean ambassador to China. The visiting group flew in here this morning.

ISLAMIC ASSOCIATION FETES LIBYAN DELEGATION

OW011640 Beijing XINHUA in English 1520 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, Jun 1 (XINHUA) -- The China Islamic Association gave a banquet here this morning in honor of the delegation from the Islamic Call Society of Libya [title as received] led by Dr. Mohamed Ahmed Shrief [name as received]. Burhan Shahidi, honorary president of the China Islamic Association, attended the banquet and had a conversation with the Libyan guests.

Al-Hajji Muhammad Ali Zhang Jie, president of the host association, and Dr. Shrief spoke at the banquet. Both said that the delegation's current visit to China would contribute to further promotion of the mutual understanding between Chinese and Libyan Moslems and friendly relations between the peoples of the two countries. Among the guests was Saleh A. Mesalati, charge d'affaires ad interim of the People's Bureau of Libya in Beijing. The delegation arrived here yesterday at the invitation of the China Islamic Association.

TRADE DELEGATION DEPARTS FOR LIBYA 29 MAY

OW292138 Beijing XINHUA in English 1533 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 29 (XINHUA) -- A Chinese Government economic delegation led by Li Ke, deputy to the minister of foreign economic relations and trade, left here this evening for a friendship visit to the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah.

WANG BINGNAN FETES CENTRAL AFRICAN GROUP

OW280154 Beijing XINHUA in English 0117 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 27 (XINHUA) -- Wang Bingnan, president of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship With Foreign Countries, today met and feted a delegation from Central African Republic led by Gaston Gambor, minister of youth, sports, art and culture. Present at both occasions was Auguste Mboe, ambassador of the Central African Republic.

ULANHU RECEIVED CREDENTIALS OF AMBASSADORS

With Chadian Ambassador

OW310742 Beijing XINHUA in English 0713 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Djona Golo May Rigaza, new ambassador of Chad to China, presented his credentials to Ulanhu, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, at the Great Hall of the People here this morning. On hand was Wen Yezhan, vice-minister of foreign affairs. The new ambassador arrived here on May 28.

With Zimbabwean Ambassador

OW310746 Beijing XINHUA in English 0714 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 31 (XINHUA) -- Gabriel Phineas Chisese, first ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the Republic of Zimbabwe to China, presented his credentials to Ulanhu, vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, at the Great Hall of the People here this morning. Present on the occasion was Wen Yezhan, vice-minister of foreign affairs. The ambassador arrived here on May 27.

WAN LI URGES EFFORTS TO COMBAT ECONOMIC CRIMES

OW020643 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 1301 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, 1 Jun (XINHUA) -- Wan Li, member of the CCP Central Committee Secretariat and vice premier of the State Council, has said at a meeting held by the Discipline Inspection Commission of the CCP Central Committee that the restructuring of the departments under the CCP Central Committee and the ministries and commissions under the State Council had basically been completed and that all units should now seriously carry out the struggle to deal blows at serious crimes in the economic field in order to improve party and government style and ensure the smooth progress of the socialist modernization.

Wan Li pointed out: The various principal tasks undertaken by the CCP Central Committee and the State Council since the beginning of this year, including the organizational restructuring, the struggle against serious crimes in the economic field, the activities of "five stresses and four beauties," the building of a socialist spiritual civilization and party rectification, are all for one purpose, that is, to build China into a modern socialist country with highly developed democracy and civilization. Until now, the central organs have not been able to effectively carry out the struggle against serious criminal activities in the economic field because they have been busy with their organizational restructuring. From now on, all central organs should restudy the decision of the CCP Central Committee and the State Council on dealing blows at serious criminal activities in the economic field and raise their understanding on the importance of waging this struggle. They should take a look at what they have done, find out what they have not done, and decide what they should do to make the struggle a success. They should seriously carry out ideological education, sternly deal with big and important cases, sum up their experience well, perfect various systems and eliminate loopholes.

Wan Li said: To vigorously carry out this struggle, the important thing is that the party committee or organ of a unit should recognize the corrosive influence of capitalist ideas and its harm to our party and realize the harms of economic criminal activities to the correct implementation of our open-door policy and the policy of enlivening our economy and to the smooth progress of our socialist modernization.

Wan Li called for a firm attitude to seriously correct the weak and lax state of certain party organizations. He asked all communists in the central organs to ask themselves whether they have preserved the purity of a communist and served the people wholeheartedly, whether they have used the power bestowed on them by the people to do things in the interest of the people instead of themselves. He pointed out that party discipline and state laws do not permit a few persons using the power bestowed on them by the people in practicing graft and taking bribes.

Wan Li stressed the need to use this struggle to seriously rectify the party and government style. He also asked the new party committees and organizations of the various central organs to uphold the principle of democratic centralism strive to restore and develop the party's three main work styles -- integrating theory with practice, forging close links with the masses and conducting criticism and self-criticism -- and regard the people's interest as the sole criterion in judging right or wrong and dealing with all kinds of problems in order to solidly push forward the socialist modernization.

Wang Heshou, deputy secretary of the Discipline Inspection Commission under the CCP Central Committee, presided over the meeting. He gave a briefing at the beginning of the meeting on the progress made in the last 4 months in the struggle carried out in various localities against serious economic offenses.

Attending the meeting were the responsible persons of the party committees, party organizations and discipline inspection departments of the departments under the CCP Central Committee, the ministries and commissions under the State Council and the people's organizations, as well as the responsible persons of the PLA General Political Department and the Discipline Inspection Commission of the Military Commission of the CCP Central Committee.

Wang Congwu, Ma Guorui and Zhao Yimin, deputy secretaries of the Discipline Inspection Commission under the CCP Central Committee, were present at the meeting.

METALLURGY CHIEF URGES RAISING ECONOMIC RESULTS

HK011101 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 29 May 82 p 3

[Report: "Minister of Metallurgical Industry Li Dongye Says Contracts Should be Fulfilled With an Eye on Raising Economic Results"]

[Text] The metallurgical industry must proceed from raising overall economic results and fulfilling contracts based on quality and quantity on schedule. This was proposed by the metallurgical industry's Minister Li Dongye at a telephone conference on the metallurgical system held recently.

At the telephone conference, after making a report on the achievements of the metallurgical industry in production, capital construction, scientific research and enterprise readjustment, Li Dongye pointed out that at present the main problems are: contracts for steel products are not properly fulfilled, the stock of steel products for steelworks has risen, the quality of products in some enterprises has fallen and some consumption indices and comparable product costs have gone up. Therefore, for the coming 8 months, we must first proceed from raising overall economic results and fulfilling contracts based on quality and variety on schedule.

Li Dongye said: For a metallurgical enterprise, paying attention to economic results hinges on using less energy and metal to produce fine quality products suitable for the market. At present, many of the enterprises are already paying attention to the partial interests of their own units but not enough attention to overall economic results by proceeding from the interests of the state as a whole. For example, some of the enterprises have not used an insulating cover but continued production with an open-mouthed mold for the casting of 8-inch killed steel even when the clearly know there is no guarantee of quality. Some of the enterprises evidently have the production capacity, but they are nevertheless unwilling to accept the task of producing less profitable products urgently required by the state. By doing so, even though the profits of these enterprises might increase, this is undesirable judging from the situation as a whole.

Li Dongye said: If quality is poor and variety is unsuitable for the market, there is no need to talk about raising economic results. When the situation in production takes a turn for the better and supply of products cannot keep up with demand, it is even more necessary to pay attention to product quality. We must further revise product standards and make a success of service work based on consumer needs. All units must make a comprehensive analysis of production conditions since the beginning of the year. In particular they must examine the problems of fulfilling the state plan and ensuring product quality, draw up measures and make improvements.

Li Dongye said: In order to make a profit this year, we must try to reduce costs. Under the condition of not increasing consumption of coal and electricity or the stock of steel products for steelworks, we must try to increase production of products needed by the market and achieve increasing production and income. We must pay attention to reducing spending and increasing income and put the focal point of work on reducing costs. Some key enterprises and local hardcore enterprises have already obtained rather good results in this respect. However, there are still quite a number of enterprises which have excessively high costs. These units must gradually analyze, item by item, the reasons for excessively high costs and take necessary measures to reduce them.

RENMIN RIBAO ON ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY

HK011309 Beijing RENMIN RIBAO in Chinese 24 May 82 p 5

[Article by Zhou Shulian [0719 0647 5571]: "Seriously Study the Historical Experience of China's Economic Development Strategy"]

[Text] Summary: By economic development strategy we mean an outline of the major objectives of long-term economic deevelopment and the main measures that should be taken in order to reach these objectives. In order to correctly formulate and implement economic development strategy we must seriously summarize historical experience. At the same time we should study and draw on the experience of economic development abroad. Proceeding from the reality of the situation in China, we should correctly handle the relationships between economic results, the speed of development and economic structure, the relationships between various departments in the national economy and the relationship between accumulation and consumption. In the course of development of our country's socialist economic construction we must establish the strategic mentality of "protracted war" and oppose any "accelerated program." In this way we can eliminate or at least reduce mistakes. From the study of historical experience we should learn how to coordinate the strategic development of the economy, society and science and technology. The resultant force of such a fully integrated system will promote the healthy development of the national economy. [end summary]

Economic development strategy plays an important role in guiding the development of both the economy and society. If we are to formulate a correct development strategy for the future development of the economy, it is important that we seriously study the historical experience of development strategy's formulation and implementation in the past.

The fact that in the past we seldom used the concept of economic development strategy has led some people to doubt the existence of such a strategy. Such doubts, however, are unnecessary. What we call economic development strategy is an outline of the major objectives of long-term economic development and the main measures that should be taken in order to reach these objectives. In each period since the founding of the PRC, outlines of the main objectives and main measures for economic development have been formulated. Moreover, these outlines have often been incorporated in the party's policies and the national plan. For example, when the period of reviving the national economy came to an end, the party then pointed out the main tasks of the transitional period. In the light of this general task, our country's "First 5-Year Plan for the Development of the National Economy" gave a detailed formulation of basic tasks, concrete tasks and important measures. These various tasks and measures embodied the strategic objectives and strategic measures of the "First 5-Year Plan" period. The strategic objectives and strategic measures of other periods have also been formulated in this way. Experience has shown that many such formulations and outlines were correct. Others have proved to be less correct or even mistaken. All, however, are worthy of serious study.

We should pay attention to the fact that in the area of the formulation and implementation of development strategy our country is rich in experience. During the period of the "First 5-Year Plan" strategic objectives and strategic measures were formulated under the guidance of Marxism on the basis of thorough investigation and research. Because they suited the national conditions in our country their implementation produced a very marked effect. Summing up the experience of the implementation of the First 5-Year Plan, Comrade Zhou Enlai pointed out: "We must regulate the speed of development in a rational manner in accordance with the needs and capabilities of our country. By placing the plan on a positive, firm and reliable foundation we can guarantee the relatively balanced development of our country's economy." "We should coordinate the construction of key projects with overall planning so as to ensure that each department of the national economy can develop in proportion." This strategic thinking should be put in effect today. According to estimates, the completion of the general task of the transitional period should have required three separate 5-year plans. That is to say, the strategic objectives and the strategic measures formulated during the "First 5-Year Plan" period should have been continued.

From 1958 onward, however, changes occurred in this strategic thinking and mistakes were made in the formulation of strategic objectives and measures. For example, quotas were set too high and the communist wind began to blow and during the Second 5-Year Plan economic development suffered serious setbacks. Even during the period of the "Second 5-Year Plan," however, strategic thinking was still correct to a large extent. It was correct to assert that economic development should be based on an agricultural foundation, that arrangements should be made in the order of agriculture, light industry and heavy industry; that production must precede capital construction; that simple reproduction must precede expanded reproduction; and that emphasis should be placed on the development of commodity production and the observance of the rules of value. This important strategic thinking originated during this period and is still of guiding significance today.

The purpose of summing up past experience and lessons is to help us decide what we should and should not do in the future. For this reason we need to acquire a deeper understanding of these experiences and lessons and to raise this understanding to a high theoretical level. During the past 30 years we have often had the following experience: When we pay attention to the overall balance of the economy and regulate development by seeking truth from facts we are able to improve economic results; on other occasions, however, the blind pursuit of rapid development has led to dislocations in proportional relations and a decline in economic results. What is the reason for this? Is such a pattern inevitable? What factors come into play? We should gather relevant historical material in a systematic manner and examine the mutual relationship between the rate of development and economic results. From this we could gather valuable experience. Similar questions such as the relationship between the rate of development and economic structure or the relationship between economic structure and economic results also need to be studied scientifically in the light of practice and experience. If we grasp the laws governing important strategic problems and acquire the ability to employ these laws in accordance with concrete circumstances we will be able to avoid or reduce mistakes in the formulation and implementation of economic development strategy.

People in theoretical circles have different understanding of the theoretical questions relating to the formulation of economic development strategy. Summing up past experience will help us to reach relatively comprehensive understanding of these questions. For example, there is the question of giving priority to the development of heavy industry. We know that the First 5-Year Plan's strategy of giving priority to the development of heavy industry was based on the weakness of the industrial base and the urgent need for industrialization. This strategy achieved favorable results. We can see, therefore, that it is wrong to reject out of hand the policy of giving priority to heavy industrial development and the law of giving priority to the growth of the means of production. The subsequent one-sided implementation of this policy, however, had negative consequences. For the past few years priority has been given to the development of the consumer goods industry; this has had a positive effect. This goes to show that only under certain circumstances should priority be given to the development of heavy industry and also that the law of giving priority to the development of the means of production only operates under certain conditions. We must examine the internal relations that exist between heavy industry and light industry and also those between industry and other sectors of the economy. While we should acknowledge the fact that under certain conditions the law of giving priority to the growth of the means of production holds true, we should avoid thinking in terms of absolutes. As far as the relationship between production and livelihood is concerned, for a long time we made the mistake of one-sidely emphasizing production and ignoring the people's livelihood. During the past few years, however, there has been a tendency among certain people to ignore development of production and one-sidedly emphasize the improvement of the standard of living. Experience has shown that economic construction cannot violate the aims of socialist production and also that it is impossible to speak of the aims of socialist production in isolation from the measures necessary for the implementation of these aims. The First 5-Year Plan stipulated that "the development of production and the improvement of the rate of labor productivity should provide the basis for a gradual improvement of the material and cultural lives of the laboring people." Today we can see that this strategic thinking is correct.

The study of the history of our country's economic development strategy can also help us to successfully integrate the economic development strategy with social development strategy and scientific and technological development strategy. We already have some experience of social development strategy and scientific and technological strategy. For example, in the early period of our country the problem of labor employment was handled relatively well. After this, however, various factors led to an increase in the number of people awaiting employment in both urban and rural areas. In recent years we have achieved remarkable success in solving this problem. As for the question of population, for a long time we neglected the importance of population control. This was a strategic error. We have since adopted the population strategy of planned birth, and results have already been achieved in certain areas. As far as social questions are concerned, we need to sum up the situation from a strategic standpoint. In the fifties our country formulated a 12-year plan for the long-term development of science and technology. This plan was integrated relatively well with economic construction and played a positive role in the development of construction, production and science and technology. For a long period after this, however, we neglected the role of science and technology. Our policy on technology was constantly changing and there was little coordination between scientific and technological work, on the one hand, and economic construction on the other. We should sum up the experience and lessons of the strategic problems involved in social and scientific development. From the study of historical experience we should learn how to coordinate the strategic development of the economy, society and science and technology. The resultant force of such a fully integrated system will promote the healthy development of the national economy.

A correct economic development strategy must suit the national conditions of our country. Study of our country's historical experience will help us understand these national conditions and the way in which such national conditions affect the development of the national economy. Moreover, we will learn how to formulate economic development strategy in the light of these national conditions. For a long period of time there have been two fundamentally different strategic approaches to the development of our country's economy: "protracted war" and "accelerated program." These two strategic mentalities have been tested on more than one occasion and it has been proved that the "protracted war" approach suits our national conditions far better than the "accelerated program." In spite of this, however, the "protracted war" mentality has not yet been firmly planted in the minds of the broad masses of people and cadres. The "protracted war" strategy in no way suggests that we can neglect the need to achieve greater, faster, better and more economical results. In fact, the implementation of this strategy will ensure that the pace of long-term economic development will be relatively rapid and that the economic return from such development will be relatively good. This will accelerate the pace of socialist modernization. Through our investigation and study of historical experience and the present state of affairs we will be able to establish a theoretical foundation for the "protracted war" strategy and will be able to lay the ideological foundation for its smooth implementation.

In formulating our country's economic development strategy, we must investigate and make use of the relevant experiences of foreign countries. Research has already begun into the economic development strategies of several important foreign countries. Work in this area must certainly be improved. The study and use of foreign experience, however, presents the problem of having to coordinate this experience with the conditions in our own country. The study of our country's historical experience will help us to examine foreign experience in the light of our country's national conditions and to reach a correct understanding of the significance, limitations and usefulness of this experience as regards our own country. For example, several developing nations and districts have made exports the center of their economic development strategies in the hope that the development of an outward-looking industry based on exports and processing will stimulate development throughout the national economy. Some people have suggested that our country adopt such a strategy as well.

In developing the national economy, we must place a great deal of emphasis on the import-export trade and international exchange and must steadfastly uphold the open-door policy. A large socialist nation such as ours, however, cannot rely on export trade alone to stimulate development of the entire national economy.

In analyzing our country's historical experience of economic development strategy, we must resolve several methodological questions.

First, how should we divide the various stages of development strategy? During the past 30 years there have been many strategic changes in our country's economic development and any study and analysis of economic development strategy must take these changes into account. We might consider dividing these various stages on the basis of differences in strategic aims and strategic measures. In this way the history of our country's economic development could be divided into six strategic stages; (1) period of national economic revival (1949-1952); (2) First 5-Year Plan period (1953-1957); (3) Second 5-Year Plan period (1958-1962); (4) period of national economic readjustment (1963-1965); (5) "Great Cultural Revolution" period (1966-1976); (6) period following the smashing of the "gang of four." It should be pointed out that while readjustment of the national economy began in the winter of 1960 following changes in the development strategy of the Great Leap Forward period, it was not until 1962 that this readjustment produced a marked effect. Since it is also customary to see the years between 1963 and 1965 as a period of economic readjustment, we have therefore classified the Second 5-Year Plan period and the period between 1963 and 1965 as two separate stages of strategic development.

Second, how should we define the strategic contents of each strategic stage? Because of the complex and varied nature of economic development strategy, people have yet to reach a unified understanding of what it entails. Furthermore, the failure in the past to give a clear outline of economic development strategy has made it even more difficult to actually define the strategic content of each stage. As a tentative step we might try defining the strategic objectives and measures of each stage on the basis of the policy, line and plan of each stage and the circumstances surrounding their implementation. During certain periods the existence of dirrerent strategic outlooks led to the formulation of different strategic objectives and measures. For this reason we should determine the strategic content of each stage by seeking truth from facts and should avoid any over-simplification.

Third, how should we assess the economic development strategy of each stage? The practical result of economic development strategy provides an objective criterion for judging whether or not that strategy is correct and also the extent to which it is correct. To put it more concretely, we can assess the economic development strategy for each stage by looking at the following: (1) the evolution of the relations of production; (2) the level of economic returns; (3) the evolution of the economic structure; (4) the rate of economic development; (5) the people's standard of living.

To sum up the historical experience of our country's economic strategy is a difficult task. Since the founding of the PRC our country's economic development has followed a long and tortuous path. Our experience is ruch and we have learned many lessons. Our efforts over the past few years to sum up experience have produced marked results. A good number of topics, however, remain to be further studied and analyzed. In summing up the experience of past economic development strategy we should do more than merely reaffirm old conclusions from a different perspective; we should explore new territory and probe new questions so as to acquire a deeper understanding of history. This understanding should, in turn, be used to help us formulate our economic development strategy for the future.

GUANGMING RIBAO VIEWS MAO'S MILITARY THINKING

HK010153 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 22 May 82 p 3

[Article by Zhang Caiqian [1728 2088 0578]: "An Example of Applying and Developing Materialist Dialectics in the Course of Practice" -- this article is the preface written by the author to the book "Glorious Example of Military Dialectics." There are several revisions in the version reprinted by this publication. The above-mentioned book is due to be published by the Henan People's Publishing House]

[Text] Many important viewpoints of Mao Zedong's theoretical thinking find expression in his important military writings such as "Problems of Strategy in China's Revolutionary War," "Problems of Strategy in Guerrilla War Against Japan," "On Protracted War" and "Problems of War and Strategy." A conscientious study of the four military writings can help us to better understand Mao Zedong's philosophical thinking and grasp the sharp ideological weapon of materialist dialectics. The practice of revolutionary struggles proved incontrovertibly long ago that Comrade Mao Zedong's military writings were both a scientific military theory of Marxism and an invaluable philosophical wealth of Marxism. The "Resolution on Certain Questions in the History of Our Party Since the Founding of the PRC" approved at the 6th Plenary Session of the 11th CCP Central Committee pointed out: Comrade Mao Zedong "forged philosophy into a sharp weapon in the hands of the proletariat and the people for knowing and changing the world. His distinguished works on China's revolutionary war, in particular, provide outstandingly shining examples of applying and developing the Marxist theory of knowledge and dialectics in practice." The reason why it is of great significance to conscientiously study Mao Zedong's military writings also lies here.

Some strategists in modern history also left behind various kinds of military writings. Comrade Mao Zedong, however, combined in his military writings the military theory with the philosophical thinking of the proletariat to make it into an invincible science in the people's revolutionary war. This was unparalleled in history. When discussing the five most outstanding strategists in the modern world. (John Collins), author of the "Great Strategy," said: "Mao Zedong was different from the three persons (Lenin, (Kahn) [Kang en 1660 1869] and Clausewitz -- the quoter's note) mentioned above in that he was a seasoned battlefront commander.... From the very beginning Mao Zedong competed with the orthodox Marxists with the strategy he formulated himself and he firmly believed that his principles would become tenets." Owing to his world outlook, (Collins), as a bourgeois military commentator, was unable to make a broad and in-depth evaluation of the outstanding contributions Mao Zedong and Mao Zedong's military writings had made to the philosophy and military theory of Marxism-Leninism and of the series of theories, policies and principles for solving the question of building a people's army and waging a people's war theoretically and in practice during several decades of China's revolutionary wars.

Mao Zedong's military thinking is extremely rich in content. It has profoundly expounded the Marxist view on war and, by creatively applying the viewpoints of dialectical materialism and historical materialism to study and analyze war, comprehensively brought to light the dialectical relationships between the success and failure of revolutionary wars and politics, economy, military affairs, manpower and popular feeling. It has also pointed out the laws for the occurrence, development and victory of revolutionary wars. Therefore, from Comrade Mao Zedong's theory of knowledge on war, not only can we vividly see the guiding role of the Marxist philosophy on military science, we can also clearly discover that Mao Zedong Thought, which has been formed in protracted revolutionary wars, has in many respects and to a very great extent enriched Marxist philosophical thinking.

If the military writings of Marxism-Leninism are the starting point for studying materialist military dialectics, then Comrade Mao Zedong made a unique contribution in theory and in practice to the extensive spheres of military dialectics with his military writings. For example, the questions such as distinguishing the aim and characteristics of one war from another, understanding the nature of a war, studying and employing the laws of war and giving play to the objective material basis and the subjective dynamic role of war, radiate with eternal light. They are always our sharpest weapon in the struggle against the idealist and metaphysical viewpoints in military affairs.

The fundamental aim in studying philosophy is to solve the problems of stand, viewpoint and method. In studying Mao Zedong's philosophical thinking through the study of Mao Zedong's military writings, we should naturally and unexceptionally further rectify our ideological line through study and learn to play a dynamic role in understanding and solving the new situation and problems that have emerged in the four modernizations program with the Marxist stand, viewpoint and method. We can thus constantly raise our awareness in implementing the party's line, principles and policies and become revolutionary fighters who will never fall behind.

Marx said: "Philosophy regards the proletariat as its own material weapon and, likewise, the proletariat regards philosophy as its own spiritual weapon." ("Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 1, p 15) Let us study philosophy well, arm ourselves with it, enhance revolutionary vigor and contribute our strength to the cause of revitalizing the Chinese nation!

COMMUNICATION, TRANSPORTATION ASSOCIATION SET UP

OW281318 Beijing XINHUA in English 1239 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, May 28 (XINHUA) -- The China Communications and Transportation Association was established here today to improve China's communications and transportation and meet the needs of a rapid developing national economy. Approved by the State Economic Commission, the association is a trans-ministerial organization of China's communications and transportation industries. The association will conduct theoretical research into these industries and spread practical knowledge.

The association is composed of experts, engineers and representatives from ministries and enterprises of communications and transportation including railways, highways, waterways, civil aviation and pipelines units and it will make proposals on principles, policies relating to the development of communications and transportation. It will also offer advisory service for departments and enterprises of communications and transportation.

Addressing the inaugural meeting, Zhang Jingfu, state councillor and minister of the State Economic Commission, urged the association to study technical and economic policies and prepare proposals for the central government and related departments to improve China's communications and transportation, increase economic results and production efficiency.

Guo Hongtao, president of the association and adviser to the State Economic Commission, said, the establishment of the association will help coordinate plans for development of all departments and organize work.

China now has a network consisting of 12 waterway, highway and railway trunks, connecting 900,000 kilometers of highways and 108,000 kilometers of waterways, plus 171 civil aviation routes and 10,000 kilometers of pipelines.

By the end of 1981, the president said, China had 1.25 million kilometers of waterways, highways, railways and airways, 7.7 times the figure shortly after liberation in 1949, the president said.

At the meeting, the president proposed an eight-point plan for improving China's communications and transportation, including speeding up technical transformation of railway trunks for shipping coal and construction of new railways, making greater efforts in developing sea, coastal areas and Yangtze River transportation, and building vital transportation routes in southwest China where rich natural resources are located.

OFFICIALS PROPOSE UTILIZATION OF PEAT RESOURCES

OW011436 Beijing XINHUA in English 1238 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, Jun 1 (XINHUA) -- A proposal to make use of China's rich peat resources and to set up special organizations to work out over-all plans and make arrangements for this purpose is printed in the latest issue of ECONOMIC INFORMATION.

The proposal was made to the government by Shan Yongfu, director of the Capital Construction Bureau of the Ministry of Petroleum Industry, and Huang Weikuo, deputy mayor of Fushun city.

Northeast China and Sichuan Province have abundant peat resources. The total reserve in the country is estimated at some 27,000 million tons, accounting for ten percent of world reserves.

They point out in their proposal that peat can be used as a source of energy and it can also be processed into sound insulating fiberboards and light bricks. The multiple utilization of peat resources could reduce the need to cut timber and help keep ecological balance, the proposal says. It can also provide raw materials for the building material industry, and for the chemical, pharmaceutical, food and iron and steel industries.

Peat resources in Jilin Province, northeast China, have aroused the interest of businessmen from Japan, Singapore and the United States, and firms from Hong Kong, according to the recent issue of the ECONOMIC INFORMATION.'

The peat reserves in Heilongjiang Province are estimated at about 15,000 million tons. A survey of these reserves will be made this year by scientists organized by government departments.

ZHENG SIYUAN STRESSES SUCCESS, QUALITY OF CENSUS

OW281425 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0732 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Beijing, 28 May (XINHUA) -- Zheng Siyuan, deputy head of the census leading group under the State Council, spoke at a national census telephone conference on the evening of 27 May. He called on all localities to strive to do a good job in the final stage of preparation for the census and to guarantee the successful completion and good quality of the census as demanded by the party Central Committee and the State Council.

Zheng Siyuan pointed out: Only 1 month and a few days are left before the national census begins. From now on, the heads of census leading groups and directors of census offices at all levels in the various provinces, municipalities, prefectures and counties should concentrate their major energies on census work, strengthen specific leadership, strive to discover problems and to solve them quickly and provide specific direction on various work concerning the census. The cadres of census offices at all levels should conscientiously study the directives, measures, detailed rules and regulations and reference materials concerning the census, truly strive to understand them and direct the census work precisely according to unified regulations. The governments of provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions and the special administrative offices should take measures to correct as soon as possible the few counties, municipalities, communes, production brigades and other grassroots units that fail to pay sufficient attention to the census work.

Zheng Siyuan said: During the census, it is necessary to implement the system of responsibility to ensure good quality, and to set up quality control groups. The heads of census leading groups at various levels should take overall responsibility for the quality of the census. The directors of census offices at various levels should exercise quality control. They should pay attention to the quality of the census from beginning to end.

In order to ensure quality control, all provincial, prefectural, county and municipal census offices should set up quality control groups. The quality control groups are responsible for finding out and reporting on the quality situation and for discovering problems and solving them quickly. The units and individuals doing a good job should be commended and encouraged. Those who fail to meet qualitative standards should be asked to do their work over.

Zheng Siyuan emphasized the need to pay attention to the selection and training of census workers. He said: Census workers and census directors must be selected according to strict qualifications. Those who fail to meet qualifications should be resolutely rejected. Generally speaking, there should be one census worker for every 500 urban people or 400 rural people. Census workers should be trained according to the stipulations contained in the reference material concerning the content, duration and methods of training. The content of training should not be indiscriminately reduced, and training standards should not be willfully lowered. The training of census directors should be organized in a unified way by county or municipal level authorities in order to ensure good training quality. It should not be conducted by lower level units, such as communes or neighborhoods. Census workers should work conscientiously with a sense of responsibility and display a rigorous work style of strictly abiding by rules and regulations. They should be polite and courteous when they interview people during the census registration.

Zheng Siyuan urged all localities to firmly make the "census publicity month" campaign a success. He called on the responsibiel persons of all enterprises, institutions, government offices and schools to publicize the significance of the census among the members of their units, clear up misgivings in the minds of the masses and particularly do a good job in ideological work among heads of households.

Zheng Siyuan also discussed questions on how to selectively check household registrations and address codes prior to the census, ensure good quality of census registration and coding and practice economy during the census.

Participating in the telephone conference were heads of census leading groups and directors of census offices of various provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

DAQING OILFIELD PROVIDES TRAINING FOR CADRES

OW010952 [illegible]ng XINHUA in English 0737 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Daqing, Jun 1 (XINHUA) -- China's major oilfield of Daqing has provided regular training to more than 28,600 of its leading cadres and managerial personnel over the past three years, accounting for 73 percent of the total number of cadres working there.

The training program is either full time or part time, with set curricula and regular examinations. Courses of study range from six months to two years.

Of the 5,000 people receiving training this year, two-thirds are studying in classes run by government departments, provincial institutions or by colleges and technical schools. Subjects include political theory, enterprise management, general knowledge and technical courses.

By the end of last year, nearly 4,000 cadres had received such regular training. They included 800 leading cadres at the factory and company levels and ten heads or deputy heads of the Daqing oil administrative bureau.

On-the-job training is carried out through television lectures and correspondence. Now 2,200 cadres spend two mornings in a week listening to television lectures.

A total of 4,100 engineers and technicians, 57.5 percent of the oilfield's technical cadres, have received advanced training at universities, colleges and research institutes and many of them have taken foreign languages courses.

WATER, SOIL CONSERVATION GROUP ESTABLISHED

OW291251 Beijing XINHUA Domestic Service in Chinese 0723 GMT May 82

[Text] Beijing, 29 May (XINHUA) -- The State Council has decided to establish a national water and soil conservation work coordinating group comprising responsible persons of the Ministry of Water Conservancy and Power, the State Planning Commission, the State Economic Commission, the Ministry and Agriculture, Animal Husbandry and Fishery and the Ministry of Forestry. Qian Zhengying has been appointed to head the group. An office for the coordinating group has been set up in the Ministry of Water Conservancy and Power to handle the work of the group.

The main task of the coordinating group is to study and implement the guidelines and policies for water and soil conservation work, to supervise the various localities in enforcing relevant laws and regulations on water and soil conservation work to organize the exchange of experience in combating soil erosion, to coordinate with all departments concerned in surveying, planning and carrying out scientific research work on a fairly large scale in water and soil conservation, and to periodically study ways to solve major problems with regard to water and soil conservation.

In a circular on the establishment of the national water and soil conservation work coordinating group, the General Office of the State Council said: The departments concerned in agriculture, forestry, animal husbandry, farm reclamation, water conservation and power, railways, communications and scientific research must regard their respective tasks in water and soil conservation as their own responsibility, clearly assign a unit to be in charge of this task and carry out the task well. The governments at all levels must strengthen their leadership over water and soil conservation work. No existing organizations in charge of water and soil conservation should be weakened so as to ensure the smooth development of water and soil conservation work.

GUANGMING RIBAO COMMENTATOR ON YANAN 'TALKS'

HK010321 Beijing GUANGMING RIBAO in Chinese 22 May 82 pp 1, 4

[Commentator's article: "Consciously Uphold Guidance by Historical Materialism -- Study 'Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art'" -- capitalized passages published in boldface]

[Text] The historical materialism created by Marx and Engels is the great fruit of applying dialectical materialism in human social life, and is the sole scientific theoretical system concerning the laws of human social development. Engels pointed out: Due to the proposition of historical materialism, "idealism has been driven out from its final refuge, its outlook on history." (Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 4, p 423) Lenin wrote: "Marx deepened and developed philisophical materialism and made it into a complete materialist philosophy, and extended materialist understanding of the natural world to understanding of HUMAN SOCIETY. Marx's HISTORICAL MATERIALISM is the greatest result of scientific thought. People's previous views on the extreme chaos and arbitrary decisions in history and politics have been replaced by an extremely complete and composite scientific theory...." [Selected Works of Lenin," vol 2, 0 443) Historical materialism is our scientific ideological weapon for examining all social and historical phenomena.

Literature and art comes within the category of social ideology. It is created for people in society and used by them; it is produced in the history of human society, and also develops as that history develops. Hence, only by examining things under the guidance of historical materialism can we give scientific answers to various fundamental questions regarding literature and art. Before the birth of Marxism, there were in history all kinds of theories and notions on questions of literature and art.

Although some of these views were not devoid of value or were enlightening, their replies to fundamental issues such as the fundamental orientation and revolution in literature and art, the relationship between literature and art on the one hand and social life, the masses, and the era on the other, and the path writers should follow in creation did not and could not reach the level of scientific understanding. As far as guiding ideology is concerned, this was precisely because their entire outlook on history was unscientific. And as a science and as a revolution in the history of human literature and art thought, Marxist thought on literature and art is, in the final analysis, an application and development of basic Marxist theory, and especially of the theory of historical materialism. Comrade Mao Zedong's new contributions to Marxist thought on literature and art were also expressed in concentrated fashion in the further application and development of the theory of historical materialism. Restudying today the "Talks at the Yanan Forum on Literature and Art," we profoundly feel that although many of Comrade Mao Zedong's specific expositions were specifically applicable in the historical conditions of that time, the basic ideology running through the work is the incisive view of historical materialism, and that is the demand posed on revolutionary literature and art work by the application of the basic principles of historical materialism. We hold that particular importance should be attached to the following aspects:

FIRST, EXPOUNDING ON THE FUNDAMENTAL NATURE AND ORIENTATION OF REVOLUTIONARY LITERATURE AND ART IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE THEORY THAT THE MASSES CREATE HISTORY.

The question of whom literature and art should serve determines its fundamental nature and orientation. And historical materialism holds that "historical activities are the affair of the masses" ("Collected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 2, p 104), and that the masses with the frontline laborers as the main body are the decisive force in the development of history. Only ideology that can assist the masses to stimulate the advance of history can meet the demand of the development of history and possess revolutionary nature. It was precisely in accordance with this basic principle that Comrade Mao Zedong stressed in the "Talks:" "Our literature and art is all aimed at serving the masses, and first the workers, peasants and soldiers, and is created for them." In examining whether a work is good or bad, it is necessary to see "the effects it produces among the masses in society." Proceeding from the general demand of serving the people, he specifically explained the question of how to serve the masses from the contents and form of revolutionary literature and art, from its popularization and enhancement, from its praises and exposures, and from its inheritance and new creation. He pointed out, in the final analysis the idea that literature and art should serve the masses means that writers should "take the stand of the proletariat and the people," "be loyal spokesmen of the masses," and apply their own works "to assist the masses in stimulating the advance of history." This historical materialist exposition which is not open to doubt has, in fundamental nature and orientation, drawn a clear distinction in principle between revolutionary literature and art under proletarian leadership and all old literature and art that serves the "ego" and a small number of people.

SECOND, POINTING OUT A GUIDING CLUE, BY APPLYING THE PRINCIPLE OF CLASS ANALYSIS, FOR LITERATURE AND ART TO CORRECTLY DESCRIBE PEOPLE AND COMPLEX SOCIAL LIFE PHENOMENA.

Literature and art means mainly describing people and, by describing them, revealing the essence and rules hidden below the complex phenomena of social life. However, in circumstances in which classes and class struggle still exist, the thoughts and feelings of every person are constrained by class status, and the various social contradictions are influenced by the class struggle. As Lenin said: "Marxism has given us a guiding clue, enabling us to discover the laws amid this blurred chaos. This clue is the theory of class struggle." ("Selected Works of Lenin," vol 2, p 587) Comrade Mao Zedong applied this principle to literature and art in the "Talks." He wrote: "A basic viewpoint of Marxism is that a determining ideology exists, that the objective reality of the class struggle and the national struggle determine our thoughts and feelings." He criticized the notion of writing based on "abstract love" and "abstract human nature," and demanded a total purge of this "very deep bourgeois influence."

Although the relevant theories in the "Talks" are not sufficiently specific and perfect with regard to human nature and class nature, while certain sentences and phrases are also one-sided to a certain extent, taking the general view, Comrade Mao Zedong clearly demanded that writers "proceed from objective reality," and apply the historical materialist viewpoint of class analysis to describe people and social contradictions, thus pointing out a guiding clue for writers in getting rid of bourgeois ideological influence.

THIRD, EXPLAINING THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN REVOLUTIONARY LITERATURE AND ART AND THE ERA BY APPLYING THE THEORY THAT IDEOLOGY SHOULD CHANGE IN THE WAKE OF SOCIAL CHANGES.

The relationship between literature and art and the era has a direct bearing on the growth or decline of literature and art and on what role it can play in the development of history. Historical materialism holds that any type of ideological thing must "change in the wake of social changes" ("Selected Works of Marx and Engels," vol 1, p 270), and advance as the era advances, so as to continually play its role in helping the masses to stimulate the advance of history, and it should thus not turn into something out of line with the era or even hampering the advance of history. Comrade Mao Zedong applied this principle to the relationship between literature and art and the era. In the "Talks" he clearly demanded that revolutionary literature and art must advance as the era advances and that revolutionary writers "must be integrated with the new era of the masses" and "should have no hesitation whatever." He also issued the call for revolutionary literature and art to express "the new figures and the new world." This exposition is both concise and clear. It has provided a scientific yardstick for clarifying all kinds of muddled thinking concerning the relationship between literature and art and the era.

FOURTH, POINTING OUT, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE DEMANDS OF HISTORICAL MATERIALISM ON REVOLUTIONARY LITERATURE AND ART, THE CREATIVE PATH FOR REVOLUTIONARY WRITERS TO FOLLOW IN GOING DEEP AMONG THE MASSES' LIFE.

The various aspects mentioned above are all the fundamental demands imposed on literature and art by historical materialism, and are also the fundamental demands in the development of revolutionary literature and art itself. How can these demands be attained? Comrade Mao Zedong pointed out in the "Talks" that to achieve this, revolutionary literature and art workers must have a correct path for creation and must take part in the practice of the masses' life of fiery struggles. He wrote: "China's revolutionary writers and artists, and writers and artists with prospects, must go among the masses and unconditionally and wholeheartedly go among the workers, peasants and soldiers for long periods and into the life of fiery struggles...." This is because practice is the foundation of understanding, while the masses are the main body in the practice of society. Only by going deep into the masses' life of fiery struggles can one achieve "unanimity of thought and feeling with the masses" and "be the loyal spokesman of the masses;" only among the masses' life of fiery struggles can one directly go "to study the various classes in society, to study their interrelationships and individual situations, and study their features and feelings;" only by taking part with the masses in the revolutionary practice of changing the world can one keep up with the pace of the era, grasp the spirit of the era that is manifest among the masses and thus create works filled with the spirit of the era, which help the masses to stimulate the advance of history. In this sense, the creative path of going deep into the masses' life is the sole correct path for revolutionary literature and art workers to forge ahead.

These theories drawn up by Comrade Mao Zedong through directly applying the basic principles of historical materialism to examine questions of literature and art, stand at the level of laws of development for the whole of human society, and also clearly point out the demands on literature and art of the decisive force in the creation of history -- the proletariat and the masses. In the nature and role of literature and art, in the question of what viewpoint literature and art should apply to describe people and contradictions in social life, in the relationship between literature and art and the era, in the social functions of literature and art and in other fundamental aspects, these theories draw total distinctions between revolutionary literature and art under proletarian leadership and all kinds of old literature and art.

In fundamental stand, thought and feeling, and in the path for creation, they point out the proper distinctions between revolutionary literature and art workers and all old literature and art workers. And it is precisely for this reason that these theories developed by Comrade Mao Zedong on the fundamental issues in literature and art have enriched and developed Marxist thought on literature and art, giving it clearer scientific and class nature, and have become the irreplaceable guiding ideology for China's entire revolutionary literature and art work. From the latter part of the anti-Japanese war to the period of the liberation war, and to after the founding of new China, the prosperous development of the cause of revolutionary literature and art under our party's leadership and the tremendous role it has played in revolution and construction, together with the emergence and growth of group after group of brand-new revolutionary literature and art workers, attest to the incomparable correctness of this historical materialist guidance.

There is no denying that for a long period in the past the publicity and application of Mao Zedong's literature and art thinking encountered certain interference and gave rise to certain deviations, including some concerning the basic ideology of the "Talks," and gave explanations that ran counter to the original meaning. In particular, during the "Great Cultural Revolution," leftist deviations reached the limit and occupied the dominant position, while the cause of socialist literature and art also suffered unprecedented damage. And as far as fundamental guiding ideology is concerned, the reason for the appearance of those leftist errors was precisely because the viewpoint that the masses create history was distorted, Marxist class analysis was made into something simple and vulgar, and the demands of the fundamental interests of the masses and of the development of socialist literature and art were violated. This was without doubt a trampling on historical materialism. It precisely proves by negative example the necessity and importance of correctly upholding historical materialism.

